THE BIBLICAL "PATTERN" OF WORSHIP & THE GOD-FEARER IN THE FIRST CENTURY SYNAGOGUE-"CHURCH"

Before We Begin...The Method Of Interpretation Of Jesus As Used On This Website

I, as a non-Jewish believer in God, have always wanted to attend the "synagogue-church" that I read about in the book of Acts; in other words if I could choose any congregation where I and my family could attend and worship God I would choose the "synagogue-church" in Jerusalem as described in the Book of Acts to be my church home if possible. I have always desired to return to that unique time in the first century, sitting at James' feet or the feet of other Apostles, when I could have heard the "present truth" as taught by the Apostles and Disciples of "the Christ". Notice in the passage below the warning that there exists a "present truth" in the days of Peter which alternately means that not always will "this truth" possibly exist.

2Pet 1:12 12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth. (KJV)

Notice if you will that Peter mentioned that there was a "present truth" which he described in the first century which sadly I have discovered, along with other truth seekers, gets diluted, corrupted, and altered down through time due to many influences; none of which are positive. The end result is that what we have inherited today in Western Christianity is anything but the reflection of that "present truth" as it existed in the first century.

If one has done any serious study into the history and origin of Christianity then they have without a doubt noticed the alteration and change in the Apostle's Doctrine that has occurred over the last two thousand years as we find Judaism and Gentile Christianity polarized at different ends of the theological spectrum. The fruits of Replacement Religion are noticeable by any serious student of the origins of Gentile Christianity.

Systematic theology is the study of all facts about God and His work, from any and every source, but revealed primarily in the Bible, and brought together in a coherent and inter-related manner in order to instruct, encourage and guide the saints in godliness. What we need to remember when we progress throughout this website is that if Gentile Christianity is the culmination and fulfillment of Biblical Judaism as it maintains then we should NOT expect to find the contradiction of or the replacement of prior theological religious doctrines, dogmas, and theologies but rather an overlap and harmony expressed between them as found in Biblical Judaism and Gentile Christianity. The problem that I found in Seminary and afterwards in my serious studies of my faith is that we do not find this harmony and overlap but rather an outright replacement of prior Jewish religious beliefs by later antisemitic Gentile religious beliefs taken from the Gentile's background in sun worship. It would do you well to see these things for yourself in preparation for the further studies on this website as we trace the "Pattern of Worship" throughout the Hebrew Scriptures as well as the New Testament to see if we have been taught this "Eternal Pattern of Worship" as Gentile followers of Jesus and "the Christ".

Answer for yourself: Have you ever contrasted or compared the "Systematic Theology" between Judaism and Gentile Christianity? Well you should as it is an eye opening experience to see for yourself just how Gentile Christianity, which is made to be the culmination of Biblical Judaism, departs so drastically from the faith of its parent.

Answer for yourself: In Malachi 3:6 it is recorded that God revealed to the prophet Malachi: "For I am the LORD, I change not..."(KJV)? Then if you believe this statement is true then have you wondered how the God who "changes not" decided to change the "faith once given to the saints" as we find so clearly demonstrated when we compare the systematic theology of Biblical Judaism and Gentile Christianity? It is time we think deep thoughts that are bathed in knowledge long kept from us a followers of the Biblical Jesus and "the Christ".

The stark realization is, as I have discovered in my studies over the last 17 plus years, that the "Pattern of Worship" as well as numerous religious dogmas intended to be taught to all mankind by Israel has been adulterated and changed almost beyond recognition today by the antisemitic predisposition of the early Gentile Christian Church following the destruction of the Temple. Nowhere is this more tragic than in the area of worship as we as Gentile believers today have deviated from the "Pattern of Worship" given to Israel and which was intended to be taught to the Gentile world.

Sadly this opportunity of recovering this "Pattern of Worship" does not exist today in Christianity as we have so far removed ourselves from the Biblical and Jewish Roots of our parent faith; Biblical Judaism. We should remember that Paul teaches;

Rom 11:17 17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree; (KJV).

It should appear clearly that if we as non-Jewish believers are grafted in among the olive tree of Israel that we should "resemble" our parents not only theologically but in worship of the Creator as well. This is where the "Pattern of Worship" given to King David comes in as we will soon discover. We will soon see by any doubt that we as non-Jewish believers have departed from this "Pattern of worship" drastically and that goes without saying theologically as well. Any attempt to restore this "Pattern of Worship" is usually met with the cries of "bondage" by those who fail to grasp the tragic alteration of this "Pattern of Worship" over the last two thousand years.

Yet I found over the years of intense Biblical and historical study, both during and after Seminary and during my Pastorate years, that it is possible to gleam the knowledge hidden behind the Hebrew and Greek words of our Christian Bibles and restore the picture of what First Century Worship entailed; especially as it concerned the non-Jewish believers who will be called in this website a "God-fearers". Not only that but I will show you in this website that although the opportunities might not exist where you can return to "the faith once given the Saints" (Jude 1:3) in your typical denominational or non-denominational congregations of today there is nothing stopping you from incorporating the Divine Pattern of Worship as practiced in the first century "synagogue-church" into you life and into your families lives. I did and the outgrowth of this "repentance" (called Teshuvah in Hebrew) was the formation of Bet Emet Ministries and a congregation that returned to the true Hebrew Roots of the Christian Faith as it existed in the earliest centuries before Rome obliterated it almost beyond recognition. One only needs to read Constantine's Easter letter to see this tragic loss of the "Divine Pattern of Worship" intended for the all of mankind.

RETURNING TO THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP COMMANDED BY GOD

First of all you need to know that there is a "Pattern of Worship" that God desires be followed but few know of its existence today. Space does not allow at this time we examine it in detail but as we study throughout this website we will see beyond any doubt that such a "Pattern of Worship" exists and we will be instructed how to incorporate this "Pattern of Worship" into our lives. In fact we find that all the way back with Egypt mankind knew of this "Pattern" and we see this in the religious ethic of Egypt: "So as above so below". We need look no further than King David to see that he would be reminded of this "Pattern of Worship" when given the plans for the Temple and its construction by God.

As a typical Christian I assume you desire to follow in the steps of Jesus (Yeshua is the Hebrew name) and consider yourself a follower of Jesus of Nazareth described in the Christian New Testament. Likewise it goes without saying that such a follower of Jesus and "the Christ" also assumes that he also continues to follow the "Apostle's doctrine" of the early Jerusalem Messianic Church (Synagogue).

Acts 2:42 42 And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. (KJV)

But few Christians have ever taken the time to study for themselves the origin of most of mainline Gentile Christianity's Religious dogmas and doctrines and compare them with the "Apostle's Doctrine" that existed in the first century in Jerusalem. Not having done this the best one can do is assume that he is a follower of Jesus. Notice I said "assume"!

Answer for yourself: Are you confident that you are a follower of a Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua in the first century? Well you might want to read the accompanying article and think really hard on this one.

Having done in-depth scholarly studies into my Christian faith for over fifteen years to date I and Bet Emet Ministries has felt compelled to make this information available to the Christian believer and numerous websites have been created that tackle this issue and we have covered this issue in-depth and the work has been done for you and we encourage you to examine this information for yourself. If you do take the time to search out the origin for your Catholic and Protestant Religious Dogmas of today you see sadly see that most represent a Replacement Religion that has little if anything in common with the "Apostolic Doctrines" of first century Judaism. It is not a stretch to say that we as followers of Jesus and "the Christ" today practice a totally different religion from the Jesus of Nazareth and the Messianic Apostles of the first century.

Having seen these tragic departures from "the faith once given the Saints" the question that arises in the minds of the readers of Bet Emet Ministries is a simple one: "Having shown us what not to do on other websites then what is it that we should do; how, as non-Jewish believers in God, should we worship and how do we return to the true Apostolic Doctrine"? This website is devoted to answering this very important question as we will turn our focus on restoring the true Jewish Roots to the Christian Church and the Gentile believer and God-fearer as seen in the New Testament. In so doing we will repent and draw near to the Kingdom of Heaven.

AS TO THE METHOD OF INTERPRETATION OF "JESUS" ON THIS WEBSITE

Greetings and welcome to Bet Emet Ministries. My name is Craig Lyons and I am at present a "resigned" Pastor of the Christian faith. There are many reasons for this resignation from the Christian Ministry in my life following Seminary and eight years of a very successful ministry and it is to these issues we must turn since you asked either to be added to the teaching ministry of Bet Emet Ministries or are a reader of one of many of our ministry's websites.

So often when surfing the Internet people find one of our Websites and get confused when beginning in the "middle" so to speak their study of the "Jesus Story" as presented by our ministry's many websites. Bet Emet's Websites are intended to be a "Spiritual Pilgrimage" in ones study of "the Christ" and "Jesus"; moving from the inherited and assumed "Historical Jesus Christ" to the "Mystical Jesus Christ" and finally to the "Mythical Jesus Christ". You see there are 3 different Jesus that we encounter down through these last 2000 years of interpretation of Biblical history concerning the depiction of Jesus in the New Testament. In fact we can trace the Revelation of the "Karast/Christ" back to 13,000 years B.C.E. Only two of these depictions of "the Christ" are true; one is false. The study of our ministry's websites will reveal the answer to you concerning which of the above "Jesus" are false and which are not and how to correctly approach and interpret the Jesus of the New Testament.

If one undertakes the study of Bet Emet's Websites, and understand it has been my life's work, then one is prepared to understand what has happened to Christianity down through the centuries and how Divine Truths, once expressed through allegory, metaphor, myth, and simile by the Ancients who first perceived the Revelations of God, has been suppressed, altered, and tragically lost today through the "literalization" of such revelations given to us by the Ancients. Simply said it is we who have lost the "gnosis" to interpret the "Christ" and "Jesus" correctly when reading the New Testament. This is a tragic story to say the least and renders us as "believers" and "followers of the New Testament Jesus" as idolators and we never know it because our Bibles and New Testaments which we inherited from Rome are "forged" in key "theological places" let alone our prior conditioning to approach and interpret everything we read in the New Testament as if a "literal" event and occurrence. If you are diligent to study and learn from what is shared on these multiple sites from our ministry then over time you will come to understand how it is possible to follow the "New Testament Jesus" in one way which ends with idolatry and in another way which ends in holiness and righteousness. The key to all of this rest in the true identity of "the Christ," "the Logos", and "Christ Jesus". We are all familiar with these terms but we will see hopefully there is a big difference between what we have been taught about them today by standard orthodoxy and what these terms meant to the original Christians and Ancients who gave the world these Spiritual Concepts in the first place. Both the Essenes and Rome's has played a key role in the loss of these Divine truths and the substitution of falsehoods as you will come to see in the study of our websites. "Surely that is not possible I hear you say" but I only wish it were so. For your study and thought are these websites developed and revised over the years as Bet Emet Ministries' studies has progressed and deepened in our understanding of God and as more parts of the "theological puzzle" of Christianity became apparent to myself and others through dedicated study.

These websites are intended to be "a step by step" process in your pilgrimage of learning. We begin by looking at the surface of the texts and then moving deeper as the websites progress in depth and deeper understanding of "the Christ" as well as the New Testament "Jesus". In so doing we look often at the hidden and esoteric meanings that lie beneath these same texts which we inherited and were told to interpret "literally". In other words we begin our websites with a "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" and "Jesus Christ" and move in later websites to the "Mystical Christ" and finally to the "Mythical Jesus Christ". As alluded previously we begin by looking at the assumed "literal historical Jesus" and approach the texts and explain them "literally" as we have been instructed since growing up most likely since childhood in the Christian faith we inherited. In so doing, using a historical Jewish Jesus as the vehicle to deliver such truths, it is my intent to show you and separate for you a Jewish Messiah and Judaism's truth from a non-Jewish Messiah and untruths given us by antisemitic Rome in their depiction of the New Testament Jesus we inherited in our Roman Bibles. As your studies progress it is my hope that you will come to see the depiction of this "Jesus" in the New Testament in a deeper light; not as a historical-literal person but the "personification of Divine truth" that was entrusted to the Jewish nation for the Gentile world. As the websites progress you will come to see just whom this "Divine Mystical Christ within" really is and how this concept has tragically be changed by Rome and given a "literal-historical" life of its own which is not accurate to historical fact nor archeology and its records provided to us today. It is a real shame that the only Jew to ever came to you and me as a "light to the Gentile world" was this New Testament Jesus dressed up like Constantine and bearing "literalized" sunworship and related religious concepts which simply are not true in their "literal sense" since they bring the sin of idolatry with them and their Christology. Over time you will come to see the Divine Truths behind these "literalized" concepts however when they remain as the allegories they were intended for it is then, and only then, can they express the Divine truths as originally intended and as understood by the ancients who gave them to mankind in the first place. This enlightened understanding comes when you study later websites dealing with the "Mystical Christ" of the Gnostic Christians and Ancient Egypt and their "Karast" (our term for the Christ). Rome changes these allegorical Divine Truths when they "literalized" them and portrayed them in the form of a "historical Jesus Christ" to the exclusion of the "Christ within" all mankind and when they made them an "assumed historical event". The problem facing us is that Rome never tell us what they did in the Roman book we inherited; the Roman Bible containing the New Testament. We simply grew up believing everything we read as if "literal" and "historical"; never suspecting that behind these stories were the original "Mythical Christ" and "Mythical Christ" as had been understood by the Ancients for thousands of years.

In closing it is my intent as a yet ordained Pastor who desired to serve the Creator and help His children do the same that once this information came to light over the years of my studies I realized that someone has to share and tell others of this deception in order that our worship of the Creator be in "Spirit and in Truth. Bet Emet, Hebrew for "House Of Truth", has done as best it can to present these truths in hopes that your love for and worship of God be likewise; in Spirit and in Truth which I have found is tragically lacking in the "literalized" version of "the Christ" given to us by Rome today.

The order of our study is very important. If you start from the beginning and work your way through these websites as if you are reading the "best of many books" (which you are since our websites are the summary of hundreds of special books researched throughout the years) then you will end your study with few unanswered questions and you will have arrived at the truth you sought and have a very clear picture of whom God is and what He requires of you, the non-Jewish believer in Christianity today. Sure the trip is hard, long, and time consuming and filled with both tears and joy as you deal with what has happened at the hands of men who served themselves rather than God. But the goal must be kept squarely before you....to come to the Truth once known about God by these Ancients who framed many of the very same religious doctrines that sadly have come down to us altered today and sadly cover the pages of our Bibles and New Testament. You will come to see that there is a very big difference from the Jewish Bible and the corrupted Gentile Christian Bible we inherited from Rome. This is Rome's doing! All of this is dealt with on our websites and you will get to it in time if you are diligent in your study.

Let us end with one passage from the Hebrew Scriptures:

Jer. 14:14 14 Then the LORD said unto me: 'The prophets prophesy lies in My name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spoke I unto them; they prophesy unto you a lying vision, and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their own heart.'

It is time that we do diligent study in order to overcome these "lies" which we have inherited from Rome and others and repent of such error if it be in our life. It is time we search out and return to the faith of our Fathers who carry the Ancients traditions and truths with them. Today we find these truths best in Judaism which is not surprising since Judaism carries the legacy of Egypt and their higher Spiritual Truths preserved for the world. Few know this today because of lack of study but the beginning study in these areas has been done for you on our many websites. It is time you accept the mantle of such study which in first century Israel was "the highest form of worship".

Lev 20:77 Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy; for I am the LORD your God (the Jewish Tanakh)

Understand then that as you read and study the following website we approach the "Jesus of the New Testament", as viewed in the following website, through the spectacles of an "assumed historical" interpretation. Using the interpretation of Jesus as a historical person, even though the unforged evidence for his historical existence is lacking and points to another interpretation of "the Christ" entirely, is beneficial to us in learning the necessary religious concepts which we deal with in the following website when contrasting the truths of Biblical Judaism with the dishonesty and erroneous religious teachings of Gentile Roman Christianity. This must be kept in mind in everything you read and study in the following site. In the following website I choose to use the vehicle of an "assumed historical Jesus" to present these higher truths to the reader; especially in light of the fact that Israel is the light to the Gentiles and Jesus is the only Jew to ever come to me with the revelation of God (albeit dressed up like Constantine carrying "literalized sunworship with him). Teaching the religious truths of Judaism through the vehicle of a Jewish Rabbi whom we call "Jesus" allows us to see through the eyes of a Jew since, as stated before, the only Jew to come to us with the revelation of God was this Roman version of the "New Testament Jesus". Personally when reading the New Testament through the eyes of a Jew, and knowing the truth about the Mystical and Mythical Christ, I have come to look at the "New Testament Jesus" as the personification of the best of Rabbinical instruction that Israel had to offer. Again he is the only Jew to ever come to me carrying the Revelation of God with him. You can thank Rome for Israel no longer being a "missionary religion". It is tragically sad that the depiction of this New Testament Jesus is "un-Jewish" in many areas of his presentation in the New Testament let alone a gross distortion of the expected Jewish Messiah as promised by the Prophets and Normative Conservative Judaism. We deal with these many issues on many of our websites and in so doing restore the Jewishness necessary to discern truth from fiction as it applies to the non-Jewish believer and seeker of God today.

Let me say again that it is very important that once finding Bet Emet Ministries and our websites that you study the websites in the intended order suggested. Many readers come to our websites randomly in searching the Internet and, possessing different levels of understanding concerning "the Christ" and the "New Testament Jesus", have already seen the fallacy of the historical interpretation of Jesus as depicted in the New Testament. Many come to our ministry's sites and skipping around from site to site without their intended order of study get confused as to the progression of our studies presented in our 14 websites concerning "the Christ" and the "Jesus of the New Testament". In so doing it appears that at one time we present a "historical Jesus" and at other times on later websites reveal the fallacy of such an interpretation of the New Testament Jesus when allegory and myth better explains Jesus and the events in the "Jesus Story". At times Jesus appears to be nothing more than a "myth" and at others times a "Mystical Christ within each child of God". Without the proper knowledge of these concepts given in such an organized progression of study of our sites it will appear confusing or contradicting to the average reader or student. In diligent study of our sites, when taken in order, the reader will both see and progress in his study beyond the "assumed historical Jesus" to a more correct understanding of the "Mystical Christ within" and finally the truths behind the "Mythical Christ Jesus". But this takes time and much reading and we have at Bet Emet tried to simplify this for the interested student. We ask that you be understanding of the ministry's attempt to present the "milk of the Word" to those who have yet not attained such a level of understanding of the "Mystical Christ" (<http://firstnewtestament.netfirms.com>) let alone the Mythical Christ (<http://www.egyptcx.netfirms.com>), (<http://jesusastrotheology.netfirms.com>) and (<http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com>). It is our hope that in time we all can come to see differences between the assumed "historical Jesus" (a myth taught through the medium of a presumed historical person to serve as an example to be emulated by all mankind), the "Mythical Christ" (personification of the Sun and its path through the Zodiac and the equinoxes and solstices which make for the seasons of the year) and the "Mystical Christ" (expressing a hidden teaching, a secret doctrine, given under strict and exacting conditions to approved candidates by the Masters of Wisdom regarding the descent of the Logos and Soul into matter, ie., mankind). Paul speaks of this:

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

I believe it is time we progress with our studies on this website remembering what has been said above.

COMPARISON OF HEBRAIC AND CHRISTIAN RELIGIOUS DOCTRINES...WHICH REFLECT THE "MIND OF CHRIST" THAT IS TO BE IN US?

In Seminary I remember taking courses in Systematic Theology. In other words, what do the Baptist's believe about God, man, sin, redemption, forgiveness, etc. The course was a theological analysis of the Baptist Faith and the rationale for its beliefs in these different areas.

I never will forget after graduation I sat down and asked myself some rather simple questions after having earned my Masters's Degree in Divinity: "How come I didn't learn much about a Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua while at the Seminary", "How come I know so much about Paul but the life of Yeshua was not stressed", "How come I know how to build a church but don't know much concerning a Jewish Jesus", "What was in that mind of Christ anyway and do I believe the same things he did"? That was just the beginning of it for me. From there my thoughts graduated even deeper as I asked myself such heart-stirring questions like these:

- 1. What did Yeshua believe about God, man, sin, worship, redemption, atonement, forgiveness, salvation, giving, etc.?
- 2. Would Yeshua hold to my Baptist religious belief system in all these above areas?
- 3. Did Yeshua believe differently in these theological areas from which I had been taught by the Baptists?
- 4. Were there religious doctrines I held and were taught at Seminary which Yeshua could not believe in personally? Which were they?
- 5. If Yeshua could be demonstrated to believe differently from my religious beliefs in the above theological areas then why should I continue to hold such divergent religious beliefs which can be shown not to be Yeshua's views in these areas?
- 6. What religious beliefs do I currently have which Yeshua could not accept and why continue in them when it can be shown that they oppose and contradict what Yeshua both believed and practiced as his faith in the first century?
- 7. What was in that mind of Christ and in what areas do my religious belief system contradict what "the Christ" believed?
- How much do I know about the Jewish faith and since Christianity is the supposed fulfillment of Biblical faith then does my Christian faith and religious beliefs contradict Jewish beliefs or do they overlap and confirm them?
- How could I find out such information in order to verify that I truly was a follower of Yeshua? Do I need to study what Judaism teaches and what was in this mind of "the Christ"?

MY PERSONAL QUEST FOR THE HISTORICAL YESHUA

Well I had my Masters degree and I began my Pastorate. All was well until I began my study in earnest of Biblical Judaism. My readings into such areas brought me into contact with many scholars, many of which were Jewish. In trying to understand Yeshua the Jew I found that by reading Jewish authors who were writing and "reclaiming" Yeshua as a valuable part of Jewish history that I would benefit most since they were balanced and fair in their analysis. My thoughts were quickly rewarded by what I uncovered which often provoked me to think thoughts I had never thought before.

After reading hundreds and hundreds of books over the next ten years, I was totally shocked to find that the Jewish Jesus/Yeshua was completely different than what was represented by the Christian Church as the Protestant "Jesus". My blind-spot had been removed as I encountered two entirely different "Jesus".

What was most shocking in analyzing the copious amounts of data over the years was that in the vast majority of areas my Protestant "religious beliefs" were shown to be contrary and opposite of what the first century Jesus had been taught and believed and followed as his faith. That was hard for me to take at that time in my life as the stark realization of this awakening rested heavy upon me and I realized the implications for my pastorate. I had invested years and untold resources only to find out that in the final analysis my "religious beliefs" given me by Gentile Christianity about Yeshua were contrary and conflicting with his in most areas of religious inquiry.

I present this information to you not to anger anyone but to warn good Christian people that they have not been told the truth about this man from Galilee which is depicted in our New Testaments. What we need if for the "real Yeshua" to please stand up! In hopes of helping your decipher the truth from error concerning the real Yeshua and what he believed as a first century Jew reflective of normative Biblical Judaism I have categorized in summary fashion points of Systematic Theology for your examination which reflect both the Jewish and the Christian points of view.

If you are reading these pages most likely you are a follower of Yeshua or you think you are. If that be true then it is impossible to follow someone "correctly" unless you know what the person really believed and are aware that you agree theologically in these same areas of religious inquiry. The following is a summary of religious positions taken from Second Temple Judaism and the religion of Yeshua; for after all Yeshua is a Jew and not a Christian. Contrasted with them are current mainline Christian positions in these same areas. I leave the analysis up to you as well as the conclusions to which you arrive based on your comprehension. I would only ask yourself when reading the following to ask yourself at every junction: "Which would the Jew Yeshua believe"?

WHAT WOULD YESHUA OF SECOND TEMPLE JUDAISM BELIEVE?

The following is a comparison of theological interpretations of the Bible by both Judaism and Christianity. One is in error of many of the points of Scripture. With your current understanding and knowledge of the Word of God I invite you to read and compare the respective stances of both camps against the revealed word and will of God in the Bible. Remember our standard is the Word of God and not Catholic and Protestant pronouncements upon the Bible. Next I invite you to investigate it out for yourself in more detail and verify to yourself which views are more in line with Biblical teaching. I thank God I did.

NATURE OF GOD:

Judaism- Monotheism, oneness of God as opposed to Trinity.

Christianity-Dualism or Trinitarianism, the doctrine of the Trinity had not yet been accepted by the Church in the 3rd Century (cf. Encyc. Jud., Vol 10, p. 16.). The Trinity would be a religious creation borrowed from non-Jewish paganism stemming from Babylon.

NATURE OF MAN:

Judaism-Man is born good. Until the age of accountability (13 male, 12 female) one's sins are the responsibility of one's parents. At that age one became responsible before God for the commandments and the Law. It is at that time Paul would remind us..."when the Law came I died". For you see, there is not that sinneth not. With such responsibility come the penalty for violation of the Law...death. From the age of accountability one is considered a responsible adult who can choose not to sin.

Christianity-Man is born evil, a "victim" of original sin; man therefore has no choice but to sin. There is no concept of "Original Sin" in the religion of Yeshua.

FORGIVENESS OF SIN:

Judaism-There is no provision for willful sin except repentance and restitution. Man is cut off from God. The Jewish view challenges the doctrine of "eternal security" or "once saved always saved" and the resultant imbalance of "grace and not law".

Christianity-Man may sin and still be pardoned by God in the next life no matter how he lives if he only "believes" in the Christian creeds and theology concerning Jesus. This results in the unbiblical doctrines concerning "once saved always saved" & "eternal security of the believer". Purgatory is the "fire-escape".

SATAN:

Judaism-The adversary is a created angelic being who is in complete subjection to the sovereignty and will of God. Satan is neither fighting God nor man, but is God faithful servant to bring man to a point of decision where he must choose for or against God. Based on such a decision man is rewarded or punished. Also in Biblical Judaism "Satan" is used for the personification of the flesh of mankind which leads man to sin. Such willful decisions to sin is truly adversarial to mankind.

Christianity-Dualism; there are two equal forces of good and evil in the universe and they are constantly fighting it out (derivation of Persian captivity). This is the legacy of Persian religion and Zoroastrianism which infected parts of Israel following the Babylon Captivity.

MARRIAGE AND SEX:

Judaism-Sex is good, mandated by God as the first positive commandment in the Bible. (The marriage bed is undefiled.)

Christianity-Sex is inherently sinful (in sin was I conceived...which refers not to original sin but sexual conception prior to the mikvah following a woman's menstruation). The sex act is always sin unless for the purposes of procreation. In marriage sex is no longer a "mortal" sin but only a "venial" sin. Christianity maintains that absence from sex is meritorious.

ORGANIZATION STRUCTURE OF THE COMMUNITY & ASSEMBLY:

Judaism-The synagogue is the core of the religious and secular life of the community following the loss of the Temple. It is not an ecclesiastical structure, and the leaders are paid no salary. It is not hierarchical but rather emphasizes the priesthood of all members of the community.

Christianity-The church is a building or something one does on Sunday, a religious service instead of a community. It does not have the same organizational structure and leadership levels as ancient Judaism & the early Church (Nasi, Chazan, etc.) It is ecclesiastical and hierarchical.

FREQUENCY OF ASSEMBLIES:

Judaism-Met once a week on the Sabbath except for Festivals (emphasis is building families).

Christianity-Usually twice-three times a week unless special events then can meet nightly (emphasis is building a congregation).

THE MISSION OF THE SYNAGOGUE VS CHURCH:

Judaism-The strongest emphasis is placed on teaching and study of Torah (discipleship) to build spiritual maturity in the person. Such fruit is seen in making this world better by helping others imitate God.

Christianity-Preaching has replaced teaching; focus on evangelizing the already saved Sunday after Sunday instead of instructing & teaching them for growth & spiritual maturity through the release of their gifts and service.

SALVATION:

Judaism-Righteous non-members of the assembly will also have a share in the world to come and be saved ("righteous Gentiles"-the righteous of all nations-Noahide Laws) (Matt. 25:1, Rom 2:12-15).

Christianity-If one does not "believe in Jesus" or "the theology of Yeshua as created by Gentile Christianity" & "go to church" he will go to hell.

SPIRITUALITY:

Judaism-The sanctification of all of life to God; down to earth where rubber meets the road where the focus is on living in the kingdom of God now; not just other-worldly (after death).

Christianity-Departmentalizes life in sections: secular and spiritual. Main focus is other-worldly with preparation mostly centered on the world to come.

GIVING:

Judaism-1/3 of your gifts go to the 1) Teachers, choir, maintenance, 2) 1/3 to the benevolence (poor/almsgiving), 3) 1/3 goes to yourself to build yourself up in God (festivals)

Christianity- Give to churches and ministries; no accountability over the direction and handling of the funds. Does not follow the Biblical tithe.

DAY OF REST:

Judaism-Saturday the Sabbath as commanded in the Ten Commandments.

Christianity-Sunday; as based on later traditions-early Church councils of the 4th century and their compromise with sun-worship (loss of Jewish roots).

RELATIONSHIP TO ISRAEL IN THE BIBLE:

Judaism-The world is divided into 2 camps: Jews & Gentiles, chosen and not chosen. One is either born a member of the chosen people or become a member either as a proselyte or by becoming a God-fearer.

Christianity-Not a part of Israel, but is a Gentile replacement of the chosen of God. The Jews have been rejected and replaced as God's chosen people by the Gentile church (replacement theology). The church is the "new Israel". Israel is spiritualized and when you read "Israel" in Scripture you are to think of the church, not of physical Israel (at least when blessings are concerned and not the curses; the curses are left for "physical Israel"). The world is divided into 3 camps: Jews, Gentile Christians, and Gentile pagans. Christians have lost their Jewish roots and identity.

NATURE OF THIS LIFE:

Judaism-Life is seen as a preparation for the world to come. Trials & temptations are from God's hand and are blessings in disguise because they refine our character (James 1:2).

Christianity-Prosperity; One can write your own ticket by speaking to God, Satan, or the situation using scriptural promises as a formula. Trials & tribulations are a curse, not from God but from Satan, and there is no reason we should experience them if we are uttering positive confessions.

PROPHECY:

Judaism-One cannot know the time of the coming of the LORD nor should one speculate about the future; one should keep his garments white by continual repentance because His coming will be sudden and unexpected.

Christianity-The LORD's coming is imminent; not to be unexpected for the believer since he will be able to interpret the "signs" of the LORD'S coming. Many offer exact predictions.

FAITH:

Judaism-Expressed as a response to a religious belief system through obedience and good deeds (Jas. 2:14-26) which is faith in action; a living faith.

Christianity-Faith in God, elevating belief above tangible action and obedience. Agreement to an accepted set of doctrine at each particular assembly brings guaranteed acceptance within that same assembly. Any religious doctrinal divergence from the norm jeopardizes one's standing in the assembly.

RESPONSE TOWARD EVIL:

Judaism-Permitted self-defense, legitimacy of defending oneself.

Christianity-Passive resistance, pacifism.

THE BIBLE:

Judaism-Hebraic background of the whole Bible (even the New Testament). Proper understanding only possible when viewing the Bible in its original history, culture, and original language.

Christianity-Hellenization of Scripture (viewing the Bible through the eyes of Greek culture and language instead of Hebrew).

THE LAW (TORAH-OLD TESTAMENT)

Judaism-All men and under the laws of God; to the Jew he was given the Noahide Laws & Mosaic Law as a foundation; to the Gentile he was given the Laws of Noah only. It is the obedience to the laws of God that brings blessing, social order, and blessings from God.

Christianity-The Law is evil and we are delivered from the commandments of God by faith in Jesus and the religious creeds formulated about him. The Law has passed away and we are under grace and if anyone tries to live according to the Commandments he is under a curse.

WEALTH:

Judaism-There is no merit in poverty.

Christianity-There is merit in poverty.

BAPTISM:

Judaism-Practiced continued immersions throughout life to enter into a heightened Presence of God (every Sabbath, before each Festival, after repentance from sin, after a woman's menses each month to remove uncleanness due to contact with blood, etc.).

Christianity-Baptized only once into Messiah.

THE LORD'S SUPPER:

Judaism-Every week the Sabbath entailed 3 meals: Friday evening to begin Sabbath, followed by two Sabbath meals. This is called the Lord's Supper and is connected with the Sabbath.

Christianity-Name given to Christian Communion consisting of a cracker and a cup of grape juice which can be traced to pagan mystery religions as representing the body and blood of their gods.

HOLY DAYS:

Judaism-Celebrates the Festivals of the Lord according to Leviticus 23.

Christianity-Celebrates the Gregorian Holidays which are all derived from Paganism and have Yeshua's named now connected to give them pseudo-legitimacy.

WORSHIP

Judaism-Adheres to the "Pattern of Worship" given to King David and which is passed down through history even until this day.

Christianity-Substitutes another "pattern" of man's creation instead of adherence to the Biblical "Pattern of Worship" given to Israel which is intended to be followed by all mankind.

TIME TO GET SERIOUS

Answer for yourself: Now upon examination of this list, let me ask you "What does the Bible Yeshua used have to say on these issues (The Old Testament)?"

Answer for yourself: Which do you think is more correct?

Answer for yourself: Which are you following?

Answer for yourself: Which beliefs did Jesus hold and believe in?

Answer for yourself: Do we want the mind of Christ and does this mean accepting the Jewish understanding over the anti-Semitic Roman doctrines we have inherited?

Answer for yourself: Do you contemplate a change?

Answer for yourself: What would Jesus want you to believe?

Answer for yourself: What did he believe and what will you now believe when your study convinces you otherwise than the way you have been taught in the Gentile Church?

CONSTANTINE'S EASTER LETTER AND THE LOSS OF "THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS"

I have up to this point given a detailed account of the apostasy encountered by the early Gentile Church under the influence of Constantine. Why did this man turn from established orthodoxy handed down by the apostles? The answer comes when we see what was in the heart of such a man that caused him to accept certain values and beliefs. We are the recipients of his "false-belief system today." For an example, let us see into his heart as we examine why the Christian Church today celebrates and observes Easter instead of Passover as God COMMANDED!

CONSTANTINE I: ON THE KEEPING OF EASTER

From the Letter of the Emperor to all those not present at the Council. (Found in Eusebius, Vita Const., Lib. iii., 18-20.)

When the question relative to the sacred festival of Easter arose, it was universally thought that it would be convenient that all should keep the feast on one day; for what could be more beautiful and more desirable, than to see this festival, through which we receive the hope of immortality, celebrated by all with one accord, and in the same manner? It was declared to be particularly unworthy for this, the holiest of all festivals, to follow the custom [the calculation] of the Jews, who had soiled their hands with the most fearful of crimes, and whose minds were blinded. In rejecting their custom, (1) we may transmit to our descendants the legitimate mode of celebrating Easter, which we have observed from the time of the Saviour's Passion to the present day [according to the day of the week]. We ought not, therefore, to have anything in common with the Jews, for the Saviour has shown us another way; our worship follows a more legitimate and more convenient course (the order of the days of the week); and consequently, in unanimously adopting this mode, we desire, dearest brethren, to separate ourselves from the detestable company of the Jews, for it is truly shameful for us to hear them boast that without their direction we could not keep this feast. How can they be in the right, they who, after the death of the Saviour, have no longer been led by reason but by wild violence, as their delusion may urge them? They do not possess the truth in this Easter question; for, in their blindness and repugnance to all improvements, they frequently celebrate two passovers in the same year. (Oh by the way...if Constantine had read the Bible you would see that God allows for the celebration of Passover exactly one month later for those who were unclean when it was supposed to be celebrated, or who traveled from such far distances that they could not make it in time) Again Constantine is wrong!

We could not imitate those who are openly in error. How, then, could we follow these Jews, who are most certainly blinded by error? for to celebrate the passover twice in one year is totally inadmissible. But even if this were not so, it would still be your duty not to tarnish your soul by communications with such wicked people [the Jews]. Besides, consider well, that in such an important matter, and on a subject of such great solemnity, there ought not to be any division. Our Saviour has left us only one festal day of our redemption, that is to say, of his holy passion, and he desired [to establish] only one Catholic Church. Think, then, how unseemly it is, that on the same day some should be fasting whilst others are seated at a banquet; and that after Easter, some should be rejoicing at feasts, whilst others are still observing a strict fast. For this reason, a Divine Providence wills that this custom should be rectified and regulated in a uniform way; and everyone, I hope, will agree upon this point. As, on the one hand, it is our duty not to have anything in common with the murderers of our Lord; and as, on the other, the custom now followed by the Churches of the West, of the South, and of the North, and by some of those of the East, is the most acceptable, it has appeared good to all; and I have been guarantee for your consent, that you would accept it with joy, as it is followed at Rome, in Africa, in all Italy, Egypt, Spain, Gaul, Britain, Libya, in all Achaia, and in the dioceses of Asia, of Pontus, and Cilicia. You should consider not only that the number of churches in these provinces make a majority, but also that it is right to demand what our reason approves, and that we should have nothing in common with the Jews. To sum up in few words: By the unanimous judgment of all, it has been decided that the most holy festival of Easter should be everywhere celebrated on one and the same day, and it is not seemly that in so holy a thing there should be any division. As this is the state of the case, accept joyfully the divine favour, and this truly divine command; for all which takes place in assemblies of the bishops ought to be regarded as proceeding from the will of God. Make known to your brethren what has been decreed, keep this most holy day according to the prescribed mode; we can thus celebrate this holy Easter day at the same time, if it is granted me, as I desire, to unite myself with you; we can rejoice together, seeing that the divine power has made use of our instrumentality for destroying the evil designs of the devil, and thus causing faith, peace, and unity to flourish amongst us. May God graciously protect you, my beloved brethren.

THE CONSTANTINE CONSPIRACY

We at Bet Emet Ministry are aware through the study of history of the compromise which led the institutional church into apostasy (departure from the true faith). We at Bet Emet feel the Lord has called us to awaken those who are asleep to the facts of the terrible apostasy from the faith of Jesus and who are comfortable in their compromise with paganism in the practice of their own faith (mainline Christianity). I do hope this treatise peeks the interests of many, causing more investigation of the subject and more light on the nature of the great apostasy to whom multitudes are not aware. With the intriguing prospect that mysteries and conspiracies of the past can become common knowledge, perhaps more "ordinary" believers like myself will join in the process of the restoration of the truth in these latter times.

This anti-Judaism which became anti-Semitism (even anti-Israel), exempted the church, in its opinion, from following the scriptural commands of the Sabbath and the holy feasts, such as Passover. The church equated obedience to these scriptural mandates with following Judaism (called today "being under the Law"). They supposed that since the Jews were so proud of observing the Sabbath and holy feasts, they would be in league with Judaism if they also followed these things. Of course, since many in Judaism (but not all) denied the truth of Yeshua (Jesus) as Messiah, the church thought keeping the Sabbath and Passover would be equated as associating with those who deny Messiah (Christ). This, of course, was a false doctrine which overcame the church.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever investigated why the Jews reject the "Christian Jesus?" Well, until you do then you will not possess the knowledge that explains why, and once having such knowledge, then your study of the Jesus of the New Testament becomes paramount in your life because the arguments of the Jews are often irrefutable.

All Christians and Jews, centuries later, are affected by this apostasy. Most Christians think of Sunday and Easter as biblically mandated holy days and are totally ignorant of this being false doctrine and pagan worship days. Also, there are many Jewish people who think of Yeshua as leader of a Gentile (thusly pagan) religion, forgetting his Jewishness and his defense of the Law as a rabbi. Both mainstream Rabbinical Judaism and mainstream Christianity stubbornly follow their respective traditions, voicing the idea that to do otherwise would leave one "not a Jew" or "not a Christian" as the case may be. The few Christians who faithfully keep the Sabbath and enjoy the Jewish holy feasts are consigned to being a cult by mainstream Christianity. They are mostly not respected as real Christians. The minority of Jewish people who accept Yeshua as Israel's valid Messiah are viewed as traitors and apostate Jews by the mainstream Jewish community. By some they are likened to being non-persons.

Thankfully, in response to this dilemma, the Father has raised up the Messianic Jewish Movement. Notice I did not say Messianic Christianity. The emphasis here is upon Judaism and not Christianity. This movement is the joining together of Jewish believers and righteous Gentiles (we prefer the term non-Jewish or Ephraimic believers). This is a union of observant Jews who look to the coming of their Messiah and non-Jewish believers who keep the Sabbath and enjoy the Holy Biblical Festivals. The effect is a new Israel, a unified holy people who are separated from paganism. We respect Christians because they are followers (ideally) of Yeshua (representation of the Adom Kadmon..the ideal perfect man) and we respect Jews because they are preservers (ideally) of the commandments of God. In addition, we believe in order for our Christian brothers and sisters to fully follow the Yeshua of the New Testament they should obey the commandments of the Law, which the Yeshua of the New Testament keeps himself and said would be kept and taught by those faithful to the Kingdom of God.

In many of our writings at Bet Emet we are dealing with the problem of the historical denial of the scriptures by the Gentile church. What I found was that the whole issue of church apostasy comes down to a time and a man who transformed the environment and system in which Christianity and Judaism operated. I propose that the events which culminated in and included the rule of an Emperor named Constantine culminated a conspiracy; one that must be overturned by an equally powerful divine conspiracy, prayerfully accomplished in our time. It is our hope at Bet Emet Ministries that through your desire for truth and your diligent study you might come to see this horrible deception and our separation as followers of the Jesus of the New Testament and "the Christ" and return to the Biblical "Pattern of Worship" which was "once given to the saints" (Jude 1:3).

"SO AS ABOVE...SO BELOW": THE DIVINE "PATTERN" OF WORSHIP...ARE YOU AWARE?

First of all please look at what you recognize as "the Star of David" above.

Answer for yourself: Do you notice that the star is pointing both upwards and downwards? What could this mean? Is there hidden meaning here that we are missing? Well you have to study Egypt and Egyptian religion to understand the religious concepts hidden in the Star of David. Archeology today is teaching us just whom the identities of the Biblical Patriarch actually are and you be amazed to find out that these Patriarchs are Biblical Pharaohs. In Seminary I always wondered why Amenotepe III wrote many of the Proverbs. Today I know that he is the Biblical Solomon and his father, King David, is Tuthmose III. Well that is a teaching for another day but if one was to undertake such a rigorous study of Egyptian Monotheism then you will find that the center core of all that they believed is that "So above then so beneath". In other words the Divine Pattern is to be reproduced on earth as it is in heaven above and not only their architecture and pyramids reveal this but their very core religious theologies as well. But that study has to wait but understand this as we move on the children of the Egyptians who intermarried with Semites are the Jewish nation and no wonder that Biblical Judaism has almost the same religious tenants of their Egyptian fathers but even the Star of David points "as above so beneath" which reveals to us that Divine Axiom in disguise. Now let us continue since our focus is on the "Pattern of Worship" (above) that is to be reproduces on earth (below) according the Divine Pattern above.

Exod 25:8-9 8 And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. 9 According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Is there a "Pattern" of Worship that we are to follow and if there is what is it? Do we follow it at our Christian churches? Well we need to look into this matter to be certain.

Let us look at the Hebrew word used for "pattern" above:

Strong's Concordance tell us that the word for "pattern" is Strong's number 8403: tabniyth (tab-neeth'); from 1129; structure; by implication, a model, resemblance: KJV-- figure, form, likeness, pattern, similitude.

The word clearly indicates that connected with the worship of God is the necessary construction of an earthly example of something that has a Spiritual/Heavenly existence (similar, like another). The idea carried with this word is one of "comparison" between two items. This "pattern", as a model, refers to a representation, generally in miniature, to show the construction or appearance of something that is a resemblance of "something else". It also carries the idea of a simplified representation of a system or phenomenon, as in this sense the representation of the worship due the Creator. Egypt understood this and coined the terms "So as above, so below" and their offspring the Jewish nation understood this religious concept and adapted it from them. Both Egypt and Israel had in common equinox Temples for example. We find that Egypt build the Giza Plateau as a representation and likeness of what they saw in the Heavens above them. It was a "mirror image" so to speak. We see the same example of this spiritual concept in the New Testament:

Matt 6:10 10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. (KJV)

Earth is to be a carbon copy or reflection of the Divine. We as mankind are to reflect the "real" and manifest as best we can the "image of God" both within us and without through our influence and our conduct. More on this in a second as we continue our thoughts.

Let us examine other passages referring to this "pattern".

Exod 25:40 40 And look that thou make them after their pattern, which was shewed thee in the mount. (KJV)

Num 8:4 4 And this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold, unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was beaten work: according unto the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick. (KJV)

Josh 22:28-29 28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you. 29 God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt offerings, for meat offerings, or for sacrifices, beside the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice a strong admonition in the above verse?

Notice in this verse the strong admonition to NOT construct a "false" man-made substitute in worship for what God has commanded to be made and used in His worship which is not according to "the" pattern given by God Himself (selah)!!!

Of course this necessitates that one is aware of this "Pattern of Worship" in the first place. Sadly this "Pattern" of which I speak is hidden behind the Hebrew and Greek words of our Christian Bibles and the English does a poor job at revealing it; in fact it masks it from our view. More verses need to be examined so let us keep reading.

II Ki 16:10 10 And king Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and saw an altar that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship thereof. (KJV)

Now here is where it gets very interesting and it is here we find the hidden implications for non-Jews and their worship of God.

1 Chr 28:11-20 11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, 12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things: 13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD. 14 He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service: 15 Even the weight for the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick, and for the lamps thereof: and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick. 16 And by weight he gave gold for the tables of shewbread, for every table; and likewise silver for the tables of silver: 17 Also pure gold for the fleshhooks, and the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden basons he gave gold by weight for every bason; and likewise silver by weight for every bason of silver: 18 And for the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD. 19 All this, said David, the LORD made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern. 20 And David said to Solomon his son, Be strong and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the LORD. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that this "Pattern" was given by the Spirit of God?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the highlighted words "service"?

Strong's Concordance reveals the true meaning of the word "service" in these verses:

5656 `abodah (ab-o-daw'); or `abowdah (ab-o-daw'); from 5647; work of any kind: KJV-- act, bondage, + bondservant, effect, labour, ministering (-try), office, service (-ile, -itude), tillage, use, work, X wrought.

Answer for yourself: What can we learn from the root word from which "abodah" is taken?

The root word comes from 5647 `abad (aw-bad'); a primitive root; to work (in any sense); by implication, to serve, till, (causatively) enslave, etc.: KJV-- X be, keep in bondage, be bondmen, bond-service, compel, do, dress, ear, execute, + husbandman, keep, labour (-ing man, bring to pass, (cause to, make to) serve (-ingself,)), (be, become) servant (-s), do (use) service, till (-er), transgress [from margin], (set a) work, be wrought, worshipper.

Answer for yourself: So now what have we seen? Without a doubt God has commanded His worship according to a particular "Pattern" given to the Jewish people who are his Servants who are commissioned to communicate these truths about God to the whole world.

Isa 49:6 6 And he said, It is a light thing that thou (Israel) shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth. (KJV)

Let us read a few more verses.

Ezek 43:10 10 Thou son of man, shew the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities: and let them measure the pattern. (KJV)

Heb 8:5 5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount. (KJV)

Strong's Concordance and "pattern"

5179 tupos (too'-pos); from 5180; a die (as struck), i.e. (by implication) a stamp or scar; by analogy, a shape, i.e.

a statue, (figuratively) style or resemblance; specifically, a sampler ("type"), i.e. a model (for imitation) or instance (for warning): KJV-- en- ex-) ample, fashion, figure, form, manner, pattern, print.

Thayer's Greek Lexicon and "pattern":

5179 tupos- 1) the mark of a stroke or blow, a print 2) a figure formed by a blow or impression a) used of a figure or image b) used of the image of the gods 3) form: the teaching which embodies the sum and substance of religion and represents it to the mind, the manner of writing, the contents and form of a letter 4) an example: a) in the technical sense, the pattern in conformity to which a thing must be made b) in an ethical sense, a dissuasive example, a pattern of warning; used of ruinous events which serve as admonitions or warnings to others c) an example to be imitated; used of people who are worthy of imitation d) in a doctrinal sense; used of a type, that is, a person or thing prefiguring a future (Messianic) person or a thing

CAN WE DRAW ANY CONCLUSIONS?

I surely think we can.

Plato believed there are two "realities" or "worlds." This is exactly what both Egypt and the Jews believe and expressed in their religious symbolism and religious doctrines and no greater example could be found than the Temple described here and the pattern for its construction which was given to King David by God. Plato, like Moses and King David and the Rabbis knew that there exists an Invisible World and a Visible World. The Visible World is the world we see with our eyes, the world of sights and sounds and it is not "the real" but only a reflection of the "real" which exists in the invisible world of the Spirit/Energy (God). The Invisible World is the world of ideas that exist in the Spiritual realm. It is this second world, the Invisible world, that is the true reality to Plato, Egypt, and the Jewish nation attest. The visible is but a reflection of the "real" and when we see that we are speaking of worship in the verses above this means that there exists in the "Invisible realm" of the Spirit/Heaven a "pattern for worship" of God that needs to be emulated and followed by all mankind in this visible world. The Jewish nation was entrusted with this "Pattern of Worship" for the whole of mankind.

If you understood the above then this becomes all the more important as our studies progress and we see for ourselves that both the Jewish nation and the non-Jewish peoples of the world kept the same "pattern of worship as seen for example in worship of the Creator involving the Biblical Seasons and Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths. This you need to understand can be shown to apply both before Moses and after Moses and the 613 Laws given to the Jews by Moses. This means that long before the Jewish nation non-Jews were keeping these "holy days" by Revelation and the Hebrew texts and Scriptures detail this for us. Often however these "truths" are hidden behind English words that cover up these facts. This is a startling revelation that awaits you as you see with your own eyes for example that Abraham kept the Passover even before it gained the historical significance it holds today. Even more important is the examples we will soon see which teach us that in the New Testament that non-Jews and Jews both kept the Sabbath day and the 7 Biblical Festivals after the time of Christ. We even see Paul teaching non-Jews to observe and keep Havdalah which observes and commemorates the Sabbath as it passes and the new week begins. Paul taught his Gentiles churches this "Pattern" and we in Christianity today are basically ignorant of it and have a substitute religious calendar given us by antisemitic Rome. Even more startling is the revelation that there are certain passages in the Holy Tanakh that God commanded be read on certain days and that this "pattern" of reading of the Torah/Tanakh at certain times makes all the more sense when one come to understand that God has certain things to say and communicate to His people on special times and days of the year. Simply said you would not say to a person "happy anniversary" on his "birthday" and vice versa. Even more startling is the fact that the very basis for the outline of Mark's Gospel, chapters 1-16, can be shown to follow the Torah readings throughout the year in Palestine. Looking at the chronological sequence from Chapter 1 through chapter 16 we see that each thematic teaching overlaps with the required Torah reading throughout the year. This simply means that we have before us the midrash of the Synagogue readings as told through the life of "the Christ" throughout the calendar year as enumerated between chapters 1-16 in the Gospel of Mark. This "Pattern" of worship is everywhere but seen by few.

To recap even more startling is that it can be shown that even before Moses the Hebrew Scriptures teach us that non-Jews kept these same "appointed times" with God which sadly Gentile Christians are taught today belong and apply only to the Jews. We will see in our studies that in these "appointed times" with God that occur at the equinoxes and solstices is a hidden message of the "true salvation" of God as found in these Biblical Festivals. That should make you wonder if you have heard the right message of God in your antisemitic Christian Churches. Kind of makes you want to study does it not? Well the opportunity awaits you on this and our other websites at Bet Emet Ministries as the long hidden truths kept from you are revealed

Blessings...Craig Lyons M.Div.

SO YOU THOUGHT YOU WERE A FOLLOWER OF JESUS.....YOU MIGHT NEED TO RECONSIDER

Let me begin with a quote from the New Testament...from an epistle written to non-Jews like most of our readers.

2 Cor. 13:5

Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your ownelves.....

I think that this is a very good idea to prove to ourselves that what we believe is true; in fact I have practiced self-examination of such religious beliefs in light of the facts regarding the “real historical Yeshua” for over a decade. Because of such self-examination in light of my discoveries as I combed through 2000 years of Biblical history, culture, as well as in-depth analysis of Biblical language, I have been forced to change much of my religious belief system along the way. It is my desire that this article challenge you to scrutinize your religious beliefs as I have been challenged over the years. May God witness truth to your soul.

Answer for yourself: Was Yeshua a Christian and would he ascribe today to the vast majority of doctrines taught in his name in churches which go by his name as well?

Well let us investigate. But first we need to set the stage for what is coming next. Try and be as honest with yourself as possible in answering these next questions.

TO WHICH RELIGION WOULD A PERSON BE A MEMBER IF HE DID THE FOLLOWING?

- Was circumcised on the eighth day.
- Kept Sabbath from Friday sundown to Saturday sundown.
- Attended a synagogue regularly.
- Kept the Biblical Festivals such as Passover, Hag Ha Matzah (Unleavened Bread), Shavuot (Pentecost), Rosh HaShanah, Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), Sukkoth (Tabernacles) and Hanukkah.
- Was a citizen and friend of Israel and believed Israel is the example for all non-Jewish people in the world
- His Bible contained the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings ONLY!
- Quoted passages as authoritative from the Mishnah (the Oral Law).
- Taught that Deuteronomy 6:4 was the most important commandment.
- Wore a tallith and phylacteries in religious services
- Did not eat unclean foods
- Taught the eternalness of God's Covenants and His Laws

- Taught that faith without works is no faith at all
- Taught that salvation is more concerned with events in the here and now than what occurs beyond the grave

I suppose that most of you came up with the same answer.....you don't have to be a scholar to recognize that one that practiced such a faith does not practice Christianity.....he holds to the teachings of Judaism.

NOW, LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT ANOTHER PERSON. SEE IF YOU CAN IDENTIFY THE RELIGION OF THIS PERSON

- Keeps the Sabbath on Sunday which is the legacy of Sun worship today.
- Attends a church which most likely rejects most things Jewish.
- Keeps Easter and Christmas which were pagan festivals made to look religious to those who don't know the difference.
- Carries a Bible containing an Old Testament and a New Testament which ironically contradicts the Old.
- Stresses a person's beliefs over his actions.
- Teaches that people had to be "saved" by acknowledging a creed or an established set of beliefs in order to go to heaven.
- Teaches that they are not under the law and that the Law has passed away and they are under grace.
- Teaches that the church had replaced Israel as God's people and sees itself as the fulfillment of prophecies given to Israel.
- Teaches that you can eat anything...even Biblically unclean foods
- Attaches no special significance to circumcision

I bet you got the right answer again – a Christian.

GOING DEEPER THAN YOU POSSIBLY HAVE EVEN GONE BEFORE

Now let's take this discussion one more step by answering this question.

Answer for yourself: If a Jew wanted to become a member of a Christian religion could he continue practicing Judaism in the church?

The answer is so simple. You would only have to ask your Pastor that one question to get the answer. Probably in the 99.9% of the cases the answer would be - NO!

TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY

Answer for yourself: If a Christian wanted to become a convert to Judaism could he continue practicing Christianity and the items listed above? Again the answer is rather obvious.

Now, the percentage moves upwards, probably in 100% of the cases the answer would be - NO!

It is very apparent that not only are Judaism and Christianity different religions, they are exclusive in many ways. This reveals an amazing fact which can be seen by asking one very simple question –

WHICH RELIGION DID YESHUA BELONG TO...CHRISTIANITY OR JUDAISM?

- Was circumcised on the eighth day.
- Kept Sabbath from Friday sundown to Saturday sundown.
- Attended a synagogue regularly.
- Kept the Biblical Festivals such as Passover, Hag Ha Matzah (Unleavened Bread), Shavuot (Pentecost), Rosh HaShanah, Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), Sukkoth (Tabernacles) and Hanukkah.
- Was a citizen and friend of Israel and believed Israel is the example for all non-Jewish people in the world
- His Bible contained the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings ONLY!
- Quoted passages as authoritative from the Mishnah (the Oral Law).
- Taught that Deuteronomy 6:4 was the most important commandment.
- Wore a tallith and phylacteries in religious services
- Did not eat unclean foods
- Taught the eternalness of God's Covenants and His Laws
- Taught that faith without works is no faith at all
- Taught that salvation is more concerned with events in the here and now than what occurs beyond the grave

Now for the easy part. The answer to the above question is a matter of historical record which is easily attested to by the New Testament itself-- Yeshua was a Jew, not a Christian and he was certainly not both. It is clear that Yeshua was a practicing Jew who lived a very observant Jewish life-style.

In fact we cannot find any instance whatsoever where Yeshua ever: Kept the Sabbath on Sunday, attended or affiliated with any group which rejected things Jewish, kept the pagan festival of Ishtar/Easter or the sun god's birthday (Saturnalia...December 25th....Christmas) which were pagan festivals made to look religious to us today, ever taught anything that contradicted the Old Testament as does much in the New Testament, ever stressed a person's beliefs over his actions, ever taught that people had to be "saved" by acknowledging a creed or an established set of beliefs in order to go to heaven, ever taught that people are not under the law or that the Law had passed away and they were under grace alone, ever taught that the church had replaced Israel as God's people, and ever taught that you can eat anything...even Biblically unclean foods.

YESHUA NEVER RENOUNCED JUDAISM OR QUIT BEING A JEW

An amazing discovery for any Christian is the fact that there is simply no evidence that Yeshua ever renounced Judaism and quit being a Jew. Also, his teachings do not indicate that he ever wanted any Jew to renounce their Judaism and join a new religion. If this revelation every breaks into your conscious mind then you will have to confront Gentile Christianity for what it has actually become despite Yeshua's wishes or example set for us.

Answer for yourself: How then, did Yeshua get credited with the distinct label that he was the person responsible for creating a new religion?

Answer for yourself: How did Yeshua get credit for creating another religion which opposed the religion and way of life he continued to live...even up to his death?

Let us try to answer questions raised by such an assumption:

LOOKING THROUGH THE EYES OF A JEWISH RABBI NAMED YESHUA

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi prohibit circumcision or downplay its significance?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi change the Sabbath to another day...let alone to the day set aside for sun worship by the pagans?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi create a replacement for the synagogue?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi substitute a pagan feast which was clearly idolatrous, Ishtar (Easter), for Passover?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi want his followers to celebrate the birth of a Roman god (Saturnalia -- December 25)?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach his students to not keep the biblical commandments or that they no longer applied when God already said they were forever?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach Gentiles to hate Jews?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi add books to the Torah in spite of the warning in Deuteronomy forbidding the changing or adding to the Word of God?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi replace Deuteronomy 6:4 as the most important commandment?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach Gentiles that it is permissible to eat unclean food when Noah, himself a non-Jew separated animals based on the principle of clean/unclean long before there were any Jews?

The answer to all the above questions is that a rabbi wouldn't, and that includes a rabbi named Yeshua!

TOUGH - THOUGHT PROVOKING QUESTIONS YOU NEED TO ANSWER FOR YOURSELF

Answer for yourself: If Yeshua didn't create a new anti-Jewish religion, who did?

Answer for yourself: Who is responsible and what were their motives in replacing the faith of Yeshua with a faith about Yeshua?

Answer for yourself: Was it the men who acquired leadership after Yeshua's departure and the death of the Apostles who did such a thing?

Answer for yourself: Were those responsible for changing the faith of Yeshua actually Jews or Non-Jews and were their motives in changing Jewish doctrines consistent with anti-Semitism?

Answer for yourself: Did they continue teaching Yeshua's message and his gospel or did they change Yeshua's message in places, and are you, at the present not yet aware of it at your present level of knowledge?

THE BOOK OF ACTS PAINTS US A PICTURE WE WOULD DO WELL TO EXAMINE CLOSELY

The book of Acts provides us with some very valuable information too long overlooked by most Christians. Acts 21:17-25 records Paul's return to Jerusalem and his meeting with the leaders of the "church." Keep in mind that these were the men who had been personally taught by and lived with Yeshua. Their words provide us with some very enlightening information. The translation given below is based on a cultural and historical methodology. Your translation most probably reflects the doctrines of the Roman church and therefore may differ.

"You see, brother (referring to the Apostle Paul), how many thousands of Jews have become faithful (observant). All of them are zealous for the Torah (Law). They have been informed that you have taught the Jews of the Diaspora to not keep the Torah, that they should not circumcise their children or live according to the Jewish religion.... Take these men and do the following... so that everybody will know that there is no truth in these reports about your teachings, but that you yourself are living an observant life-style and keeping the Torah."

REMEMBERING THAT THIS IS A PICTURE OF JESUS' CHURCH.....

A quick summary provides us with some very significant information. Understanding that this passage reflects events which occurred long after Yeshua's death then I ask you to be truthful to the text as well as yourself in asking yourself this: Is your church producing the same results?

- Jews who believe in Yeshua are becoming more faithful (observant to the Law) because of the message taught by Yeshua's followers.
- The message of Yeshua's church caused adherents to become zealous for the Torah (Law).
- The members of Yeshua's church kept the Laws of Moses (the Torah).
- The members of Yeshua's church circumcised their children.
- The members of Yeshua's church lived according to the traditions of the elders of Judaism (the Jewish religion).

Notice that Paul did as he was requested - Paul example, at least while he was in Jerusalem under the watchful eyes of the Apostles, wasn't teaching the Jews to abandon their religion. On the contrary, Paul's behavior and example was one as "under the law" and as one who lived an observant Jewish life-style.

Answer for yourself: How then could he have been the author of a doctrine that advocated rejecting the law as is ascribed to him by most Christians today?

Answer for yourself: Not meaning to over-stress this point, but are you really getting the importance of this message as taught by Yeshua's church in Palestine?

IS YOUR CHURCH PREACHING THE SAME GOSPEL AND MESSAGE AS YESHUA'S CHURCH?

Again looking at Acts 21 for our information.....let us examine what we are taught by this New Testament picture:

- The message of the apostles caused Jews to repent and become observant Jews who practiced Judaism faithfully.
- The apostles were causing Jews to become eager for the Torah and to pursue it with fervor. It is clear that they were not teaching them that "they were under grace and no longer under the law" or that "the law has passed away after Yeshua's death" as we have been told today. This one point is in complete opposition to most fundamental teaching of every modern Christian doctrine.

- The Jewish members of the early church continued to circumcise their children. In other words, they continued to see themselves as participant's in the Abrahamic Covenant, just as every practicing Jew does today. Their children were Jews, not members of some new mystical religion that replaced Judaism.
- The Jewish members of the early church continued to practice Judaism. They did not switch to a new religion.

HOW ARE WE TO INTERPRET PAUL'S ACTIONS?

When we look at Paul's actions, after being ordered by James to take several men with him to the Temple, thereby paying for their animal sacrifices in order to prove that he was an observant Jew by bringing blood sacrifices and sin offerings necessary in finishing his Nazarite vow, we are faced with two possibilities: (A) Paul intentionally deceived the apostles and the Jews in Jerusalem; or, (B) Paul's image and/or the teachings attributed Paul may have been altered by the Roman Church a hundred or more years later.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul intentionally deceive the apostles by faking his true beliefs when bringing sacrifices in the Temple after Yeshua's death?

Answer for yourself: If Paul did deceive them, could you put much confidence in his teachings at other places in the New Testament? Remember he already has said that he can become anything to anyone to prove his argument and accomplish his goals.

Answer for yourself: On the other hand, if Paul's words were changed by the Roman Church could we base our foundational beliefs on forged documents?

Christianity, almost universally, requires a Jew to convert to Christianity before he can become a member of the church or be saved. This conversion process forces the Jew to renounce his or her Judaism and terminate or redefine many Biblical and Jewish practices.

Having read this article so far, please think deeply while answering these next questions:

Answer for yourself: Would your church require a Jew to renounce or stop practicing Judaism if he or she wanted to become a member?

Answer for yourself: How many circumcisions have you attended for the children of Jewish members of your church?

Answer for yourself: How many of your church's members are Jewish and are zealous for the Torah and are pursuing it with fervor?

Answer for yourself: Does your church conduct at least one Torah study per week?

Answer for yourself: How many of your church's Jewish members are observant Jews?

Answer for yourself: When was the last time you attended a Passover Seder, or a Rosh HaShanah or Yom Kippur service at your church?

Answer for yourself: Do you have a rabbi or a minister well educated in the Hebraic Roots of Christianity leading your church?

Your answers to the above questions are probably -- Yes, None, None, No, None, Never and Minister.

I want you take some time to think about the next question before you answer it.

Answer for yourself: What would your church require a rabbi to do if he applied for membership?

Answer for yourself: Would they allow him to continue to be a rabbi, practice Judaism, teach the Torah, wear his prayer shawl, observe all the Jewish festivals and teach the members that they were under the Law?

Answer for yourself: What if that rabbi was Yeshua?

Are you beginning to see the truth?

Without a great deal of effort it becomes glaringly apparent that neither Rabbi Yeshua, the apostles nor the Paul of Acts 21, would be allowed to join a Christian Church the likes of which we see today. On the other hand, it is also clear that Rabbi Yeshua would not participate in any religion that not only opposes, but is actively dedicated to destroying his Father's religion!

Gentile Christianity has for centuries felt it was given a mandate from God to "save the world." This is the goal and stated mission of Christianity.

THE SILENT SLAUGHTER OF TRUTH

Answer for yourself: How is this mission to "save the world" to be accomplished?

Just ask the Southern Baptist Convention who just last year vowed to win every Jew to Yeshua by the year 2000. To put it very simply, the goal is to convert every Jew (non-Christian) to Christianity. The Jewish convert must renounce his Judaism (or any non-Christian religion he may hold), agree to accept the doctrines of Gentile Christianity and oppose any religion that opposes Gentile Christianity.

Instead of a physical holy war (Jihad), Gentile Christianity has engaged in a doctrinal holy war. As I stated above, Christianity is an exclusive religion. Christians are not allowed to simultaneously practice Islam, Buddhism, Judaism or any other religion. Therefore, if Christianity was to attain its goal of "getting every person on the face of the earth to believe in Yeshua," including all the Jews, Judaism would be totally destroyed and cease to exist. If this were ever to happen, and I pray it does not, then Christianity would have the dubious honor which Hitler in vain tried to achieve; namely the eradication of not only the Jewish people from the face of this planet, but the total destruction of the true faith of Yeshua...Biblical Judaism.

This would accomplish something that the crusaders, the inquisition, Hitler and a number of others have failed to accomplish.

Answer for yourself: How do you think a Jewish Yeshua would react to the idea that such a mission was being carried out in his name?

This really gets weird when you think about it! Christians base their proof for their ultimate salvation on a Jewish rabbi named Yeshua (Jesus), who was an observant Jew who faithfully practiced Judaism. On the one hand, his religion would most probably not allow him to practice modern Christianity. On the other hand, modern Christianity would not allow him to practice its religion without first renouncing his religion -- Judaism!

This should present a very important challenge to every Christian:

If a Jewish Yeshua could not, and would not, practice a religion dedicated to destroying his religion, how can anyone who bases their salvation on Rabbi Yeshua participate in and perpetuate it?

Answer for yourself: Would Rabbi Yeshua agree with the church's salvation message which is based on such a system? Are you getting the drift of this discussion?

Answer for yourself: How did the religion that Rabbi Yeshua and his followers practice evolve into what it is today? To begin to unravel this problem lets ask how a religion whose foundational position focused on teaching its members "to keep the Law" became a religion whose main message was that "members are no longer under the Law."

Early Christian writers taught that the Law had been fulfilled with the coming of Yeshua. Fulfilled, as they defined it, meant that it had been canceled and therefore was of no importance to Christians. However, to Rabbi Yeshua, "fulfilled" meant (1) to keep the Law; and (2) to correctly interpret the teachings of the Bible. There is absolutely nothing said by Rabbi Yeshua that would support modern Christianity's doctrine of grace.

Next, the Roman Christian leaders focused on the story of God's unconditional and unending support. However, they claimed that this was something new and was created when God made a new covenant of grace. Again, this was unknown to Rabbi Yeshua and his apostles. Early Gentile Christian leaders and theologians continued to develop their new doctrines from the mid-second century on through the seventh century. As they refined their arguments they became much more antagonistic toward Judaism.

This Gentile anti-Judaic movement spanned almost all of Christianity -- from the Roman African communities represented by Tertullian (160-220 C.E.), to the Iranian monk Aphrahat (300-350 C.E.) of the eastern Syriac Christian tradition, and to Bishop John Chrysostom (349-400 C.E.) in Antioch.

Studies have clearly shown the extent to which leaders of the early church attacked Judaism for its position on the law, calling Jews "slavish adherents to the letter of the law." They claimed that Judaism was allowed to continue to exist primarily as an example of degradation.

Answer for yourself: What do you think that rabbi Yeshua would have thought about that position?

Origin, the third-century leader of the Christian community in Caesarea, summed up the difference between Judaism's and Roman Christianity's approaches to Scripture:

"It seems necessary also to explain how certain people by failing to read or understand Scripture correctly have given themselves up to a great many errors, since the way one ought to approach the understanding of divine letters is unknown to a great many people. And so, the Jews, through the hardness of their heart and because they wish to seem wise in themselves, have not believed in our Lord and Savior...."

Now the reason that those we have just mentioned [Jews and heretical Christians] have a false understanding of these matters is quite simply that they understand Scripture not according to the spiritual meaning but according to the sound of the letter...."

[But] a person ought to describe threefold in his soul the meaning of divine letters, that is, so that the simple may be edified by, so to speak, the body of the Scriptures; for that is what we call the ordinary and narrative meaning.

But if any have begun to make some progress and can contemplate something more fully, they should be edified by the soul of Scripture. And those who are perfect... should be edified by that spiritual Law (Rom. 7:14) which has a shadow of the good things to come (Heb. 10:1), edified by the spirit of Scripture. Thus, just as a human being is said to be made up of body, soul, and spirit, so also is sacred Scripture, which has been granted by God's gracious dispensation for man's salvation."

This new scheme for reading Scripture, and the charge that Jews miss all but the literal meaning, made for powerful arguments. Origin's dichotomy between "letter" and "spirit," or in other words, between reading biblical materials either at their face value for norms of behavior and as a more generalized stance toward the world, set the stage throughout history for Christians to increase the fervor of the charge of legalism. Legalism became synonymous with Jewish, and therefore was viewed in a negative light. However, the word "legalism" simply means someone that "lives in accordance with or adheres to a legal system."

Answer for yourself: What would you call someone who "did not adhere to or live in accordance with a legal system" -- a Christian? The products of this anti-Jewish tradition still shapes the thoughts of over 1.6 billion Christians regarding Judaic law.

I am challenging every Christian to make a decision to return to the religion, teachings and life-style expounded by Rabbi Yeshua. Don't misunderstand what I am saying; I am not advocating adopting and accepting the current "theology or faith" about Yeshua; rather, return to the real faith of Yeshua and the place within it for the Gentile Godfearer. As I stated above, according to the book of Acts, your conversion experience to the faith of the Apostolic church of Yeshua as seen in Acts 21 should have made you zealous for the Torah and brought you back to an observant Biblical life-style as defined by the commandments of God.

Answer for yourself: Has it?

Becoming a member of Rabbi Yeshua's movement should have caused you to become a serious student of the Torah. You should be teaching the Torah to others, especially the flood of Gentiles who are coming to you to be taught.

Answer for yourself: Has it?

Answer for yourself: Is there any other way for you to be a "light to the Gentiles?"

If you are a Gentile, you will also need to take a very close look at Acts 15. Gentiles who were coming to the movement originated by Rabbi Yeshua were given very special instructions. First they were to place themselves under specific laws. For all practical purposes those laws were the Ten Commandments. Of special importance was their keeping the Jewish Sabbath and studying the Torah at the synagogue with the Jews.

Keeping the Jewish Sabbath is something that you can do immediately, however; many of you may find it difficult to locate a synagogue where you will be allowed to study the Torah. For very good reasons, after thousands of years of persecutions, the Jewish community is very cautious. I believe that as Christian Jews return to the synagogue, because of the teachings of Rabbi Yeshua, the doors will be opened wider to Gentiles desiring to know the God of Rabbi Yeshua.

Two things must be kept in mind as both Jews and Gentile Christians choose to return to the teachings of rabbi Yeshua. First, almost two thousand years of conflict between Judaism and Christianity has left many scars. Both religions have developed reactionary doctrines and theologies. A reactionary doctrine created as a reaction to the another religion's actions or doctrines.

An example would be the Jewish position concerning kneeling for prayer. Because Christians knelt for prayer, the Jews took the position that they should no longer kneel but stand for prayers. Judaism altered its form of worship because of this practice of Christianity. There have been many reactionary doctrines created both between and within both religions. This is an area of research that deserves much attention. I would challenge my readers to consider such a research project.

It must be kept in mind that the Judaism of Yeshua is not exactly the same as the Judaism of today. Also, the movement attributed to Yeshua is not the same as modern Christianity. Obviously, many things have taken place since the time of Yeshua which resulted in the separation and numerous differences between the two religions.

It is of the utmost importance for both Christians and Jews to understand these changes. You must know when the changes were made, identify the people who were responsible for making the changes, and discover why they made them. You must come to an understanding which changes were motivated by inspiration, which were produced by the hunger for power and wealth and which were the results of human frailties such as anger, rejection, fear and hatred.

As you embark on this journey you will quickly come to realize that you have stumbled upon the greatest cover-ups in history.

As you become more acquainted with the truth upon your study you will realize two very important things:

- Leaders, especially scholars, have always been aware of this information and have deliberately chosen to ignore it.
- This information has been virtually within the grasp of every American. In many cases it is as close as an encyclopedia or attainable today through the Internet.

Today, there are over 2.5 billion Christians on the face of the earth – the vast majority who believe in their heart they are true followers of Yeshua, but as I have shown you, are practicing a different religion from which Yeshua practiced. If they all returned to the teachings and life-style taught in Acts, we would see a moral and ethical revolution that would literally rock the foundations of the world and no longer would America, touted to be the most Christian nation in the world, be recognized as the world's most violent and law-breaking nation of the world. That should make you wonder what it would be like if Christians really followed the faith of Yeshua and if your church would really allow you to be like Yeshua.

If one undertakes the study of Bet Emet's Websites, and understand it is a life's work, then one is prepared to understand what has happened to Christianity down through the centuries and how Divine Truths, once expressed through allegory, metaphor, and simile by the Ancients who first received the Revelations of God, has been suppressed, altered, and tragically lost today through the "literalization" of such revelations given to us by the Ancients. This is a tragic story to say the least and renders us as "believers" and "followers of the New Testament Jesus" as idolators and we never know it because our Bibles inherited from Rome are "forged" in key "theological places". If you are diligent to study and learn from what is shared on these multiple sites then over time you will understand how it is possible to follow the "New Testament Jesus" in one way which ends with idolatry and in another way which ends in holiness and righteousness. The key to all of this rest in the true identity of "the Christ," "the Logos", and "Christ Jesus". We are all familiar with these terms but we will see hopefully there is a big difference between what we have been taught about them today and what they meant to the original Christians. Rome's has played a key role in the loss of these Divine truths and the substitution of falsehoods as you will come to see. "Surely that is not possible I hear you say" but I only wish it were so. For your study and thought are these websites developed and revised over the years as Bet Emet Ministries' studies have progressed and deepened and more parts of the "theological puzzle" of Christianity became apparent to myself and others associated with Bet Emet.

These websites are intended to be "a step by step" process in your pilgrimage of learning. We begin by looking at the surface of the texts and then moving deeper as the websites progress we look often at the hidden and esoteric meanings that lie beneath these same texts. In other words we begin our websites with a "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" and "Jesus Christ" and move later to the "Mystical Christ" and finally to the "Mythical Jesus Christ". As alluded previously we begin by looking at the "literal historical Jesus" and the texts and explain them "literally" as we have been taught since growing up most like since childhood in the Christian faith we inherited. In so doing it is my intent to show you and separate for you a Jewish Messiah and Judaism's truth from a non-Jewish Messiah and untruths given us by Rome. As your studies progress it is my hope that you will come to see the depiction of this "Jesus" in the New Testament in a deeper light; not as a historical-literal person but the "personification of Divine truth" that was entrusted to the Jewish nation for the Gentile world. As the websites progress you will come to see just whom this "Divine Christ within" really is and how this concept has tragically be changed by Rome and given a literal-historical life of its own. It is a real shame that the only Jew to ever came to you and me was this New Testament Jesus dressed up like Constantine and bearing literalized sunworship concepts which simply are not true in their "literal sense" since they bring idolatry with them. Over time you will come to see the Divine Truth within them however when they remain as allegories as they were intended for it is then and only then can they express the Divine truths as originally intended and as understood by the ancients who gave them to mankind in the first place. Rome changes them and never tells us in the book we inherited; the Roman Bible.

In closing it is my intent as a yet ordained Pastor who desired to serve the Creator and help His children do the same that once this information came to light over the years of my studies I realized that someone has to share and tell others of this deception in order that our worship of the Creator be in "Spirit and in Truth. Bet Emet, Hebrew for "House Of Truth", has done as best it can to present these truths in hopes that your love for and worship of God be likewise.

The order of our study is very important. If you start from the beginning and work your way through these websites as if you are reading the "best of many books" (which you are) then you will end your study with few unanswered questions and you will have arrived at the truth you sought and have a very clear picture of whom God is and what He requires of you, the non-Jewish believer in Christianity today. Sure the trip is hard, long, and time consuming and filled with both tears and joy as you deal with what has happened at the hands of men who served themselves rather than God. But the goal must be kept squarely before you....to come to the Truth once known about God by these Ancients who framed many of the very same religious doctrines that sadly have come down to us altered today and sadly cover the pages of our Bibles. You will come to see that there is a very big difference from the Jewish Bible and the corrupted Gentile Christian Bible we inherited from Rome. This is Rome's doing! All of this is dealt with on our websites and you will get to it in time if you are diligent in your study.

Let us end with one passage from the Hebrew Scriptures:

14 Then the LORD said unto me: 'The prophets prophesy lies in My name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spoke I unto them; they prophesy unto you a lying vision, and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their own heart.'

It is time that we do diligent study in order to overcome these "lies" which we have inherited from Rome and others and repent of such error if it be in our life. It is time we search out and return to the faith of our Fathers who carry the Ancients traditions and truths with them. Today we find that in Judaism, the legacy of Egypt. Few know this because of lack of study but the beginning study has been done for you. It is time you accept the mantle of study which in first century Israel was "the highest form of worship".

Lev 20:77 Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy; for I am the LORD your God (the Jewish Tanakh)

PRESENTING THE "JESUS STORY" THROUGH THE 4 WAYS OF RABBINICAL TEACHING

The Websites and our spiritual pilgrimage follow but I must say that what I uncovered when getting to the bottom of the origin of the "Jesus Story" is that the "New Testament Jesus" can be understood in many different ways and in so doing yet communicate Divine Truth to the reader. I have discovered through my 20 years of study that we basically have 3 different ways to understand "the Christ" and the "Jesus Story" as I and others see it. We at Bet Emet Ministries have covered all 3 different understandings and presentations of "Jesus Christ" through the totality of our websites. Taken in order our Websites take the student through these 3 different understanding of "the Christ" in systematic order.

- Historically...(myth taught through the medium of a presumed historical person; although not accurate to the existence of a historical person yet important in that it serves as an example to be emulated by all mankind)
- Mythically...(personification of the Sun and its path through the Zodiac and the 4 seasons of the year; the equinoxes and solstices)
- Mystically...(expressing a hidden teaching, a secret doctrine, given under strict and exacting conditions to approved candidates by the Masters of Wisdom regarding the descent of the Logos into matter, ie., mankind). Paul speaks of this:

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Are all three methods of presenting Jesus Christ equally accurate to truth? No they are not and our Websites will provide the evidence you need to not only see this for yourself but make adjustments in your religious belief system when needed. Our focus needs to be on correctly interpreting the Mystical and Mythical Christ and then dealing with the erroneously interpreted "Historical Jesus...the Christ with flesh".

It goes without saying that we all begin to read and study the Bible from a "literal" perspective assuming that it is the vehicle for "literal truth" about Jesus Christ, never realizing that often these stories were written to be understood as allegories by the original writers let alone ever realizing that our "Jesus Story" can be found in identical form all the way back to pre-dynastic Egypt over 13,000 years ago. Bet Emet Ministries began several years ago to present websites dealing with Christianity which at first adopted this "Literal Interpretation" of Jesus in the "Jesus Story" since the "literal" approach toward Jesus in the New Testament is taught today by almost all of Christianity as they assume that Jesus Christ was a historical person. We all grow up in the Western Hemisphere assuming that the "Jesus Story" is a historical reality; that is until we do the serious study of our faith required to get to the bottom of the "Jesus Story" and the religious synthesis within it. Only with the study of Gnostic Christianity did I come to clearly see the Mystical Christ. Many of our websites, especially the early ones from years ago, begin by approaching the "Jesus Story" from this historical -grammatical method of interpretation because this is how we grow up and first get acquainted with the "Jesus Story". This I felt was necessary to get the reader and student started in order to reveal the greater Spiritual Truths that lay within Biblical Judaism that does not come with the added baggage of idolatry which we find in Gentile Christianity. As a pastor I realized that it takes time for a "seed to grow" and if I strike out and were to say "everything you believe about Jesus is wrong" I would lose any hope of reaching people with the fruits of my studies. So the beginning study of the Jewish Roots of Christianity follows the Rabbinical Methods of teaching and I applied them to Bet Emet's presentation of the "Jesus Story" and the totality of our Websites. There are 4 levels of Rabbinical teaching.

PASHAT

The first level of understanding is PASHAT (simple). The Pashat is the literal meaning. It is similar to what Protestant hermeneutics calls "Grammatical Historical Exegesis" and also similar to what Protestant Hermeneutics calls "The Literal Principle." The PASHAT is the plain, simple meaning of the text; understanding scripture in its natural, normal sense using the customary meanings of the words being used, in accordance with the primary exegetical rule in the Talmud that no passage loses its PASHAT (b.Shab. 63a; b.Yeb. 24a). While there is figurative language (like Ps. 36:7) symbolism (like Rom. 5:14); allegory (like Gal. 4:19-31) and hidden meanings (like Rev. 13:18; 1Cor. 2:7) in the Scriptures, the first thing to look for is the literal meaning or PASHAT. This is how and why I developed the first websites and in so doing try to reveal the beauty of Biblical Judaism to the Christian student desiring the truth of his Jewish Roots. For it is in Biblical Judaism do we find our links with Egypt in their purest form thus preserving better than any these Ancient understandings of God and the Cosmos and man's responsibilities to the Creator. These following websites approaches "the Christ" as an assumed "historical person" yet never telling the reader that behind this motif of a "historical Jesus" lies the greatest deception know to mankind.

- RETURNING TO THE JEWISH ROOTS OF CHRISTIANITY...THE FAITH OF JESUS/YESHUA
 - <http://returntofaithofjesus.netfirms.com>
 - <http://returningtofaithofyeshua.freesevers.com>
 - <http://www.geocities.com/returningtofaithofjesus>
 - (The examination of the Jewish and Hebrew Roots of the Christian Faith as taken from a literal perspective. In so doing we expose many of the errors in doctrine and practice of today's Gentile Christianity with special emphasis upon the non-Jewish believer and his Divine place within the Israel of God instead of enmeshed in replacement religion as exists today in Gentile Christianity. We pay no attention in this site to the many problems concerning the Historical Jesus and approach the study from the normal assumption that the historical Jesus is true since that is how most of us grew up believing in the first place...in later sites we look at this problem in greater detail).
- THE COVENANT OF NOAH & THE LAWS OF NOAH AND THEIR RELATIONSHIP TO THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH
 - <http://covenantofnoah.netfirms.com>
 - <http://www.geocities.com/covtnoah>
 - (Now we look in depth to the non-Jewish believer and how he fits into true Biblical Faith. This is very important information and necessary for every Christian to read and study in detail. This is a very revealing study of the Covenants of God with special emphasis upon the Covenants concerning the non-Jew which are called today the Covenant of Noah comprising the 66 commandments of Noah; included in this site are OT references to this covenant as well and revealing exposition of this same covenant in the NT as taught to the non-Jews in fulfillment of the Great Commission before Rome would change everything in the 4th century; see how the Pattern of Worship was the same for the Jew and non-Jew and how denominational Christianity has missed the mark throughout history due to it's anti-semitic background and dogmas inherited by Rome).
- THE BIBLICAL "PATTERN" OF WORSHIP & THE GENTILE GOD-FEARER IN THE FIRST CENTURY SYNAGOGUE-"CHURCH"
 - <http://jewishrootscx.netfirms.com>
 - (Having learned all of this knowledge from the above websites and fully convinced that repentance is needed in my "Christian religious belief system" then the question that should be asked is this one as I see it: "If I, as a non-Jew, who had not converted to Judaism, had lived in the first century in Israel and had come into contact with the Messianic Movement within Israel as we find it in Acts 15 for example, then what would I have been taught about how a non-Jew is to "worship" the Creator"? Is there a "Pattern of Worship" of God that I need to know about? Other questions come to mind: What was I to do having learned these truths about the early Gentile inclusion into the Israel of God? How was I to worship in contrast as to how I learned from Roman Christianity? How can I bring this understanding into my life today? How can I worship the Creator in "Spirit and in Truth" in light of what I have learned in the above websites that has shown me that I have been badly taught and so badly misguided by my spiritual leaders in Christianity today? If you want those answers then this website is for you. My apologies that it is not finished but under "construction" but better to begin to learn what we can when we can than waste any more time. I trust that in time the website will be finished.

REMEZ

The next level of understanding is called in Hebrew REMEZ (hinting at a prior truth or a hidden truth that goes beyond the current text). Peculiarities and contradictions in the Biblical texts are treated and presented to the reader as hinting at a deeper truth than that conveyed by its PASHAT. The fun of discovering our Jewish Roots, Sabbaths, and Biblical Festivals is over and it is time for serious investigation of our inherited faith. Our Websites get more challenging as I begin using the principle of Remez to hint that there are problems with the "Jesus Story" and begin to question many of the teachings of Christianity and their presentation of Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. We still approach these issues as if "historical" but as your studies progress you begin to slowly get the picture that there is severe problems with what Christianity teaches about "the Christ" and its presentation of Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. It bears saying again that we approach this information yet as if "historical" but as our websites progress we will soon move to the "Mythical" and the "Mystical" presentations of Jesus Christ. You might say we are in the process of cracking the egg shell regarding the "Jesus Story".

• RETURNING TO THE BIBLICAL FAITH OF JESUS/YESHUA BY EXAMINING CLOSELY OUR BIBLES

- <http://www.faithofyeshua.faithweb.com>
- <http://geocities.com/thefaithofjesus>
- (We move on and begin to look at our New Testaments since it is within them that we have the core of the problems concerning this Jewish Messiah portrayed as Jesus. Here we encounter examples of such textual and scriptural falsifications in our Christian Bibles, both Old and New Testaments as mentioned in the previous sites.. hundreds of examples where the facts and truths that once existed in the Jewish Masoretic Old Testament texts were purposefully changed in the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures by the Essenes and later incorporated into almost all Christian Old Testaments and the implication of such purposeful alterations by not only the Jews of Alexandria (the Essenes), but the later changing and altering of this solar-mythology by the Gentile Church in their final production.. the New Testament. Here we encounter the change of these Divine Concepts as they become altered and reinterpreted and attached to the life of the New Testament Jesus. So it is necessary that we become very familiar with the document called the New Testament which has incorporated such religious agendas over time)

• AN UNBIASED LOOK INTO THE HISTORY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...AND THE ROLE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN ITS CANONIZATION?

- <http://historyofformationofnewtestament.netfirms.com>
- <http://geocities.com/faithofyeshua>
- (Now we must understand how we actually got this New Testament in the first place. This study is as best as possible an unbiased and intense study into the New Testament, its origins, its canonization, the disagreements of the early Church Fathers as seen for hundreds of years in the conflicts and disagreements concerning it, its falsification and purposeful mistranslation of the Jewish Masoretic text, the role of the Essenes in the falsification of the Jewish Old Testament and its impact of the later developing New Testament, and the determination of the role of the Holy Spirit in the production of the New Testament...if any)

• PAUL...THE TRUE FOLLOWER OF JESUS...OR...SUBVERTER OF THE FAITH OF JESUS AND FOUNDER OF A NEW RELIGION?

- <http://paulproblem.netfirms.com>
- <http://paulproblem.faithweb.com>
- <http://geocities.com/paulproblem>
- (Now we move to the Paul Problem. Let it be said that I am hard on Paul since he has been presented to us on the pages of this New Testament in a particular way and reinforced by 2000 years of Church Tradition. I must say that I deal with Paul "literally" as this is the way he has again been presented to us on the pages of the New Testament and in so doing I spare no ink in pointing out the problems this presents regarding a Jewish interpretation of "the Christ". Understand that this is a very challenging website which exposes the deception behind the New Testament's presentation of the Apostle Paul...it reveals the truth behind the purposeful manipulation of history and facts to cover up the truth about Paul who was understood by all in the first century to be an enemy of the Jerusalem church and remained so his whole life...I expose what the true religious belief system of Paul really is and show you how it is a synthesis of Gnosticism, Mystery Religions, and Judaism...along with this I reveal his and later pro-Pauline writers purposeful misuse of the Jewish Scriptures by Pauline writers in their presentation to the non-Jewish world of a new religion and how they made it seem as if Jesus was the cause for it...this is strong stuff and not for the faint-hearted. We will look at Paul in a different light when he is later put into his Gnostic setting which is historically accurate then then we can say "kind things" about Paul then...so hold on...we need to find the "real Paul" and we don't have it yet since Rome forged all but 7 authentic epistles which he wrote and put his name on them...so we have to be hard on Paul since Christians believe that he taught all the things that carry his name. We will see as we study that he did not and the blame for this deception is again laid on the lying pens of Rome....so we deal on this site as "if" Paul was responsible for these writings since we are taught he wrote them all by tradition)

• THE JEWISH CONCEPT OF "THE" MESSIAH....WHY CAN'T THE JEWS AND THE CHRISTIANS AGREE?

- <http://jewishmessiah.netfirms.com>
- <http://www.geocities.com/bennoah1messiah>
- (Now we enter the beauty of Judaism and the truths they taught about their own Messiah and once knowing this then it is easy to contrast them with what we have been taught as Christians that come from our forged Christian Bibles. Ever wonder why the Jews and Gentile Christianity cannot agree on the Jewish Messiah? At last the unbiased truth concerning the Jewish Messiah and with it many explanations as to how the Christian theology concerning the Messiah deviates so drastically from the Jewish Messianic concepts as well as emphasis on the corruption of the Gentile's religious texts (OT and NT) which culminates in the creation of a Messiah which was never prophesied by the Jewish prophets.....the answers for the Gentile Christian are not always comforting but if you want the truth it is here for the interested and unbiased student and true seeker of truth. This is a selective summary of what went before on the other sites where I pull together pertinent information concerning one topic and one topic only: THE MESSIAH. If your desire is to study what the Jewish Scriptures taught about the Jewish Messiah before they were altered and changed as they were purposefully mistranslated into the Greek and later carried over in their corrupted forms into the Christian's Old Testament and New Testament texts, then this material is for you. Along with this site is the examination of text after text not only in it's Hebraic original form but as it was altered and changed thereby causing New Testament believers to ignorantly accept and cherish beliefs about Yeshua/Jesus which not only are incorrect but which render them idolators before God).

• A TRUTHFUL ANALYSIS OF MESSIANIC PROPHECIES IN THE HEBREW BIBLE AS CONTRASTED WITH THE CHRISTIAN TRANSLATIONS...DID JESUS FULFILL THEM?

- <http://messianicprophecy.netfirms.com>
- <http://www.geocities.com/bennoah1>
- (A very detailed examination of the Hebrew Scriptures and how they were later altered when translated into the Greek, Latin, and English versions of Christian Bibles. We trace the corruption of the Jewish Scriptures from the Hebrew in which they were originally written and show how these Jewish Scriptures were later purposefully mistranslated, misquoted, misapplied, and even invented in order to alter the human messiah into a "cosmic Godman" by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. Later these very same altered passages will become forced "fulfillments" when applied to Jesus in later Latin and English versions taken from the Greek forgeries of the Jewish Scriptures. We show repeatedly how the Greek translations were forged in order to include the Essene concept of their "angel messiah" and "cosmic Godman" and later how this concept would be further adulterated when applied to Jesus some two hundred years later through the further forgery of other Hebrew Scriptures by the Roman Gentile Church. In other words we show beyond any doubt how the Holy Word of God has been corrupted today. No wonder the Jewish people don't believe in the Christian Jesus; their Jewish Scriptures read completely different than those of the Christian Church in "key" messianic places)

• DANIEL 9:17-27: THE SEVENTY WEEKS OF YEARS AS TAKEN FROM THE HEBREW

SCRIPTURES

- <http://seventyweeksdaniel.netfirms.com>
- <http://geocities.com/bennoah3>
- <http://daniel70wks.faithweb.com>
- (We now look at a very problematic piece of prophecy. Of all the Old Testament scriptures translated and quoted (or purposely mistranslated or misquoted) by Christian evangelicals in hopes of finding validation to most of their Gentile Christian doctrines, Daniel 9:17-27 and Isaiah 53 are perhaps the two most popular. In both cases, Christianity relies on a claim that the only reasonable interpretation of those scriptures is theirs. But is this true? Have our Christian Bibles been forged to force fulfillments as applied to Jesus when the true Hebrew Scriptures read differently than our Christian Bibles? Well...it is time to see the truth for yourself concerning Daniel's 70 weeks and then you decide who is right....Judaism or Christianity)

• THE ESSENE CHRISTIAN FAITH AND ITS LEGACY OF SUN WORSHIP

- <http://essenechristianfaith.netfirms.com>
- <http://essene.freewebsites.com/>
- <http://geocities.com/essenecx>
- (As stated earlier Divine allegory of the ancients has been "literalized by Rome" and presented to us in our Christian Bibles. We begin to see this through a comprehensive and challenging investigation into the true origins of the Essene-Christian faith as we begin in Egypt and it's worship of God. In so doing we spend some time understanding Egyptian Sun-worship where astral-theology and solar-worship was personified into "savior Godmen"...Osiris being both the first and the "pattern" of all that followed; tracing such solar beliefs through successive Gentile nations and making note of similarities as well as differences, until we come to the Essene/Qumran cult, who, in rejection of Biblical Judaism because of their inability to assume the Priesthood following the Maccabee war, evolved away from Biblical Judaism and adopted these astral-theological religious ideas which had more in common with Egypt, Persian, Zoroastrianism, Buddhism, Pythagoreanism, etc., than with Judaism, until we end up with a "corrupted Judaism" which is more commonly known today as Christianity. What we find is that the Essenes "literalized" these prior Divine Allegories concerning Divine Truths expressed by the Ancients through the medium of myths and symbols. It is in the hands of these apostate Essenes where these Divine concepts were "literalized" and were purposefully included in a falsified translation of the Jewish Old Testament called the Greek Septuagint. In so doing these Divine Concepts lose their original meaning and these reinterpreted doctrines become parts of the Greek Old Testament for the Greek speaking world and for all later Christians and the Christian Church; thus providing the substrate for all later quotes of the New Testament. The bottom line being that personified Sun-worship was applied to the life of the Jewish Messiah as recorded in the New Testament and it is we, not knowing that these concepts were only to be taken allegorically, have been misled to see in them a "literal" understanding when they never were originally intended to be taught as such. In so doing we spend a lot of time with the texts in order to see how this was done and how extensive this misrepresentation is in our Bibles).

• THE PAGANIZATION OF THE FAITH OF YESHUA ...AND THE BIRTH OF "GENTILE CHRISTIANITY"

- <http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com>
- <http://www.paganizingfaithofyeshua.freewebsites.com>
- (We move on now to look at more "literalization" of Sun-Worship as it was applied to the Jesus of the New Testament by the writers of the this New Testament. This is a very, very challenging study and expose of how Sun-Worship today as masqueraded as "orthodoxy" in Christianity...the subject is diverse and will require adequate reading on your part but well worth the price as you learn of the origin of the Sun Myths which were later personified by the Indo-Germanic nations and later written into the translation of the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. These accounts would be later embellished by the Gentile Church as they applied them to the life of the Jewish Messiah as represented through this Jesus as they build it off the falsifications of the Greek Old Testament as altered by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt; this site exposes the false theology connected with Jesus which lines almost every page in the New Testament in one way or another...a through understanding of this site, as well as the others of Bet Emet Ministry, exposes beyond any doubt the lies and idolatry that has been foisted upon unsuspecting Gentiles who are yet today pawns of this theological deception and antisemitism of Rome)

This approach, teaching God's higher Divine truths through the vehicle of a godly example, the "assumed historical Jesus of the New Testament", works well up to a point because in doing so we are presented with a "Godly" example of a life to be emulated as found in the Jesus of the New Testament (for the most part). A life patterned after the Jesus of the "Jesus Story" will hopefully issue forth in one bearing the fruit of morality and ethics and one lived in the Fruit of the Spirit. This is the reason why Israel does not evangelize today because Christianity has accomplished for them their task as God's Priesthood. As a pastor I wish they could have accomplished this without the masked idolatry connected with the "Jesus Story". The non-Jew has learned of the God of Israel and has learned how to live in peace and harmony through the teachings of Christianity. Sadly in all of this the main character, the Jewish Messiah, has been so badly misrepresented in the character of Jesus who, for example, is made to cleanse all foods and abolish the kosher laws in Mark 7:14. This is rather strange for a Jew who is obligated to observe Kosher. Hopefully you see the problems of what I speak. Again through our websites the student is made aware of the problems inherent in places in this New Testament's depiction of the New Testament Jesus. Yet, in such a presentation then Jesus is the non-Jew's "pattern" for he, real or not, is the only Jew to ever witnessed to us and came knocking on the doors of our lives as non-Jews. Sadly the Jewish community is closed to the non-Jew for the most part due to the tragic treatment of their people by the Christian Church these last 2000 yrs. As I say often it is sad that when we answered the door of our lives as we heard the "knock" of this New Testament Rabbi named Jesus that we did not possess, at that time, enough knowledge of the truth about "the Christ" and the true "Jewish Messiah" that we could not recognize that this Jew named Jesus, as God's "light to the Gentile world", came dressed like the idolator Constantine teaching a replacement religion. Lacking this knowledge which Bet Emet's Websites provide the student unsuspectingly we bought into the Roman counterfeit and no wonder the Jews cannot accept this Roman Jesus as their Messiah. Good for them! But hopefully as your studies mature you begin to see that there are other ways to understand the "Jesus Story" but surely understanding the "Jesus Story" as a historical truth concerning a literal person who lived 2000 years ago and who embodied the historical Jewish Messiah is not one of them.

DRASH

Another level of Jewish hermeneutic and understanding the Scriptures is called in Hebrew "drash" meaning "search", this is the allegorical, typological or homiletical application of the text. Creativity is used to search the text in relation to the rest of the Scriptures, other literature, or life itself in order to develop an allegorical, typological or homiletical application of the text. This process involves eisegesis (reading of the text) of the text. Ironically as I found this expression or interpretation of the texts reflected most accurately the type of "belief" of the earliest Christians who were not only looking for a historical Jewish Messiah to be revealed but at the same time understood that the "logos" or "the Christ/Sophia/Egyptian Karast" lived within all mankind. This understanding of "the Christ" reflects Paul and his 7 authentic epistles where he teaches the "Christ within".

As you might expect a few years later, as time allowed, Bet Emet provided a website dealing with the Mystical Interpretation of the "Jesus Story" and "the Christ" as we showed that the religious beliefs of the earliest "believers" who were called the first "Christians", long before Rome emerged to dominate the Christian faith, did not accept a historical Jesus at all but rather understood "the Christ" as a Divine Concept that lives within every man and woman and is not exclusive to just one person as is portrayed today by "literalistic Roman Christianity. It is in this site that we restore the earliest Gnostic Christian understanding of the "the Christ" as it existed for almost 5 centuries before being utterly destroyed by Rome with its replacement religion we have today which I call "Literal Christianity".

• MARCION AND THE "FIRST" NEW TESTAMENT...WHO WERE THE ORIGINAL CHRISTIANS AND WHAT DID THEY BELIEVE ABOUT "THE CHRIST"?

- <http://firstnewtestament.netfirms.com>
- (Now we put all the pieces together and the whole picture comes into focus. We now look at the true Paul, a Gnostic which never taught a human Jesus Christ but rather "the Christ within" in his 7 authentic epistles. We trace in this website how the earliest "Christian" believed in the "Christ within" and not "a Christ without". We see how the ancient religious allegories were understood not only by these ancients who were given them but by the Gnostic Jews and Gentiles in the earliest centuries of the church as well long before Rome will come an "literalize" all of it and give it a fictitious historical timeline in creating a "historical Jesus". In so doing we will see how the earliest New Testament expressing these allegorical Divine truths is butchered by Rome and destroyed and how we end up with the forgery we have today. Never let it be said that archeology and hard study are not our friends.

An unbiased study of History will show you that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence anywhere that the Jesus Story originated as the biography of a man named Jesus, and quite a lot of evidence that it did not. An unbiased through study of Comparative Religion will reveal to you that the basic plot of the Jesus Story, from beginning to end, including the motif of a crucified savior, already existed in many other religions thousands of years prior to the alleged time of Jesus and if you continue such dedicated studies into Astronomy and Solar Mythology you will find that beyond any doubt the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down, that of the annual passage of the seasons of the year and the path of the Sun through the celestial sphere and the 12 Houses of the Zodiac during the year. Personification of the Sun through the sky as found in the story of ancient solar and lunar gods follow in chronological procession through the year the exact chronology of the "Jesus Story" when personified from Matthew chapter 1 through then end of the book.

This website will be a lot different from anything you most likely have ever studied. Growing up in the Western Hemisphere we are traditionally taught a "literalistic" and not an "allegorical" or "symbolic" understanding of Christianity. This "literalistic" interpretation of "Jesus" and "the Christ" is based upon the inherited religious documents we received from Rome which we were taught to accept as infallible and inerrant without every questioning them. However great advances in Biblical Studies and archeology have been made in the last two hundred years and one in particular in the last 50 years has made a startling impact upon Christianity and few know of this. I am referring to the discoveries of the Nag Hammadi Library along with the Essene's Dead Sea Scrolls in the last 50 years which has turned our traditional Roman understanding of Christianity upside down and basically taught us that almost everything we had through we had "known" from Roman Christianity up to now concerning "Jesus" and "the Christ" was most likely wrong. That is simply because when we discover from study of these archeological finds and see for ourselves that the First New Testament written and given to us by the earliest Gnostic Christians like Marcion and Paul did not teach a "human Jesus Christ" but rather an allegorical and symbolic "Christ" as the Logos within each of God's children. This explains why there were no genealogies, birth or infancy narratives, or the 4 traditional Gospels in the earliest Gnostic Gospels. It is this "allegorical Christ" and "allegorical Joshua-Jesus Christ" [pattern] that the earliest New Testament and the authentic Pauline epistles taught but few know this today since Rome's efforts to destroy all of this literature as well as murder the Gnostics until few remained to safeguard this Revelation which can be traced to the beginning of mankind. In this website I reveal these truths concerning the "allegorical Christ" of the earliest Christians. Along with this we tackle the difficult problem of Christian forgeries of later Pauline Epistles and Gospels in their attempt to create a "historical Jesus" and a "historical Christ" in order to mimic their Godman-Emperor. This information goes a long way not only in explaining the lack of credible and unforged evidences of a historical Jesus but show how a Second New Testament was latter forged in Paul's name, who was long dead, along with the names of long dead Apostles in Rome's attempt to place a historical Jesus within an appropriate timeline. By comparison of what was written and contained within the First New Testament with what was later written later by Irenaeus and others in Rome's attempt to refute the Gnostic Christ and the Gnostic Joshua-Jesus we can easily now come to terms with this creative theology of Rome which was little more than a synthesis of "literalized" Sun Worship as exposed on our other sites. What should strike you as you study these materials is that the concept of the "Logos" and the "allegorical Christ" goes all the way back to the beginning of mankind where God gave Revelation of Himself and His plan to the Ancient Egyptians who first wrote of the Karast/Christ.)

SOD

The 4th and final level of understanding the Scriptures is called in Hebrew "Sod" meaning "hidden". It is here that I reveal the hidden links to Egypt and Astronomy which they "allegorized" to capture for all time the Divine Concepts that they witnessed written in the sky and Heavens above them. God, writing on the blackboard of the sky and Heavens, expressed to these Ancients sages and Priest eternal principles that were later captured in "myths" and "legends" to preserve for all time these Godly truths that would last through all time and yet today survive in spite of the destruction of Egypt by Alexander the Great and later Rome. These Laws of the Cosmos were expressed in allegorical myths that were reaffirmed by the same Laws witnessed operating in Nature. Ancient man, understanding that these same Laws operated within himself and his body saw therefore that "he was created in the image of God "; the image he witnessed operating above and around him when noticing the same Laws and Cycles in the Heavens and in Nature operating within his physical body as well. This is truly beautiful when you see it as it brought tears to my eyes to see and comprehend Gods' earliest message to me and you that has not been changed or adulterated by the agendas of men down through history. It is so simple when you see it. That is the way God intended it to be in the beginning but we strain at a nat and swallow a camel today with our highly developed and evolved theologies down through Christian history.

It has been a hard and long process for me to accomplish but my task is about through when I complete this last website on the "Mythical Jesus Christ" as seen in the stars.

Now it is time to devote this website to the comprehensive understanding of the "Mythical Christ". In so doing we will prove that the "Jesus Story" is actually an allegory for the path of the Sun "personified" as it travels through the 12 Houses of the Zodiac and through the 4 seasons of the years (the Spring Equinox, the Summer Solstice, the Autumn Equinox, and the Winter Solstice). You will come to see that this is the oldest and most important story humans ever knew as it also is full of Divine Truths that are to be understood "allegorically" and not "literally" as we have erroneously been taught today by a literalized Christianity of Rome's making. We owe a great debt to Ancient Egyptians and their great wisdom and their foresight in preserving for the the world this earliest understanding of God.

• THE EGYPTIAN RELIGION AND ITS RELATIONSHIP TO JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY

- <http://www.egyptcx.netfirms.com>
- We have all heard that "all roads lead to Rome" but in reality all roads lead to Egypt. This is especially true when one studies Christianity and Judaism and finds that these sister-faiths are nothing more than evolutionary developments of the Egyptian Religion. Understand from the beginning that Judaism is a much more faithful picture of this Planet's original understanding of the Divine than Christianity. Judaism comes in a close second. As a Pastor I am amazed where my studies have taken me and the things I have learned over these last twenty years in my pursuit of Jewish Roots of the Christian Faith. Never did I expect to find what I have uncovered and consider myself fortunate to live in an age where archeology and other such disciplines are giving back to mankind what Rome destroyed, covered up, and took from us over the last two thousand years. The study of error is often a little less important than the study of truth. The history of the human mind, in its progress from ignorance towards knowledge should tell us the mistakes into which it has sometimes wandered, as well as its steps in the right path. This is the goal of this website: to re-examine Gentile Christianity as to its earliest roots and determine if what is considered "Christian orthodoxy" today is a faithful representation of the earliest understanding of God by the Ancients since it is they who coined the religious concepts which we are told that we adhere to today in the primarily Christian Western Hemisphere.
- There is much to say about the knowledge contained in this Website but let me be brief. This website will reveal to you how the Ancients understood the message of God and His revelation to them from their critical observations about the Heavens and the sky as well as Nature. The Egyptians Priests and scholars understood that God was revealing His Laws and intentions in the operations of the Divine Laws that governed the Cosmos. These Ancients holy men saw that these same Laws operated within their own bodies as well and that they were "created in the image of God" as what God was doing "above them" and "around them" He also was doing "within them". These Ancients sought out God and His way like no other nation has ever done on the face of the earth and tragically this knowledge was lost to us until only recently with the discoveries of archeology. We must understand that when allegory, metaphor, simile, and myth which expressed both the identity and actions of the Creator as understood by the Ancients in grasping for understanding of God and His workings in the Cosmos, was altered and stripped of its symbolism and rendered for all time as if "literal" by those who will come later through "conquest" and destroy Egypt and their understanding of God, then not only is Divine Truth lost forever but it plunges its recipients into abject idolatry. Such is the plight of the primarily Christian Western Hemisphere as these allegories and metaphors that once expressed Divine Truth were altered by Rome and "literalized" and applied to men's lives; in this case Jesus. If you have been diligent to study the website referenced just above this one then you saw for yourself this tragic loss of Divine Truth by Rome's "literalization" of such Egyptian Ancient truths concerning the "Logos" and "the Christ".

• ASTROTHEOLOGY AND THE "JESUS STORY" OF THE NEW TESTAMENT: DOES IT ORIGINATE WITH THE STARS?

◦ <http://jesusaastrotheology.netfirms.com>

◦ This website is presently under construction. This will be the last website for Bet Emet Ministries and in so doing we will go where few have gone. In this website we will show beyond any doubt from Astronomical examples of the Sun, Moon, Stars, and Constellations, that the Ancients preserved what they witnessed in the stars and Heavens seen in the cycles, patterns and paths and movements of these Heavenly orbs in "allegories" and in "myths" and "legends" not only concerning physical movements of these Celestial orbs as taken from their observations but expressed within these "solar myths" and "lunar myths" deeper Divine Truths of a Mystical Nature. These hidden deeper Divine Revelations from God to mankind dealing with the Spiritual Nature of mankind and his expected Spiritual maturation were again saved for all time through the agency of Myth which was never to be interpreted "literally" but rather were to function as "allegories" and "symbols" only that were but vehicles for transmission of higher truths from God. From these celestial patterns the Ancients extrapolated the Laws, Ordinances, Commandments, and Covenants of the Creator and gave them to mankind as a "blueprint" for our existence. These myths held the message of God to mankind. Later these myths were told through lives of personified man-gods like Osiris, Dionysus, Attis, Amon, Mithra, and Jesus. Since we include Jesus in the same sentence with other astral myths then this will be a hard study for as you examine the evidence presented you will see without a doubt that an unbiased study of History shows that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence anywhere that the "Jesus Story" originated as the biography of a real historical man named Jesus. In fact the evidence, or should I say the lack of it, and the forgery of all that does exist outside this one New Testament, is hard to deny and makes a belief in a historical Jesus almost impossible when knowing from the above studies the hundreds of forgeries in the religious texts of the Christian Bible. Nowhere outside of this one forged book by Rome can we find this "historical Jesus". As if that was not enough an unbiased and through study of Comparative Religion reveals to the reader as seen in the above studies and sites that the basic plot of the "Jesus Story", from beginning to end, including the motif of a crucified savior, already existed in many other religions thousands of years prior to the alleged time of Jesus and if you continue such dedicated studies into Astronomy and Solar Mythology you will find that beyond any doubt the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down, that of the annual passage of the seasons of the year and the path of the Sun through the celestial sphere and the 12 Houses of the Zodiac during the year. What is most startling is when you see for yourself that the personification of the Sun and its path through the sky as found in the story of ancient solar and lunar gods follow in chronological procession through the year the exact chronology of the "Jesus Story" when personified from Matthew chapter 1 through then end of the book. The Synoptic gospels follow the path of the Sun in its travels through the sky from beginning to end. Most may have no idea of what I am saying I can only tell you to hold on and read the articles on this site and you will quickly come to see of what I spoke. Let it be said when you see this and that all the other "Jesus Stories" are but Ancient allegories of the Heavens and the Sun and its path through the Zodiac which was later "literalized" then without a doubt there is no more room for idolatry connected with any Jesus of any kind. Then we can follow in the footsteps of Moses and quit worshipping a false "god-man" and return to worshipping our Creator in Spirit and in Truth. You come to see that the "Jesus Story" is nothing but a retelling of the "Osiris Story" and the "Horus Story". It is from these two Ancient Egyptian stories that all other "saviors" have come.

Orthodox Christians, since they are committed to a belief in the literal truth of the Bible, hold that after the flood men became even more evil than they were before, so that 4,000 years after the creation of the world, god sent his only begotten son to suffer and die for the salvation of the human race. This ministry of Jesus, the Christ, was supposed to be a unique event in human history but as we show it is anything but that. This opinion is no longer tenable among those who accept reason as the criterion of truth.

If you are diligent to study and read these websites then you have it all. There is little that exists that is not covered in one way or the other or has somehow escaped my attention over these almost 20 years of study. There is nothing I would trade for my years of study and the truths that I have gathered and although it has been challenging to my very core I fully am aware that because of such serious studies my walk with God, the true God, is closer than ever. It is truly well with my soul because "I KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT HIM SEPARATED FROM ALL THE FICTION" that men have written down through history to promote their own religion and political agendas.

So we began our study with the question:

Matt 16:13 13 When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? (KJV)

Now you have you answers! ?The rest is up to you to study to show yourselves approved..needing not be ashamed when you meet this Creator face to face when you cross your Nile/Jordan...(the same)

IN CLOSING

As stated earlier we begin our study with Bet Emet Websites with a "historical" assumption and present studies to show the beauty of Judaism over the dishonesty in Christian theological dogma and do so by using the depiction of the New Testament Jesus as if "historical" because he provides a vehicle for the teaching of Jewish theology, monotheism, morals, values, ethics, etc. It is not my purpose to reveal the weaknesses behind such a historical presentation of Jesus at this time as it will be developed and proven at a later time as one's studies progress through the Mystical Jesus and the Mythical Jesus as detailed on the above websites.

Of concern for us of course is the "Jesus Story" as depicted in the New Testament and its reliability as understood "literally" since it is being taught as a literal truth today about a historical man who lived 2000 years ago. You will come to see in time as you study that the Ancients as far back as Egypt understood this "Karast/Christ" entirely different from how we have been taught today under the direction of Roman and Protestant Christianity. Here are some big questions for you to ponder in light that most Christians trust in this Jesus Christ for their Eternal Salvation.

- Answer for yourself: Who or what is truly behind the name "Jesus Christ"? Can it be proven that the "Jesus Story" is nothing but the personification of the Sun and its passage through the various houses of the Zodiac as it passes through the 4 seasons and the equinoxes and solstices? If so then what do you do now?

- Answer for yourself: Are the infancy narratives and later depictions of the life and ministry of Jesus Christ in the New Testament nothing more than solar stories told as allegories which were later "literalized" and subsequently written into Rome's New Testament and depicted as a literalized historical Jesus Christ when in fact they were understood by the Ancients as astrological myths taken from astronomy?
- Answer for yourself: Did Rome destroy the Gnostic Christ of the earliest "Christians" which had existed since the beginning of time over the first 5 centuries of the early Church and replace it one of their own making? What are you to do when you see this from your studies on our Websites?
- Answer for yourself: If I study the Websites and find that the "Jesus Story" follows chronologically the Gospel of Matthew from chapter one through the end of chapter 28 and see for myself that the "Jesus Story" presented there parallels identically the personification of the Sun in its path through the Zodiac then what should this mean to me regarding my belief in Jesus as the historical Christ and him being the Jewish Messiah?
- Answer for yourself: Have we as Christians and followers of the "the Christ" been deceived by Rome and spent a good part of our lives worshipping a man as God as Rome has declared in their New Testament since the Nicean Council (325 A.D.) when in fact we should have been worshipping the one true Creator as the Pharaoh Moses (Akhenaton) instructed when he stood up to the religious establishment of Egypt when some were straying from the truth in their worship of the "godman" similarity to what we have done today with Rome's historical Jesus? Are we guilty of idolatry as Christians because we have believed a fable no more real than Snow White and the seven dwarfs?

Well the following studies in the above websites is not for the weak of heart as I will present over and over again infallible proofs that the "Jesus Story" as depicted in the New Testament is but a hoax perpetrated upon us by Rome in their hatred of the Jewish faith and Jewish Gnosticism back in the first century. You will see, in the last website depicting the Mythical Christ, as we move chronologically from one sign of the Zodiac to the other, from month to month, from season to season, from Spring equinox to Summer solstice, from Autumn equinox to Winter solstice, and repeating again this cycle, along with the study of selected events from the depiction of the life of Jesus in Rome's New Testament, that if you study with us and finish the studies on this website, that the "Jesus Story" as depicted in the New Testament is nothing more than the literalization by Rome of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac along with other solar myths later incorporated into their "Jesus Story" as later literalized by Rome as well. In so doing you will see as I and many others have that we have not been taught the truth about "the Christ within" and how He is so integral to the proper worship of the Invisible God as Egypt and Moses taught. It would seem that Egypt got it right in the beginning but thanks to Hellenism and Romanism we lost these earliest and correct understanding of Divine Concepts witnessed in God's Heaven and Nature. In a way these were our classroom and where we were to be instructed by the Creator about our life and purpose in God's creation. We are truly blessed today to live in an age where archeology and the information age can bring these truths back to life for you and me.

As a "retired Pastor", and moved by what my studies revealed over the years, I feel moved to share this information and evidence from such studies with those interested in the truth behind the origin for "Jesus Story" which is taught to the world today as a historical reality when in fact it is not. In the websites that are delineated above such evidence is presented to the reader in hopes that the missing puzzle pieces concerning the "Jesus Story" will be plainly evident to him and he can, in the light of such knowledge, no longer be deceived by the astrological allegory of "the Christ" as found in the New Testament which is erroneously taught "literally" today. I make very few promises to our readers but I make this one now: If you do these studies, and read these articles on this website then you will be thoroughly convinced as I was that the "Jesus Story" was never meant to be understood "literally" as it has been taught to you and me. Thus the worship of Jesus as a historical person or connecting this assumed historical person with God or believing him to be God is the most vulgar idolatry according to Moses and the Ten Commandments and a terrible affront to the Creator and constitutes blasphemy of the Name of God.

THE "PATTERN OF WORSHIP" AND THE NON-JEWISH BELIEVER...THE GODFEARER

It is my intention to demonstrate to the serious student of the Bible that there exists both in the Hebrew Scriptures (the Old Testament) as well as the New Testament a "Pattern of Worship" that includes both the Jew and the Non-Jew (the Godfearer). This "Pattern of Worship" was shared between both the first century Jew and non-Jewish believer as well.

Now one would expect that if a non-Jew converted to Judaism that he would be observant of the same Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths as was the Jew born into Judaism but what is startling is that there exists a overlap, if you will, between the "stranger", or the non-Jewish convert, and the Jew regarding not only these Holy Days and Sabbaths but a host of other commandment involved with the "Pattern of Worship" given to all of mankind. We will in this website begin to present the evidence and to trace this "Pattern of Worship" and the idea of this "common salvation" shared between the non-Jew and the Jew from the Hebrew Scriptures/Old Testament down through to the New Testament. In so doing we can get a better picture of what the non-Jew was commanded by God to observe and adhere to in his worship of the Creator according to his Covenant and see how this relates to what Commanded of the Jew as well. Let us begin at the beginning and see if a "pattern" develops and make the necessary applications to our lives as we go.

RECOGNIZING THE NON-JEW IN THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES AS HE RELATES TO THE "PATTERN OF WORSHIP"

To be able to recognize the requirements of God laid upon the non-Jew in his worship of the Creator it is necessary that we begin at the "beginning" and learn to recognize the non-Jew in the Hebrew Scriptures with emphasis upon the context and any possible connections to descriptions and pictures of them relating to their worship of God as commanded in the Hebrew Scriptures. It is from these pictures that we can draw our conclusions especially as our study deepens and we trace any possible "pattern" we find later into the New Testament. Now let us look at the the examples of the non-Jew as relating to worship in the Hebrew Scriptures and let us never forget what we see as the God who changes not had not changed His mind on this; sadly other antisemites down through history have and extended great efforts to destroy and conceal this "Pattern of Worship of the Jews intended for all mankind.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE ACTS 15 COUNCIL AND THE IMPLICATIONS FOR THE NON-JEW'S INCLUSION INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD WITHOUT REQUIRED CONVERSION (OLIVE TREE THEOLOGY)

Having noticed how the non-Jews were observing the same "appointed times" of God along with the Jews in the Hebrew Scriptures now let us focus on the very important ruling of James in Acts 15 whereby we see many things; one of the most important is that the non-Jews were being incorporated into the "Israel of God" through full conversion and we find these non-Jews attending the synagogues with the Jews. Yet this was to change as the Acts 15 ruling will begin a movement of total acceptance of non-circumcised non-Jews as a "non-covert" into the Israel of God providing certain "necessary things which seemed good to James and the Church as well as the Holy Spirit" (Acts 15:28) were done. Let us go deeper. This is "Olive Tree Theology" as its best!

THE GODFEARER AND GOD'S SABBATHS, HOLY DAYS, FESTIVALS & FEASTS...GETTING TO THE HEART OF THE ISSUE

This page and articles are under construction at present and will be added and completed throughout the coming year as we approach these holy days so please be patient as I am working every spare minute to complete this task. Thanks you. Craig Lyons M.Div.

We have seen and examined thoroughly in the above articles not only the issue of "full conversion" of the non-Jew to Judaism but also how the non-Jew was historically accepted within Judaism without "full conversion". Having understood these facts now it is time to see just how this "acceptance" of the non-Jew without full conversion was accomplished and how it related to worship and his participation in the Sabbaths of God.

We now will focus on just how the "non-Jewish" believer in God, the "Godfearer" related to each of the "appointed times" of God and the Biblical Sabbaths, Feasts, and Festivals. It is our quest to see if we can amass enough evident to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that non-Jewish believers in the God of Israel were observing and keeping the Sabbaths, Feasts, Fasts, and Festivals of God along side the Jew. When you see this for yourself and remember what you have learned on this website how Constantine forbid these "Sabbaths" of the non-Jew and changed them all then this should make you want to repent and set at the feet of the Jews and learn the message of God in His "Holy Days" for you. THE PLAN OF GOD'S SALVATION AS TAUGHT IN THE BIBLICAL FESTIVALS

As a Seminary graduate and ordained Pastor I like you grew up in Western Christianity learning about the "Roman Road to Salvation." Sadly after years of scholarly research dealing heavily in areas like original Biblical languages, Biblical culture, Biblical history, chronological tracing of manuscript forgery and manipulation for theological agendas by the Essenes and the Gentile Church, chronicling the innumerable purposefully mistranslations, misquotations, and lifting of Hebrew Scriptures out of context again for "theological agendas," and finally many years of comparative religious studies I realized that this highly touted "Roman Road to Salvation" is nothing more than the replaying of pagan Sun Worship following the "Osiris Pattern" of Egypt.

But not all is bad news for within the Hebrew Tanakh is the true plan for mankind's salvation given by God Himself. Having said that, then let me explain the plan of salvation as seen in the Biblical Festivals as the Bible Yeshua used teaches them.

Christianity gets some of this right; but sadly gets a lot wrong. Let me explain.

GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION AS SEEN IN THE EXAMPLE OF ISRAEL...THE LIGHT OF GOD'S SALVATION TO THE WORLD

God makes His salvation available through faith and this foundational concept is pictured in the physical salvation of Israel from Egypt. Faith is not just a "mental assent" but an alive response to a religious beliefs. Saving faith is not dead but alive and responds. The key is responding in "obedience." This response can be called appropriately "works" for such actions as one's fruit of one's faith accompany such beliefs for if the Israelites had not responded accurately & obediently to their faith in God and failed to apply the blood to their door then they would likewise had died. So we learn that faith that responds in obedience "saves."

What we need to notice is that this "saving faith" was seen at the Passover. Salvation of God delivers the believer from death and this salvation is "imputed" to us yet the reality of its fullness yet awaits us. You might say we have an "earnest" of our salvation today but not the whole ball of wax; at least not yet. Passover serves as the starting place for one's faith in God and His saving Word. It is one's obedient faith to the Words of God that produces this "saving faith" and the Passover was the perfect example for demonstration of one's faith in the God of Israel and in so doing then God's judgment of sin "passes over the believer" due to his obedient faith. Of course for us such obedience [Israel responded in saving faith by applying the blood of a lamb to their doorposts] is seen in obeying the various Commandments of God involved in our unique Covenants with God; both for the Jewish people and the non-Jews as well.

Once we are saved by our faith in God with obedience unto Him at our personal Passover one comes to the next Festival of YHWH where we learn of the purpose of the Festival of Unleavened Bread. The Festival of Unleavened Bread follows "faith in God and his Word" where obedience really comes to the forefront. It is time to get the "leaven" (picture of sin in the Bible) or sin out of our lives. Since sin is the transgression of the Law then getting this "breaking of God's Commandments" out of lives means that we must grow in our understanding of God's Torah and Laws which frame our respective Covenants; both Jewish and non-Jewish [for the Christian the Covenant and Laws of Noah]. This is a sanctification whereby we make ourselves through repentance and obedience to the Word of God acceptable vessels for God's Spirit to inhabit.

Once we grow as worthy vessels for God's spirit to inhabit through repentance and a heightened obedience then God's Spirit comes to such a one in the fulfillment of Pentecost. We have just personally experienced our own Passover where God's judgment passes over us because of our faith in Him and obedience to His word. As our obedience grows then God comes to dwell within us to the degree that we are worthy vessels. As we find in Israel we find in our own lives. These first three Festivals are called the Spring Festivals and they are observed during the first rainy season in Israel.

It helps to understand that Israel had two rainy seasons a year separated by a long dry period. We find the same example in our lives. We all get excited when we come to God, turn from sin, and are filled with His Spirit. But over time the day to day drudgery of life wears us down. We like Israel experience our own dry period as symbolized by a life-time of temptation and drudgery. We are confronted daily of living lives that overcome or lives that fail. Once we are saved, cleansed, and filled with God's Spirit, we are equipped to live out our lives where we must deal with the good and the bad as we encounter them in life. Sometimes life is hard as seen in the dry season following Pentecost; yet we have the Spirit of HaShem to comfort and sustain us throughout the middle and autumn years of our lives.

After the dry season of Israel and our lives we come to the next Festival which is Rosh HaShannah which symbolizes our death at the end of our life. Rosh HaShannah is the resurrection and judgment. It is appointed for man to once die and then the judgment which is also a second part of Rosh HaShannah. After the resurrection at Rosh HaShannah and the judgment and reward for believers as well as non-believers, then one awaits final atonement at Yom Kippur. The only thing lacking is the eternal dwelling of the Spirit of God with mankind at the Festival of Tabernacles. This is the eternal Sabbath where God and man are one. This is only a summary to say the least of what the Biblical Festivals reveal...the Plan of Salvation of God.

And if you noticed, this plan is very understandable to the Jew and non-Jew without trying to "force" Yeshua to fulfill passages that yet remain unfulfilled.

It is these Biblical Festivals, correctly understood as given above, which will further enable the Jew and the non-Jew to become one in expectation of the coming of the Messiah.

As you see the cycle of observance of the Biblical Festivals, called a "moed," in Hebrew, literally means a "rehearsal." What God intends is that all His Children, both Jew and non-Jew, keep and observe these rehearsals in order that they learn God's true plan of salvation and in so doing make their calling and election certain in order that they be the "bride" and not find themselves excluded. God repeated His salvation message to His people year after year in order that no one get it wrong. With Rome's help...we did!

Matt 22:9-14 9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. 10 So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests. 11 And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment: 12 And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless. 13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. 14 For many are called, but few are chosen. (KJV)

THE PURSUIT OF EXCELLENCE IN MINISTRY

Greetings from Pastor Craig Lyons of Bet Emet Ministries.

I want you to know that when I began studying the Bible and the languages in which the Bible was written over fifteen years ago I never expected to find what I did nor was I prepared for the extent of what I would uncover in serious study of the Jewish Roots of Christianity. It is important for you to know at the outset that I was raised in a traditional “fundamentalist Baptist” home and would later, in answering the call of God in my life, attend some twenty years after obtaining a Pharmacy degree for the University of Texas, in Austin, Texas, Southwest Baptist Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas, where I received an excellent Bible education (from a Protestant perspective). Let me tell you that while there a terrible mistake occurredthey taught me Greek and Hebrew which only propelled me into looking deeper into the Jewish Roots of the Christian Faith. My parallel studies along with my Seminary training only intensified and enlarged the many unanswered questions which I would spend years following graduation in pursuit of answers. I was not prepared to find what I would and my whole life would change in the process.

After graduating Seminary with a Masters Degree in Divinity, instead of pastoring a traditional Baptist church where Sunday School lessons and Sermons are often prepared for you in advance, I became a staff pastor at a rather large nondenominational church in the Dallas-Ft.Worth metroplex where preformed curriculum was not provided and I studied the Bible to get the truths from the text of Scripture which I would teach and preach. Was I surprised when the original languages of the Bible taught me so differently from which my Baptist Seminary and previous religious traditions had taught me. One thing is for certain: the original ideas from the Hebrew are meant to be faithfully transmitted into the Greek and again faithfully transmitted into the English. Surprisingly I found out they had not been! This is where the problem begins; namely, with the purposeful forgery, mistranslation, misquotation and outright deception in the translation of the Hebrew Bible into the Greek. Following this is the sad fact that every English Old Testament is based off this forged Greek Old Testament and every resultant quote in the New Testament comes from this forged Christian Old Testament itself. The problem lies in that the reader of the Christian Bible, not knowing Hebrew, is at a loss to discern which of these English passages in his Christian Old Testament and quotes in the New Testament are faithful translations of the Hebrew and which are not. This means that replacement religion goes unnoticed by most of the 2.5 billion Christians in the world today. This revelation cut the legs out from under me and the soon clear understanding that I have been fed a bill of good and a bunch of untruth regarding the Jewish Messiah and the Salvation message of YHWH became critically apparent. I was devastated and in tears and could not believe that this could have happened to me, for after all, I had graduated Seminary and nobody had alluded to this sad fact to me at any time while I was there. In fact they touted the Greek over and over again and little prestige was given the Hebrew and now I understand why. Antisemitism, both explicit and inherent, permeate Christian dogmas and doctrines and there is no going back to the truth without a full repentance in one's Christian religious belief system. This would mean for many that they would have to close down the Seminaries and get a real job.

Answer for yourself: Who was right...the Jewish Bible interpreted in the original language with Biblical history and Biblical culture as verification of truth, or my Greek Bible and English translations with its traditions inherited from my Christian pastors and parents?

With the aid of a Bible computer, I used the skills shared with me in Greek and Hebrew while in Seminary to research thousands of verbs and nouns in both the Old Testament and New Testament over the next years. I read hundreds of books on related topics over these years in search for these hidden truths. My home today has two rooms devoted as personal libraries alone. You must understand, that if you only read the Bible in English, then, more often than not, you will lean upon your own understanding which is influenced by your own experience in interpreting the Bible, instead of understanding the concepts connected to the original language in which the Bible was written. Such guarantees error in interpretation.

Answer for yourself: How does living as a Gentile in the USA help me understand a Hebrew Book? In other words, if you do not study the Bible in the original languages, along with knowledge of the culture in which it was written coupled with the history of the time in which it was written, then you cannot be assured you have the accurate meaning God intended for you, and more often than not you won't!

Most Christians are relegated to reading the Bible only in English without any background of what they are reading, and more often than not, can be shown to have a erroneous belief system and corresponding obedience before God and their fellow man because of such inadequacies. Sadly, to few pastors and teachers in Christianity today have the necessary skills to "rightly divide the Word" or, if they were taught them at one time in their life, many fail to put them to use in their ministry. Sadly, their congregations are deprived of necessary truths which will have an eternal impact after we die.

Having such skills, I endeavored to be a light in a dark place when affiliated with churches in the metroplex. After several years of trying to bring repentance and share the many truths I discovered which corrected my then held religious beliefs in many areas, and would yours if only you knew, I finally realized that too many pastors in high positions considered themselves infallible, uncorrectable, and unteachable. Repentance was not in their vocabulary. I have one particularly famous pastor tell me, when shown truths from the Bible which corrected his position on tithing: "What do you want us to say to the people...that we have been wrong?" Well, that's a start! Blinded by the false notion that a big church means God's favor, most would not heed sound doctrine and correction from the Word of God. Sadly, there was only one thing left for me and my wife to do, resign and begin to teach the truths of God's Word unhindered and uncorrupted, free from the compromise of man's traditions and doctrine. Things that I discovered, and hopefully you will allow me to share with you, is that Gentile believers and followers of the Jesus in the New Testament and "the Christ" were expected and commanded by God to observe His Sabbaths, Biblical Feasts and Festivals instead of the paganized calendars we have in most churches today. We will see that we are not only expected but commanded to adhere to "the Pattern of Worship" given all mankind, both Jew and non-Jew, in hopes that as "the" one people of God that we will both, together, keep and observe the Saturday Sabbath and not the Sunday substitute, as well as the other of God's High Sabbaths and worship Him in Spirit and Truth by giving our tithes and offerings in "the" specific places designated by Scripture [poor, sick, lamb, blind, deaf, handicapped, uneducated, etc., along with financing the keeping of the Biblical Feasts and Sabbaths] and no longer allowing our gifts and offerings to be used by pastors for their personal visions and ambitions and church budgets which are to be financed with funds other than the tithe]. I realized, and I hope you will as well, that just because we have been taught to do it a certain way does not assure it is the correct way commanded by God or that it is even pleasing to Him in the first place.

It is to this pursuit that Mary and I have devoted our lives. We feel compelled to share with you these truths for your evaluation and instruction. Please understand, much of what I will share will be different from what you have heard, but understand that does not mean it is untrue. Most of you have not been told the truth by your spiritual leaders. We call upon you to judge the facts for yourself, for without them you cannot hope to make an intelligent decision on the matter.

Lastly, we at Bet Emet Ministries are devoted to understanding the Scriptures as God intended: from both a linguistical, cultural, historical, and cultural perspective. From this, and only this, can you and your family be assured you have not worshipped God in vain. Shalom.

THE TASK AT HAND: RECOVERING GOD'S PATTERN OF WORSHIP...JEWISH WORSHIP FROM THE NEW TESTAMENT

It may be surprising to many of you, but the New Testament, that is, the collection of Christian writings that came into existence in the second half of the first century as well as the next two centuries as well, bears abundant witness to the existence of a "Pattern of Worship" which can be traced backwards to Abraham (a non-Jew) and even beyond. For simplicity sake we will often refer to this as "Jewish liturgy" as we can see this "Pattern of Worship" apply not only to the Jewish Messianic congregations but the Gentile Messianic congregations as well which we will later see emerge in Asia Minor!

LET ME PREPARE YOU FOR WHAT YOU WILL SEE IF YOU STUDY THIS "PATTERN OF WORSHIP" AS REVEALED TO THE ANCIENTS

We at Bet Emet Ministries often get E-Mails asking "how do we find a place to worship today which follows the examples we read about in the Book of Acts?". Sadly there is no good answer for this since traditional-mainline Christianity does NOT follow the "Pattern of Worship" revealed in the Jewish Bible nor really in the New Testament as you will come to see as you study beyond the surface of the stories that we read in the New Testament. You will also come to see that neither does Gentile Christianity follow this "Pattern of Worship" as taught in the true "Apostle's Doctrines" which we should all desire to adopt in our personal lives and worship of God. As you study more into this area of knowledge you can begin to discern a very marked "Pattern of Worship" which you will see reflected by the Jews of the first century which has "roots" that go as far back as Egypt and Sumer. This "Pattern of Worship not only involves special "appointed times of the Creator" but revolve around the equinoxes and solstices; each of which carry special " messages from the Creator which sadly Christianity today has totally lost.

The parallels between Jewish Worship and this "Ancient Pattern" (once you see it) will be startling as Ancient Divine Revelation from God concerning how He is to be loved and worshiped will be revealed for the simplicity which it possessed which tragically today has been lost to most. As you have seen if you have studied in detail our Egyptian-Christian Website then you have seen for yourself the undeniable link between the Jewish nation as the descendants of the Egyptian people. That being so then one should expect that the "roots" of "Jewish Worship" should go back to their Egyptian forefathers as well and we should likewise expect Biblical Judaism to express this same "Pattern of Worship" which likewise their forefathers possessed from the earliest Revelations of God to mankind. You will not be disappointed when you both discern and search for this "Pattern of Worship" and its links to the earliest Revelation given to mankind on this plant as it is there for all discerning readers to behold. What should concern us however is if we can locate this same "Ancient Pattern of Worship" not only in the earliest understanding and worship of mankind of the Creator but if this "Pattern of Worship" can be traced down through history and if this "Pattern" can be found in Biblical Judaism as well as later when the non-Jews were taught throughout the world by men like the Apostles and Paul as we see in the both the "first" and "second Great Commissions. If we can find this same "Ancient Pattern or Worship" taught to the non-Jews, lets say in second century in various "churches" throughout Asia Minor. then the implications for us today are startling in light of the fact that mainline Gentile Christianity has little in common with this "Revealed Pattern of Worship" today. That should give you cause to think if we are not contemporary "Nabads and Abhihus" in our worship of God.

This is a startling revelation in light of our experience today as contemporary Christians whose worship is patterned after little, if any, Jewish liturgy as was our counterparts in the first three-four centuries! Roman Christianity has changed not only the Sabbath but the Biblical Holy Days as well and we as Christians and followers of "the Christ" has been given a completely different religious calendar filled with "rituals" totally foreign to this "Ancient Pattern of Worship". The witness in the New Testament of Jewish liturgy is unfortunately not descriptive. In other words, it tells us that in the time of Jesus and beyond as seen in the Book of Acts, that certain prayers, holy days, observances, rituals, and ceremonies existed, but it does not tell us in detail their composition, true meaning, or how they were practiced. But that does not meant that we cannot know this information today as Judaism as preserved this "Pattern of Worship" for all of mankind today. The New Testament tells us little about the content, structure, and dynamics of such liturgy and that was done on purpose. For example the Greek word for "Passover" (Pecach) is used 30 times in the New Testament and 29 times it is translated the same and we read "Passover" as we should. But in the Book of Acts, the book which expressed the example of the emerging Gentile Christian Church from Biblical Judaism it is not translated as it has been done 29 times before. Instead of "Passover" we find it purposely mistranslated as "Easter" in order to maintain the sun-worship of the Gentiles and their fertility cults. So on purpose we don't see an accurate picture of the Gentile Church observing the Passover historically as we today know they did but instead get a false picture of the Gentile and his worship of God which sadly has survived for over 1900 years at present. This is only the tip of the iceberg when one truly gets involved in such a study.

If you wanted to learn what the realities that are behind the terms, prayers, rituals, observances, and ceremonies recorded in the Hebrew Scriptures and other Jewish writings let alone hinted at in the New Testament then you have only one recourse open to you: you must study hard in order to learn but also to draw your own conclusions as you see this information as yourself. Only by your own study of this "Pattern of Worship" will you be convinced and thereby be fully persuaded that what lies ahead for you is your repentance of the false worship we inherited from antisemitic Rome and your own experience through your own direct participation in such liturgies and observances which is lacking in Christianity today. I encourage you to consult a variety of sources where you can read about the various liturgical rites and texts used in the Jewish worship of God as they follow the "Pattern of Worship" that they have inherited that has its roots in the earliest Revelation of God to mankind that archeologist have found today. But let me caution you and prepare you for such a study. In doing this type of study we stumble at the beginning because we link the words we read to our very own inaccurate personal experiences and the realities that are a part of our very own cultural world, instead of their intended meaning when spoken in their original setting. We must be on our toes to remember our quest is to recover "the faith once given to the Saints".

The apostles and the first readers of the Christian scriptures were in a privileged hermeneutical position: when they read of the synagogue and Sabbath and Passover, they were brought in contact with realities they knew and were familiar with; for example it can be shown that non-Jews, Gentiles, observed "the Passover " long before Moses. Did you catch that? Why? What did they know that you don't? They did it because God has commanded it and later this command is recorded for us in the later Hebrew Scriptures but we miss it since being falsely programmed to think that such things are "Jewish" and does not pertain to the Gentile and non-Jew. It is time to study hard and look for this "Pattern of Worship", not only practiced by the Jews but non-Jews in the Hebrew Scriptures as well. It is time that things we find observed in the Bible which are labeled "Jewish" be re-labeled as they should have been all along and that word is "Biblical". We must be modern day detectives of the Hebrew Scriptures as well as the New Testament in order to find the "nuggets of truth" which sadly today have been obscured by Rome's redaction and forgery of our Christian Old and New Testaments. We must become competent "detectives" of the Bible we inherited in order to discern that the Holy Scriptures instructs us to celebrate and observe certain "appointed times with God" and realize that even if such newly discerned observances are foreign and strange to us that that does not mean we cannot repent and return to God in repentance for only in so doing can we be ASSURED that we are worshiping the Father in Spirit and in Truth.

John 4:24 24 God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth. (KJV)

Instead of Passover the Gentile church adopted Easter which was totally foreign to the Jewish believers in the first century let alone by them considered an idolatrous expression of pagan worship. The same can be said sadly for the Biblical Feasts and Festivals, rituals and prayers, fasts, etc. And it goes even deeper when we see the wholesale replacement of the religious doctrines cherished by Ancients become little more than "literalized Sun Worship" when Rome gets their hands on it. It is called appropriately Replacement Religion and we know it not today in our Churches thinking our "Book" and our experiences is as it should be and accepted by God. One only needs to think of Nadab and Abihu who were killed by God in their false worship of Him. This is our lesson to learn which few ever hear.

Present-day readers (and those of centuries past) of the Christian scriptures find themselves in the opposite hermeneutical situation: a situation of uneasiness and danger. Uneasiness, because they keep encountering terms now outside their cultural horizon; danger, because they are easily tempted to fill the Jewish words with a content alien to them, a context often 180 degrees opposite their original intended meaning! Such a failure in correct interpretation of the words of our Bibles have lead Christians to mistakenly believe when reading the New Testament that the Jesus described in the New Testament came to replace Jewish worship with a new variant of Christian worship! This phenomena is extremely important because it shows clearly that the New Testament writings can be approached with different and opposite understandings which may be in harmony or out of harmony with those of the religion of Jesus (Judaism). If they are in harmony, the writings reveal hidden yet luminous meanings which those without the proper understanding of the Hebrew behind the English overlook. Such conditions result in one reading the New Testament with a mistaken understanding, thus arriving at the erroneous conclusion of seeing Jesus and his followers replace the faith and religion given to them by God with one that denies the eternal truths and precepts enumerated at Sinai and before.

If then, we are to avoid misinterpreting the liturgical information provided in the New Testament literature, we must have recourse to other sources that are more directly and explicitly Jewish that explain in detail what is only alluded to in the New Testament. This statement explains the series of publications that Bet Emet has recently begun in order to cite some of the many New Testament passages that attest to the existence of Jewish liturgy in early Christianity before changed by Roman paganism. We must reconstruct this Jewish revelation which was taken to Gentile lands in the first through fourth centuries before Constantine at Nicea destroys almost all traces of it. Our studies will contain important documentation concerning implications for the Gentile worshiper of God concerning the liturgy in the Temple and synagogues, the liturgy as seen in the Sabbath, and the liturgy as seen in the celebration and observance of Passover, Pentecost, Tabernacles, Hanukkah, and Yom Kippur. Next we will examine "the prayer" (Shema), and the Lord's prayer. Lastly we will conclude with sources from the Mishnah, the Talmud, and the prayer book (Siddur). Let us not forget that our inquiry is to ascertain and confirm not only the presence of Jewish worship in the early Christian communities in Asia, Minor, both Jewish and Gentile, but to come to an understanding of the worship service as it existed "THEN" in order to model our lives in such worship that was both THEN and can be NOW "in spirit and in truth."

Shalom and Blessings

THERE EXISTS A PATTERN OF WORSHIP THAT GOD GAVE TO BOTH JEWISH AND NON-JEWISH BELIEVERS

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that within the Hebrew Scriptures that there exists a "Pattern of Worship" given by God that was followed by both Jews and non-Jewish believers in God both in the Old Testament and New Testament times?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that both historically and archeologically we can attest that this "Pattern of Worship" continued until early in the 4th-5th Century A.D. when Rome for all practical purposes changed it for everyone and today we seldom if ever stumble onto this prior existing pattern that God had intended that all His children, both Jew and non-Jew, observe in their worship of Him?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the tabernacle was built according to the divine blueprint given to Moses by the Lord that followed this "Pattern" that exists in Heaven (Ex. 25:8-9)?

Ex. 25: 8 And let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them. 9 According to all that I show thee, the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the furniture thereof, even so shall ye make it (Tanakh, 1917).

LETS LOOK AT THE EVIDENCE THAT A PATTERN EXISTS

When attempting to understand the higher or Spiritual meaning in the Bible, the patterns of the Bible must be observed, marked and understood. If our beliefs go against the patterns in scripture we are in error. It is from Moses and the subsequent oral tradition that we have received the first five books of the Bible. When you read these books you see patterns occurring again and again. For example, again and again, you see the pattern of six periods of work, one of rest, which is the sabbath. We begin to see a cycle of repeating "appointed times with God" that exist not only in this world but the Spiritual World as well. At Bet Emet Ministries we try to point out these patterns along with their original intended meanings before so much of them were distorted by aberrant theology down through history. Not only in the books of Moses do you see these patterns, but in all the books of the Bible.

Answer for yourself: How did Moses, a Pharaoh no less, learn of these "Patterns of Worship of God"? Why did Moses and others write down these patterns? It is because God directed this to be done. In Moses' case, Moses was directed to make the tabernacle and all its furniture by the pattern shown to him on the mountain:

- Let them construct a sanctuary for Me, that I may dwell among them.. According to all that I am going to show you, as the pattern [type or image] of the tabernacle and the pattern [type or image] of all its furniture, just so you shall construct it. (Exod 25:8-9)

Exodus 25 8 And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. 9 According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it.

- See that you make them after the pattern [type or image] for them, which was shown to you on the mountain. (Exod 25:40)

Exodus 25 40 And look that thou make them after their pattern, which was shewed thee in the mount.

- Then you shall erect the tabernacle according to its plan which you have been shown in the mountain. (Exod 26:30)

Exodus 26 30 And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which was shewed thee in the mount.

- Now this was the workmanship of the lampstand [candlestick], hammered work of gold; from its base to its flowers it was hammered work; according to the pattern [type or image] which the LORD had showed Moses, so he made the lampstand. (Num 8:4)

Numbers 8 4 And this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold, unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was beaten work: according unto the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

- Our fathers had the tabernacle of testimony in the wilderness, just as He who spoke to Moses directed him to make it according to the pattern which he had seen. (Acts 7:44)

Acts 7 44 Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen.

- [Priests] who serve a copy and shadow of the heavenly things, just as Moses was warned by God when he was about to erect the tabernacle; for, see, He says, that you make all things according to the pattern which was shown you on the mountain. (Heb 8:5)

Hebrews 8 5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

- For the Law, since it has only a shadow of the good things to come and not the very form of things, can never, by the same sacrifices which they offer continually year by year, make perfect those who draw near. (Heb 10:1)

Hebrews 10 1 For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.

- Now these things [in O.T.] happened as examples for us, so that we would not crave evil things as they also craved. (1Cor 10:6)

1 Corinthians 10 6 Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

In fact there was a "law of the burnt offering, the grain offering and the sin offering and the guilt offering and the ordination offering and the sacrifice of peace offerings, which the LORD commanded Moses at Mount Sinai in the day that He commanded the sons of Israel to present their offerings to the LORD in the wilderness of Sinai." (Lev 7:37-38) These laws were a shadow of things to come (Heb 10:1).

Hebrews 10 1 For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.

IMPORTANCE OF LEVITICUS 23

In Leviticus, chapter 23, it describes the appointed times ("feasts") of God: "And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, and say to them, Concerning the appointed times of the Lord, which you shall proclaim to be holy convocations, even these are my appointed times" (Lev 23:2).

Paul will later go on to state that these "appointed times with God" were types that revealed the whole plan of God to mankind including God's true salvation. The examples of blessing and punishment to Israel as well as their obedience unto God and His appointed times were examples whereby not only first century Israel but all of God's children were intended to learn from by God's Holy Nation and Royal Priesthood revealing them and their Divine messages to the non-Jewish world.

1 Corinthians 10 6 Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

1 Corinthians 10:11 11 Now all these things happened unto them for examples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

The Old Testament festivals and Sabbaths were typical representations of things that not only had valid meanings to those alive in the first century but to others who would come afterwards. We will explain these appointed times and show their higher meanings as we go through this website. We will see that the appointed times or seasons pictured in the special times with God reveal God's overall plan for mankind and his salvation to both the Jew as well as the non-Jew. These Divine Messages in these appointed times with God is the true salvation message of God.

THE LESSON OF KING DAVID...HOW DID WE MISS IT?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Aaron and his sons were consecrated to their priestly vocation according to a "Divine Pattern" as well, and they offered the prescribed sacrifices unto God according to this same "Divine pattern"?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that King David was given the same pattern when told to build the Temple, set aside the Priests, and oversee the work of the service (worship) within the Temple (I Chron. 28:13)?

WHAT WAS KING DAVID REALLY TOLD BY GOD?

1 Chr 28:10-15 10 Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it. 11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, 12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things: 13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

Let us look and examine the the Hebrew word for :service and see what we find hidden in the Hebrew:

Strong's Concordance:

5656 `abodah (ab-o-daw'); or `abowdah (ab-o-daw'); from 5647; work of any kind: KJV-- act, bondage, + bondservant, effect, labour, ministering (-try), office, service (-ile, -itude), tillage, use, work, X wrought.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon:

5656 `abodah or `abowdah- labor, service

- a) labor, work
- b) labor (of a servant or a slave)
- c) labor, service (of captives or subjects)
- d) service (of God)

Now let us look a little deeper into the root word for the Hebrew word "service":

5647 `abad (aw-bad'); a primitive root; to work (in any sense); by implication, to serve, till, (causatively) enslave, etc.: KJV-- X be, keep in bondage, be bondmen, bond-service, compel, do, dress, ear, execute, + husbandman, keep, labour (-ing man, bring to pass, (cause to, make to) serve (-ingself,)), (be, become) servant (-s), do (use) service, till (-er), transgress [from margin], (set a) work, be wrought, worshipper,

What we see from these words is that there is a "MINISTRY" and "SERVICE OF OR UNTO God" and a "worship of God" that was given by the Spirit of God according to a "PATTERN" that as bondservants of the Most High we are compelled to follow

Answer for yourself: Did you see the picture emerging from the above passages as these Hebrew words were explained in depth to you?

Now we see that there does for certain exist a "Pattern" of "service" or a "Pattern of ministry" of or unto God in the Hebrew Scriptures in the Old Testament but for our purposes we need to know if there exists such a "Pattern of service" or "Pattern of Worship" in the New Testament.

Answer for yourself: Can we find references to this same "Pattern of service" or "Pattern of Worship" in the New Testament? We sure can!

Heb 8:5 5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that we find a similar reference to the word "service" as we did before in 1

Chron. 28:10-15? I hope so for the same reference to "service" unto God is in the New Testament as well.

The root word for "service" is very important in this context:

Strong's Concordance reveals to us the hidden meanings behind the word "service" in the above verse:

3000 latreuo (lat-ryoo'-o); from latris (a hired menial); to minister (to God), i.e. render, religious homage: KJV-- serve, do the service, worship (-per).

Now let us look at what the Thayer's Greek Lexicon has to say about this same Greek word we read translated as "service" in the above passage in Heb. 8:5:

3000 latreuo- 1) to serve for hire 2) to serve, to minister to, either to the gods or men and used alike of slaves and freemen a) in the New Testament, to render religious service or homage, to worship b) to perform sacred services, to offer gifts, to worship God in the observance of the rites instituted for his worship; used of priests, to officiate, to discharge the sacred office

Answer for yourself: Now have we see from passages taken from both the Hebrew Scriptures as well as New Testament examples that teach us that there is for certain a "Pattern of Worship" given to mankind which we are compelled to follow in our service or and worship of God? There certainly seems to be as these texts and the original meanings of the words and concepts reveal to us that this "Pattern of Worship" exists.

The very issue to which we speak is the WORSHIP OF GOD and this is connected to a "Pattern" which God intends be followed

Now it is for us to understand that there exists, whether we know it or not, a "Pattern of ministry" and a "Pattern of Worship" that exists both in the Old Testament and New Testament which is "the pattern of intended service and worship of God given to all mankind. This is called "ministry" according to the Hebrew word. I know that the term "ministry" is so overworked today but it is for us to try to discern what "this ministry" unto God is to entail:

- Can this "pattern" of service to, ministry to, and worship of God be discerned from the Jewish Scriptures as well as various New Testament texts?
- Can this "pattern" of service and worship of God be shown from examples in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Old Testament to have existed both before and after the time of Moses at Sinai and can it be shown that these examples of worship the same for both the Jew and non-Jew as well in many places?
- Can this "pattern" of service to, ministry to, and worship of God not only be found to exist both before and after Moses in the Hebrew texts but can we find examples of this "same" pattern in the New Testament both before and after the references to Jesus' death?
- Can this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be shown from examples in the Old Testament and New Testament texts to have existed not only before Jesus' death but also existed "unchanged" after Jesus' crucifixion and can we trace this same "pattern" into Asia Minor and see its incorporation through the efforts of Paul as well as other Apostles in their outreach to the non-Jew?
- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be shown to have been quite similar if not the same in many instances as practiced and observed by both Jews and non-Jews both before and after Jesus' crucifixion as well as being found existing in non-Jewish congregations for several centuries in Asia Minor through the efforts of the Great Commission then do I have this same "Pattern of Worship" taught to me today and do I follow this same "Pattern of Worship" of God in my life today and if not then why not?

These are powerful questions going right to the center of both our heads and hearts and the answers for them are available but only through hours of study as you personally find them for yourself. Only in this way can you be sure that no one will ever lie to you about these important matters any longer in your life.

If this answers to the above questions can be discerned from both Old and New Testament examples and if they give us evidence that these modes of worship overlap as applying "unchanged" in many regards for both the Jew and the non-Jewish believer who came to God through the ministry of Yeshua's disciples and apostles then we need then only ask if our experience as Christians and followers of Yeshua is yet today according to this "pattern of ministry" or if our experience is different and if so we must ask ourselves "why?" If we find that our experiences in our worship of God are not according to this "Pattern of Worship" handed down for thousands of years but one which deviates drastically from this "Pattern of Worship" then we have to honestly ask if we have let Israel and their Spiritual message be a light unto us (Israel is a light unto the nations/Gentiles). We have got to be ruthless in such an evaluation in order to determine if we have been misled by our spiritual authorities and ask ourselves if we have "worshiped God in vain".

Matt 15:9 9 But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. (KJV)

In the articles that follow we will present evidence from both the Hebrew Scriptures and the New Testament which proves beyond any doubt that there does exist not only a "Pattern of Worship" as observed by both the Jew and non-Jew before Moses and Sinai but likewise observed and adhered to as well both before and after the New Testament's account of Jesus' crucifixion which indicates that nothing was changed by Jesus' death. One has to look to the official adoption of the Jesus Movement by the state of Rome in the early centuries A.D. in which "Christianity" became the state religion of Rome in order to see the organized changes made to this "Pattern of worship" as a Replacement Religion and Replacement "Pattern of Worship" emerges which has more in common with Sun Worship than with Heavenly Revelation from God. Today few if any know that ever happened and that we have departed from the "pattern" of worship given by God in His Holy Texts.

Most of us don't know much concerning this "Pattern of Worship" nor that one even exists today. The question that stares you right in the face after just an article of two is if you desire to want to see how as a Christian you have been taught the "deviation" from this "Divine Pattern of Worship" as well as if you, finally having seen this for yourself, can find the desire to repent and return to this "Divine Pattern of Worship of God" which was once given to the Saints.

Jude 1:3 3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. (KJV)

The "Pattern of Worship" of which I speak is alluded to by Jude in the above passage. This "Pattern of Worship" has been given to all of mankind "ONCE" and it is up to us to "earnestly contend" for "THE" faith that only once spoken to Man by God. Lost for centuries we live in an awesome age where we have the ability today to not only discover this long lost "Pattern of Worship" but recover it for our lives in order to assure that our worship of God is in Spirit and Truth; for many it will be the first time in their lives that they

there exists a pattern of worship god gave to both jewish and non-jewish believers can say this.

ISRAEL'S OBLIGATION TO THE GENTILES: BEING GOD'S LIGHT TO THE NATIONS & SHARING "THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP"

The Jewish people have the obligation to be Ohr leGoyim (a Light unto the Nations). Israel as a nation is required to teach the non-Jews the Seven Laws of Noah, which are seven Universal categories of Law/Ethics based upon a belief in God.

Yet we as non-Jews are not without obligations to Israel ourselves. B'nei Noach has the obligation to encourage the Jews to perform this mitzvah along with the 613 mitzvot they are obligated to observe since their acceptance of the Torah at haSinai (Mount Sinai). But once you are educated and recover the truth concerning Acts 15 and the Covenant of Noah along with it's Covenant Stipulations called "Laws" then as an educated Gentile Christians or follower of Jesus then you have an even bigger responsibility before God. Study of these Covenant Laws detail often commandments and laws regarding your worship of God. Not knowing these we often fall into false worship and vain worship of God not knowing. Israel, as God's Priest and Holy Nation, was commissioned at Sinai to be a light to all non-Jewish nations whereby we might be instructed in the "Pattern of Worship" of God which He commanded himself.

As an "INFORMED BELIEVER" then you now also have the obligation of interfering with and stopping the missionary efforts of the "messianic" Jews and their fellow Christians which try to infect the Jewish people with their paganized form of Biblical faith which not only opposes "the Pattern of Worship" but debases it by replacing it with various forms of idolatry which is passed off as "worship" today to the unsuspecting and unknowing Gentiles. Apostasy into a man-made gentile religion is forbidden to the Jew - the Jew has an Eternal and Everlasting Relationship with God and within this Covenant is a place for the non-Jew worshiping along side the Jew according to "the Pattern" he examples to the wide world.

B'nei Yisrael (the Children of Israel [the Jewish people] have the Covenant of Faith (the Abrahamic Covenant of Circumcision - bris milah) and the Covenant of Moses (the Wedding Ceremony under the chuppah at Mount Sinai and the acceptance of the wedding ketubah, [contract]) - the Torah of God.

Yisrael has a special relationship with God, and a special responsibility.

Exod 19:6 6 And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel. (KJV)

B'nei Yisrael [the Sons of Israel] are the Priests of Humanity unto God, and the non-Jews are the Laymen of Humanity unto God. Being the Chosen of God includes a greater responsibility - and for the Jew it is the way of life ordained by God. Choseness implies responsibility, and the Jew has the responsibility to be Jewish - to accept and observe the entire of the Torah - the 248 positive commandments and the 365 negative prohibitions, taught in both the Written and Oral Law.

A WORD OF WARNING.....THIS IS NOT A GAME

On that note let me say that conversion to Judaism is a serious matter because violation of the Laws of God is sin. The misplaced desire and zealotry for God does not need to be channeled into conversion to Judaism by the non-Jew where he stands before his personal Sinai before God and say as the Israel of old "I will do all that you say." I understand the desire and love for God that makes one yearn for God in such a way but failure to observe these other Commandments and mitzvot that are now required by God of the non-Jewish convert renders him now a greater sinner than before and that is not the goal of our love and desire of God. God understood this desire in the heart of the non-Jew once he learns the truth about the God of Israel and allows the non-Jew to approach Him in ways that go well beyond the Covenant of Noah (like keeping the Sabbath, observing the Festivals, putting up a mezuzah, keeping kosher, tithing correctly, etc.) As non-Jews we are allowed and encouraged by God to take upon ourselves more mitzvot and Commandments of God into our lives and incorporate them into our lives as Godfearers and Ger Toshavs. The principle can be found all through the Jewish Scriptures as well as Isa. 56. I suggest that the proper response short of conversion of the "informed believer" and educated Christian is to adopt Isa. 56 as a life-style as one's studies show him other ways whereby he might please God by going beyond the minimum.

Unlike the other religions of the world, Judaism does not believe that everyone must become "Jewish"; it neither solicits converts, nor does it suggest that everyone must follow our ways in order to approach God. Quite to the contrary! Maimonides in the laws of Kings (8:10) says: Moshe Rabbeinu (Rabbi Moses) did not give the Torah and the Commandments to anyone but Israel, as the verse says, "The Inheritance of the Congregation of Jacob." [It was also given] to anyone from the other nations who desires to convert... but we do not force anyone who does not want [to accept them] to accept the Torah and the Commandments. But even so, the Jewish religious nation is to be "a light unto the Nations" and in their siddur (prayer book) pray that the day will soon come when "all humanity will call upon Your Name... they will all accept upon themselves the yoke of your Kingship...." Has God nothing to say to gentiles?

Answer for yourself: How is a non-Jew to come close to God, to do His will? The answer is that God gave seven laws (or more accurately, seven categories of legal obligations) which are incumbent upon all humanity and are the core and center of the Covenant of Noah given to all mankind long before there was "Jews"; and they include 7 categories of Commandments with subsets under each...the following are the 7 categories:

- 1) Not to eat a limb or meat that was severed from a live animal
- 2) Not to curse the name of God
- 3) Not to steal or rob
- 4) Not to worship idols
- 5) Not to commit adultery or have other forbidden sexual relationships
- 6) Not to murder a fellow man
- 7) To establish courts of justice, to pronounce and mete out decisions for all mankind, and to ensure observance of the previous laws.

And with this, concludes Maimonides (8:11):

Anyone who accepts these seven commandments, and is careful to do them, this person is one of the 'Pious of the Nations of the World' and has a share in the World to Come. This is provided that s/he accepts them and performs them because they are God's command, part of His Torah, which the Rabbi Moses informed the Jewish people because they were commanded previously to the sons of Noah.

Shalom.

THE PROBLEM OF JUDAIZING...BUT IS IT REALLY A PROBLEM...OR THE EXAMPLE?

Whenever people have attempted to restore the Jewish or Hebraic root of their faith, the cry of Judaizing is heard. The non-Jewish believers who have a heart felt and sincere call to return to the Jewishness of Yeshua [Jesus] should not be intimidated by Gentile Christians or traditional Jews who reject the notion that such a return is impossible. The authority for such a return to Hebrew centered faith is found in both the Tanakh and the New Testament documents. Gentiles who have come to believe in the God of Israel through faith through the ministry of Yeshua's disciples have been, by God, grafted into Israel, made partakers of the commonwealth of Israel, made heirs to the promises of the covenants, and sharers in the rich heritage and tradition of the Jewish people. Believers should be free to identify with Yeshua and celebrate their Olive Tree connection!

JUDAIZING THE BIBLICAL TEXT

The Biblical text has little to say about Judaizing. The only reference in the Tanakh [Old Testament] is found in Esther 8:17. Here the Hebrew verb, yahad is used of those Gentiles in Persia who adopted the Jewish way of life out of fear of Esther's decree which allowed the Jews to avenge themselves on their enemies (Esther 8:13). The Septuagint (Hebrew translation of the Old Testament into Greek) uses the Greek word Ioudaizo and adds to the verse that the Gentiles were circumcised and actually converted to Judaism. In the New Testament Ioudaizo is usually translated to live as the Jews and actually occurs only in Galatians 2:14. Here Sha'ul [Paul] opposed Judaizing only when it had the potential of distorting the Biblical and Hebraic view of salvation by God's grace (Galatians 2:21). Although the ritual and ceremonial aspects of Torah are not binding on Gentile believers for salvation, it is questionable that Gentiles can ever understand their faith and calling without the observation of them.

THE JEWISH HERITAGE OF THE GENTILE CHURCH

It is one thing for a Gentile to feel he is bound by halachah (to obey the commandments of the Bible concerning Festivals and Sabbath and other rituals, ceremonies and customs of the Jewish people because he is already "saved"), and another thing, for one to feel compelled as a necessary part of one's Christian experience, to observe Sabbath, eat kosher foods and participate in the Biblical Festivals in order "to be saved." However, the Jewish Messianic Community in Acts 15 NEVER imposed these Jewish practices on Gentiles as an obligation "FOR" Gentile salvation, but be not mistaken dear reader, the obligations to keep the festivals, customs, ordinances, holy days, and Sabbaths were definitely imposed by James, the Lord's brother and head-Pastor of Jesus' church as 'necessary' for Gentiles since they are becoming "saved." It is here we encounter James teaching us that adherence to the Laws of Noah (Noah Covenant with all Gentile mankind) is yet binding upon the Gentile who turns from idols to the God of Israel. James knew what few Christians seem to know today; namely that if you are grafted into Israel then you will look like Israel. The Isa. 56 passages teaches us that non-Jews can go beyond the minimum and choose those things that please God and choose His Sabbaths. In this statement we see the binding together of the two olive branches: one Jewish and one Gentile. But not mistaken that the Jews are supposed to keep Gentile pagan holy days and holiday. The opposite is the case; after coming to the God of Israel the non-Jews were to be one with the Jewish people and observe with them God's appointed times and holy days as this pleases the L-rd. Besides that the Old Testament can shown on many occasions the non-Jews who came to the knowledge of God keeping the sabbaths and holy days and festivals of YHWH. Before we can continue, we must have a thorough understanding of the Laws of Noah as they pertain to the Gentile believer in Yeshua today in the Christian church.

THE SEVEN LAWS (MITZVOT) OF THE SONS OF NOAH

It is quite clear from the Bible that God has ordained a separate and unique covenant with all mankind as He has made a special and unique covenant with the Jewish people. The covenant that God has made with all Gentile nations is not to be found in the perverted misinterpretations of a Gentile Church which has rejected the teachings of the original church of Yeshua (a totally Jewish institution for it's first seventeen years and which continued in Jewish faith until 325 C.E.). It is this "Jewish church" which was built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets which has become tragically today a church built upon Roman Catholicism, Reformation theology, and upon the Charismatic Gentile misinterpretations of Hebraic Scriptures. Such fallacy that believes that a "New" covenant was given to replace an "Old" covenant is a total perversion of Yeshua's own words as recorded for us in Matt. 5:17ff: "Think not that I am come to destroy the Law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." Remember, this is in the "red" of your Bibles. "New," as understood in "New Covenant," refers to a "RE-NEWED" prior covenant, not to a replacement of a prior covenant or a substitute for a previous covenant. To interpret any differently is a perversion of the Biblical text and creates new religion, and Jesus warns us that he has not come to destroy the Torah (Law), also known as the Old Covenant. These are such unfortunate terms that were chosen to express such a wonderful concept from God, but we have totally misunderstood the dynamics involved in the ministry of Yeshua.

What so many Gentiles fail to understand is that God's covenant with mankind started with Adam (himself a Gentile and not a Jew) in the Garden of Eden. According to Jewish tradition and Oral Law (called "Mishnah" and dating back prior to Moses), God had given to Adam, and later to Noah after the flood, certain basic laws of universal morality which were to be observed by all of Adam's (and later, Noah's) descendants.

These universal laws came to be known as the laws of the Benei Noah (i.e. children of Noah, since after the flood we are all Noah's children). Jews have, for the most part, never sought to covert Gentiles to Judaism, for there were never was a need to. Gentiles have their own covenant and path to God by faith in God and resultant obedience and observance of the commandments that God gave them. This was and still is the message of Yeshua in our Bibles. We should re-read our own Bibles and look for the "verbs" in Yeshua's discourses, and listen to what he tells and commands to be done, and quit listening to our 1500 different denominations tell us to do anything that is opposite to or in violation to what Yeshua says in the New Testament Scriptures.

This knowledge is nothing new. Even the original Christians knew this! It is we, the contemporary church of today, who have forgotten what the original Church of Jesus both believed and practiced for salvation. When I say "original" church I mean those Jews and Gentiles of the first two-three centuries, who came to faith in Yeshua (Jesus) as the Messiah of Second Temple Judaism and adopted and adhered to his message. The church of Yeshua (Jesus), as it exists today, as well as during it's long history, has, for the most part, rejected anything Jewish in nature. Thus, little study was done in Hebrew or very little effort expended to understand the Scriptures from a Hebraic perspective, both Old Testament and New Testament. We have forgotten that Yeshua (Jesus) is a Jew and he spoke Hebrew and taught from a Jewish perspective. The fact that Jesus is a Jew seemed to have little bearing on his message to us today. How unfortunate for the church today because they have failed "to let Yeshua's mind be in them..which is a Jewish mind". This has been for well over 1700 years a tragic mistake, for which we still suffer the consequences today by observing a replacement faith and religion which has little in common with the faith of Jesus. We follow Paul and his "unique" gospel more than the true gospel as taught by Yeshua/Jesus.

JAMES-THE LEADER OF THE MESSIANIC COMMUNITY-JESUS' CHURCH WHICH HE WAS TO BUILD

James, the leader of the Yeshua Messianic Movement within Judaism at that time was asked regarding Gentiles who were listening to their "gospel", if these Gentiles who were accepting the message of Yeshua and his invitation had to convert to Judaism in order to be accepted as grafted into Israel. James rightly said to them (Acts 15) that all these Gentiles had to do was certain "essentials", and he proceeds to list a basic form of the laws of Benei Noach. Please notice also that James also says these "necessary things" also seemed good to the Holy Spirit as well (Acts 15:28)!

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that? The Laws of Noah seemed good to the head of the Messianic church as well as to the Holy Spirit as the answer as to how Gentiles were to become a part of believing Israel! Thus they were grafted into Israel and Paul would refer to this very thing later in the New Testament Scriptures.

An important fact we must understand is that "Christianity" at that time, while a "Messianic sect" within Judaism, and not apart from it, had not yet turned idolatrous as it has today. The Yeshua Messianic Movement, as it evolved and changed over the centuries under Gentile influence, began to claim that "it only" was the "true Israel". This new message ("another gospel" as was warned by Paul and as preached today), found its strength in Roman Catholicism and in the Reformation Protestant church. Such damnable doctrines surfaced as we confront today such as that pernicious error which teaches that the "church" is the "New Israel", and as "the church" has replaced natural Israel in the plan of God. This is blasphemous!

The message of such churches is the "inclusion of the Gentiles" into a "new" covenant with God, as if they did not possess one already. In ignorance, the Gentile Christian church has for centuries wanted to avoid any knowledge of the "Benei Noah" (sons of Noah) covenant that God has had with the Gentiles for thousands of years, even before there was a Jewish people. Such an ancient covenant would abrogate the Christian position of having to reach out to the Gentiles, claiming they (the Gentile) had no other avenue to God or relationship with God outside of the New Testament.

Dear Christian, God's Word is God's Word, regardless of Christian misinterpretations. The Word of God must be our authority, whether Jew or Gentile. This Word of God is the Bible that Jesus used; the Hebrew Scriptures and not the book created by pagan Rome some 400 years later called the New Testament! As Christians, we have failed to adhere to this cardinal principle when it comes to interpretation of our Bibles, and unfortunately let our Church's denomination and its doctrine stand above the Bible that Jesus used as our authority. As Christians we seldom read or thoroughly understand and know the Hebrew Scriptures. Shame on us! We must learn to study to find out the truth about the words of our Bibles; the Bible that Yeshua/Jesus read and loved...the Jewish Bible!

The Christian Church, to this day, holds itself to be the "replacement" for the Jewish people and therefore, the definer of right and wrong for the Gentile (and the Jew). The last time I read Matt. 23 I believe that Jesus says that the Pharisees (of whom he is one) are to sit in Moses's seat and not Gentiles. In the Greek the word "set" refers to "inherit a kingdom" and ironically Yeshua had just pronounced that the "kingdom" and rulership for God over the people of Israel had been taken from the pro-Roman Sadducees of his day and given to the Pharisees who would be the only group to survive the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. Though this "replacement" nonsense is clearly exposed in the Bible for the falsehood that it is, many sincere Gentile believers are still deceived into believing it. It is to these sincere Gentiles first that we at Bet Emet, as well as other similar ministries, as well as the Jewish community, have an obligation by Torah (law, instruction, teaching of God) Law to educate them in what God truly (and not falsely) said and demands of them.

THE LAWS OF NOAH

The laws of the Benei Noah (sons of Noah), although originating with Adam, are conveniently recorded in the Talmud (Jewish commentary) and expounded upon in Maimonides's Mishneh Torah, the great codification of Jewish Law written in the 12th century. This is required learning for every Jew and needs to be for every Christian as well (those laws pertaining to him and his covenant with God). For as it is known, the children of Israel (Benei Yisrael) have the obligation to be a "nation of priests", this means to be teachers and educators. The children of Noah, Benei Noah (i.e. all Gentiles) have the obligation to learn these laws and practice them.

Only in this way does a Gentile draw close to God and fulfill his/her spiritual purpose here in this world. Faith in God with incorrect responses and obedience to God's commandments does not please God!

Answer for yourself: What level of spirituality can be achieved by the righteous children of Noah? To begin with, they are the ones who are called the "righteous Gentile." Of them, the prophet Elijah has said (Tana D'evi Eliyahu, Rabbah 9), "Heaven and Earth will bare witness to me, be it a man or woman, Jew of Gentile...all can receive the Holy Spirit. It all depends upon one's actions." For further elucidation on these commandments I recommend The path of the Righteous Gentile by Rabbi Haim Clorfene published by Targum Press (Feldheim) and The Seven Laws of Noah by Aaron Lichtenstein, published by Berman Books.

MAIMONIDES....MISHNEH TORAH

Maimonides, in his epic work Mishneh Torah, in the Laws of Kings 9:1, teaches us concerning the Laws of Noah:

"Six precepts were commanded to Adam:

- 1. The prohibition against worship of false gods.
- 2. The prohibition against cursing God
- 3. The prohibition against murder
- 4. The prohibition against forbidden sexual relations.
- 5. The prohibition against theft
- 6. The command to establish laws and courts of justice.

To Noah God added:

- 7. The prohibition against eating the flesh from a living animal.

Thus, there are seven Mitzvot" (commandments).

Again quoting from the Law of Kings 8:10 he states: "Our teacher Moshe (Moses) was commanded by God to compel all the peoples of the earth to accept upon themselves the laws given to the descendants of Noah."

Again quoting: "This obligation, to teach all the peoples of the earth about the Laws of Noah, is incumbent upon every individual in every era. The Jews must serve as "a light to the nations" (Isa.

42:6) teaching them (the Gentiles) the Seven Mitzvot (laws) and instructing them in proper behavior...Similarly, the Chatam Sofer (Choshen Mishpat, Responsum 85) writes that it is a mitzvah (commandment) to guide the Gentiles in the service of God."

For whatever reason, teaching Gentiles the universal laws of the children of Noah has not been practiced in earnest since the days of the Second Temple. During the long exile of the Jewish people among the Christians and the Moslems, who both falsely claim to be the legitimate heir to the title "the chosen people of God", the Jews experienced extreme persecution from both Christians and Moslems for observing the truth of their own Torah. Even more so would the Jews have suffered persecution if the Jews had hounded the Gentiles and shared with them the truth of the Torah which was, in reality, the responsibility of the Jew. Now that HaShem (God), in His mercy has returned the Jewish people to their homeland, we again find the Jewish people have the strength to take on the Gentiles and compel them to give up their idol worship religions and purge Christianity of its paganism. This might not sound like the most liberal of "live and let live" philosophies. But nowhere does Torah teach us to "live and let live". The Jewish people, as well as Gentile "God-fearers" (Acts 10) who have come to the truth concerning the faith once given to the saints, have an obligation to "shine the light" of HaShem's (God's) truth on error and deception. If this means we have to expose the falsehoods of the world's religions, then we are obligated to do so. At no time more so than in this generation are there so many Gentiles who have left their former religions and are seeking the real truth. Where will they turn? We, both Jews and Gentile "God-fearers" who have come to the faith of Yeshua (Jesus), instead of a faith-in Jesus, have been given this opportunity in our day and time to fulfill our obligation as teachers and "priests", to teach other Gentiles the experiential truth of the one and only God! This we do in preparation of the coming of Mashiah (Messiah). One of the groups leading this great effort are the world-wide sh'li'him (disciples) of Lubavitch. I support and applaud their endeavors.

Isaiah 42:6 calls God's people to be a light to the nations (Gentiles). Today, the Gentiles are embedded in deceit and false teachings in the majority of the Christian churches of our land. We, who understand and practice the faith of Yeshua (Jesus), both Jews and "God-fearers", must be a light to the nations of the world and the Christian church. This applies particularly to the present age, where there is far greater communication between Jews and Gentiles than every before. Many Jews and Rabbis are taking advantage of this phenomenon. We, as repentant, teachable, and enlightened Christians and followers of Jesus, must observe our obligation and engage other Gentiles, in heated debate if necessary. Halachah (proper interpretation of the Torah-the teaching of God) demands that we go on the offensive and compel the Gentiles to abandon their idolatry. This is not an option; this is Halachah! Rather than be influenced by these paganized Gentiles that comprise the majority of contemporary Christian churches of today, we must utilize our freedom of communication to convince the Gentiles to accept their Seven Mitzvot (categories of commandments).

LET US LOOK AT THESE SEVEN MITZVOT

"The Seven Mitzvot are by no means a narrow field of study. Rabbi Meiri (Sanhedrin 59A) states that most elements of the Torah are included within them (Are you not surprised?). For example, in order to observe the prohibition against the worship of false gods correctly, one must become aware of God's unity. Accordingly, a number of contemporary Sages have suggested the translation of certain basic Chassidic and Kabbalistic texts into English with the intent that they be studied by Gentiles."

My own experience has taught me that when Christians are exposed to the true meanings of the words of our Bibles, as understood in their original language, original culture, and with a correct historical understanding, many quickly abandon their false beliefs and began to repent and "do" what the Bible really says and commands. It is a shame so few Christians study the Bible in the original languages today; the fruit of which is error, deception, false doctrine, idolatry, and the practice of robbery of God's people within the Churches that bear God's name no less!

SEFER MITZVAH HASHEM: (BOOK OF THE COMMANDMENTS OF GOD):

It is forbidden for a Jew to cause a Gentile to violate one of the seven commandments of the children of Noah, because it is written, "You shall not place a stumbling block before the blind" (Lev. 19:14) therefore it is appropriate for all Israel to be aware of them. This is good advice to the Christian Church as well. Therefore I am writing down the seven laws of the children of Noah. All of them are to be found in Sanhedrin 56, and in the Mishneh Torah, Laws of Kings, chapters 9-10.

Law #1:

The Gentile is warned not to practice idolatry. Maimonides clearly writes in the Laws of Idolatry, Chapter 9, Halachah 4 that Trinitarian Christianity is idolatry. This means that the Jews, as well as Monotheistic Christians (of whom there are too few!) have the obligation to go on the offense and (lovingly, if possible) guide the Christian population to recognize their hollow inheritance, the actual inception of this Gentile-Pagan idea into a Jewish faith, and the truths about the Council of Nicea where this idea gained acceptance in 325 C.E. in protests of the majority of "Christianity" at that time. It is time to come back to God in truth. In my personal opinion, I believe that most Christians have "their hearts in the right place," it is their heads that have been "tossed to and fro" by such false doctrines. We must not place a stumbling block before the blind and allow this to continue. We are commanded by Halachah to stand against such false teachings and reveal the truth to all nations.

The Gentile is warned not to curse God. If this is violated, one is guilty. This is true whether one cursed God using His Name or one of the terms used to refer to Him. According to the Holy Zohar (III, 273A), "HaShem (God), Torah, and Israel are one." In my opinion, the one who cursed the Torah, either the Oral Torah (Oral Law) or the Written Torah (Written Law) violates this commandment. Many a Gentile, violates this commandment, and is not even aware of his sin. While alleging love for God, the majority of Gentiles in the Christian churches of today express great contempt towards the Talmud and Judaism. We fail to realize that the Talmud is the embodiment of the Oral Torah (Oral Law), given at Mt. Sinai and often spoken of by Jesus in the New Testament. Being that HaShem (God) and His Torah are one, therefore the Gentile who curses or otherwise maligns the Talmud and the Jewish religion is guilty of violating this commandment, the same as if he was cursing God. But even more damaging, if possible, is the sin and guilt incurred by the Gentile Christian who believes and espouses that the New Testament has replaced the Old Testament (Torah). Never was such a more damnable doctrine devised than the one which denigrates the Old Testament, and teaches that the New Testament has replaced the Old Testament. Along with this evil Replacement Theology, as held by the majority of the Christian churches today, is the added guilt that we have violated the law of Noah in this regard, for God and Torah are one. How can we replace God with such a substitute? Therefore, the Christians who believes and espouses or maligns the Old Testament (the Bible Jesus used) is guilty, the same as if he was cursing God.

The Gentile is warned not to commit murder. If a Gentile kills another, even a fetus in its mother's womb, he is subject to capital punishment as far as God is concerned. Abortion is defined as murder by universal law. Therefore those who perform abortions have the legal definition as murderers.

Even more startling, the rabbis teach that if you misuse the tithe, or fail to tithe, or incorrectly tithe, you are not only guilty of stealing from God and His people, but such sin is considered murder as well as it leads to the demise of God's people. Understand that as a traditional Christian you are guilty of murder before God because you have never been taught the tithe correctly and have never given your tithes according to the way the Hebrew Scriptures command it be done. Your Pastor has made you an accessory to murder according to traditional Jewish exegesis of these verses. Remember Jesus is a Jew and believed like other Jews. This is truly alarming when this understanding hits home in your heart and head. Are you your brother's keeper? God considers that you and I are!

Capital punishment for murder is a commandment of God. God may have ordained this as a deterrent or for some other reason. One thing however is clear, we cannot second guess God's Divine morality. Our courts today may not follow God's commandments in this area, and we my interpret their leniency and grace as God's will, but to do so violates God's Word. We have been lulled asleep for the most part as Christians today because of the lack of study of God's word, and we lean upon our own understanding in these areas. There is a way that seems right with man, but the end-result is not of God.

The Gentile is warned not to partake in forbidden sexual unions. These are forbidden relations that a Gentile is warned not to violate: one is forbidden to have a sexual affair with one's mother, the wife of one's father, a married woman, the sister of his mother, and a member of the same sex (homosexuality) and an animal. Specifically this means a man with another man. Homosexuality is thus considered a crime against the universal laws of nature. On an interesting note, lesbianism is not clearly pointed out in this regard. Even in Jewish Law, whereas lesbianism is absolutely forbidden, its penalty is less than that for homosexuality.

One would be guilty of this sin in relationships with one's mother even if she was raped by his father, or if his father had relations with her only once. Regardless, she is his mother. Regarding the wife of one's father, one is guilty even after the death of one's father. Regarding a married woman, one is not guilty until one has relations with her in the natural manner after she has been intimate with her husband. However, a woman who is engaged or who has performed a marriage ceremony but who has not yet been intimate with her husband, one is not guilty over, for it is written, "and she has been intimate with her husband." (Ber. 20:3). All this refers specifically to a male Gentile and a female Gentile.

If however a male Gentile has sexual relations with a female Jew, whether in the natural way or in an unnatural way, he is guilty. If the female Jewess was engaged, the Gentile (who has relations with her) is stoned to death as would be a Jew. If the Gentile was to have sexual relations with a Jewess after her wedding ceremony, but prior to her being intimate with her husband, he is executed by hanging as would be a Jew. If the Gentile has relations with any other Jewess who is not a virgin, the penalty is death by decapitation, as it would be if the Gentile violates a married Gentile woman. The Gentile who has relations with a member of the same sex or with an animal is guilty regardless if the act was performed with an adult or child.

Law #5:

The Gentile is warned not to commit theft. There is no difference between stealing from a Gentile or stealing from a Jew. One who cheats or steals money, kidnaps someone (steals a life), does not pay due wages, or fails to pay due wages promptly, etc....even a worker who takes a lunch break when he should be working; all of these are guilty of violating this law of Noah. All of these are to be included in the definition of a thief. One is guilty of even the slightest monetary amount. If a Gentile steals something of the least monetary value, and another Gentile comes along and steals that from him, they are both liable.

Law #6:

The Gentile is warned not to eat a limb from a living animal, whether it be domesticated or wild. When an animal is slaughtered, even after its wind pipe and jugular vein have been severed, all the while that animal kicks, its flesh and meat which has already been removed for "food" are forbidden to the Gentile as the "limb from a living animal". One is guilty for this whether it be a domesticated or wild animal, clean or unclean.

The children of Noah have been commanded regarding judges. Gentiles are required by God to place judges and magistrates in each and every town so as to make judgments regarding the six commandments listed above. These Gentile courts must warn the people. A Gentile who violates one of these laws is executed by the sword (decapitation). It is for this reason that all the inhabitants of Shechem were subject to the death penalty. Shechem stole Dinah from the House of Jacob. Everyone in town saw and knew what he did, yet no one judged him or held him accountable for his actions.

A Gentile can be executed on the word of one witness, one judge, without warning, and by evidence given by a relative. It is this section of Halachah that justifies Baruch Goldstein taking lives in the Hebron mosque. The Moslem population (Gentiles) of Hebron have continually expressed its hatred of Jews and the inhabitants of the town have committed and have been sympathetic to the committing of acts of violence against Jews. Since that town of Hebron has not established judges to punish the anti-Israeli perpetrators of violence and terrorism, the entire town therefore became collaborators in the guilt of the perpetrators. The entire population therefore become subject to collective punishment. Baurch Goldstein acted as the single witness to this fact. He judged by what he saw, and acted as an executioner and in total compliance to the letter of the Torah. As unpopular as it might be by modern Gentile moral standards that have replaced the Torah with "grace alone", Baruch Goldstein was acting in compliance with the written will of God in the Torah (negatively called today "the letter of the law"). Let us never forget we must have an authority, and such is the Torah; it sits in judgment upon us, we do not sit in judgment upon it by erroneously applying our emotions or our experience upon it! Goldstein executed righteous justice, based upon the Bible, on a guilty population. This is the correct view according to the Torah (Law of Moses) and the universal laws of Benei Noah and the covenant of Noah, no matter what man's courts may decide today which do not follow God's Torah!

I hope this article has stimulated your thinking and moved you closer to more in-depth study of your faith. Shalom.

THE APOSTLE'S DOCTRINE (THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP) WAS TAUGHT IN THE SYNAGOGUES TO THE GOD-FEARERS & NON-JEWS

If you consider yourself a "Christian" today, either a Roman Catholic or a Protestant, then whether you realize it or not you are a member of the Church of Constantine. The Church of Constantine and its Religious Belief System is a far cry from what the Messianic Branch of Judaism taught in the first century. Such a radical departure from "the faith once given the Saints" as expressed by Jude 1:3 is termed today "Replacement Religion". Let us dwell on the following New Testament passage and notice clearly that not only does Jude mention a specific and particular "faith" as designated by the definite article "the" but also mentions very interestingly a "common salvation".

Jude 1:3 3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. (KJV)

We should be struck immediately by the notation of this writer that there exists in his day a "common" salvation which is connected to a particular faith, called "the" FAITH, which was once and for all given to all of mankind.

Answer for yourself: How are we to understand this?

It really is not that hard. We need to understand that within Judaism and the Covenant of Moses are 613 Commandments or Mitzvoth which is the foundation of the Jewish faith. Digging deeper we find as well the basic 66 Commandments or Mitzvoth of the Covenant of Noah upon which the Covenant of Moses built upon. These Laws and Commandments given to Noah were previously given to all of Gentile mankind.

Answer for yourself: What is the implication of all this?

Well get ready for the shock of your life. This means that the very basis of Judaism today is the foundational Covenants first given to the non-Jew. In other words there is a place within Judaism a prior "faith" for the non-Jew without requiring his conversion to Judaism. Now at times Judaism and bigoted Rabbis did not always teach this but at times they did. Rabbi Hillel stands out as one who taught this truth and there were many others in the history of Israel. We are possibly more acquainted with this ancient concept today when we hear sermons on being "grafted" into the Israel of God. We understand this simply as "Olive Tree" theology where the two peoples, both Jews and non-Jews, represent the one people of God. What I want to draw your attention to is the fact that within in one Religion, Biblical Judaism, was a collection of Covenants; some for the Jews and some for the Non-Jews as well. And more to the point when one sees this "overlap" of Covenants whereby the 66 Laws of Noah are contained within the 613 Laws of Moses then one should expect that there would be an overlap of Worship within them both as pertaining to both the Jew and the Non-Jew.

We see that the Hebrew term for the word "common" in the Greek according to the Strong's Concordance # 2839 is "koinos" (koy-nos'); probably from 4862; common, i.e.; which literally can mean "shared by all".

*Exod 12:49 49 One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger (non-Jew) that sojourneth among you. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should that teach us? We should see clearly that whether we were born Gentiles and non-Jews or Jewish by birth then together we as the one people of God share a common salvation and similar Covenants which overlap as consist of many of the same Laws and Commandments; many of which are identically the same, which reflect to each category of people their unique Covenant stipulations and personal requirements before God . Upon study we should see and become aware that the Jewish Covenant, the Covenant of Moses, is clearly based off of the prior Covenant of Noah given to the non-Jew.

Answer for yourself: So why is this of major importance to the Gentile Christian today? Simply because the New Testament records for us that the early Jerusalem Church as founded in Acts 15 lays down the requirement for the non-Jews to be accepted into the Israel of God without prior conversion to Judaism as had been expected up until that time. The importance of the prior sentence cannot be overstated. The non-Jewish believers in God were NOT to practice a different religion from the Jew but share the same one and the same "pattern of worship" as given to the Jew was to be shared by the Non-Jew as well. Understand that within this "common salvation" there were differences but the differences were few and we will look at those during our studies in this website. Two-thirds of the 613 Commandments given to Israel concerned the Priesthood only and within the remaining 200 or so let us not forget that 66 were identically the same as shared by the Non-Jew. Within the remaining 200 or so extra Commandments given Israel we see that 66 overlapped with the Laws of Noah given the non-Jew. There was much agreement between these Covenants first given the non-Jews and later reiterated and enlarged upon when given to the Jewish nation. Likewise there is overlap in the worship commanded by God of both the Non-Jew and the Jew as well.

THE SALVATION OF THE GENTILES...WHAT WERE THEY TAUGHT?

Most Christians are familiar with the account in the New Testament detailing that before Paul's salvation experience on the road to Damascus, he persecuted the early Jewish believers, searching for them in the synagogues (Acts 22:19; 26:11).

*Acts 22:19 19 And I said, Lord, they know that I imprisoned and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee: (KJV)

*Acts 26:11 11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Understanding that Paul was the Apostle to the Gentiles then did you notice where it was that Paul found the Gentiles being taught about "the Christ" and the Jewish Messiah? What does this say to us about what they were being taught? You really need to think on this as it is very important to recovering that "present truth" which we have lost that I referred about in previous articles.

I have always desired to return to that unique time in the first century, sitting at James' feet or the feet of other Apostles, when I could have heard the "present truth" as taught by the Apostles and Disciples of "the Christ". Notice in the passage below the warning that there exists a "present truth" in the days of Peter which alternately means that not always will "this truth" possibly exist.

2Pet 1:12 12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth. (KJV)

Notice if you will that Peter mentioned that there was a "present truth" which he described in the first century which sadly I have discovered, along with other truth seekers, gets diluted, corrupted, and altered down through time due to many influences; none of which are positive. The end result is that what we have inherited today in Western Christianity is anything but the reflection of that "present truth" as it existed in the first century.

It is our task to return to this "present truth" before it would be altered beyond belief as we find it today. This means we have to look to men like James who made a startling announcement in Acts 15 which for all practical purposes today the Church overlooks entirely. James decreed in Acts 15, when the Jerusalem Council made its famous decree, the "necessary things" required of the Non-Jews in order to be "saved" and included in the Israel of God since no longer would the Gentiles be required to be circumcised and converted to Judaism in order to be accepted in the Israel of God.

Acts 15:19-21 19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God: 20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

We should learn a lot from this above passage. First of all we see that the non-Jews, both in Palestine and outside Palestine in Asia Minor, attended religious services on the Sabbath (Saturday) and not Sunday. This is part of the "Pattern of Worship" to which we are seeking to recognize let alone return. Also the teaching material of these Non-Jews were these same Covenant stipulations and responsibilities that I mentioned previously which are found in the Laws and Commandments which we find recorded in the Laws of Moses (the Torah). Both the Jews and Non-Jews Covenant stipulations in the forms of Commandments and Laws were taught at these times in order to equip men and women to draw closer to God in their personal lives. This is why as we will see that God commanded the Jews to read certain Torah passages on certain days throughout the year as well as this again is part of this "Pattern of Worship" in order that certain Divine Messages were given on certain special "appointed times" and days with God. God desires that all mankind, both Jews and non-Jews, learn to obey their respective Covenants with Him while at the same time adhering to this "Pattern or Worship" handed down to holy men of old for us today.

Having this record besides the historical evidence from Judaism that attests to the non-Jewish participation in the Synagogues of the first century then we can conclude for certain that not only the early Messianic Jewish believers but the non-Jewish Godfearers as well remained as a sect within Judaism worshipping in the synagogues not only in Israel but in Asia Minor as well where Paul and others ministered.

The earliest Messianic believers were ethnically Jewish and culturally Hebraic. Examination of Acts chapters 1 –10 (which comprise 7-10 years of history) shows us that we don't see any efforts on the part of the Jews to evangelize Gentiles. There are reasons for this that border upon bigotry by the Jews and hostility toward the Gentiles for their harsh treatment toward the Jewish nation in past Jewish history. This is one of the reasons why the Jews enforced circumcision upon the Non-Jew for it was a deterrent to keep them at arms length since many died from such procedures as adults since no longer possessing the mothers's antibodies that guard against infection when a baby. Yet not all of Israel felt this way and there were exceptions but the ruling Rabbi at this time, Shammai, had a dislike of non-Jews to the point where such efforts to reach out to the non-Jew in the middle first century were all but discontinued. That being the case God had to use supernatural means (including angelic visitation, visions, and a sovereign outpouring of the Ruach-Holy Spirit) to show the disciples that repentance had been granted unto the Gentiles also (Acts 10:1- 11:18). The Cornelius event in the New Testament is a very important turning point for Judaism as well and the non-Jewish world and we will examine this in detail shortly. This is a major turning point for the Messianic branch of Judaism but sadly mainline Judaism would not be concerned with this aspect of Gentile Salvation and continue to require full conversion of the non-Jew for inclusion in the Israel of God. Only after the evangelization of Cornelius's household was there a determined effort to evangelize non-Jewish people by the Messianic branch of Judaism which we see in Acts 11:19-21. But understand that in spite of this division within Judaism the non-Jew still attended the Synagogues and it was there he was exposed to the "pattern of worship" which was the same for the Jew and the non-Jew as handed down since the beginning of time as we shall see very soon in this website.

THE SALVATION OF THE GENTILES...ACCORDING TO ACTS 15

As alluded to previously Acts 15 records for us that Jewish as well as non-Jewish believers remained a sect within Judaism. The major difference was that now it would no longer be required for non-Jews to be circumcised and convert to Judaism to be recognized as "brothers" in the Israel of God. This chapter (Acts 15) recounts the Jerusalem council, which was established to answer the question, "How are gentiles saved?" Furthermore, they determined the minimum requirements for Gentiles to meet in order to be accepted within Messianic Biblical Judaism. Although Paul is called the apostle to the Gentiles, we must be careful not to think that he established Gentile Churches that met separately from the Messianic Jewish believers which gathered in the synagogue. Throughout the book of Acts we see that Paul's custom was to evangelize within the synagogue (Acts 13:5,14, 42, 44; 14:1; 17:1-2, 10, 17; 18:4, 8, 19; 19:8). At that time there were many Gentiles, known as Godfearers or proselytes at the gate (David Stern, Jewish New Testament Commentary, Jewish New Testament Publications, Inc., 1992, p 257), who met regularly within traditional Judaism throughout the world. They were the primary source of Gentile converts for Paul during his missionary journeys. (Acts 13:42-44; 14:1; 17:4, 12; 18:4; 19:10). Evangelization apart from the synagogue was more the exception than the rule (Acts 17:18-34). Thus, Paul, uniquely equipped to evangelize Gentiles, ministered mainly to those who would be most open to his message-Gentiles already meeting in the synagogue. Paul did not have the Gentile believers leave the synagogue and form "Churches." The non-Jews continued to meet in synagogues (except when persecution from non-Messianic Jews prevented them) as was the expression of the Messianic faction within Judaism both inside and outside Israel and in Asia Minor. This view is in harmony with the Pauline epistles where Paul sometimes appealed to the Jewish believers (Romans 2:17-29; 7:1) while at other times he appealed to the non-Jewish believers (Romans 11:13). In the book of Acts we learn that Paul established home congregations from Jewish and non-Jewish people who were already actively participating in the synagogue. Furthermore, they were believers who related to each other in Torah-based communities as one corporate expression (Acts 15:13-21; Ephesians 2:1 – 3:21).

So let us not forget the importance and role of the synagogue in the instruction of the non-Jew and his salvation experience and the types of teaching that he received there let alone the "Pattern of Worship" to which he was instructed and followed. It is here that he received what the Book of Acts calls "Apostle's Doctrine" and "fellowship".

Acts 2:42 42 And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. (KJV)

In closing let us focus on the thought that it was through the Non-Jews continued attendance in the Synagogues of Israel as well as Asia, Minor, that the Non-Jew was to become acquainted with the "Pattern of Worship" given to the Jew from the time of David and beyond and it is through this "Pattern of Worship" that the Non-Jew was taught how to worship the Creator as had the Jews since receiving "the Pattern of Worship" the apostles doctrine were taught in the synagogues to the non-jews previously from God.

JERUSALEM, THE SYNAGOGUE, AND JESUS AND "THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP"

The first corporate worship service recorded in any detail in the scriptures is the assembly of Israel at Mt Sinai in Exodus 19-24. Exodus 19-23 recounts the establishment of the covenant between God and his people, and Exodus 24 gives the worship service where Israel ratified the covenant. The basic pattern is very simple:

- Israel offered burnt offerings and peace offerings (Ex 24:4-6)
- Moses read the Book of the Covenant to the people (Ex 24:7a)
- The people responded with faith and obedience (Ex 24:7b-8)
- Israel (in this case through its representatives) partook of the peace offerings with God (Ex 24:9-11)

It would be useful to go into the details of the daily worship of the Old Testament but space does not allow for that here but let it be said that every biblical worship service described in scripture follows this basic pattern (no other pattern is ever substituted for it). The worship service that is presented in the greatest detail is the service at the dedication of the temple in 2 Chronicles 5-7. There is more detail in Solomon's service, but it follows the same pattern that Moses did:

- Solomon assembles Israel for worship (2 Chron 5:2-5)
- Sin is dealt with through burnt offerings (2 Chron 5:6)
- Israel enters God's presence through the priests (2 Chron 5:7-10)
- Psalm of praise (2 Chron 5:11-14)
- Word of God proclaimed by Solomon (2 Chron 6:1-11)
- Solomon's prayer of intercession (2 Chron 6:12-42)
- Fire consumes the sacrifices/glory fills the temple (2 Chron 7:1-2)
- Psalm of praise (2 Chron 7:3)
- Israel partakes of the peace offerings (2 Chron 7:4-9)
- Benediction (Israel departs in peace) (2 Chron 7:10)

So the Old Testament pattern of worship has a very clear theological shape:

- Worship is entrance into the presence of God, and you can only enter the presence of God if sin has been removed;
- God then speaks to his people through his Word, reminding them of what he has done for their redemption, and calling upon them to live as his people;
- God's people then respond to his word with faith and obedience, asking him to continue to do what he has promised;
- Worship concludes with the covenant meal, whereby the people of God partake of the benefits of the sacrifice and go forth in peace (for more detail on this, I direct your study to the sermons in Exodus 24 and 2 Chronicles 5-7).

After the first destruction of the Temple and the captivity of the Jews they were forced to adapt the "Pattern of Worship" that we see above and out of necessity comes the formation of the "Synagogue" to which we now look.

DOES JESUS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT TELL US THAT "THE JEWS" HAVE THE "PATTERN OF WORSHIP" TO BE FOLLOWED?

There has been considerable debate regarding the relative influence of the temple and the synagogue in New Testament worship. A comparison between the two is useful:

Temple Worship (2 Chron 5-7)

- Assembling for Worship
- Burnt Offerings
- Enter God's Presence
- Psalm of Praise Psalms
- Word of God read and preached
- Benediction (if a priest was present)
- Prayer of the Covenant Community
- Fire consumes the sacrifices/glory fills the temple
- Psalm of Praise Psalms
- Peace Offerings
- Benediction

Synagogue Worship

- Assembling for Worship
- Psalms
- Prayer of the Covenant Community
- Benediction (if a priest was present)
- Word of God read and preached
- Psalms
- Closing Prayer

As you can see for yourself in the absence of the Temple the Synagogue follows again the basic "Pattern of Worship" minus the parts that would have applied to the Temple. In the absence of the Temple today our focus must be the worship of the synagogue that was established during and after the Exile to teach the Israelites the Word of God along with the worship that was later transferred to one's home by the Rabbis which functioned as an allegory of the Temple sacrifices and offerings. Since the Jews had been exiled from the Land because of their disobedience and idolatry, they began meeting weekly to learn how to avoid making the same mistakes again. Synagogue "worship," therefore, was not opposed to temple worship, but was designed to prepare people for temple worship.

THE SYNAGOGUE

The word "synagogue" means basically an "assembly house." In the New Testament the synagogue functioned as a community meeting place for Jews and was not only used for worship, but also for schools and other gatherings. Although not mentioned in the Old Testament since the Temple stood, synagogues originated during the exile in Bablyon as meetings of the people to hear the writings and to pray. By the time of Jesus, each community of Jews, anywhere in the Roman world, had its synagogue. The building was rectangular, and its doorway faced Jerusalem. Along the walls on the inside were benches. A board of elders supervised each synagogue, and there were other officers, such as the ruler. The services in a synagogue consisted of readings, a talk (or sermon), and prayers. The great annual feasts were still celebrated at the temple in Jerusalem, the only place where sacrifices were made. Matt. 12:9; Mark 5:36; Luke 4:15; John 16:2; Acts 9:2; 18:4.

Technically the word "synagogue" is a Greek word meaning a 'gathering of things' or an 'assembly of people.' The Jewish synagogue is both a congregation of Jews who pray, read Scripture, and hear teaching and exhortation based on Scripture and the place where the congregation assembles. As the synagogue developed in rabbinic Judaism, it also became a place for study of the Bible, its commentaries, and Talmudic materials. The origin of the synagogue is obscure, but it certainly existed by the first century a.d. in both Palestine and the Diaspora. First-century a.d. synagogues in Palestine are attested by the Gospels. Jesus preached and discussed with Jewish leaders and congregations in synagogues (e.g., Matt. 4:23; 9:25; Mark 1:21; 3:1-6; Luke 4:16-28; 13:10). The synagogue was a place of prayer, reading of Scripture, preaching, and teaching. It is uncertain whether the many references to synagogues in the Gospels reflect the situation during Jesus' lifetime or the period after the destruction of the Temple (a.d. 70) when the Gospels were finally written but it would appear that they existed prior to the destruction of the Temple in Israel and had existed since Babylon's captivity.

Josephus, the Jewish historian of the late first century, speaks of a few synagogues in the north of the Holy Land in the first century so this testifies to their existence before the destruction of the Temple outside of Israel. Synagogues, it seems then, were certainly common in the Diaspora. Philo, the first-century Egyptian Jewish writer, attests to the presence of numerous synagogues in Alexandria. Inscriptions found at various places in the Roman Empire show that Jewish congregations were found in many places. Acts portrays Paul as teaching in synagogues wherever he goes (e.g., Acts 18:4; 19:8).

The origin of the "first" synagogue remains unknown, but the question has produced a number of theories. Many have suggested that the synagogue arose in the Babylonian exile as a response to the loss of the Temple as the center of Jewish religious life. Though the suggestion is reasonable, no direct evidence exists for its presence and the biblical passages cited (Ezek. 11:16; 14:1) are far from convincing. In addition, no mention of the synagogue is made in Ezra and Nehemiah, nor is any destruction of synagogues mentioned during the Maccabean revolt. The public reading of Torah is described in Nehemiah 8 and mentioned in 1 Macc. 3:48, but these assemblies are extraordinary public gatherings; we do not know whether these practices were regularly done. Some scholars suggest that the Hellenistic crisis during the second century b.c., in which there was a conflict among Jews over acculturation and fidelity to tradition, produced the synagogue as a mode of resistance to Hellenism, i.e., Greek culture and custom. Since the synagogue existed in developed form in the first century a.d., it is likely that it came into being in the two centuries preceding, but no direct evidence for it then exists. In the Diaspora, some Egyptian inscriptions from the third and second centuries b.c. mention a 'place of prayer' (Gk. proseuchē), but we do not know what went on in the houses of prayer and it is not certain that these refer to synagogues. A building has been found on the island of Delos in the Nile that has been identified as a Jewish synagogue, but the building has no clear Jewish symbols or characteristics to identify it unambiguously as a synagogue. It is likely that Jews often met in a large room in a house. A building set aside for special religious purposes had to await a certain level of material prosperity and community development. In only four recently dug sites in Palestine have rooms or buildings been identified as synagogues: Masada, Herodium, Magdala (Migdal, Tarichaeae), and Gamala. The results of these excavations are preliminary and the identifications are not certain in all cases, especially for Masada and Herodium. Existing structures were transformed into assembly halls, but that they were specifically synagogues is not certain. In all cases the buildings or rooms are relatively small and unadorned and vary greatly in plan.

Buildings that can be clearly identified as synagogues become plentiful both in Palestine and the Diaspora during the third century a.d. This is consistent with the development of rabbinic Judaism, which gradually asserted control over Judaism after the Temple was destroyed in a.d. 70 and which stressed synagogue- and school-centered prayer and study. Synagogue buildings were often decorated with mosaics and reliefs and were built in three styles, the basilica, the broadhouse, and the apsidal. The basilica was borrowed from Greco-Roman architecture and often had the entrance facing Jerusalem. The inside was rectangular and divided lengthwise by two rows of columns into nave and two side aisles. When the congregation faced Jerusalem to pray (part of their "Pattern of Worship") they had to face the entrance; consequently a permanent Torah shrine, where the scrolls of Scripture were kept, and a bema (Gk., 'platform'; a raised platform where the leaders of the congregation stood or sat) were difficult to establish. Contemporaneously the broadhouse design developed, in which one of the long walls of the rectangle faced Jerusalem and so a permanent Torah shrine and bema were possible. Later the apsidal synagogue developed, in which the entrance was on the side away from Jerusalem and the side facing Jerusalem had an apse (a large semicircular niche) for the Torah shrine and bema. Synagogues in the Diaspora followed similar designs, though sometimes Jews took over buildings built earlier and adapted them to their purposes. In all cases, the floor plan, orientation, and architecture varied considerably. Some Diaspora synagogues are notable for their size or beauty, e.g., the ones in Sardis in Turkey, Dura in Syria, Stobi in Macedonia, and Ostia in Italy. Function: The function of the synagogue, how the congregation was organized, and what went on in the synagogue can only be surmised. In Palestine before the destruction of the Temple the synagogue would have been one of many indigenous organizations in Jewish villages and cities. People may have met to read Scripture and pray either in a house or outside, without any elaborate organization. In the Diaspora where Jews were a minority in the cities they inhabited, the synagogue probably functioned as the center of the community and its leaders may have been community leaders recognized by the civil authorities. Synagogues were used to teach the young, to house visitors, and for communal meals.

THE LITURGY AND THE "PATTERN OF WORSHIP"

The versions of Jewish prayers that have been transmitted in the tradition show that the synagogue liturgy did not have a fixed text but varied both in content and wording over time and from place to place. But even with this variation over time we still detect a discernible "Pattern" to the worship of the synagogue. It is certain that the Hebrew Scripture was read, though probably not according to the later three-year "pattern" in Babylon and the one-year fixed cycles of readings as in Palestine. Primacy was given to the Pentateuch, but readings from the Prophets were also included. The existence of many Targums (translation of the Hebrew Bible into the vernacular, Aramaic) and versions of the Septuagint (the Greek translation of the Bible) testifies to the importance of understanding the ancient text. Philo, Josephus, and the New Testament show that the Hebrew Scriptures were interpreted to the people in the synagogues. It is also likely that the two most important prayers in Judaism were in use, though not according to a fixed text.

The first is the Shema, consisting of three biblical passages (Deut. 6:4-9; 11:13-21; Num. 15:37-41) with attendant blessings. The second is "the 'Prayer," also called the Amidah or Eighteen Benedictions. This series of blessings has varied in text and number over time, but it is treated as very old in rabbinic tradition.

Indeed, it is recorded for us that Jesus and the apostles regularly attended both the temple and the synagogue. Recall what Jesus said to the woman, a Samaritan, at the well in John 4 when she asked whether she should worship at Mt. Gerizim or Jerusalem: "the hour is coming when neither on this mountain nor in Jerusalem will you worship the Father.

We need to look at this text in more detail:

John 4:5-7 5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph. 6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour. 7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Who were these "Samaritans"?

The only detailed reference to the Samaritans is to be found in the Second Book of Kings. In the twenty fourth verse of chapter seventeen, we find that when the Assyrians conquered the Northern Kingdom of Israel and deported the Ten Tribes into exile in Halah and Habor by the River of Gozan in the cities of the Medes, that the King of Assyria replenished the depopulated territory of Israel with foreigners: 'And the King of

Assyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava and from Hamath and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria, instead of the children of Israel and they possessed Samaria and dwelt in the cities thereof'

Answer for yourself: What is described here? We see Non-Jews being imported into Israel and these would later inter-marry with those left behind and we end up with a half-breed Jewish people; a people who had already "lost their way" and who now only further drifts from the Eternal Truths of God. So for all practical purposes we should look at these people as Gentiles and draw the analogies to ourselves as Christians living in the Western Hemisphere today.

These people were heathen idolators with no fear of God; but, following attacks on their settlements by wild mountain lions (which they attributed to the anger of the God of the dispossessed Israelites), they petitioned the Assyrian monarch for help. His response was to send back one of the captive priests of Israel to teach them his laws and customs. Therefore we read: 'Then the King of Assyria commanded saying, Carry hither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence, and let them go and dwell there, and let them teach the manner of the God of the land. Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Bethel and taught them how they should fear the Lord' (II Kings 17:27, 28).

When we consider that the Israelites had themselves gone into captivity for their idolatry and Sabbath breaking, that they worshipped Baal and Ashtaroah, and that the official priesthood since the days of Jeroboam had fostered the cult of the Golden Bulls at the shrines of Dan and Bethel, it is hardly surprising that the priest who returned to teach the Samaritans, succeeded only in joining a corrupted form of Israelite belief and worship to the customs which these people already held. Thus while they now paid lip service to the God of Israel, they continued to serve their own gods as well, according to the Biblical account.

Consequently there evolved a mongrelized people of various national and racial backgrounds, practicing a hybrid religion which bore certain outward similarities to the worship of the now exiled Israelites but was deviant from the accepted "Pattern of Worship" practiced by Israel proper. It was truly a multicultural, multi-faith society that had been created. Although called Samarkans, these people did not necessarily dwell in the area of the former Israelite capital of Samaria but tended to be found mostly in the area of Shechem; so much so that both in the Apocrypha and in the writings of Josephus they are referred to as Shechemites. They had developed into a distinctive people by the Hellenistic period, when Shechem was rebuilt after years of desolation.

It was, however, during this period of Hellenization carried out by Alexander the Great and his successors, which only further diluted the "Pattern of Worship", that a group of religious purists emerged in the Samaritan community, who decided to make a fresh start, and who erected the Samaritan Temple at Mount Gerezim. They developed their own distinctive religious system, including: the worship of the God of Israel, obedience to the Law of Moses, expectation of a coming Day of Judgment, belief in Mount Gerezim as the appointed place of sacrifice and in the return of Moses as the Taheb or the Restorer/Returning One.

From this point onward, there is a rapid deterioration in relations with those of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, who had returned to Palestine from exile in Babylon. They regarded the Samaritans as racially inferior interlopers, and their religion as a spurious counterfeit. At the time of the Maccabean Revolt the Samaritans sided with the Seleucid oppressors, and to placate Antiochus Epiphanes, they even allowed their temple to be dedicated to Zeus Xenious!

As you can see for yourself the Samaritans fell away from the "Pattern of Worship" although in many ways it might have looked externally "similar" but the core of it was deviant to the "Pattern of Worship" commanded by God.

Subsequently, in 128 B.C., they were conquered by the Hasmonean ruler John Hyrcanus (the conqueror and incorporator of Edom/Idumea), who destroyed their Temple on Mount Gerezim. At one particular Passover, between A.D. 6 and 9, the Samaritans defiled the Jerusalem Temple by scattering bones in it. Pilgrims travelling south from Galilee to Jerusalem for the religious festivals were afraid to go through Samaritan territory, a fear which was to be justified by the subsequent massacre of Galilean pilgrims by Samaritans at En-gannim in A.D. 52. The Samaritans rebelled against the Romans in A.D. 36. When a fanatic assembled them at Mount Gerezim, promising to reveal the sacred vessels which they had been taught were buried there by Moses, the rebels were ruthlessly massacred by order of Pontius Pilate. During the Jewish Revolt of A.D. 66-70, a group of Samaritans joined in the rebellion and were slaughtered by the Roman Commander Vettulenus Cerialis, once again at Mount Gerezim.

After almost two thousand years, only a tiny remnant of the descendants of the Samaritans remain. They have preserved their religion and culture, and are to be found to this day in Palestine, living in two small communities at Nablus and Holon, with their own scrolls and priesthood.

In spite of our Lord's instruction to His disciples: 'Into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not' (Matthew 10:5), and the incident when the disciples wanted to call down fire from heaven to destroy a Samaritan village which refused to receive them (Luke 9:52-54), Samaritans receive fairly favorable comment from the New Testament writers Luke and John. The one leper out of the ten who returned to Jesus to give thanks for his healing was a Samaritan (Luke 17:16). The Lord Jesus asked for water from, and subsequently ministered to, a woman of Samaria (John 4:4-30 & 39-40); while we read of a great spiritual revival accompanied by signs, wonders and miracles in Samaria (Acts 8:5-25).

Answer for yourself: What should that teach us? That these half-breed Gentiles who knew not the "Pattern of Worship" were often blessed by the "true faith" of Israel and at times made repentance unto it as seen in Acts 8:5-25.

Just as every Jew residing in the Roman Province of Judea, and practicing the Jewish religion at the time of Christ, was not necessarily a true Judahite, a similar situation existed in Samaria, also a Roman territory. Isaiah the prophet had made it clear that, even though the vast bulk of Ten-tribed Israel had been taken into captivity in Assyria, a tiny pathetic handful would survive the mass deportations. This is what he says: 'Yet gleaning grapes shall be left in it as the shaking of an olive tree two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the outmost branches thereof saith the God of Israel' (Isaiah 17:6).

Some of them, like the leper, and the woman by the well of Sychar, while they were Samaritans by religion (worshipping at Mount Gerezim), and by provincial designation (living in the Roman province of Samaria), were clearly not descended from the mixed multitude who had been sent into the area some seven hundred years earlier, but rather from the little handful of true Israelites who had escaped deportation - the grapes and berries of Isaiah's prophecy.

In her discussion with the Lord Jesus, the woman of Samaria made her racial ancestry crystal clear, for she said to Jesus: 'Art thou greater than our father Jacob which gave us the well...' (John 4:12).

She actually claimed descent from Jacob-Israel. Furthermore, her own life was symbolic of the experience of the woman Israel, for the Lord Jesus said to her: 'Thou hast had five husbands and he whom thou hast is not thy husband' (John 4: 18)

Answer for yourself: Who, as a Samaritan, were her husbands? Is there a hidden message possibly here for us to learn?

Israel had indeed had five husbands; her first whom she married at Sinai was:

- Almighty God (She then served the following succession of alien Empires spoken of in prophecy as her lovers in which all pulled her further away from the "Pattern of Worship" given Israel by God at Sinai).
- Assyria
- Babylon
- Medo-Persia
- Greece
- Pagan Rome...the sixth whom she served in the time of Jesus

All of these above influences by Gentile nations and Gentile worship only further diluted the true Worship of God as once held by their Jewish captives. Said of captive Israel by the Prophet Hosea:

Hosea 2:6 6 Therefore, behold, I will hedge up thy way with thorns, and make a wall, that she shall not find her paths. (KJV)

Captive Israel would lose "the Pattern of Worship" over time due to the influences of these pagan nations and their idolatry. Truly Israel lost her "paths". As God, in punishment of the Northern Tribes for their idolatry and departing from the true Worship of God, had the Prophet Hosea pronounce judgment on the departing captives of the Northern Ten Tribes in saying that they would lose their way. History has borne this out as these peoples would fall further from the truth and the "faith once given the saints" and in these pagan nations would they further depart from the Worship of God as God has previously instructed. Yet God would later have mercy on those He judged and offered a return to these "paths" whereby their children would one day "return to the Lord thy God" in repentance and true Worship of God. We see this today in the major return to the Jewish Roots of Christianity but the problem we have with this is that many, but not all who teach such a "return" to the Jewish Roots of Christianity are but another false hope as were the official priesthood that was sent by Jeroboam who only gave another pagan worship to the people that "looked" Jewish but the core of it was not the SAME "Pattern of Worship" as practiced by Judah! One the many of these current "returns to the Jewish Roots of Christianity" look Jewish but analysis of their doctrinal stances reveals little change from the compromised Sun Worship of their apostate "fathers". Looking Jewish, wearing a kippa or a tallith, and singing Jewish psalms and songs, and the use of banners is often a far cry from "True Worship of God done in Spirit and TRUTH".

Jesus told these people, and even this woman at the well who had a compromised religious beliefs system since being heavily influenced by Samaritan religious beliefs:

You worship what you do not know; we (the Jews) worship what we know, for salvation is from the Jews. But the hour is coming, and is now here, when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth" (John 4:21-23).

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Jesus told her, representative of her half-breed people, that they had a erroneous worship of God? Jesus tells her that she has a false worship of God; one that looks right in some areas but the core of it is rotten and unacceptable with God. Not let us forget that God does not accept all sacrifices nor does he accept false worship.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Jesus make clear that she knows that it is the Jewish race and nation and religion who has the "true worship" of God? Does Jesus connect "salvation" with this "true worship of God? He sure does. That should give you great pause to think.

Answer for yourself: What does it mean to be "true" worshipper? Do you want to be one? Let us look at the word "true" used in the Greek of this passage:

228 alethinos-

1) what has not only the name and resemblance, but the real nature corresponding to the name, in every respect corresponding to the idea signified by the name, real, true genuine

- a) opposite to what is fictitious, counterfeit, imaginary, simulated or pretended
- b) it contrasts realities with their semblances
- c) opposite to what is imperfect defective, frail, uncertain

2) true, veracious, sincere

Jesus warns us here that just to "reassemble" the "true" is not enough. We have to "in EVERY RESPECT CORRESPOND" to the original. In this context Jesus was telling this Non-Jewish descendent, one who has lost her "paths" and her "ways" and her "Pattern of Worship" given to her forefathers before they departed from it, that NOW it is possible for her to return and repent and come home to the true worship of God; one not found in Samaria but down in Jerusalem.

Jesus tells us "counterfeit" religion is worshipping God amiss. He tells us that we can look "Jewish" in our worship and sing Jewish songs and do Jewish dances, we can carry banners and even wear kippas and even say the blessing and wear a tallith in prayer but if our doctrines contain idolatry, as did those of the Samaritans, and as many Christian religious beliefs also do, then such Worship of God is defective and imperfect and unacceptable to God. This is a strong warning against idolatry that goes unnoticed by most in Christianity today under the guise of "Jesus is God" theology or various Trinitarian beliefs. Even praying in the name of Jesus is considered blasphemy by both the Laws of Noah and Moses. Improper use of the Tithe as most churches do is but another example of false worship of God. Singing song with idolatrous phrases is but another form of idolatry and unacceptable to God. Some songs in the church should NEVER be sung! Let us never forget that blasphemy of God and His Name is the "unforgivable sin" and most Christians carry this to their grave and never know it because their teachings which they inherited from Rome and Church tradition are so perverse and have strayed so far "from the original" true and "the faith once given to the Saints" due to the antisemitism of Rome which replaced many of them with those of their making. Most never heed these warnings and enter the hereafter full of hidden idolatry which they never knew they possessed because their study of their own faith, let alone "the Pattern of Worship" is absent or deficient in their lives.

Jesus did not say, "well, you could worship at any synagogue you like!" The analogy of this is startling as today this would be understood as: "you cannot worship at just any church you like!"

Jesus admitted that prior to his coming, there was only one place to worship truly--at Jerusalem which practiced "the Pattern of Worship" handed down by God since Sinai where a mixed multitude of Jews and Non-Jews both agreed as the bride of God to "do all they you say". They both entered into their covenant with God and both accepted "the Pattern of Worship" given to Moses. Israel, and only Israel of all the 70 nations of the world was given "the Pattern of Worship" and their task as God's Holy Nation and Royal Priesthood was to lead the world in the "true worship of God" through the teaching of this "Pattern of Worship" to all mankind and examples in the Old as well as the New Testament show us that they did exactly that!

Sadly we have departed so far from this today in contemporary Christianity.

OVERVIEW OF THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP IN THE FIRST CENTURY CHURCH OR SYNAGOGUE...AND THE WARNING

In previous articles I have made plain to our readers that there exists a "pattern" of worship which was given by God and to which Jesus and his Apostles adhered. Not only that, this same pattern of worship can be shown to have been taught to the first non-Jews who came to the knowledge of God through Jesus and his Apostles's ministry. Sadly, obedience to this pattern for worship has almost been totally replaced by the Gentile Church of the earliest centuries and few are aware of such tragic events. I guess what gets to me the most is that when such information is made aware to Christians, instead of a spirit of repentance and brokenness at the realization of such events, most seem ambivalent to such an occurrence. What escapes most sadly is the heart-felt realization that instead of loving God as He has instructed, we have brought "strange fire" before God and expect Him to accept it. If God had not desired to be "loved" and "worshipped" in a certain ways He would not have instructed us to do so. But God did. We as Christians fall prey to the erroneous concept that what is happening today is what the Holy Spirit is doing in the world and what He sanctions. Such could not be further from the truth. Our experience is not a measure of truth. Only "the truth" can be called "TRUTH". Unless our experience lines up with the Word of God, correctly interpreted, then we can be assured that our experience is not a guarantee of truth or that it is in reality pleasing to God.

A Christian's religious belief system, when tested and exposed to contradictory facts from Biblical languages, Biblical history, Biblical culture, and archeology, must in the Spirit of Truth and Repentance, be flexible enough to change

Just ask Nadab and Abihu. Their deaths in worship before God tell us unmistakably that God does not tolerate nor accept "just any old worship". The message is startling in light of the fact that we have today over 2000 different denominations with little unity among them. As if that is not bad enough, unity in disobedience is not to be sought either. Obedience is better than any sacrifice. Again let me say, I am saddened to the deepest recesses of my heart and soul, when teaching such truths dug from years of intense study, only to be scoffed at by carnal believers who are basically Biblically uninformed, and who would rather rely on their experience instead of the Word of God as their measure of truth. Repentance in the face of disobedience is scarce today primarily because of an out-of-balance and distorted message of grace as espoused by mainline Christianity. Grace is not the antidote for disobedience in the light of truth. Repentance is. The very first words spoken by John the Baptist, Peter, as well as Jesus, as found in the New Testament is "repentance." Again sadly I have found as a Pastor that repentance is a doctrine only taught to beginner classes for new members in churches and not taught as a way of life. When shown that your experience is wrong and diametrically opposed to what the Scriptures say, the proper response is to rend our heart and turn to God in repentance. Anything thing less is definitely not the loving response God desires. In fact, failure to repent in the light of such Biblical knowledge that corrects our sinful experience is the mark of apostasy. It seems that most would rather be in good standing with their pastors and churches than with God. Such is crazy, but I fear our consciences are so seared in contemporary Christianity today that few can hear the message of the prophets God yet sends who cry aloud "repent for the Kingdom of God is near."

With that as a back-drop, and having understood that there is a pattern of worship, let us examine the pattern as it has come down to us. We cannot find the pattern of worship in Christianity, and not even in Messianic Christianity. Messianic Christianity comes closer than traditional Christianity, but close counts only in horseshoes. If you want to find and follow the pattern of worship for the non-Jew you must look to Old Testament as well as the New Testament and read it with a Hebrew perspective as well as look to the synagogue to find the liturgy as practiced by Jesus and those who came to God in his name. It is to this pattern we now turn.

THE SYNAGOGUE AND THE WORSHIP SERVICE

Worship was celebrated in the synagogue in the mornings (shahrit service), the afternoons (minhah service), and the evenings (ma'ariv service). The basis for each of the three services was the recitation of the "shema" and "tefillah" ("the prayer" referring to the Amidah or the "standing prayer") and the reading of the Torah (qeri'at Torah) portion for that day. For reasons of time the Torah was read only in the mornings on Tuesday, Thursday, and the Sabbath. In addition to the three basic foundations for each service was the inclusion of "set" prayers as the following outline shows:

A. Shahrit (Morning Service)

- 1. Benedictions and introductory psalms.
- 2. Kaddish
- 3. Shema
- 4. Tefillah-Amidah
- 5. Alenu
- 6. Kaddish (mourners')
- 7. Final prayers

2. Minhah (Afternoon Service)

- Psalm
- Kaddish
- Tefillah-Amidah
- Alenu
- Kaddish

3. Ma'ariv (Evening Service)

- Short readings from the Psalms
- Shema
- Tefillah-Amidah
- Kaddish
- Alenu
- Kaddish (mourners')

Once one is familiar with such information as presented here, and has studied the materials for himself, then you will see for yourself what Bet Emet is teaching to be true. After coming to such conclusions based upon personal study your first question must be: Why was I not told this before?

It is the greatest tragedy in the world to have spent your whole life in church only to find out after you die that you have followed a neo-pagan form of worship of the God of Israel. Millions and millions of good Christians are dying and meeting God unprepared for what they will hear: "depart from me I never knew you." You may think that I flippantly used the above passage only to prove my point, but again what few realize is that the condition that elicits the above "departing from Jesus and God" is called iniquity in Matt. 7:21-23.

In conclusion let us look at the word in the Greek for "depart" as used in Matt. 7:21-23:

As Jesus said, "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven. Many will say to Me in that day, 'Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Your name, cast out demons in Your name, and done many wonders in Your name?'

Please pay attention the this next verse and the Greek word used for "iniquity:"

And <2532> then <5119> will I profess <3670> (5692) unto them <846>, <3754> I never <3763> knew <1097> (5627) you <5209>: depart <672> (5720) from <575> me <1700>, ye that work <2038> (5740) iniquity <458>.

Let me say it another way:

And then I will declare to them, 'I never knew you; depart from Me, you who practice LAWLESSNESS'" (Matt. 7:21-23)!

The Greek word for iniquity is as follows:

BDB/Thayers # 458 458 anomia {an-om-ee'-ah} from 459; TDNT - 4:1085,646; n f AV - iniquity 12, unrighteousness 1, transgress the law + 4060 1, transgression of the law 1; 15

- 1) the condition of being without the law
 - 1a) Because one is ignorant of it
 - 1b) Because of violating it
- 2) contempt and violation of law, iniquity, wickedness

Let us look at the root word used:

BDB/Thayers # 459 459 anomos {an'-om-os} from 1 (as a negative particle) and 3551; TDNT - 4:1086,646; adj AV - without law 4, transgressor 2, wicked 2, lawless 1, unlawful 1; 10

- 1) destitute of (the Mosaic) law
 - 1a) of the Gentiles**
- 2) departing from the law, a violator of the law, lawless, wicked

Answer for yourself: Do you not see that Jesus is referring also to Gentiles who are ignorant of and who are destitute of the Mosaic Law?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that these same laws and commandments contained in the Mosaic Law deal with non-Jews and how they are to worship according to the pattern I have telling you about? You are now!

Answer for yourself: Are you a violator of the Mosaic Law in areas such as worship by failing to observe the Biblical Festivals or do you practice your church's pagan holidays which have been re-made to look religious by having Jesus' name attached to them?

Answer for yourself: Are you a violator of the pattern of worship in giving your tithe to organizations and churches who are using the money in ways contrary to how God said it was to be used?

Let us not be mistaken that giving of our finances to religious purposes and various churches is a form of worship, and again the pattern for giving is repeated several times in the Jewish Scriptures. Failure to comply with such pattern for giving makes you a robber of God. Giving your 10% to a church and letting them spend it any way they choose is not obedience to the pattern of worship as contained in your Bible. It might be your experience, but your experience is not accepted by God. Sadly almost all Christian Churches violate this giving commandment and do so by justifying that the money is still used for good purposes. Close but no cigar. Goodly purposes NEVER substitute for Godly purposes.

WHAT SHOULD YOU DO NOW THAT YOU KNOW THIS?

First of all don't believe anything I said. But let this information stimulate your own study in order for you to discover the same truths as I did. Then and only then can you be assured you are obeying God in such an important area as worship.

If God has opened your mind thus far to what I am saying, then I urge you to begin a genuine STUDY of the Holy Bible. You may wish to begin reading carefully and thoughtfully through every word of the New Testament. Look key words up in their original languages in which the Bible was written (Greek, Hebrew, and Aramaic). Only in this way will you find for yourself the hidden revelation and recover not only long lost spiritual truths but restore the "Pattern of Worship" for yourself and your family. If you need help call us at Bet Emet Ministries and we will teach you how to use the study aids available. Shalom.

BUT I NEVER KNEW THAT THERE WAS A PATTERN OF WORSHIP THAT GOD GAVE TO BOTH THE JEWISH AND NON-JEWISH BELIEVERS

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that within the Jewish Scriptures we can find a "PATTERN OF WORSHIP" given by God that was followed by both Jews and non-Jewish believers in God both in the Old Testament and New Testament times?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that both historically and archeologically we can attest that this "PATTERN OF WORSHIP" continued until early in the 4th Century A.D. when Rome for all practical purposes changed it for everyone and today we seldom if ever stumble onto the prior existing pattern that God had intended that all His children, both Jew and non-Jew, observe in their worship of Him?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the tabernacle was built according to the divine blueprint given to Moses by the Lord (Ex. 25:8-9)?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Aaron and his sons were consecrated to their priestly vocation according to a divine pattern as well, and they offered the prescribed sacrifices unto God according to a divine pattern?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that David was given the same pattern when told to build the Temple, set aside the Priests, and oversee the work of the service (worship) within the Temple (I Chron. 28:13)?

1 Chr 28:10-15 10 Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it. 11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, 12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things: 13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

Let us look and examine the the Hebrew word for :service and see what we find hidden in the Hebrew:

Strong's Concordance:

5656 `abodah (ab-o-daw'); or `abowdah (ab-o-daw'); from 5647; work of any kind: KJV-- act, bondage, + bondservant, effect, labour, ministering (-try), office, service (-ile, -itude), tillage, use, work, X wrought.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon

5656 `abodah or `abowdah- labor, service

- a) labor, work
- b) labor (of a servant or a slave)
- c) labor, service (of captives or subjects)
- d) service (of God)

What we see from these words is that there is a "MINISTRY" and "SERVICE OF GOD" that was given by the Spirit of God according to a "PATTERN."

Even the New Testament alludes to this pattern:

Heb 8:5 5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount. (KJV)

Now it is for us to both understand that a "pattern of ministry" existed both in the Old Testament and New Testament which was a pattern of the intended service of mankind and worship toward God. This is called "ministry" according to the Hebrew word. I know that the term "ministry" is so overworked today but it is for us to try to discern:

- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be discerned from the Jewish Scriptures
- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be shown from examples in the Old Testament and New Testament texts to have existed not only before Jesus' death but also existed "unchanged" after Jesus' crucifixion
- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be shown to have been quite similar if not the same in many instances as practiced and observed by both Jews and non-Jews both before and after Jesus' crucifixion

If this can discerned from New Testament examples as applying "unchanged" for both the Jew and the non-Jewish believer who came to God through the ministry of Yeshua's disciples and apostles then we need then only ask if our experience as Christians and followers of Yeshua is yet today according to this "pattern of ministry" or if our experience is different and if so we must ask "why?" If not then we have to honestly ask if we have let Israel be a light unto us (as Gentiles as the nations of the world) as God has said they were to be in the Jewish Scriptures or if we have been misled in our "ministry and worship" toward God.

In the articles that follow we will present evidence from both the Jewish Old Testament and the New Testament which proves beyond any doubt that there did exist not only a "pattern of worship" as observed by both the Jew and non-Jew but both observed and adhered to this pattern well before and after Jesus' crucifixion which indicates that nothing was changed by Jesus' death. One has to look to the official adoption of the Jesus Movement by the state of Rome in which "Christianity" became the state religion of Rome to see the organized changes made to this "pattern" of worship. Today few if any know that ever happened and that we have departed from the "pattern" of worship given by God but i never knew that there was a pattern of worship god gave to jews and non-jews in His Holy Texts.

WORSHIPPING God IN SPIRIT AND IN TRUTH: THE PATTERN FOR THE NON-JEW

A "Gentile" is a term signifying a non-Jew, who is not a "son of the covenant" and is only subject to the seven Noachide Laws.

Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. These were the "God fearers", who accepted certain basic Jewish obligations along with the Noachide precepts. According to this, idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noachide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Jesus) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noachide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel and the Jesus Messianic Movement. It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be saved.

BUT LETS NOT STOP THERE

It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as the minimal condition for Gentiles to be accepted into fellowship with Israel and recognized as God-fearers. These were so understood by the God-fearers themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, etc). This was also the attitude of Christian God-fearers, as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the Mother Church decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts, and the Jerusalem Church did not object to their voluntarily observing more (Col. 2:16-17). Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noachide precepts the maximal obligations of Gentile Christians. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect. What you must understand that we have in the accounts of the New Testament the Roman view and we all know that winners write history. Lacking is the accurate account that describes Peter's repentance along with Barnabas when confronted by the "men from James". The account in the New Testament does disclose however that they and the whole "house church" left the presence of Paul and went next door and no longer continued to break the kosher laws in order to "become all things to all men that they might win some". Breaking the Torah and sinning is never sanctioned by God in order to "win some". Lastly, we then have Paul's comment: "all in Asia forsook me". No wonder!

The liberation of Gentile Christianity from the yoke of Jewish commandments was a necessary step in order for Christianity to become a Gentile religion, separate from Judaism. It is impossible to know whether Paul was aware that by his "Gospel" he helped to achieve this aim in that he does not speak explicitly about the necessity of separating Christianity from its Jewish roots and he never says that this was his intention, but it is clear that in fact such was his historical role. Paul taught that the Jewish way of life had no validity for Christians, but the Mother Church in Acts felt differently. For Christian God-fearers it was not easy to accept Paul's demand; the complete rejection of Jewish precepts was for many Gentile Christians a painful operation. But if Christianity was to become a world religion it had to become "free from the Law". Only a Christian free from the law could separate himself from Judaism.

With the rise of Christianity the teachers of Israel sought to distinguish between the heathens of the past and those Gentiles who were subject to religious values and morality. The very term "ger tzedek" (righteous gentile) stands for the gentile who turned from idols and made a sincere conversion to the faith of Jesus in the first century. Such a person was respected and welcomed by the Jewish community. The "ger tzedek" submitted to circumcision, immersion, and brought a sacrifice to the temple. Upon completion of such, he was considered as "one born in the land."

There are two other terms for righteous Gentiles: Ger Hashar, and Ger ToShav. In the Bible the Ger Hashar is seen as "the stranger in the gate", and the Ger ToShav was known as "the stranger in the land." These also accepted the faith of Israel (ethical monotheism) and were immersed, but withheld themselves from circumcision. Such "Righteous Gentiles" had a place in the world to come, and it was believed that in the age of the Messiah all Gentiles would come to recognize the one true God according to Zech 14:9.

Once the Ger Tzedek was accepted as a Jew, he was entitled to all the privileges that Jews born into the faith enjoyed. Such converts to Judaism were numerous before the rise of Christianity. Within Palestine and outside, wherever Jews came into contact with pagans, Judaism held a strong attraction. It was expected of the Gentile that given enough time, he would develop from the Ger Hashar to the Ger Tzedek.

DRAWING BACK FROM CHOOSE THOSE THINGS PLEASING TO God

The later development of Gentile Christianity offered the attraction of monotheism and at the same time imposed fewer restrictions on its new adherents that did Judaism. In other words, many of the commandments of God were neglected, denied, and not taught to non-Jews nor were they expected to adhere to them by their non-Jewish teachers. Commencing with the fourth century, when Christianity became the official religion of the Roman Empire, Jews were restricted in their own worship and were no longer permitted to continue their missionary activity and we find the conversion of the Ger Hashar and Tzedek dwindling. In spite of the peril to Jews and proselytes alike, we read throughout history of various instances where Christians joined the ranks of the oppressed Jews in order to adopt a more Biblically centered lifestyle. Sadly this never became accepted orthodoxy for the followers of Yeshua.

EXAMINING THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP AS IT WAS DESCRIBED BY JUSTIN MARTYR IN HIS DIALOGUE WITH TRYPHO THE JEW...150 C.E.

Let us first get our bearings: it is mid-second Century and Christianity's greatest apologist is writing possible his greatest treatise defending the Gentile Christian faith: Dialogue With Trypho The Jew. Again let us understand that the Great Commission has been undertaken now for at least 80 years following Jesus' crucifixion by his disciples and apostles. That being the case you should understand that the Jesus Movement of Jerusalem has already exerted great influence among the Gentile nations in obeying Jesus' command:

Matt 28:20 20 Teaching them (the Gentile nations) to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen. (KJV) Matt 28:20 20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen. (KJV)

Justin's Dialogue With Trypho The Jew is the earliest surviving writing which sets out fully the issues which separated Christians and Jews. This fascinating Dialogue With Trypho The Jew was written about 160 C.E. It draws on earlier Christian exegetical traditions; in places it has very deep roots in Jewish-Christian polemic and apologetic.

Although Justin and Trypho argue vigorously, they do not resort to personal abuse or to name-calling. At the end of the Dialogue, they agree to disagree; after praying for one another they go their separate ways. Most later Christian anti-Jewish writings are less moderate in tone; unlike Trypho, the Jewish opponent(s) often cave in and accept the "truth" of Christianity. However, if we have twentieth-century understandings of "tolerance" in mind, it would not be appropriate to claim either Justin or Trypho as models of "tolerance". Both the Christian and his Jewish partner in dialogue not only set out their respective very different religious positions, they go further: they appeal vigorously to one another to change sides, with the clear implication that the other side is wrong-headed.

Answer for yourself: How believable is Justin's claim that his Dialogue With Trypho The Jew records an extended discussion he had with a learned Jew, Trypho, shortly after the second Jewish revolt?

Opinions have differed widely. My own view is that the Dialogue With Trypho The Jew is neither a verbatim account of a two-day debate which took place in Ephesus between a Christian and a Jew, nor a wholly artificial compilation of Christian polemical traditions which is unrelated to discussions between Christians and Jews in the middle decades of the second century. There are points at which Trypho is little more than a puppet: he is allowed to say only what Justin wants him to say. However, many of the arguments and responses of both Justin and Trypho are found in other writings from this period. In several key passages Trypho echoes widely held Jewish objections to Christian claims and sets out Jewish basic convictions or interpretations of Scripture which are well attested elsewhere.

As we examine and analyze Justin's perception of the status quo of Christianity as it existed in 160 C.E. it is important to make sure we note the examples of "God-fearers" as well as "Proselytes" as discussed by Justin as this gives us a picture of what the Gentile was taught to do by those who knew Jesus best...his apostles and disciples. This was the pattern for not only Gentile inclusion into the Israel of God but the pattern of worship as taught the non-Jews by Jesus' closest followers. I hope we are smart enough to understand that any changes to this "pattern" that come after Justin do little more than destroy the efforts of the apostles and disciples to carry out Jesus' wishes and mandate and literally destroy the pattern of worship that you have seen by now that existed long before Abraham and which was reiterated by Moses for both the Jew and non-Jew. As we shall see, the Dialogue contains important references both to "God-fearers" and to "proselytes" which have been overlooked in recent scholarly discussion of these topics and these pictures speak volumes to Gentile Christians today if they have ears to hear.

WHO WERE TRYPHO'S COMPANIONS?

Several scholars have commented on Justin's characterization of Trypho the Jew. They have stressed that Trypho is a pleasant courteous Jew, and that, unlike many later Christian and Jewish disputants, Justin and Trypho respect one another. However, the role in the Dialogue of Trypho's companions has usually been quietly ignored, from Eusebius right up to the present.

In the very first extant sentence of the Dialogue Justin is met by an unidentified man who is accompanied by companions; the latter are referred to in the second sentence as the man's "friends". Most scholars except that the expected opening dedication is missing and that it probably mentions Ephesus in Asia Minor as the location of the dialogue (Eusebius, History of the Church, 94.18.6).

Answer for yourself: Do you grasp the importance of Ephesus being the location of this Dialogue between a Gentile believer and a Jew? We have in Justin's Dialogue his description of not only 2nd Century Judaism but Gentile believers in God who not only practiced the Jewish faith but were believers in Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. This is phenomenal for our information of the time period and what the Gentile believers in Jesus though Jewish evangelism had been taught concerning not only the accepted religious doctrines concerning Jesus in the 2nd Century long before Rome would take charge of the faith but we also have a through description by Justin of the Gentile's worship of God as it existed in the 2nd Century as taught by Jewish outreach.

The reader's curiosity is aroused immediately not only as to who is the person who engages Justin in conversation but as to whom are his companions. Before Trypho identifies himself and states that he is a circumcised Jew who has recently fled from the Bar Kochba war, his "followers and companions" inform Justin (and the reader of the Dialogue) that they are keen to hear "some profitable discourse" from Justin. But we are not told anything about the background of Trypho's companions at this point. This silence concerning the identity of Trypho's comparison turns out to be significant for a reason and we shall see soon why Justin desired to keep such identification of the companions identity silent.

The extended discussions between Justin and Trypho take place on two days, on both of which Trypho (but not Justin) is accompanied by friends. Indeed, Justin notes that some additional companions turned up with Trypho on the second day. Occasionally the companions intervene in the discussions to remind the reader of their presence.

Answer for yourself: What possible importance could this intervention by Trypho's friends in this religious dialogue between Justin and this circumcised Jew have? More on that later but you will be amazed!

These friends of Trypho never defend a point of view which differs from that of Trypho, but, as we shall see, these friends of Trypho are distinguished from Trypho in important respects. In the very last chapter (142), Trypho is still accompanied by his companions as he and Justin go their separate ways after praying for one another.

Although the companions are firmly in Trypho's court, Justin takes pains to distinguish between their reaction to Justin's Christian claims and Trypho's own reaction. Trypho's companions are portrayed as being more cynical about Justin's Christian claims than Trypho himself: they are therefore even less likely to become Christians.

Answer for yourself: What message, if any, are we to get from the increased cynicism of Trypho's friends toward Justin and his Christian claims? Again, more on that later.

This distinction (between Trypho and his friends) is set out clearly in the opening chapters, and maintained consistently thereafter; and this is very important and we must not forget that there is a similarity yet a dissimilarity between Trypho and his friends. In the first seven chapters, which are a prologue to the Dialogue as a whole, Justin tells Trypho about his intellectual pilgrimage and his conversion to Christianity. In response Trypho smiles and replies courteously, but his companions "laugh aloud" (8.3).

Answer for yourself: What did Trypho's companions know better than Trypho that made them laugh at Justin's profession of conversion to "Christianity"? Sorry, but you will have to wait for the bombshell to drop in a minute; please keep reading.

In the next chapter the reader is told that they "laughed aloud again and began to shout quite rudely" (9.2). Not surprisingly, Justin is offended and starts to break off the discussion. Trypho urges him to keep his promise and to continue. Justin agrees, with the provision that the companions must behave themselves and listen quietly. At this point two of the companions disappear, "with some jokes, and some jests at our zeal". Justin says ruefully. The remaining companions sit down quietly with Justin and Trypho, and after a brief conversation about the Bar Kochba war, they listen to the discussions between Justin and Trypho.

The hostility of Trypho's companions is not confined to the opening chapters. Towards the end of the second day of the discussions their rudeness is referred to again: "some of those who had come on the second day" protested at one of Justin's claims, and "cried out as though in a theatre" (122.4).

Answer for yourself: What possibly could be so funny that these friends and companions of Trypho would make such fun of Justin Martyr's heart-felt religious commitment?

DIALOGUE 8 & 9...BOUNDARIES BETWEEN GROUPS

In terms of the literary structure of the Dialogue, these two chapters are programmatic. They mark the transition from the Prologue to the main body of the Dialogue. Their structural role is confirmed by the fact that only here (8.3), and at the beginning and the end (141.5) of the whole Dialogue does Justin address Marcus Pompeius, the person to whom the Dialogue is dedicated. Most of the themes which will be discussed in the 133 chapters which follow are foreshadowed here.

Justin appeals to Trypho to become a Christian: "If you seek salvation seriously and have trusted in God, it is open to you, once you know the Christ of God and have become an initiate, to live happily."

Answer for yourself: Is there any significance to Justin's use of the term "initiate"?

According to Graham N. Stanton and Guy G. Stroumsa in their Tolerance And Intolerance In Early Judaism And Christianity (pp. 263-278) they tell us that the Greek word for "initiate" as used by Justin in his Dialogue is a technical term used to refer to one initiated into the rites of the mystery religions; in particular to immersions connected to mystery religions (pp. 275).

Answer for yourself: Is Justin really a follower of Rabbi Yeshua or is he trying to teach pagan religions under the guise of a man named Jesus and is this the reason why the companions of Trypho are laughing and ridiculing him so much because they fully are aware of Justin's agenda since they were themselves Gentile "semi-proselytes" and Godfearers and were well acquainted with what Justin was teaching having been in those pagan religions before repenting and renouncing them and turning to the true faith of God...Biblical Judaism where the non-Jew has a place next to the Jew (Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah)?

Answer for yourself: Is there any literature that exists today to show that Justin was teaching paganism in Jesus' name and trying to spread existing paganism under the guise of a Jewish man who was little more to him than a reincarnated sun-godman? Yes there is.

Eusebius, in his Church History, tells us that Justin, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says "there exists not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things" (Hist. Eccl. lib i. ch. iv).

Trypho, knowing the re-dressed paganism as taught by Justin, immediately makes a counter-appeal to Justin. "When you have forsaken God and placed your hope on a man, what kind of hope yet remains for you?" From Trypho's perspective the failure of Christians to keep the Laws of their Covenant confirms that they are "Godless." Trypho fully understood that the religion that Justin promoted was literally the forsaking of the Divine Revelation given by the God of the Bible. In kindness Trypho acknowledges Justin as a friend and then urges him to be circumcised, then (as is commanded in the law) to keep the sabbath and the feasts and God's new moons, and, in short, to do all the things that are written in the law, and then perchance he will find mercy from God (8.4).

Answer for yourself: In reality what was Trypho trying to accomplish with Justin? He was inviting Justin to repent and enter into the Covenant with God; a Covenant which required circumcision and obedience to God's Holy Days and appointed times like the Sabbath and Festivals and New Moons.

Trypho then summarizes his own views concerning the Messiah, and alleges that Christians have shaped a kind of Messiah for themselves by denying the Messiah of the Jewish Scriptures and fashioning one of their own making from the personification of solar entities (http:// paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com).

A little later Trypho criticizes Christians for their failure to mark out a boundary between themselves and pagans (10.3). In other words Trypho the Jew blames Christians for maintaining their pagan religious ways and not repenting of such false worship when taught the truth!

I don't wish to prolong this but you need to take just a second to read right now an article concerning disturbing quotes about the paganization of the Christian faith by scholars and authors who truly know what they are taking about. They make the same case that Trypho and his companions were making to Justin in the early 2nd Century. THINK!

The issues which separate Justin and Trypho are set out clearly: Justin appeals to Trypho "to know the Christ of God"; Trypho urges Justin to "do all the things that are written in the law". Their agendas are very different. Both refer to a rather different "rite of entry" into their respective communities, baptism and circumcision.

Both claim that the other person has been led astray by false teachers. Trypho claims that Justin has been led astray by false speeches, and has followed men of no account; in fact both single out false teachers as responsible for the false stance taken by the other. Both hope that once the sway of the false teachers is shaken off, their rival will be able to change sides. In other words, from Justin's perspective, both synagogue and church hope that adherents of the rival community will be won over. In spite of tight social boundaries on both sides of the divide, movement is possible. As we shall see, the language of movement, "going over", is found more explicitly in Dialogue 47.

DIALOGUE 23: 2ND CENTURY DESCRIPTION OF THE "GOD-FEARERS"

Please understand that Justin in his Dialogue gives for all the world to see a "kodak-moment" of the Gentile Godfearer and his religious belief system as it existed in the 2nd Century A.D.; but few know this because they fail to study their own faith. Instead of reading about the origins of their Christian faith most Christians accept their experience as the barometer of truth instead of historical record and archeology which often will testify to the falsity of one's Christian experience today. One need only compare the religious belief system of the Gentile Godfearer who accepted Jesus as the Messiah in the 2nd Century A.D. with that of contemporary Christianity today to be horrified at the changes that have taken place over 1800 years which has almost completely destroyed the intended results of the Great Commission as first taught over the early centuries of the Jesus Movement before the establishment of the Roman state-religion called "Christianity." One good place to begin your comparison is to fully understand the religious belief system that Justin opposed in his day and which he strongly opposes in his Dialogue and fully understand that this religious belief system that Justin opposed was not only that of the Jews but the Gentile Godfearers who have likewise been taught by Jews themselves (these Jews were the Jewish followers of Jesus as we will quickly come to see)!!!!!!!!!!!!

At the end of a series of scriptural citations in chapters 21 and 22, Justin brings his argument to a climax by challenging Trypho and his companions: "If this is not so, tell me what you all think about the matters under discussion." And when no one answers, Justin adds: "Therefore to you, Trypho, and to those who wish to become proselytes I proclaim the Divine message ..." (23.3).

This is the first time the reader is given any specific information about the companions: they "want to become proselytes." This phrase can be understood in three ways:

- the companions could be either Jews or Gentiles who want to become proselytes to Christianity;
- or they could be Gentiles who want to become proselytes to Judaism.

Perhaps our first inclination is to assume that Trypho's companions are fellow Jews who are seriously interested in becoming Christians. That might seem appropriate in view of Justin's opening appeal to Trypho which we have just noted. However, the sustained hostility and cynicism of the companions makes this unlikely that they are Jews who are seriously interested in becoming Christians. In addition, the immediate context rules out the possibility that the companions are Jews. This passage comes at the climax of an extended discussion about circumcision which follows the programmatic chapters 8 and 9. Two sentences after the reference to the companions who wish to become proselytes, Justin makes an impassioned plea to them: "Stay as you have been born". And a familiar line of argument about Abraham's justification before circumcision then follows: the latter was just a sign. If Trypho's companions were Jews, there would not be any need to urge them to stay as they are and not to bother with circumcision. So the companions must be Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: Do they wish to become proselytes (i.e. convert fully) to Judaism, or to Christianity?

The latter view has been influential, largely as a result of the most widely available English translation, by A. L. Williams. Williams clarifies the ambiguous Greek by adding in brackets after "proselytes" the phrase "to the true faith". In other words Williams thinks that Trypho's companions are keen to become "proselytes" to Christianity. He is terribly wrong and this is how lies and false teachings are spread which led the flock astray.

Justin is keen to dissuade Trypho's companions from taking the final step of circumcision, for he knows (probably from experience) that it is even more difficult to convert to Christ those have become proselytes to Judaism than it is to convert Jews like Trypho. So he argues vigorously and at length that circumcision was not part of God's original purposes.

Answer for yourself: Again what do we see from Justin's account? We see that it was common for non-Jews to be instructed in the Torah and the Covenants of God whereby they and Jews were not only friends but often accepted circumcision and full conversion to Judaism as was the intention of the Great Commission which was to teach in all the world the Covenant of Noah and the opportunity for such Godfearers to make full conversion to Judaism if they so desired.

At the beginning of their lengthy discussion on this topic Justin lets Trypho have first say. Justin seems to be generous in allowing Trypho to deal the first card, but, as we shall see, Justin himself holds the trump card. Trypho's first card, (10.3) is the very first of the numerous explicit citations of Scripture in the Dialogue, Genesis 17:14: "The person who has not been circumcised on the eighth day shall be cut off from God's people." Trypho then claims that this command refers not only to born Israelites, but also to foreigners (including Justin himself), and to purchased slaves.

Answer for yourself: Did we not see in the prior articles that Abraham, a non-Jew, was circumcised as a "mark" of his Covenant with God long before Moses was commanded to be circumcised and later applied this to the whole of the Jewish males? We sure did.

In interpreting Genesis 17:14 to refer to three groups, Trypho goes further than the MT or the LXX which refer to only two groups: born Israelites and (foreign) purchased slaves.

But Justin ignores the point at this stage in the Dialogue and concentrates on his own arguments concerning circumcision. At the climax Justin attempts to trump Trypho's card concerning Genesis 17:14: he insists once again that circumcision was given as a sign, but not for righteousness. The sentences which follow are highly rhetorical:

Understand that the blood of that circumcision has been made useless, and we have believed the blood that brings salvation . . . Jesus Christ circumcises all those who will ... Come with me, all who fear God who wish to see the good things of Jerusalem. Come, let us go in the light of the Lord, for he has set his people free, even the house of Jacob ... (24.3).

These words are addressed directly to Trypho and his companions. The plea, "Come with me, all who fear God", is intriguing. These words are addressed directly to the companions: they fear God, and wish to see the good things of Jerusalem - and Justin urges them to join his side. We learn from this that Trypho's companions are referred to here as "those who fear God", a phrase found in several passages in Acts (10:2, 22, 35; 13:16, 26).

At Dialogue 10.4 the phrase "those who fear God" refers to Gentiles sympathetic to Judaism (many other scholars hold the same idea like Feldman, Jew and Gentile, p. 357). In this passage Trypho complains that Christians who claim to know God, do not keep the commandments - yet even those who fear God do (the reason being that obeying the Commandments shows God your adherence to His Covenant with them and their love for Him). Perhaps Trypho even has in mind his own companions, as well as other Gentiles sympathetic to Judaism. It is important to note that in both 10.4 and 24.3 the phrase "those who fear God" is a very general way of referring to those sympathetic to Judaism and that this "pattern" is shown in many passages in the New Testament as well as found in Acts 10:2 and 10:22 with Cornelius and then again used in a universal sense in Acts 10:35. Again those Gentiles partial to Judaism is again seen in Acts 13:16 in Antioch of Pisidia in Asia Minor. In the context of these passages we see these non-Jewish Gentile Godfearers observing the Sabbath because Paul and Barnabas addressed them on the Sabbath day in the synagogues in Asia Minor (notice they were not "churches" in Asia Minor.

Justin's identification of Trypho's companions as Gentiles closely attached to Judaism who wish to become proselytes is striking. The companions are "God-fearers", even though Justin does not explicitly refer to them as such. In recent years (especially since the discovery of the Aphrodisias inscription) literature on "Godfearers" has become a growth industry. As far as I can see, none of the recent writers on this topic makes more than a passing reference to Justin. This is unfortunate. I am convinced that when Justin's evidence is set alongside the other varied and often baffling evidence, we are forced to conclude that Gentiles were attracted to Judaism for many reasons and that their relationship to Judaism took many forms. Today Gentile Christianity has little to do with Judaism and this is terribly unfortunate because it separation from the mother faith has robbed it of the "pattern" or worship God intended the Jew and Gentile share.

Before we leave chapter 23, we must ask why Justin has so much to say about circumcision in his opening exchanges with Trypho.

- First, he is responding to Jewish criticisms, well grounded in Scripture, of Christian claims.
- Secondly, he is deliberately ringing alarm bells for his Christian readers, some of whom were attracted to Judaism.
- Thirdly, and most important of all for my present purposes, he is appealing to Gentiles who currently had some form of attachment to Judaism and he was trying to influence them not to become proselytes, for he knew that proselytes were even less likely than Jews such as Trypho to respond to Christian preaching.

DIALOGUE 47: TOLERANCE AND INTOLERANCE

Several observations for the Christian need to be made from Dialogue 47. We have already seen that the programmatic chapters 8 and 9 imply that there is movement in both directions between Judaism and Christianity; in other words both were competing for recruits: this is what both Justin and Trypho assume in their opening appeals to one another. At 47.1 Justin reminds his readers of Trypho's initial appeal to him in 8.4 to become a proselyte.

Now here is where we must pay close attention. In response to a question from Trypho, Justin concedes that Jews who have become Christians and still wish to keep the law fully are to be accepted as long as they do not persuade Gentiles to keep the law, and as long as they have full fellowship with Gentile Christians.

Answer for yourself: What did we learn from this statement from Justin?

Justin admits that many Jews were currently believers in Yeshua/Jesus and such Jewish "believers in Jesus" were continually keeping the Law. Notice also that such Jewish believers in Jesus as Messiah did not at that time follow Paulinism whereby they replaced Law with grace as we have been taught today. In other words Paulinism was not successful in the 2nd Century as it has become today under the influence and power of the Roman state in the 4th Century A.D. Justin refers to this issue three times in this one fairly short but very important chapter.

The third reference is particularly important as it concerns the Gentile believers in both God and Jesus:

Justin concedes, somewhat reluctantly, that Gentile Christians who have been persuaded by Jewish Christians to keep the law will be saved. This means that Judaism even had influence among Gentile Christians (Justin's people). Justin then notes that there are some Gentile Christians who are much less tolerant than he is: they will not converse or share table-fellowship with those who acknowledge Christ and keep the law (both non-Jew & Jews). This means that the dividing lines were being drawn over the Law and not the issue of the Messiah and Law as you now know is the heart of one's Covenant with God!

In reality Justin is denying the Covenant of God and replacing it with one of the Gentile's own making...and this has continued for 1800 years up to our day!

Answer for yourself: What else is so striking about the above verse by Justin? He admits that salvation exists within Judaism and not only in Christianity as Christianity would have you believe today! WOW!

Answer for yourself: Why is Justin himself so cautious about Jewish Christians, and why are some of his fellow Christians so intolerant? Justin gives one answer himself: Jewish Christians who insist on keeping the law arouse the suspicion of Gentile Christians and their lives as examples of high piety was always a stimulus for the Gentile Christian to begin to examine the Jewish faith and the Torah whereby if one did such an activity he would quickly see for himself the falsification of the doctrines and teachings of Gentile Christianity and reject it and become converts to the Jewish faith (all the while maintaining belief in Jesus as Messiah). Justin knew that the end result of such activity would persuade Gentile Christians to keep the law, a position Justin will not tolerate (47.3).

Answer for yourself: Why should Gentiles who "believe on this Christ" not be encouraged by Jewish Christians to "live in accordance with the law appointed by Moses"?

Answer for yourself: Why is Justin, tolerant in many other respects, so intolerant at precisely this point concerning the Law?

As we find throughout history Jewish Christians have always insisted that the law should be kept as a sine qua non as far as salvation is concerned; but the Bible never really teaches this. Obedience is expected of one who has received the grace of God and His Salvation by faith (not faith in Messiah but faith in God). These Jewish Christians mean well but they fail to present to the non-Jew his Covenant with God which preceded the Mosaic Covenant; the Covenant of Noah. Failing to do this they assume that the only way the Gentile can find acceptance with God is through total conversion into the Covenant of Moses; such by now you have learned is not correct. However, Justin does not say that this is their position. He implies that they are encouraging Gentiles to keep the law alongside their faith in Christ (this law being the law of Moses and not the Law of Noah).

One senses Justin's fear at what is going on. Justin and the Gentile Christians are losing the quest for converts and Biblical Judaism is winning. What Gentile Christians fail to realize is that Biblical Judaism was a world religion and it would not be until Rome will throw her power as a Political State behind religion would Judaism begin to wain and Roman Christianity surge to the forefront. So we see Justin's hidden agenda at this point. The clue to a probable explanation comes in 47.4: Justin notes that some Gentile Christians who have been persuaded to keep the law have moved over completely to the Jewish religion; they have denied that "this is the Christ", and therefore cannot be saved. Their denial of "the Christ" involved the Gentile's belief in Jesus which is questioned once they realize that the Greek Scriptures have been purposefully falsified, misquoted, and mistranslated in order to promote a sun-godman of the Essenes in 200 B.C.E. Such Greek Scriptures the Jews have always rejected as false representations of the true Jewish Scriptures. That being so then one quickly comes to learn what were the true Jewish prophecies and in the light of their failure to be "fulfilled" then questions concerning Jesus as Messiah arise. I have dealt in other websites with these falsifications and the failures of these prophecies to be fulfilled:

- <http://www.geocities.com/bennoah1>
- <http://messianicprophecy.netfirms.com>

Other associated related studies can be found here:

- <http://returningtofaithofyeshua.freesevers.com>
- <http://faithofyeshua.faithweb.com>

Once one the student familiarizes himself with both the falsifications of the texts by the Essenes and later Gentiles as well as the failure of the true Jewish prophecies to be fulfilled then he can see more clearly why the events expected by the Jews did not occur and that such a failure cannot be laid at the feet of Jesus. Therefore the question about Jesus as Messiah cannot be truthfully answered and it yet remains a matter of faith. Time will tell.

Justin suspects that some Jewish Christians who encourage Gentile Christians to keep the law may in fact be responsible for turning them into proselytes to Judaism. The continuing attraction of Judaism to Gentiles, whether Christian or not, suggests that this is a plausible explanation. So I suggest that Justin is extremely sensitive concerning the status of Jews who have become Christians because he fears that some of them will encourage Gentile Christians to keep the law - and that will prove to be the crucial step on the path towards a complete transfer to Judaism.

This explanation is strengthened by sociological considerations. Justin's Dialogue provides ample evidence that in his day Judaism and Christianity were such keen rivals that sporadic conflict was always likely. Sociologists remind us that where groups are in conflict, the sharpness of the reaction to the "inner enemy" is in proportion to the sharpness of the conflict with the outer enemies. A group at odds with its arch-rival will react with even more hostility to a heretic than to an apostate, for a heretic still shares many of the goals of his former fellow members. Hatred is directed, not in the first place against opponents of its own view of the world order, but against the dreaded "internal enemy" who is competing for the same end.

In these terms, Jewish Christians who seek to persuade Gentile Christians to keep the law are an "inner enemy", "heretics", whose influence is to be feared.

DIALOGUE 122-3: "PROSELYTES"

These two chapters contain a set of vigorous exchanges over the interpretation of Isaiah 49:6 and 42:6ff., passages which refer to Israel as a "light for the Gentiles". Justin says to Trypho (and his companions): "You all indeed suppose that this [i.e. Isa. 49:6] was said of the stranger and the proselytes. But in reality these words were said of us (as if the Gentile Christians were the light of the world of whom Isaiah spoke and not Israel) who have been enlightened through Jesus ..." (121.1).

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that besides Ignatius who began replacement religion in his few letters around 110 C.E. one must wait for Justin around 160 C.E. for a an official construction of replacement religious doctrines to arise which would be the foundation for all that would come later in the Gentile Church?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that in Justin's mind the Gentile Church which is apart from Judaism and Jewish Christianity has take the place of Israel in the Bible?

Justin continues, "These things also [Isa 42:6ff.], Gentlemen, have been spoken with reference to the Christ, and concerning the Gentiles that have been enlightened. Or will you say again: with reference to the Law and the proselytes he says these things'" (122.3).

Then some of those who had come on the second day (other Gentiles who have been enlightened toward Judaism and Trypho's friends) cried out as though in a theatre: 'What then? Does He [God] not say them with reference to the Law and those that have been enlightened by it' Now these are the proselytes' (122.4). These Gentile semi-proselytes to Judaism knew full ware themselves that the passage misapplied by Justin was intended for them. They were the living proof and fulfillment of the verses in Isaiah; they had received the truth from the Jews as God had always intended!

In his reply Justin insists that Isaiah 42:6ff. does not refer to "the old law and its proselytes, but Christ and his proselytes, us Gentiles, whom he enlightened...". Justin denies not only that the Jews have enlightened Gentiles since Jacob but the historical fulfillment of the passage and since failing to exegete the passage properly reads into the passage what he desires; this has been done now for 1800 years by Gentile Christianity.

There are several points of particular interest in this passage.

- When Justin denies that the two passages from Isaiah refer to proselytes to Judaism, Trypho's companions fly into a rage. Their reaction suggests that they set great store by these passages: they insist that they themselves, as would-be proselytes, are enlightened by the law. A number of passages in Jewish writings state that the law is the light of the world, especially for proselytes. One need not only look at the Old Testament which testifies to this repeatedly but Philo: Joseph and Asenath; The Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs; Rabbinic traditions; and even the New Testament itself in places such as Rom. 2:17-20.

Rom 2:17-20 17 Behold, thou art called a Jew, and retest in the law, and makest thy boast of God, 18 And knowest his will, and approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law; 19 And art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, a light of them which are in darkness, 20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, which hast the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law. (KJV)

Trypho and his companions quote this well-established Jewish exegetical tradition and insist that it refers to them. Justin, however, takes it over and replaces the law with Christ. In short, Justin and Trypho are rivals, both seeking "proselytes" among Gentiles; both claim that Scripture supports their appeal to Gentiles.

- (Justin claims that proselytes not only do not believe, but utter blasphemies against Christ's name doubly more than Trypho himself, and wish both to kill and to torment those who believe on him (122.2). No doubt the reference to the excessive enthusiasm of proselytes is rhetorical exaggeration. Justin immediately adds his own wry, but perceptive, comment: "For they [proselytes] are eager to become like you [Trypho and his fellow Jews] in everything." This suggests that proselytes are uneasy about their status and need to prove themselves, even though Justin alludes to the well-known rabbinic tradition that a circumcised proselyte "is like one who is native born" (123.1; cf. b. Yeb. 47b and 62a)
- In 122.1 "the stranger" is at least partly distinct from "the proselytes". Here we have further evidence for two groups with different levels of attachment to Judaism. This is what I have been teaching in this and other websites all along and we have now a 2nd Century witness by one opposed to Judaism that this is the case; different Covenants with different Covenant responsibilities and stipulations.

CONCLUDING OBSERVATIONS

Justin's Dialogue indicates that in the middle of the second century both Judaism and Christianity were concerned to maintain tight boundaries. Trypho complains that Christians (unlike Jews) do not mark themselves off from pagans (Christians were indistinguishable often from the pagans). Take time now to read the article entitled: Disturbing Quotes which concerns the Gentile Christian faith by scholars which speak about how Gentile Christianity is basically paganism unchanged where they only have attributed to a Jewish Rabbi prior pagan concepts and have tried to pass this off to the world as Divine Revelation He also mentions that some Jewish teachers forbid Jews to enter into conversation with Christians - lest they be persuaded by "blasphemous" Christian claims (38.1; 112.4). Justin's references to alleged Jewish persecution of Christians also point to Jewish anxiety lest community boundaries be breached.

Justin is concerned to maintain tight boundaries on the Christian side. He will not tolerate Jewish Christians who are not in full fellowship with Gentile Christians. Justin is very sensitive about Jewish Christians who persuade Gentile Christians to keep the law: he suspects that under their influence some Gentile Christians may move over completely to the Jewish polity (47.3-4).

And yet in spite of the concerns of both "synagogue" and "church" to maintain tight boundaries, there is movement across both boundary lines. This has happened in the past, and there is an expectation that it will happen in the future; but this is mainly determined by the availability of knowledge of the truth and it's availability to the Gentiles who never had the opportunity to know the truth about Jesus and the Jewish Scriptures before they were altered by the Essenes and later by Rome. In short, there is keen "on the ground" rivalry - and this is surely the mainspring of the intolerance expressed on both sides.

Justin's Dialogue suggests that there were different levels of attachment to both communities. On the Jewish side there were proselytes whose status was often ambiguous; would-be proselytes, such as Trypho's companions; other Gentile sympathizers or "Godfearers"; some Jews who acknowledged Christ, but were not in full fellowship with Gentile Christians; and some Gentile Christians who had "gone over" to Judaism.

On the Christian side there were two kinds of Jewish Christians, one acceptable to Justin, and one not; there were also Gentile Christians who seemed likely to go over to Judaism (47.1-4).

No doubt both sides hoped to consolidate the level of commitment of those on the "fringes" of their communities. From a later period a tradition expresses what is likely to have been the case in Justin's "school" as well as in synagogues: "when the sage takes his seat to expound doctrine, many strangers become proselytes" (Cant. Rab. 1.15; cf. 1.3 and 4.2). This is simply because one the Jewish sages and scholars begin to teach the truth about history, the corruption of their Holy texts, God's warnings about the Gentile nations repenting from idolatry and sun-worship, and the truth about the Messianic prophecies then these Gentiles were become associated with Judaism in great numbers. Such threatened the powers of be in the Gentile world such as governments for example. This tide of association with Judaism had to stop. We seen the attitude of such Gentiles who had been instructed in Judaism having been once enlightened: they ridiculed and mocked Justin for failing to see what they had been shown and his failure to turn from such folly once it is exposed. To them Justin was a laughing stock. These enlightened Gentiles now recognized their solar worship for what it was; an affront to God and crude idolatry and they turned from idols to serve the living God.

1Thes 1:9 9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; (KJV)

Justin would not do that. As we have seen, the Dialogue contains important neglected evidence for the existence in the middle of the second century of "God-fearers", even though Justin does not use a specific term for Gentiles who already have some attachment to the synagogue.

Answer for yourself: Why did Justin write his Dialogue? I do not think that his main aim was to "win over" Jews such as Trypho. If that had been his hope and expectation, he would not have allowed Trypho to go his own way. Justin must have recognized that some Gentiles (such as Trypho's companions) were so strongly attached to Judaism that their conversion was unlikely. Perhaps his primary appeal (via his Christian "school") was to Gentiles who were broadly sympathetic to both Judaism and Christianity - Gentiles who did not appreciate the differences, Gentiles with a weak level of attachment either to Christianity or to Judaism. In other words he was trying to lay a foundation that not only might work in his day to dissuade Gentiles from associating with Judaism (semi-proselytes or fully converted Proselytes) as well as the days to come. Justin might not have succeeded with Trypho and his Gentile Godfearers but Rome will use this piece of literature to it's fullest advantage and Justin and his Dialogue become the very foundational document for Rome's Replacement Religious doctrines for 2000 years.

Let us end with this thought. Justin's friends, the two Gentiles who had been instructed in religious matters and texts by Israelites (the light of the world) both knew and saw the folly of Gentile Christianity. Let us not forget that they had once been where Justin was at...in the middle of idolatry and they like Justin did not know it. Upon instruction in the Torah and accepting their Covenant with God (the Covenant of Noah) they were contemplating going beyond the Laws of Noah and fulfilling Isa. 56 in their lives whereby they would acquire more mitzvot and make full conversion to Judaism. They, unlike Christians today, did not see the Law as a burden or a curse. What did they know that you have not been taught? These companions of Trypho demonstrate that it is perfectly permissible to believe in Jesus as Israel's Messiah and yet obey the Law of your Covenant. This is the way God intended...obedience to the Laws of our Covenant. The issues of the Messiah will honestly never be decided for sure until the Messiah either appears or returns. But belief in Messiah was never contingent upon salvation for either the Jew or the non-Jew and we see Justin admitting this in the 2nd Century C.E. Let us leave with this concluding remark The Great Commission had been continuing for almost 150 years and we see the fruit of it in the lives of Trypho's (himself a Jew) friends (themselves non-Jewish). They were practicing Biblical faith under the umbrella of Biblical Judaism and not Roman Christianity whereby they adhered to the Laws of their Covenant and desired to do more. The kodak-moment left to us by Justin is telling; Biblical Judaism whereby it is a light to the nations was a world power to be reckoned with as God intended. Sadly the power of Rome would later triumph over the power of Israel.

Answer for yourself: Understanding this picture as historically accurate from an "adversaries viewpoint" then did the Apostles go out carry out the Great Commission wrong following Pentecost? Not at all in fact we see that Gentile followers of Jesus were taught Judaism and their place within it way into the 2nd Century in fulfillment of the Great Commission. You need now ask yourself how we got so far away from the faith of Jesus and investigate to find the answers for yourself. Only then will you be fully convinced that we as non-Jews and Christian believers have lived our lives under the Roman yoke and not the yoke of the Torah and this has assured us that we live as apostates from the faith once given to the saints.

HAVE YOU FOLLOWED GOD'S "PATTERN OF WORSHIP" IN YOUR LIFE?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that within the Jewish Scriptures we can find a "Pattern of Worship" given by God that was followed by both Jews and non-Jewish believers in God both in the Old Testament and New Testament times?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that both historically and archeologically we can attest that this "Pattern of Worship" continued until the 4th and early 5th Century A.D. when Rome for all practical purposes changed it for everyone and today we seldom if ever stumble onto the prior existing pattern that God had intended that all His children, both Jew and non-Jew, observe in their worship of Him?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the tabernacle was built according to the divine blueprint given to Moses by the Lord (Ex. 25:8-9)?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Aaron and his sons were consecrated to their priestly vocation according to a divine pattern as well, and they offered the prescribed sacrifices unto God according to a divine pattern?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that David was given the same pattern when told to build the Temple, set aside the Priests, and oversee the work of the service (worship) within the Temple (I Chron. 28:13)?

1 Chr 28:10-15 10 Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it. 11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, 12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things: 13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

Let us look and examine the the Hebrew word for "service" and see what we find hidden in the Hebrew:

Strong's Concordance:

5656 `abodah (ab-o-daw'); or `abowdah (ab-o-daw'); from 5647; work of any kind: KJV-- act, bondage, + bondservant, effect, labour, ministering (-try), office, service (-ile, -itude), tillage, use, work, X wrought.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon

5656 `abodah or `abowdah- labor, service

- a) labor, work
- b) labor (of a servant or a slave)
- c) labor, service (of captives or subjects)
- d) service (of God)

What we see from these words is that there is a "MINISTRY" and "SERVICE OF GOD" that was given by the Spirit of God according to a "PATTERN."

Even the New Testament alludes to this pattern:

Heb 8:5 5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount. (KJV)

Now it is for us to both understand that a "pattern of ministry" existed both in the Old Testament and New Testament which was a pattern of the intended service of mankind and worship toward God. This is called "ministry" according to the Hebrew word. I know that the term "ministry" is so overworked today but it is for us to try to discern:

- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be discerned from the Jewish Scriptures
- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be shown from examples in the Old Testament and New Testament texts to have existed not only before Jesus' death but also existed "unchanged" after Jesus' crucifixion
- If this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be shown to have been quite similar if not the same in many instances as practiced and observed by both Jews and non-Jews both before and after Jesus' crucifixion

If this can discerned from New Testament examples as applying "unchanged" for both the Jew and the non-Jewish believer who came to God through the ministry of Yeshua's disciples and apostles then we need then only ask if our experience as Christians and followers of Yeshua is yet today according to this "pattern of ministry" or if our experience is different and if so we must ask "why?" If not then we have to honestly ask if we have let Israel be a light unto us (as Gentiles as the nations of the world) as God has said they were to be in the Jewish Scriptures or if we have been misled in our "ministry and worship" toward God.

In the articles that follow we will present evidence from both the Jewish Old Testament and the New Testament which proves beyond any doubt that there did exist not only a "pattern of worship" as observed by both the Jew and non-Jew but both observed and adhered to this pattern well before and after Jesus' crucifixion which indicates that nothing was changed by Jesus' death. One has to look to the official adoption of the Jesus Movement by the state of Rome in which "Christianity" became the state religion of Rome to see the organized changes made to this "pattern" of worship. Today few if any know that ever happened and that we have departed from the "pattern" of worship given by God in His Holy Texts.

Let us continue our study.

NADAB AND ABIHU: A CASE STUDY IN DEVIATION FROM THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP

In this article we will be taught a very important lesson that sadly has escaped most of the Gentile Christian Church; namely, that there is a Divine "Pattern of Worship" that God has commanded and any deviation from it is displeasing to the Creator in spite of what we might think or believe. The seriousness of this lesson cannot be stressed enough.

You might have heard of Nadab and Abihu but we will become more acquainted with them momentarily. You need to position yourself to understand that the account of Nadab and Abihu occurs on their very first day to lead in worship the people of God. You might say that it occurs on their ordination day. It was their first day to lead the people of God in worship. As you read this document, please draw the analogy and question if at all possible if you have possibly been led in worship by contemporary "Christianized" Nadabs and Abihus.

Aaron and his sons had spent seven whole days within the tabernacle of meeting and now on this eighth day, they had been more than ready to begin the ceremonies which would complete their consecration to the priesthood. The ceremonies were tedious and difficult and they had to be followed and performed correctly to be pleasing to God. Aaron's brother and God's chosen mediator Moses, had been told by Yahweh,

"See that you make everything according to the pattern shown you in the mount" (EX. 25:40).

Now notice if you will that God tells Moses that there exists "a Pattern" that is to be followed by man when he worships God!

As you read this article, you will see that we have deviated from the "pattern" and you will quickly see that we (the Gentile Christian Church) have erred today and have not followed the "pattern for worship" as given by God. Let us draw the parallels to our situation as Gentile Christians who consider themselves followers of Jesus and "the Christ" today.

1 Cor 10:5-6 5 But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness. 6 Now these things were our examples...(KJV)

Nadab and Abihu (Leviticus 10) had been very careful to do everything to the Lord's exacting specifications (but that would change). Aaron's sons Nadab and Abihu were very meticulous in slaughtering a calf, a kid, a bull, and a ram, washing and burning the kidneys, fat, and fatty lobe of the liver on the altar, pouring the blood at its base, burning the hide and flesh outside the camp, and then offering a grain offering mixed with oil. Let us not forget that this was done specifically according to the pattern given by God; the pattern He intended to be followed to the very "jot" and "tittle" of each command.

The high point of these preparations came when the glory of the Lord (God's Presence) appeared as a result of obedient worship and a great presence of fire went out from the Lord and entirely consumed the burnt offering and fat on the altar. During this last event Nadab and Abihu were moved with the rest of the congregation to fall on their faces in worship at this miraculous display of their Magnificent God, as He accepted with great pleasure, the sacrifice of His people.

Perhaps it was the emotion of the moment, yet nevertheless, whatever it might have been, it entered into the minds of these two sons of Aaron to make a generous gesture of worship to the Lord. Their hearts were no doubt filled with joy and thanksgiving at being chosen along with their father and the entire tribe of Levi to mediate God's dealings with His special people, Israel. God had taken extreme care to communicate to them the manner and spirit in which He was to be honored and worshipped, and they had been faithful to do all that He had asked of them. God would do the same to King David and Solomon when giving further instructions concerning "the Pattern of Worship" to be followed in the Temple as hopefully you have seen in the study of the prior articles.

Lev 10:1 And Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censer, and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered strange fire before the LORD, which he commanded them not. (KJV)

Nadab and Abihu, however, were not content with worshipping "by the Book" or "by the Pattern of Worship" commanded by God; they wanted to excel in worship, and to do so, they would exceed God's expectations, hoping through their creativity to convey to Him their inestimable thanks and praise. They felt in their emotions and they reasoned in their minds that they were unable to express their gratitude doing only what the Lord had asked. They reasoned among themselves: "After all, if we do all that God required, surely He will approve if we improvise and bring Him what He has not asked for?" I can hear them now as they most likely reasoned and said to themselves: "We will go beyond the 'Pattern' for after all, does not God know our hearts?" This needs some deep thought in order to see if God can or will accept what man decides on his own to give God which God did not ask in lieu of what He did ask that man do and observe. The bottom issue here is the substitution of what the flesh manifests instead of the Spirit. Even more clearly we are speaking about Replacement Religion which is undetectable to the flesh of mankind since most are devoid of the necessary knowledge to even know that such a tragic substitution has even occurred.

So with love in their hearts (like us) and with great satisfaction in their own cleverness, Nadab and Abihu mistakenly devised a plan whereby they thought that they could draw closer to the Lord who chose them. With their father Aaron looking on, each took his censer and put fire in it. With eager hearts they approached the glory which so recently had accepted the sacrifice offered on the altar. "Surely" they thought to themselves drawing ever nearer the expression of Yahweh's presence, "this will assure Yahweh (God) of my appreciation for His selection of me to be a holy priest before Him." Can't you just picture Aaron as he looked on, his heart in similar fashion overflowing with gratitude to His Lord and with pride for his sons on this, their ordination day. Here they were, young men, selected by God to be members of a special class among all of the houses of Israel -- priests to the Most High God, of the order of Levi! They were God's worship leaders!

Answer for yourself: Can this apply to the Christian? Do we offer God "Strange Fire" in worship and not know it today?

Yet God will destroy and kill them for their false worship and their deviation from "the Pattern of Worship" which He had previously commanded. Tragically, they forgot that with God obedience is better than any sacrifice one can bring God.

This should hit home to us as followers of Jesus and "the Christ" since as Gentile Christians today we follow a different "Pattern of Worship" created by Rome instead of the "Pattern of Worship" commanded by God to Israel which was to be the template not only for the Jews but all non-Jews and God-fearers as they made their way to the Temple and the Presence of God.

Maybe not intentionally but surely we do the same as Nadab and Abihu as Gentile Christians at times in our lives when we are led astray by false teaching which we fail to see for what it really is; namely, deviation from what God had commanded in the first place concerning His "Holy Days and Sabbaths" let alone the associated rituals and observance that are parts of these "appointed times" with God.

Now let us pick up the story of Nadab and Abihu. The Hebrew Scriptures teach us that Aaron's worship was interrupted by a sudden commotion which he heard breaking out among the assembly. All of Israel was riveted on the Glory as they beheld again the fire which, having just moments before moved them to fall on their faces, was now once again coming out of God's Presence and began racing rapidly outward. This surely puzzled Aaron, because the sacrifice of the animals had been completely consumed and there remained not so much as a morsel to be devoured by this blaze. But these flames were different than before in that they did not reveal Yahweh's pleasure in the worship and the offerings of His people as they had before.

Screams of horror broke out as the realization settled upon the people of Israel that the flames were directed not toward the altar, but on the two sons of Aaron who had just been worshipping God. Aaron, shattered by what he saw, felt the panic and fear as it filled his soul. It surely seemed like an eternity to the gathering until the flames departed just as swiftly as they had appeared. Where once stood two young men, there were now two smoking carcasses. Unlike the sacrifices which had been totally consumed, the displeasure of the Lord at the institution of perverted worship was manifested in His leaving their lifeless bodies intact and on the ground.

Answer for yourself: Should this worship not have been accepted? Did not God know their hearts and their attempts to love Him after their own zeal?

Notice what Moses says immediately who was quick to speak to Aaron about what had just happened. Moses says:

"This is what the Lord spoke of when He said: 'Among those who approach me I will show myself holy; in the sight of all the people I will be honored.'" Lev. 10:3

Such honor of God is NEVER done in the flesh or zeal of man but in OBEDIENCE to what God has said and commanded.

Aaron's mouth was quiet! Two of his cousins, being thus commanded of Moses, came forward and conducted the remains of his two sons outside the camp, to the place where the unacceptable portions of the sacrifices were routinely taken.

Aaron, being a prophet and having a heart filled with the knowledge of the purposes of Yahweh, knew that it was obedience and not sacrifice that the Lord desired from His people. This may be news to you but God has not changed; we have! When we fail to observe God's Holy Days and "Appointed Times" and substitute for them our own inherited by antisemitic Rome because of their hatred of the Jewish nation then we must realize that we appear before God as just another Nadab and Abihu regardless of our emotional response that accompanies our feeble attempts to make God accept a substitute worship from what He commanded. Often we don't even know what we are doing and that we are dishonoring God when we lift our prayers and voices as we sanctify man's holidays taken from solar gods and goddesses to which Rome affixed the name of Jesus over 1700 years ago. Instead of the Sabbath of God we congregate on "Sun-day"; a day set apart for Helios the Sun god of Rome. Instead of the Passover we celebrate and observe as Christians a fertility cultic day called "Astarte" or "Easter" which commemorated licentious behavior representing the new life of Spring (Easter and bunnies as prolific breeders, eggs as symbol of fertility). Instead of observing the Festival of Tabernacles which symbolized the gathering of all men with God we celebrate Thanksgiving. And I could go on but you get the point. Instead of reading the "particular portions" of the Torah on God's Holy Days and Sabbaths along with the Haftorah (Prophets) as He commanded which convey the very specific messages He desires to communicate to His people corresponding to these specific days and time we have today over 2000 different Christian denominations all with a different passage with jumbled messages taken most likely from Rome's New Testament instead of the Holy Hebrew Scriptures recognized by the pre-Roman church. These specific readings may be new to you but if you desire to know more about them I suggest you read S. Spong's great book on this issue entitled Liberating the Gospels. In this book he will show you that basically the Gospel of Mark is little more than a midrash on the Synagogue readings (specific Torah and Haftorah portions read in succession through the Festival year beginning with Shavuot (Pentecost) and culminating at Pesach (Passover). These readings when taken in chronological order are the basic for the commentary of Jesus upon the synagogue readings which we find in his teachings as taken in "order" from Pentecost through Passover. I could not believe this when I first read this so I took the Gospel of Mark in my study Bible and took each paragraph/section, chapter by chapter beginning at chapter 1 through 16, and recorded the references to the Old Testament throughout the whole Gospel of Mark. After comprising the list of Old Testament references from each of the passages in Mark from chapter 1 through 16 I then compared them with the Torah and Haftorah readings for the synagogue in Israel in the first century and I about fell out of my chair. Although not 100 % accurate I found to my amazement that over 90% of the summary teachings of Mark flowed EXACTLY with the Torah/Haftorah readings of the synagogues in Israel in the first century in Israel. That only reinforced for the God's "Pattern of Worship" and I truly came to understand that on certain days and special times with God that God's message commanded for that day needs be read and not another which we usually say "God spoke to me and told me to tell ya". Sadly these are not from God when we have His expressed commands that ONLY certain passages and certain messages are to taught on certain "appointed times" with God. The analogy I make is that we surely don't say "happy anniversary" to someone when it is not his anniversary but his birthday. I hope you get the point. Get the book and begin to see God's "Pattern of Worship" for yourself. Now back to Nadab and Abihu.

Aarons' sons, regardless of the seeming innocence of their intentions, were surely guilty of disobedience in the worship of God. They were guilty of "Replacement Religion" as we today. Nadab and Abihu had been chosen by God to be a warning and an alarm to the congregation that God is to be obeyed to the letter, and that men were not to worship Him in ways He had not revealed. They had been the unwitting mediators of a great lesson by God to His people. And let me remind you that this "Pattern of Worship" has been given to King David and Solomon and handed down to the Holy Men of Old and we can find this "Pattern of Worship" not only in the first century in Israel but adapted and followed by Paul in Asia Minor among his Gentile congregations in the synagogues well into the 5th century before Rome finally succeeds in eradicating it.

God had not given Nadab and Abihu any instructions concerning the origin of the fire to be used nor did he command them to offer fire created by the hands of man. They had begun to think beyond the Word of God, and God, in His great care for the congregation, had given to them a strong reminder of the dangers of worshiping God with methods whose origins spring from the evil imaginations of the deceitful and sinful heart of man.

THE PROFANE WORSHIP IN MODERN ASSEMBLIES

Nadab and Abihu were by no means the only persons through whom the Lord has demonstrated his displeasure with unrevealed means of worship. We have the examples given to us of Uzzah, who in steadying the teetering Ark, forgot that the ground upon which it was in danger of falling was much cleaner than the hands of fallen man; of Saul, who in offering the sacrifice in the absence of the priest, committed the sin of presumption, losing forever in the process the kingdom to his posterity; of Jeroboam the first ruler of the Northern Kingdom, who created a feast to the Lord in his own heart, a sin into which all who followed him on the throne strayed, a sin which resulted finally in the kingdom entering into the captivity of the Assyrians; of Ananias and Sapphira, who gave of their belongings to the Lord, but in a deceptive manner and were carried lifeless from the assembly.

Although we have these examples in our Bibles, we have still not responded to Him in obedience when it comes to the subject of worship, in spite of the advantage we enjoy of the Re-Newed Covenant. New hearts have been given to His people and instead of residing in a temple made of stone or skins, His glory, His Holy Spirit has come to dwell within His people corporately and individually. In spite of these advantages over those who have gone before, most of Christianity is mired deep in worship forms of which not the Lord, but man is the author. While many would claim that they are in New Testament assemblies, those who are truly seeking after the will of God know that when they read the letters of Peter, Paul, James, John, as well as other passages, they are confused by the glaring differences in practice from the first century assemblies and the assemblies of today. Christians today are unknowingly offering to the Lord, sacrifices no less profane than that of Nadab, Abihu, Uzzah, Saul, Jeroboam, Ananias and Sapphira and they don't even know of this tragic departure from the "Eternal Pattern of Worship".

Answer for yourself: How you say? When was the last time you ever read Leviticus 23?

Various feast days, such as Christmas, Easter, Palm Sunday, and others, are all products of the heart of man, and are celebrated zealously with exhausting effort and care, while that which our Lord commanded that we do in remembrance of Him (the Passover for instance) is forgotten and replaced by Easter. It doesn't stop there! These are not just Jewish "day" for serious study will reveal to you that buried and hidden in these Hebrew texts are references to the non-Jews observing these days as well. Few understand today that the Lord's Supper has nothing to do with the grape juice and wafers taken in reverence in most Churches today, but rather refer to the three meals taken in observance of the weekly Sabbath service (the fourth of the ten commandments). And in our Christian churches we have changed the Lord's Supper entirely from its Hebrew and Jewish context as relating to the Sabbath to the day devoted to the worship of the Sun, namely, Sun-day.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever stopped and wondered why you keep and observe the commandment concerning adultery, stealing, murder, lying, etc., yet fail regularly (without remorse) to keep the Sabbath commandment when it is in the same list and more is written about this commandment than any of the others in Exodus 20?

Instead of the "coming together" for the Lord's Supper, (1Cor.. 10:16-17, 11:17-20, ACT 2:42-46, 20:7), the focus of the majority of believer's meetings (church gatherings) has become the glorification of the abilities of one person (usually the preacher) and the passive entertainment of the assembled (the inactive congregation). Though Christ warned his disciples against the taking upon themselves titles such as "Teacher", "Rabbi" (Aramaic "Teacher"), "Father", and "Master" claiming these to belong solely to himself and the Father, these men cling tenaciously to "Reverend", "Father", "Doctor" (Latin, "Teacher"), "Pastor" ("Shepherd") etc. Instead of following in the example of Paul, an itinerant missionary, to provide for himself with his own hands, these are the busybodies, the idle of whom Paul wrote to the Thessalonians, who bleed the church of finances which might be used according to the Hebrew Scriptures to take care of the widows, the infirm, the sick, the lame, the blind, and to share with the poor in keeping the Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths of God. Today in Christianity we don't even know how the tithe was commanded to be used when given and we use it for everything under the sun when areas designated by God to receive the tithe go unaddressed by the vast majority of Gentile Churches today. Instead of recognizing that God dwells in holy hearts and in His assembly, many attempt to build for him lavish buildings made with human hands which is not an area permitted by God in which we are to use "the Lord's Tithe". To make matters worse we rob God of His tithe which assuring the people that they are not yet how we use the funds make the given an accessory to robbery. Neglecting the holiness of His true temple, the temple made without hands, we blindly place our confidence in the majesty of cold stone structures and the architectural monuments to man's creativity.

It is time to cleanse the dwelling place of the Lord (ourselves). If your assembly is not responsive to His Word, and you have made every honest attempt to be the watchman and to warn them of their ways, then you are free from their blood. You must come out and cease being a part of the problem and become part of the solution.

Our publications at Bet Emet will seek to call God's people to obedience in worship. It is not intended to annoy the disinterested, nor is it intended to condemn those who are not practicing the truth. We can also look back to a time when we, being ignorant of these things, also did not practice the truth. We preach the uncompromising Word, convincing, rebuking and exhorting -- but with longsuffering and patient teaching! We know that there are out there many "who have ears to hear", who are waiting for loving words of correction and instruction. God does not save us to live lives of insignificance but to live lives of glory and honor. He warned us that many in that day were going to be in shock to find that they do not truly belong to Him. Many will even make claims to have cast out demons and performed miracles in His name. They may be sincere, but they are sincerely mistaken. Paul, for transgressions much less perilous expressed doubt about the reality of the faith of his hearers, saying such things as "I fear for you, that somehow I have wasted my efforts on you" (Gal. 4:11) and "Examine yourselves to see whether you are in the faith. Test yourselves." (2 Cor. 13:5).

We have a far more compelling need to examine the assembly. At stake is the eternal destiny not only of ourselves, but of those we love.

Please do not rely on a short walk up an aisle or immersion in water as the evidence of your "faith". You are not going to be judged by your faith, but by your works. In the great epistle of the gospel of salvation by grace through faith, Paul says this:

"God will give to each person according to what he has done".

This verse applies not only to doing good deeds, but incorporated proper worship of God as well!

"Examine yourselves to see whether you are in the faith; test yourselves. Do you not realize that Christ Jesus is in you -- unless, of course, you fail the test?" 2 Cor. 13:5

HAVE WE FOLLOWED GOD'S PATTERN OF WORSHIP OR HAVE WE OFFERED GOD "STRANGE FIRE" IN OUR CHURCH AND OUR WORSHIP?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that within the Jewish Scriptures we can find a "Pattern of Worship" given by God that was followed by both Jews and non-Jewish believers in God both in the Old Testament and New Testament times (well into the early 5th century and there are some records of this continuing until the 7th century)?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that both historically and archeologically we can attest that this "Pattern of Worship" continued until early in the 4th Century A.D. when Rome for all practical purposes changed it for everyone and today we seldom if ever stumble onto the prior existing pattern that God had intended that all His children, both Jew and non-Jew, observe in their worship of Him? Are you aware that for another 300 years many non-Jews would give their lives to the Roman sword before they would allow themselves or their families depart from this "Pattern of Worship"?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the tabernacle was built according to the divine blueprint given to Moses by the Lord (Ex. 25:8-9)?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Aaron and his sons were consecrated to their priestly vocation according to a divine pattern as well, and they offered the prescribed sacrifices unto God according to a divine pattern?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that David was given the same pattern when told to build the Temple, set aside the Priests, and oversee the work of the service (worship) within the Temple (I Chron. 28:13)?

1 Chr 28:10-15 10 Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it. 11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, 12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things: 13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

Let us look and examine the the Hebrew word for :service and see what we find hidden in the Hebrew:

Strong's Concordance:

5656 `abodah (ab-o-daw'); or `abowdah (ab-o-daw'); from 5647; work of any kind: KJV-- act, bondage, + bondservant, effect, labour, ministering (-try), office, service (-ile, -itude), tillage, use, work, X wrought.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon

5656 `abodah or `abowdah- labor, service

- a) labor, work
- b) labor (of a servant or a slave)
- c) labor, service (of captives or subjects)
- d) service (of God)

What we see from these words is that there is a "MINISTRY" and "SERVICE OF GOD" that was given by the Spirit of God according to a "PATTERN."

Even the New Testament alludes to this pattern:

Heb 8:5 5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount. (KJV)

Now it is for us to both understand that a "pattern of ministry" existed both in the Old Testament and New Testament that was a pattern of the intended service of mankind toward God. This is called "ministry" according to the Hebrew words. I know that the term "ministry" is so overworked today but it is for us to try to discern if this "pattern" of service and worship of God can be discerned from the Jewish Scriptures and if examples of it can be determined to have existed after Jesus' death and if this "pattern of ministry" was remained unchanged for both Jew and non-Jew following the crucifixion of Jesus. If this can discerned from New Testament examples as applying "unchanged" for both the Jew and the non-Jewish believer who came to God through the ministry of Yeshua's disciples and apostles then we need then only ask if our experience as Christians and followers of Yeshua is yet today according to this "pattern of ministry" or if our experience is different and if so we must ask "why?" If not then we have to honestly as if we have let Israel be a light unto us as the nations of the world as God has said they were to be in the Jewish Scriptures or if we have been misled in our ministry toward God.

A LITTLE CATCH UP BEFORE WE GO ON

It is not my habit to chase rabbits here but let me give you a little tid-bid of knowledge which is shared on our other websites. Archeology today in the last 100 plus years is blowing the lid off the Catholic Church tradition and mind control to which we have fallen prey as not only Catholics but Protestants as well. Facts today reveal to us that these Patriarchs and Biblical heroes who were given this "Divine Pattern of Worship" were Egyptian Pharaohs and not "Jews" as we suppose. That means that men like King David, Solomon, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc., were linked to Egypt as rulers and we don't know it because of Ezra. We can thank Ezra for that, a Persian no less passed off as another Jew, in the Hebrew Scriptures which he would edit and reinterpret and write with an agenda to cover up this Egyptian link since Persia was at war with Egypt in 600 B.C.E.

when the writing of Genesis were done in Babylon and Persia. Having said that then know for now that this "Pattern of Worship" that we find given to King David (Thutmose III) and handed down to Solomon (Amenhotep III) finds its roots in Ancient Egypt and beyond and has its origin in the earliest Divine Revelation given to mankind by God (Elohim). This "Pattern of Worship" revolves around the Invisible Creator who imparted within His creation the message of true salvation that in intricately linked with the solstices and the equinoxes. It will take a lot of reading to not only familiarize yourself with these new concepts but how they were later altered almost beyond belief but only in so doing will you come to see the very simple message of true salvation given originally by our Divine Creator to all of His creation which we have lost almost entirely today. You can thank Rome and and the "Early Church Fathers" and their hatred of the Jews for this. It is time we recover these truths and return to the True Pattern of Worship "once given the saints" and which the Jewish people carry with them today (since the Jews are the children of intermarriage of these Egyptians and semites). Now let us continue.

UNDERSTANDING THE "WORK OF THE SERVICE" ...CORRECTLY

Having justified for your that worship of God in Israel was according to a pattern, then let us regress to the evens surrounding the beginning of Tabernacle worship. The Bible records for us that the "glory of the Lord appeared unto all the people." Fire came out from the Lord and lit the offering on the altar, consuming the sacrifice, "which when all the people saw, they shouted, and fell on their faces" (Lev. 9:23-24). We can only imagine the mixture of awe, wonder, and joy which the people experienced on this holy and festive occasion as Nadab and Abihu led the people in worship.

Moments later, the scene changed dramatically, as a terrible judgment fell upon Nadab and Abihu. In the midst of their activities, "there went out fire from the Lord, and devoured them, and they died before the Lord" (Lev. 10:2).

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that God killed them in their "church?"

Answer for yourself: What had they done, to provoke the anger of the Lord?

The biblical narrative tells us simply that they "offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not" (Lev. 10:1).

Nadab and Abihu had done something which was expressly forbidden.

Answer for yourself: What had they done that was so bad in worshipping God to demand that their lives be taken?

Surprisingly, they merely added something to the worship of God that He did not command. They added a bit of "strange fire" which the Lord had not commanded. The judgment which came upon them stands as a perpetual testimony against those who presume to worship God by means which lack divine decree. It is a solemn warning: "the Lord spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified" (Lev. 10:3). God means that all false and man-made worship are detestable to Him and will not be accepted by Him and the deaths of Nadab and Abihu remain as eternal testimony to God's will in this matter.

Answer for yourself: Are we to understand by this story that God is displeased with synthetic worship that deviates from His expressed commandments regarding how He desires to be worshipped as taught throughout scripture which is according to "the" pattern that God chose and not man?

In order to gain a better understanding of scriptural principles of worship, we will make a further examination of precepts and examples from the Bible.

BIBLICAL PRECEPTS

In the book of Deuteronomy, Moses exhorts the children of Israel to keep the law of God. In chapter 12, he reviews scriptural precepts pertaining to worship.

The Lord forbids his people to imitate pagan ways of worship: the Israelites were commanded to eradicate the remnants of corrupt worship from their midst. They were commanded to destroy "all the places" wherein the heathen served their Gods. They were instructed to purge the land of all the implements associated with false worship: "Ye shall overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their Gods." Even the terminology of corrupt worship was to be erased: "Destroy the names of them out of that place" (Deut. 12:2-3).

Answer for yourself: To the modern mind, this may sound strangely intolerant, but is it?

Answer for yourself: Do you believe that God is the same yesterday, today, and forever and that He changes not?

But the Lord warned his people against the danger of imitating the worship practices of the pagans: "Ye shall not do so unto the Lord your God." The chapter concludes with a further warning against imitating heathen worship. "Take heed to thyself that thou be not snared by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee; and that thou inquire not after their Gods, saying, How did these nations serve their Gods? even so will I do likewise. Thou shalt not do so unto the Lord thy God. What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it" (Deut. 12:30-32; cf. 4:2).

The sufficiency and authority of scripture are brought to bear upon the content of our worship. This is the meaning of the scriptural law of worship: all forms of worship must have express scriptural warrant, if they are to be admitted as legitimate means of worship. "The acceptable way of worshipping the true God is instituted by himself, and so limited by His own revealed will, that He may not be worshipped according to the imaginations and devices of men, or the suggestions of Satan, under any visible representation, or any other way not prescribed in holy scripture" (Westminster Confession, 21:1).

The biblical pattern of worship needs no supplements of human devising; indeed, such man-made innovations are a snare the very seed of idolatry.

When we consider the fallen nature of mankind, we see why the biblical precepts of worship are necessary. Since the fall of Adam, the nature of man has been thoroughly corrupt. This inherent corruption drives men away from God: "There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God" (Rom. 3:11). Thus, the native tendency of mankind is to pollute the worship of God, exchanging the truth of God for a lie, worshipping and serving created things rather than the Creator (Rom. 1:25).

Just as men are incapable of forging a method for their own salvation, so they are incapable of devising proper means to worship and serve God. Therefore, the only proper way to worship God is through the means established by the Lord himself.

WORSHIP IN THE WILDERNESS

During the wilderness wanderings, the Israelites had to be schooled in proper principles of worship. Their native tendency toward corrupt worship was shown early, while they waited for Moses to return from Mt. Sinai.

Growing restless, Aaron and the people constructed a golden calf to serve as a visible symbol of deity.

Virtually all expositors decry the action of the Israelites as idolatry. What is often over looked, however, is the manner in which the Israelites justified their action. They did not view the calf as a newly-created deity; rather, they made the calf as a testimony of their divine deliverance from Egypt. The calf-image evoked a sense of the strength displayed in their deliverance. "These be thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And when Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, Tomorrow is a feast to the Lord" (Ex. 32:4-5).

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Aaron did not plan to worshipping the golden calf, but rather desired to re-direct the people's worship toward God; yet he himself was guilty of adding to the accepted worship commanded expressly by God?

Answer for yourself: Although our intent is to worship God, have we, like them, added to the worship of God in our church or in our denomination, or omitted from our worship necessary elements commanded by God and thus stand condemned like Israel and know it not until we die?

In other words, the Israelites did not claim to worship new deities that would be blatant idolatry. No, they intended the calf to serve as a symbol of deity; and Aaron seeks to honor the sacred name of the Lord through this monstrous invention. Even the Anglican author, J. Packer, explains this incident as an attempt by Aaron to worship the Lord (not other Gods) an attempt using unlawful means. "Aaron made a golden calf (that is, a bull-image). It was meant as a visible symbol of Jehovah, the mighty God who brought Israel out of Egypt. No doubt the image was thought to honor Him, as being a fitting symbol of His great strength. But it is not hard to see that such a symbol in fact insults Him: for what idea of His moral character, His righteousness, goodness, and patience, could one gather from looking at a statue of Him as a bull? Thus Aaron's image hid Jehovah's glory." Knowing God (Downers Grove: Inter-Varsity Press, 1973), pp. 40-41.

Now, when Moses returned, he did not regard this matter lightly. He did not employ the tactic which Christianity has used for centuries (and which evangelical churchmen presently endorse), simply cautioning the Israelites not to worship false Gods, noting that the image itself was not a deity, and then allowing the image to remain strictly as a symbol. Moses "took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and scattered it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?" (Ex. 32:20-21).

This sin had transpired while Moses was receiving the ten commandments on the mountain. And the Decalogue (the Ten Commandments) forbids not only the worship of false Gods, but it also condemns the worship of the true God by unsanctioned methods. The same is found in the Laws of Noah as applying to all non-Jews of the world and the Mosaic legislation only built upon it.

Answer for yourself: More to the point, when shown [presuming that you have read the prior articles in this website] that the celebration and observance of Biblical Festivals and the Sabbath is part of the divine pattern of worship for all time (for both Jew and non-Jew), then are we guilty as Israel [as ingrafted Gentiles into the Israel of God] by substituting for observance our church calendar which is full of paganized holidays to which we affix Yeshua's name to the neglect of the true days of Biblical worship?

Stop...read that again...and THINK!

THE SCRIPTURAL LAW OF WORSHIP

The first commandment declares, "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me" (Ex. 20:3). It is plain that the Lord God is the only proper recipient of worship.

The second commandment continues the focus on worship by telling us how God is to be worshipped. It does so in a negative sense, by forbidding us to worship God with human inventions. "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image" (Ex. 20:4).

A graven image is not merely a statue of a false deity. If that were the case, the second commandment would be redundant of the first. Instead, the second commandment plainly forbids making or revering physical or artistic representations of the true God.

When the Lord revealed himself to the Israelites, He did so by means of His word not by physical images to be imitated or embellished. Therefore, He warned them: "Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for ye saw no manner of similitude on the day that the Lord spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire: lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure," etc. (Deut. 4:15-16).

Let us take time to note that Roman Catholics and Lutherans divide the ten commandments differently than ordinary Protestants. Catholics and Lutherans combine the first two commandments into one, thus subsuming the second command as a mere appendix to the first. They divide the tenth commandment into two commands prohibiting different kinds of covetousness. Thus, they still maintain ten in number, but the effects on their doctrine of worship is devastating.

The apostle Paul instructed the Athenians, "We ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device" (Acts 17:29). Any attempt to represent God by human devices is an insult to the Lord. His pronouncement is clear: "I am the Lord: that is my name: and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images" (Isa. 42:8).

BUT IT IS MORE THAN AN IMAGE

The prohibition expressed in the second commandment reaches beyond what we might call an image, in the strictest sense of the term. In its broader scope, this commandment really forbids the use of all man-made devices in worship. It directs us to a basic concept: that the only acceptable way of worshipping God is to render homage to Him according to the instructions given in His word. Any deviation from his word by adopting humanly-devised forms of worship is, de facto, a violation of the scriptural law of worship. This is devastating to Gentile Christianity which can be shown when investigated through in-depth study that many of it's very foundational doctrines and dogmas are pagan to the core and which therefore render the worshipper as an idolator before God!

In practice, many modern Protestants have unwittingly adopted this same viewpoint. The second commandment is expounded as a mere expansion of the first, and restricted in application only to false deities and open homage to images. As a result, they admit images and false teachings into churches, ostensibly for didactic purposes. This modern interpretation is contrary to the Protestant confessions of the Reformation as delineated in the Heidelberg Catechism #96-98, Westminster Confession, 21:2-3; Westminster Larger Catechism, #107-109.

In other words, all religious ceremonies and institutions must have clear scriptural warrant, if they are to be admitted as valid expressions of worship...those which don't render the worshipper an idolator...and you may never know this until you die and let God tell your face to face (idiom for Yom Kippur)

TEMPLE WORSHIP

The designation of a central place of worship did not occur until the Israelites conquered and settled the land of Canaan. A central site for public worship had been anticipated since the time of Moses (Deut. 12:11; cf. 12:5, 14); but it did not reach fulfillment until the reign of David. During David's rule, the ark of the covenant was moved to Jerusalem, thereby establishing the city as the center for the sacrificial ordinances of the Levitical priesthood. Even so, the entire program of worship, from the tabernacle to the temple, was directed by divine revelation.

Tabernacle worship was structured according to the divine blueprint. The Israelites were instructed: "Let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it." Descriptions of the tabernacle furnishings reiterated that all things had to be made according to the God-given pattern (Ex. 25:8-9; cf. 25:40; 27:8; Num. 8:4; Acts 7:44; Heb. 8:5).

Later, David provided Solomon with the plan for constructing the temple: "David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof and the pattern of all that he had by the spirit also for the courses of the priests and the Levites. All this, said David, the Lord made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern" (1 Chron. 28:11-13, 19).

Nothing was left for improvising; everything was ordered by the divine pattern for worship.

Solomon built the temple according to the heavenly blueprints left by David, and Jerusalem remained the seat of public worship for the entire kingdom of Israel.

After the death of Solomon, the kingdom became divided and the people slid into corruption and apostasy. The northern tribes swiftly embraced false worship, and never recovered from their apostasy. Within the kingdom of Judah, there were several seasons of reformation, amidst other waves of idolatry. The key to understanding the history of the Israelites is to note the critical connection between the worship of the people, and God's dealings with them in relation to their worship.

THE APOSTASY OF THE NORTHERN KINGDOM...AN EXAMPLE THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH SHOULD LEARN FROM

When the northern tribes seceded, Jeroboam took a pragmatic approach to worship in the northern kingdom, devising a "local" program of worship suited to his own purposes (1 Kings 12:28-33). Jeroboam's actions were wholly revolutionary. He established a new center for worship, new means for worship, and a new priesthood. It was not so much that Jeroboam encouraged his people to worship other deities, but that he devised new methods which displaced the biblical means of worship; Jeroboam's offense was akin to Aaron's sin in making the original golden calf.

Answer for yourself: If you have read the earlier articles in this series and on this website can you not see the similarities in what Gentile Christianity has done; not only concerning the appointed times of YHWH such as the Sabbath and the Biblical Festivals but the many replacement doctrines concerning Yeshua as well (evidence for this on our other websites)?

Subsequent kings in the north, such as Ahab, blatantly embraced the worship of Baal. Later, when Jehu ruled the northern kingdom, he exterminated the house of Ahab, and repudiated the Baalism of his predecessors. Yet for all his zeal, Jehu retained the "sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin" (2 Kings 10:29-31).

The reign of Jehu indicates that the guilt of Israel came not merely from idolatry, in the narrow sense of the term: that is, the worship of false deities. Jehu eradicated the worship of other deities and claimed to worship the Lord, but he clung to the unhallowed methods of worship instituted by Jeroboam. Thus, Israel was charged with corrupt worship for attempting to worship the true God, the Lord, with unsanctioned means.

The comparison here between Jeroboam and Jehu again illustrates that Jeroboam's original crime was in establishing alternative forms of worship from those enjoined in the Mosaic law (remember within the Mosaic Law are Laws for non-Jews..the Laws Of Noah which the Mosaic Laws built upon). Jeroboam's initial action took Israel to the slippery slope of corrupt worship. From there, the nation frequently degenerated into further idolatry by worshipping false Gods as well.

Therefore, let it be noted that the first step on the path of idolatry is taken when men presume to worship the Lord through means and measures not ordained in the word of God.

Answer for yourself: How much do you know about "idolatry" and just what it is? Is it possible that although we don't bow to fire or stones we yet practice idolatry in our Christian Churches and don't know we do? A sure test is to read the articles on our Laws of Noah Website where we define this according to the Rabbis and their interpretation of it. Hopefully you will take this challenge and then factor in just what we have been taught about this "Jesus" in our Churches and you will the terrible idolatry to which we have innocently fallen and of which we are guilty.

The kings of northern Israel were idolaters; the apostasy of the nation was thorough; and so the Lord destroyed the northern kingdom. A chilling account is provided in 2 Kings 17:4ff., with a summary judgment in verses 20-24 of that same chapter.

The 17th chapter of 2 Kings also explains the origin of the mongrel religion of the Samaritans. After the Assyrians conquered the northern kingdom of Israel, the Assyrian king deported the Israelites; he then used the land of Israel as a relocation center for Babylonians and other displaced persons (2 Kings 17:24-41). These heathen refugees "feared not the Lord: therefore the Lord sent lions among them, which slew some of them" (2 Kings 17:25).

Alarmed by this development, the king of Assyria sent back an Israelite priest to instruct the people how to serve the Lord. The people then professed to worship the Lord God, but they attempted to render service to the Lord by resorting to their customary idolatry, employing their own devices and priesthood. "So they feared the Lord, and made unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places. They feared the Lord, and served their own Gods, after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from thence. So these nations feared the Lord, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they unto this day" (2 Kings 17:32-33, 41).

The technical term for such a religious admixture is syncretism. For centuries it has been the modus operandi of Roman Catholicism. Sadly this Samaritan approach to worship is only too prominent among professing Protestants and in the church growth movement among contemporary "evangelicals." The trends in popular culture and the deviant worship of the pluralistic masses are adopted as a way to make worship "relevant" and appealing to modern society.

THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH

After the separation of the northern tribes, the kingdom of Judah often embraced corrupt worship, beginning with the reign of Rehoboam: "Judah did evil in the sight of the Lord, and they provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, above all that their fathers had done. For they also built them high places, and images, and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree. And there were also sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the Lord cast out before the children of Israel" (1 Kings 14:22-24).

Today, many Roman Catholics and evangelicals decry the sins of abortion and homosexuality as manifestations of our nation's corruptions (which they are); but these contemporary moralists are generally silent about the heinous sin of corrupt worship.

When Asa became king in Judah, he instituted reform. In the scriptural account of his reign, he is commended for removing corrupt worship. "Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God: for he took away the altars of the strange Gods, and the high places, and brake down the images, and cut down the groves: and commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment. Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images: and the kingdom was quiet before him" (2 Chron. 15:2-5; cf. 1 Kings 15:12-19).

Read the above passage in "red" again and THINK!

Among the later kings there were both good and evil rulers. What is striking about the biblical narratives is that kings are consistently measured by their approach to worship. Those rulers who made an effort to restore biblical worship are commended; those kings who resorted to idolatry (or tolerated corrupt worship) are criticized.

During the reign of Godly King Jehoshaphat, the people manifested an attachment to corrupt worship, in spite of efforts by the king to reform the land. "The people had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers." Many resorted to sites of corrupt worship, "for the people offered and burnt incense in the high places," and these high places were not taken away (2 Chron. 20:33; 1 Kings 22:43; 2 Chron. 20:33).

Corrupt worship reveals a serious problem of the heart. In conducting unsanctioned worship, the people showed that their hearts were not right with God, regardless of what their professed motives might have been.

In subsequent generations, the kingdom of Judah degenerated into further idolatry and Baal worship. "They left the house of the Lord of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass" (2 Chron. 24:18).

Answer for yourself: Could anything be clearer? The Lord detests corrupt worship and he punishes this sin.

Hezekiah was a good king, and he issued a call for national repentance; he also established a program of reform (2 Kings 18:5-6; 2 Chron. 30).

The passover was restored. Moreover, the people "arose and took away the altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron all Israel that were present went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until they had utterly destroyed them all" (2 Chron. 30:14; 31:1).

Under Hezekiah's leadership, we see two aspects of reform united:

- the positive work of restoring the biblical pattern of worship,
- and the negative work of removing the elements of unscriptural worship.

Both aspects are essential components of thorough reform.

As a negative facet of reform, Hezekiah "brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brazen serpent that Moses had made: for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it: and he called it Nehushtan [a piece of brass]" (2 Chron. 18:4).

The destruction of the brazen serpent is an extremely important event, for it demonstrates the far-reaching scope of genuine reform. The brazen serpent was originally made at the command of God. It had not, however, been designated as an implement for use in the ordinary worship of the Lord. Therefore, because the brazen serpent had been superstitiously abused, it was necessary to destroy it.

Contemporary readers may find it difficult to comprehend this deed. It is easier to discern why Hezekiah led the people to destroy the high places, images, and groves dedicated to unsanctioned worship. But, truly, the brazen serpent was a hallowed symbol of God's former deliverance of the Israelites.

Answer for yourself: Why destroy it?

Answer for yourself: Why not simply caution the people against the abuse of a traditional symbol?

Hezekiah was wiser than both Papists and our modern evangelical churchmen, who would, no doubt, follow a more "moderate" course. The king realized that the serpent had become a snare; it fostered superstition. And Hezekiah knew that this superstition this corruption of worship was sufficient to provoke the wrath of God. Far better to dispense with a sacred relic, than leave it as a temptation for present and future generations.

As noted, the brazen serpent was included in no part of the ordinary worship of God. By comparison, the passover was an integral part of the stated worship of God; therefore the passover was renewed and restored. But since the serpent had no sanctioned role in the stated worship of God, it was better to remove it altogether.

After Hezekiah's rule the nation again drifted into apostasy. The last reforming king was Josiah. He purged "Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images. And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the images, that were on high above them, he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strewed it upon the graves of them that had sacrificed unto them. And he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem. And so did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their mattocks round about. And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem" (2 Chron. 34:3-7; cf. 2 Kings 23:4-14, 24).

In addition to purging the kingdom of corrupt worship, the young king directed repairs of the house of the Lord (2 Chron. 34-35; 2 Kings 22). After Josiah's death, the kingdom of Judah passed again into apostasy. The nation then fell to the Babylonians, and the Jewish people were carried away into exile.

Eventually, the Jews were permitted to return to their homeland and commence rebuilding the temple in Jerusalem. They were careful to restore the temple and its services according to the scriptural pattern (Ezra 3:10). When the construction was complete, "they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; as it is written in the book of Moses" (Ezra 6:18). Moreover, the passover was restored (Ezra 3:10; 6:18, 20-22).

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN TO THE CHRISTIAN?

With this in mind we are forced to confront the worship of God in the contemporary churches today which have substituted Pagan days of worship for the Holy Days of the Bible and the Lord's Sabbaths. To replace the "pattern" of worship in the Bible, given to both Jews and Gentiles with one of man's making birthed out of antisemitism is an abomination that has gone unnoticed by most well meaning Christians for much too long. There is hardly any way you will every know of this or see this tragic loss of "true worship" unless you study and study hard. I am one who is called to do this to help others see the darkness that has overtaken them. There are many reasons for such neglect and oversight, and it is not our intent to discuss the various factors that contributed to the loss of such Biblical truth in this article. But as I end this article, I behoove you to "consider your ways" and listen to what Bet Emet Ministries, as well as other ministries today are saying about the paganism that is accepted as righteousness Sunday after Sunday in our churches. We need a new Josiah to have the courage to stand up and address the problem of corrupt worship as it exists in Christianity today. Bet Emet is one such voice among many today. We plead with those who read this article to request our free publications on such issues, for if you read them, you will come to understand what you now do not perceive. Your only sin is the sin of ignorance, for you have not had, for the most part, adequate religious teachers who were well versed in such issues. Thus, the blind follow the blind and both fall into the ditch! We at Bet Emet Ministries beg you to not let this be your legacy. Shalom.

THE EPISTLE OF BARNABAS & THE LOSS OF JEWISH "PATTERN OF WORSHIP"

Soon after the Jewish apostles died, leadership of the Church was transferred to people who had no great respect for Jews or Judaism. Rather than seeing Jewish people as erring brethren to whom they were indebted for the gifts of Scripture, the Messiah and Old Testament saints, the Jewish people were looked upon as reprobates hated by God. Sentiment expressed against some Jewish leaders by Jewish followers of Yeshua was used by later non-Jewish leaders as an indictment of all Jewish people. The Epistle of Barnabas, from the end of the first century, reflects this negative attitude and applies it to Jewish practices as well. As H. L. Ellison put it, "Already the so-called Epistle of Barnabas, which may go back to the last decade of the first century, uses such language about Jews, Judaism and the Law, as to make any effective contact between the two sides virtually impossible. As soon as it had the power, the Gentile Church did its utmost to defeat God's purpose. It persecuted and bullied, thereby automatically putting itself in the wrong. It spread the vilest calumnies about the Jews" (Ellison, H. L., The Mystery of Israel, Grand Rapids, Michigan: Eerdmans, 1966, 82ff).

Many writers did not display an accurate understanding of the very things they criticized, including the nature of the Old Testament revelation. Ignatius of Antioch, in the same period, was clear in indicating the uselessness of all Jewish things. Justin Martyr, one of the famed leaders of the early second century, spoke of Jewish people and practice in condescending terms. In his dialogue with Trypho, he expressed dismay over the fact that Jewish followers of Yeshua still maintained their cultural identity and practice. He accepted the possibility of their salvation, but could not understand Jewish practice as a way of expressing their faith. Justin believed that fulfillment by Yeshua eliminated Jewish things. These and other antisemites like them never desired adherence to this "Pattern of Worship" and influenced negatively many others to depart from it.

Two significant historical events, the 1st (66–70 CE) and 2nd (133–135 CE) Jewish revolts against Rome, changed the balance between the number of Jewish and Gentile believers in the body of Messiah. Moreover, other factors converged to cause the Gentile believers to separate themselves from their Hebraic roots and the synagogue. These events included:

- The influx of more Gentile converts than Jewish converts
- The destruction of Jerusalem, the Temple and traditional Judaism
- The expulsions of Jews from Rome and Judea
- The antagonism between traditional Judaism and the Messianic believers
- The growing battle between traditional Judaism and the increasingly numerous Gentile believers.
- Anti-Jewish Polemics and Writings such as the Epistle of Barnabas and many others

Few Christians have ever read the Epistle of Barnabas and do not know of its importance today. The Epistle of Barnabas (130-138 CE, probably in Alexandria) is valuable because it contains the first explicit mention of Sunday observance by the Christians. The writer who assumes the identity of Barnabas is acute in his attacks on almost all "Jewish" practices. The purpose of his epistle was to provide a basis for the total rejection of Judaism as a religious practice and to provide a theological basis for Christians to forsake

"Jewish" practices and take on their new role as the true Israel. He condemned Christians who continued certain Torah observances by stating, "take heed to yourselves and be not like some, piling up your sins and saying that the covenant is theirs as well as ours. It is ours, but they lost it completely just after Moses received it . . ." (Epistle of Barnabas 4:6-9).

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that? Is declared sin for the Gentile believer to see that Jews and Gentiles share much of the same Covenants of God. Here we have the seedbed of Replacement Religion as Israel is being stripped of her "calling to the Gentile world" by this antisemitic writer masquerading as Paul's traveling friend Barnabas. Much could be said about this epistle but for now understand that it is singularly responsible for increasing intolerance to those Christians who desired to practice Scriptural commands which were modeled by the Jewish believers.

Many in the Church assume that practices such as Sunday worship and Easter celebration, etc., have existed since the book of Acts. Furthermore, many think the Biblical Holy Days were never a valid form of Christian worship. However, when we examine Church history we find a totally different picture. As we go back in time, approaching the era when the early Christian believers separated themselves from the Messianic believers, we discover that the earliest Christian assemblies worshipped on the Sabbath and kept the Biblical Holy Days. Numerous Christian and non-Christian historians of the ante and post-Nicene period have left us with a plethora of information concerning the practices and beliefs of the early Christian assemblies. It is a fact that the early Christian Gentile Churches not only continued to meet on the Sabbath but observed the Biblical Feasts and Festivals. Besides this we can see the Gentile being incorporated into the "Pattern of Worship" given to King David and handed down through Solomon and we can see that this same "Pattern of Worship" existed in first century both inside and outside Israel and was reflective of the synagogues in Asia Minor as well.

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that there even exists a "Pattern" for Worship" given by God to mankind? Do you think that your Gentile Church even knows of this today? Are the Jewish people the only ones following this "Pattern of Worship" in the world today? Do you want to know of this "Pattern for Worship" given to David and follow it today as did the Gentiles and Jews of past centuries? Can God be happy that we have diverted from this "Pattern" and come up with our own "Replacement" worship?

Answer for yourself: What was this "Pattern of Worship" that was followed by the Jews and taught as well to the non-Jewish God-fearers who were coming to God and attending the synagogues of the first century both in side and outside Israel?

Answer for yourself: Can it be shown that this same "Pattern of Worship" was followed by the early Gentile Church up and until the edict of Constantine which abolished it in the middle 4th century?

Answer for yourself: Do we as Christians follow this "Pattern of Worship" today in Catholicism and Protestantism?

Answer for yourself: And if not then is possible to recover this "Pattern of Worship" today in our Christian Churches?

These are important questions that deserve our strongest attention and it is to these answers that we now seek through the study of the articles on this website. Let us begin our serious study into the non-Jewish believer in God (God-fearer) and see if we can find adherence to a Divine "Pattern of Worship" both in the Old and New Testaments. The results might surprise you and cause you to rethink what you are being taught today in your Christian Churches. The bottom line you will see is that we as non-Jews have inherited an antisemitic Replacement Religion instead of "the faith once given to the saints" (Jude 1:3).

Jude 1:3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for "the" faith which was once delivered unto the saints. (KJV)

We have already looked at the word "the" and plumed its importance. As a quick refresher the use of the "definite article" (the) refers to the uniqueness of the item addressed. It stands out among all the rest as "uncommon" and not "secular". There is nothing like it to be compared. This is all the more important as we consider that Biblical Judaism is "the" faith which was once for time given by God to mankind. Of course we find these many, but not all of these same religious tenants within Biblical Judaism spread throughout world religions to various degrees but for our purposes here we need only focus on Biblical Judaism as the example of all examples to be followed for not only the Jew but the non-Jew as well.

Strong's Concordance teaches us something about our responsibility regarding this "Pattern of Worship" as it relates to the Greek word "earnestly contend":

75 agonizomai (ag-o-nid'-zom-ahee); from 73; to struggle, literally (to compete for a prize), figuratively (to contend with an adversary), or genitive case (to endeavor to accomplish something): KJV-- fight, labor fervently, strive.

Recovering this "Pattern of Worship" is not easy. God knew of the attempts coming to destroy it by men opposed to Him and His will for mankind so we are told in the strongest terms that we must "struggle and fight with our adversaries fervently" in order to keep, maintain, and restore this "Pattern of Worship" which was ONCE given and delivered to the Saints. Notice as well the word "once".

Thayer's Greek Lexicon states:

530 hapax- 1) once, one time 2) once for all

It sure appears to me that this unique faith which is set apart by the definite article "the" (Biblical Judaism which has a place for the non-Jew within it) is also noted to be given by God once and for all to all mankind (a mixed multitude of Jews and non-Jews at Sinai) and Israel, as God's Holy Nation and Royal Priesthood, is the mediator of this "Pattern of Worship" for all mankind.

RESTORING THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP AND THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS

Being fully aware that often those encountering the worship services of Bet Emet Ministries are confused at the differences they experience when contrasting with their own churches, I felt it was time to express the truths gathered from my many years of study where I discovered the "pattern of service (worship)" given by Yahweh to David as detailed in I Chron. chapter 28. If you were to undertake a comprehensive study of the "pattern" you would be surprised to know that this "pattern of worship" survived among Gentile believers until the fourth century A.D. where it was finally crushed by anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism by the emerging "organized" Gentile Christian church headed by the Emperor Constantine. Efforts to destroy the pattern actually began as early as the middle of the second century with the forgery of Christian religious documents along with the persecution and destruction of the religious writings of the Jews and sadly ultimately succeed over the next three centuries in destroying almost all traces of the Jewish Roots of Christianity. Rome wins! Only by diligent research and scholarship have I been able to "rediscover" the faith once given to the saints. Before we go on let me ask you some important questions if I may:

- If the "pattern" for worship was handed down from David to Solomon and finally to the men of the Great Assembly as headed by Ezra the Scribe, and subsequently handed down to the men of the days of Jesus; then if Jesus, the exemplary Jew is to be our example, why don't we follow Jesus' method of worship as he always adhered to this "pattern" himself?
- Since this "pattern" of worship can be demonstrated to have been handed down to the Jewish converts of the Jesus Messianic Movement within 2nd Temple Judaism as well as to the Gentile converts and Godfearers that came from the fruits of the Great Commission, then why have we not been taught about its necessary components let alone been taught to practice this "Pattern of Worship" in our churches today? Surely the testimony of over 2,500 different Christian denominations reveal to us that no "one Pattern" of worship exists in Christianity today.
- Having learned that the New Testament is full of references to this "Jewish pattern of Worship" in the early church which is composed of both Jews and Gentile believers, then what prevents us from repenting and returning to the worship of God as found in the early church before paganism was mixed with it and it became in large part unacceptable to Yahweh?
- If it can be demonstrated that much of what Paul taught the Gentiles to whom he took "his" Gospel was adherence to "the" pattern of Jewish worship as found in the Holy Scriptures, then what prevents you from reevaluating your current experience in light of God's revelation concerning His will for us in adhering to this Divine Pattern of Worship?
- If it can be shown, and it can through study of the original languages of Scripture, that there is often a different message being conveyed than what is understood in reading the "English" rather than the original languages of the Bible (Hebrew and Greek), and understanding that since Jesus is a Jew, and his followers that took his message to the nations (Gentiles) were also Jewish, then do you not think that it is possible that what was conveyed in Hebrew or Greek is more correct often than what is conveyed in English? Can we get a deeper truth from reading the words of our Bibles in their original language than in the English translations? Could it be that this English translation is partly responsible for obscuring the "Pattern of Worship" from us today?

- If it can be demonstrated that pagan Gentiles influenced the change and abolition of this "Pattern of Worship", should you not want to return to the worship of God that was "in spirit and in truth" before it was corrupted?

Those were very good questions to say the least. The aim of this study is to present the Jewish liturgy in its "original freshness," so that all, both Jews and Christians, may come to see and realize how closely the Rabbis have preserved this "Pattern of Worship" down through history while others have deviated or even replaced this "Pattern of Worship". No renewal can come about except through a rediscovery of our Spiritual Roots and of the historical, spiritual, and cultural soil in which these Jewish Roots gave life to the New Testament experience. The church was born of Judaism and lived its life within Judaism for several decades, and only in the light of Judaism can it perceive and recover its vital identity which is so needful in today's world. But "rethinking theology" can mean only one thing: the rediscovery of the Hebrew and Jewish categories within which Christian experience first appeared and which this experience used in order to communicate its truths as well. We are hearing more and more today such statements as this one of L. Swidler:

"Jesus was a 'Rabbi' and not a 'Father,' a 'teacher,' and not a 'reverend'; he was a Jew and not a Christian; he attended the synagogue and not a church; he celebrated the Sabbath on Saturday and not Sunday; he prayed in Aramaic and Hebrew and not in Greek or Latin; he read the Hebrew Scriptures (Old Testament) and not the New; he recited the psalms and not the rosary; he celebrated pesach (the Jewish Passover), shavu'ot (the Jewish Pentecost), and sukkot (huts) and not Christmas or Lent."

Now comes the hard part for you the reader.

Answer for yourself: Do you have the theological courage to draw the proper theological conclusions from such statements of fact? For me and many others who have studied to know the differences, the assertion of the Jewishness of Jesus must mean an assertion of the inescapable centrality of adherence to Jewish religion in the followers of Jesus and an acceptance of the need of returning to them and measuring ourselves by them in every effort we make to understand the Christian experience.

Answer for yourself: Why should we return to Jewish religion? Why go back in heart and mind to distant Jewish religious teachings that are so alien to the modern scientific and technological mentality as seen in the Gentile Christian church of today? The answer is simple. Those distant symbolic and literal teachings of Jewish religion contain concealed words and expressions of their meaning that if received, heard, and understood, have the power to enrich and give joy to human life as nothing else can. We need to rediscover Hebrew and Jewish truths so that we may once again hear in its original purity the logos and meaning that was revealed by God through them. We must rethink theology with the aid of Hebrew and Jewish perspectives not only because Jesus is Jewish, but to assure ourselves that we practice a faith unaffected by compromises with false worship masquerading itself as "holiness." Love for our origins is in fact a love for the present which is marked by high standards of quality. The rediscovery of one's origins is not a love for events that took place in a distant time; rather they are as it were the foundations that support the present. The rediscovery of origins does not mean a distancing from the present but a recovery of the roots and truths that must sustain the present.

For the sake of understanding, what are the "origins" from which our churches spring and on which today are built:

The Churches of Christ acknowledge that in God's plan of salvation the beginning of her faith and election is to be found in the patriarch, Moses, and the prophets. She professes that all Christ's faithful, who as men of faith are sons of Abraham (Gal. 3:7), are included in the same patriarch's call and that the salvation of the church is mysteriously prefigured in the exodus of God's chosen people from the land of bondage. On this account the church cannot forget that she received the revelation of the Old Testament by way of that people with whom God in his mercy established the ancient covenant of Abraham in which all nations (Gentiles) were to be blessed with the blessings of temporal as well as eternal blessings. Nor can she forget that she draws nourishment from that good olive tree onto which the wild olive branches of the Gentiles have been grafted (Rom. 11:17-24).

Without a doubt Christianity is grounded and sustained by the Hebrew and Jewish origins of its faith, election, call, exodus, people, bondage, Old Testament, covenant, root, peace, and reconciliation.

THE IMPORTANCE OF LITURGY OVER THEOLOGY

Judaism does not have a theology in the strict sense, that is, a systematically organized reflection on God; for the same reason, it gives priority to practical action. This explains the importance of the liturgy. It is this Jewish Liturgy, patterned after the commandments in the Oral and Written Torah, which provides a place for both symbolic and direct encounters with God. Such a place is where one does not speak about God, but speak to God, where one does not think about God but think in the presence of God, and where God is not an object of thought but a subject who calls and challenges His people. This space is made up of words, gestures, music, movements, listening, story telling, silence, rites and ceremonies that have been taught and handed down by God to man since the beginning of time.

For the Church, then, a return to its origins must mean a return to this space in which Israel experienced itself as the people of God. It must mean entering into these rituals of words and gestures, music and movements, and silence and ceremonies that is also ours as Christians. Let the Christian never forget the spiritual ties that link him through the Re-newed Covenant with the stock of Abraham. Such ties between the Church and Israel unite the two and they become one in fulfillment of Scripture. Such a bond is not accidental but essential in light of the revelation of Eph. 4 where there is only "one faith" and not two! The Church's identity is connected with Judaism as it shares the same space and vitality. This co-existent heritage is best expressed by the people of the "Re-newed" Covenant with the stock of Abraham through adherence to the pattern of liturgy "once given to the saints."

For too long the majority of Christian scholars have never taken seriously the fact that Christian experience and, above all, the Christian liturgy are bound up with Jewish religious ceremonies. For them Jesus Christ is presented as the originator of the Christian liturgy; either an absolute originator in regard to both content and form, or content and not form. This is simply not the case and a fabrication and distortion of Biblical history. The truth of the matter is that the forms of worship practiced by Jesus and first century Jews, Converts, and Godfearers were not new but only inherited as handed down from Jewish posterity; in particular King David. So there are two views on this matter. These parties, once split in their opinion have conceded their opinions to the wealth of Biblical scholarship that exists today. Nowadays no informed scholar thinks of looking outside the Biblical and Jewish tradition for the origin of the Christian sacraments and liturgy. But in reading these scholars one develops the sense that the "place of origin" is looked upon as unimportant and concessions are implicitly made that allows for Christianity's divergence from the "pattern" with its resultant inclusion of many facts of paganism that go unnoticed to the unlearned. Besides this, often negative judgments are made and passed upon Jewish worship. On reflection, this is of course a perfectly logical step, since once Jewish worship has been reduced to a lifeless skeleton, what is left but to decide that it is useless and a thing of the past? That is what Constantine believed and said and this idea he imposed upon the world! Such is due to the sinister working of anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism that has infected many doctrinal positions of the contemporary Christian Church, primarily due to dispensational theology which is replete with replacement theology which does such damage to the truths of God's revelation in Holy Scripture.

JESUS AND JEWISH LITURGY

Upon years of scholarship and intense study, I am supremely confident that our need is to reverse the procedure of the scholars I have been describing who espouse Replacement Religion and begin to assert the greatness and originality of the New Testament's depiction of Jesus not outside of Judaism in being in opposition to Judaism thus creating a new replacement religion, but to envision the depiction of the explanatory Jew, Jesus, along with and within Judaism, bringing the finer parts of his faith to life in his own life as he modeled God's truths as demonstrated for us in his recorded teachings, conduct and behavior.

First Century Judaism which gave the world this example of Jesus to follow as the "perfect" man, his mother Mary, the apostles, the early communities, and the first Christians (both Jewish and Gentile) were all nourished by the "Pattern" of worship given by God to David which had been faithfully protected and handed down to their generation. Such prayers, psalms, rites, and ceremonies brought them life because they were God breathed.

In the following articles it is not my purpose to compare Jewish liturgy with the Christian, but rather to present you with truthful information so you can better understand how greatly the original Christian community were indebted to the Jewish liturgy, and above all, how much a part the liturgy plays in "linking" us today with the stock of Abraham and the Churches of Christ that exist today.

RECOVERING GOD'S PATTERN OF WORSHIP...JEWISH WORSHIP

It may be surprising to many of you, but the New Testament, that is, the collection of Christian writings that came into existence in the second half of the first century, bears abundant witness to the existence of the Jewish liturgy, not only to the Jewish Messianic congregations but the Gentile Messianic congregations as well! This is a startling revelation in light of our experience today as contemporary Christians whose worship is patterned after little, if any, Jewish liturgy as was our counterparts in the first three-four centuries! The witness in the New Testament of Jewish liturgy is unfortunately not descriptive. In other words, it tells us that in the time of Jesus and beyond as seen in the book of Acts, that certain prayers, rituals, and ceremonies existed, but it does not tell us in what they consisted or how they were practiced. The New Testament tells us little about the content, structure, and dynamics of such liturgy. If you wanted to learn what the realities were behind the terms, prayers, rituals, and ceremonies recorded in the New Testament you would have only one recourse open to you: to draw on your own experience through your own direct participation in such liturgies, which is lacking in most Christians, or consult a variety of sources where you could read about the various liturgical rites and texts used in the services. In doing this type of study we stumble at the beginning because we link the words we read to our very own personal experiences and the realities that are a part of our very own cultural world, instead of their intended meaning when spoken in their original setting.

The apostles and the first readers of the Christian scriptures were in a privileged hermeneutical position: when they read of synagogue and Sabbath and Passover, they were brought in contact with realities they knew and were familiar with; for example they observed Passover because the Holy Scriptures instructs us to celebrate and observe it; whereas such observance is foreign and strange to most Christian Churches because they have replaced

Passover with Easter which was totally foreign to the believers in the first century let alone considered an idolatrous expression of pagan worship. Present-day readers (and those of centuries past) of the Christian scriptures find themselves in the opposite hermeneutical situation: a situation of uneasiness and danger. Uneasiness, because they keep encountering terms now outside their cultural horizon; danger, because they are easily tempted to fill the Jewish words with a content alien to them, a context often 180 degrees opposite their original intended meaning! Such a failure in correct interpretation of the words of our Bibles have lead Christians to mistakenly believe when reading the New Testament that Jesus came to replace Jewish worship with a new variant of Christian worship! This phenomena is extremely important because it shows clearly that the New Testament writings can be approached with different and opposite understandings which may be in harmony or out of harmony with those of the religion of Jesus (Judaism). If they are in harmony, the writings reveal hidden yet luminous meanings which those without the proper understanding of the Hebrew behind the English overlook. Such conditions result in one reading the New Testament with a mistaken understanding, thus arriving at the erroneous conclusion of seeing Jesus and his followers replace the faith and religion given to them God with one that denies the eternal truths and precepts enumerated at Sinai.

If then, we are to avoid misinterpreting the liturgical information provided in the New Testament literature, we much have recourse to other sources that are more directly and explicitly Jewish that explain in detail what is only alluded to in the New Testament. This statement explains the series of publications that Bet Emet has recently begun in order to cite some of the many New Testament passages that attest to the existence of Jewish liturgy in early Christianity before changed by paganism as this Jewish revelation was taken to Gentile land in the third and fourth centuries. Our studies will contain important documentation of the liturgy in the Temple and synagogues, the liturgy as seen in the Sabbath, and the liturgy as seen in the celebration and observance of Passover, Pentecost, Tabernacles, Hanukkah, and Yom Kippur. Next we will examine "the prayer" (Shema), and the Lord's prayer. Lastly we will conclude with sources from the Mishnah, the Talmud, and the prayerbook (Siddur). Let us not forget that our inquiry is to ascertain and confirm not only the presence of Jewish worship in the early Christian community, both Jewish and Gentile, but to come to an understanding of the worship service as it existed then in order to model our lives in such worship that was "in spirit and in truth."

MAINTAINING THE UNITY OF THE FATIH BY RETURNING TO THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP

What are we to do when religious denominations or religious para-church organization with which we fellowship departs from the truth and teaches doctrines opposite of what the Bible expressly teaches?

What is our responsibility when false teachers have entered into the church and many have been deceived into accepting false doctrines as the doctrines of God?

What admonition does the Bible, the word of God, give us for this situation?

There are many warnings from the New Testament writers about false teachers. Peter says that "there will be false teachers among you, who will secretly bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Lord who bought them . . ." (2 Peter 2:1). John speaks of antichrists and deceivers in the last days. The book of Jude contains prophecies about mockers in the last days and false shepherds who have gone after the sin of Balaam. Paul warns the church of false teachers in many of his epistles, most notably in 2 Thessalonians. Deceivers have entered into the church since the first century and have led many astray, and we are warned that false teachers will deceive many in the church in the end time. John encourages us in Revelation chapter 3 verse 11 to "Hold fast what you have, that no one may take your crown."

Who could take your crown anyway?

The answer is false teachers that lead you into disobedience without your knowledge. In other words "don't lose your rewards for disobedience through ignorance or deception whereby you are led in a false way." We've been warned, and when we come to see deception from false teachers, now what are we to do?

WHO ARE WE TO FELLOWSHIP WITH ANYHOW?

One of the first things which must be clarified is with whom is our fellowship? The Bible shows us clearly. 1 Corinthians 1:9 says we were "called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord." Philippians 1:5 explains that we have fellowship in the gospel. The truth of God binds us together, gives us a common ground and basis for our association and communion. Also, in Philippians 2:1, Paul shows that it is a fellowship of the spirit. As he says in Romans 8:14, those who are being led by the spirit are the sons of God. God's truth and spirit bind us together and serve as the basis for our association, our joint participation. John agrees with Paul's writings by saying, "truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." (1 John 1:3) Our fellowship is with God, through his holy word, guided by the holy spirit; we have this fellowship because we are the children of God. In the book of Ephesians, the apostle Paul admonished the church in Ephesus to "walk worthy of the calling with which you were called . . . endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Ephesians 4:1,3) In verse three, another meaning of the word translated peace is "harmony". Paul encouraged the church to maintain the unity and harmony that they had with one another because of their calling. In verse four he makes it clear that there is one body and one spirit; there is one mind into which we are called. God's church, the body of Christ is not divided. Paul asks in 1 Corinthians 1:13, "Is Christ divided?" with the obvious answer being "no, he is not." What are we to think in the presence of 1500 different and conflicting denominations and non-denominations that find little fellowship or harmony between them? Where is the unity? Jesus himself said, "If a kingdom is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. And if a house is divided against itself, that house cannot stand." (Mark 3:24-25)

Think with me for just a minute why we have over 1500 different denominations and creedal doctrines concerning Jesus and the message he taught? Which one of the 1500 is "the" faith once given to the saints and which reflects the Apostle's doctrine? Is your church following the "one faith" of Ephesians chapter 4, or is the church down the street whose doctrinal statement conflicts with yours? Confusing isn't it? How are we to make sense of the matter or better yet, can we? I have good news for you, because I believe it is possible through inspired study to reclaim the faith that was once given to the saints and which follows the pattern of worship prescribed for all mankind in I Chronicles chapter 28. More on that later.

Continuing in Ephesians chapter four, Paul says in verse 14 that we should no longer be like children, "tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the trickery of men, in the cunning craftiness by which they lie in wait to deceive. . ." In the previous verses, Paul says that God provided ministers and teachers so that we all might "come to the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the son of God" (verse 13). We have received our instruction and understanding from God, and we should be mature enough spiritually to discern the truth, not being led astray by false teachers. We should be "speaking the truth in love" and growing up "in all things into Him who is the head--Christ" (verse 15). Paul told the Ephesian church that they should have learned the truth well enough from those God ordained to teach them that each and every one of them, the members of the church, could be well established in the unity of the faith, knowing the truth and clinging to it. We should be spiritually mature and able to rightly divide the word of truth (2 Timothy 2:15), not being led astray, or away, from the truth.

In chapter five of Ephesians, Paul writes some words that have direct meaning for those who God has called into his church, the body of Christ, today. In verse one of chapter five, Paul says, "Therefore be followers of God as dear children." Who are we to follow? God. Let it sink in for a minute. We are responsible to God; He is the one who has called us into the fellowship of His body, and we should follow Him, not being led astray. This statement is directly in line with Paul's admonition to imitate him as he imitates Christ (1 Corinthians 11:1). "We should follow someone only as he or she is following God and His Word. If one who is a leader in the Body of Christ does not follow the teachings of the Bible we must not follow him or his movement with which he has been entrusted for direction." Jesus Christ is the head of the church, and we are to be in subjection to him (Ephesians 5:24). "We ought to obey God rather than men." (Acts 5:29) Oh how my heart cries out for my close friends and family to begin to let that Scripture direct their lives and no longer lean upon their own understanding or the mistaken understanding of so many churches who have let the Word of God become secondary to their own experience. For too many their experience has become the barometer of truth instead of letting the Bible dictate what their experience is to be. If we obey then our experience will change and become reinforced by the Word of God. Amen!

Verse three of Ephesians chapter five says, "But fornication and all uncleanness or covetousness, let it not even be named among you, as is fitting for saints." It is not proper for the filth of the world to be included with the church, the body of Christ. Jesus was found perfect and blameless, why would we want to corrupt his body or even the reputation of it by allowing uncleanness of any sort to be associated with it? Paul tells us that uncleanness, the filth of the world, should not even be named among or associated with the body of Christ. In 2 Corinthians 6:15 Paul says, "What accord has Christ with Belial? Or what part has a believer with an unbeliever?" There is no part for uncleanness within the body of Christ, not even rumors of such things (please understand this principle applies not only to the natural world but the spiritual world as well.). Paul tells us in Ephesians 5:3 to not let it even be named among us. We should be far removed from such filth.

Ephesians 5:6-7 says, "Let no one deceive you with empty words, for because of these things the wrath of God comes upon the sons of disobedience. Therefore, do not be partakers with them." What are empty words? From the Greek, the word empty could also be translated "devoid of truth." So, Paul says do not let anyone lead you astray with words that contain no truth. Clearly, such people would be false teachers. Paul calls these false teachers "the sons of disobedience." Another way of translating these words from the Greek could be "those who stand in obstinate opposition to the divine will." These individuals do not want to do things God's way; they want to do it their own way. In verse seven, Paul warns us to not be partakers with these individuals. The Greek word for partaker used here is summetochos, and it means "partaking together with one; joint partakers of something." We do not want to be counted among them. For example, when Korah and his congregation rebelled, God told the children of Israel to separate themselves from Korah and his group so that He could destroy them (Numbers 16:21). Should we not separate ourselves from a rebellion against the truth, a rebellion against God's will? Let's continue in Ephesians chapter five to see what else Paul says.

In verse eight Paul explains that we were once part of the world, we were darkness, but now we are called out of the world and are light and should "walk as children of light." Again, we need to follow the calling of God and remain faithful. Ephesians 5:11 says, "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather expose them." The Greek word translated fellowship in this verse is sugkoinoneo and it means "to become a partaker together with others, or to have fellowship with a thing." Paul is telling us to not be aligned with or have a partnership with those people who are instruments of darkness. He further tells us to expose or reprove them. The Greek word used here is elegcho and it means "to convict, refute, confute, generally with a suggestion of shame on the person convicted: by conviction to bring to the light, to expose; to find fault with, to correct--by word: to reprehend severely, chide, admonish, reprove--by deed: to chasten, to punish." In other words, we are to expose them and correct them, refuting their works since they are to have no part with us.

This is work for the courageous and not the faint of heart! So often many judge Bet Emet Ministries because of the God-given righteous indignation shown toward such error, hypocrisy, and deception as so often proliferates in the Body of Christ. Little to they know God's temperament toward such sin! As one who does understand because I have done the work necessary to discover correctly God's attitude toward such manipulation and deception, please let the truths enumerated in our newsletters as well as the tapes be your guide as we both join together to chide, refute, and shame such who practice such wickedness let alone lead others into deeper sin. We must cast out the leaven in a spirit of love. True love always confronts for the sake of others. True love is always redemptive, delivering from sin to obedience and blessing. If we at Bet Emet did not love God, His Word, or God's people we surely would not subject ourselves to ridicule and slander which comes in response to messages that call for the "presumed righteous" to repent in the face of the multitude of error being taught today from the majority of the houses of God in our land. Let us never forget to judge ourselves lest we be judged. The best place to judge ourselves in now as we submit ourselves to every Word that proceeds from the mouth of God and His Word. Amen!

Paul further shows the seriousness of this matter in verse 12 when he says it is shameful for us to even speak of the things that these individuals do in secret. The indication here is that we should remove ourselves away as far as possible from such people. In verse 13 Paul explains that these things will be exposed, they will be made clear by the light, the truth of God, or, as he made clear in verse 8, those who are walking in the fellowship of the truth. In verse 14 Paul says, "Awake, you who sleep, Arise from the dead, And Christ will give you light." Could this be a warning to those of us in the church today who are spiritually asleep, who are not aware of what is going on? This could be an admonition to all of us who have been or who are sleeping to wake up and to call upon Christ to give us light, to illuminate and make clear his way for us. Now is the time to "be diligent to present yourself approved to God." (2 Timothy 2:15) In verses 15-21 of Ephesians 5, Paul exhorts us to walk carefully and wisely, using the time well because of the evil around us, being submitted to one another in the fellowship. As Paul says we are to esteem others better than ourselves (Philippians 2:3) and to exhort each other, even more as we see "the Day approaching." (Hebrews 10:25) This last Scripture is just example of severe misinterpretation as seen by the majority of teachers today. Upon study you will be persuaded as I that Paul was not taking about "the day" referring to the weekly Sabbath (Saturday), thereby encouraging the attendance of religious services; rather the day in focus is the "Day of the Lord" or judgment day where every man and woman will be judges and rewards given or taken away. Thus Bet Emet cries out in the darkness of deception and religious lies that "all" is not right that we have been told. It is paramount we repent in several areas of our lives (even religious lives) and begin to obey God both in our civil lives as well as our religious lives if we want to be assured of reward and not shame on "that day."

In verse 22, Paul begins to explain the marriage relationship, but, as he reveals in verse 32, he is making a point about the church's relationship with Jesus Christ. Paul explains that the wife is to be submitted to the husband because the husband is the head of the wife. He explains also that the head of the church is Jesus Christ, and it is to him that we as a church should be submitted and that we should be following. These verses are quite interesting in light of verse 32 and in reference to the preceding verses which talk about our fellowship with those who would deceive us. We are to be submitted to Jesus Christ. He is the head. He is the one we must follow and be obedient to. If we are worried about rebellion, it should obviously be rebellion against the head of the church--Jesus Christ. Just as a wife is to revere and respect her husband, the church is to revere and respect Jesus Christ (verse 33).

In Ephesians 5:26-27 Paul explains that Christ gave his life that he might "sanctify and cleanse it [the church] with the washing of the water by the word, that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." The word translated sanctify also has the meaning "to separate from profane things and dedicate to God." The church is to be pure, spotless, and without blemish. The church is the body of Christ, and it should not be marred or tarnished in any way.

The apostle Paul provides further exhortation for us about our responsibility in maintaining the purity of the body of Christ. In 2 Corinthians 6:14-15 we are told, "Do not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. For what fellowship has righteousness with lawlessness? And what communion has light with darkness? And what accord has Christ with Belial? Or what part has a believer with an unbeliever?" The Greek word heterozugeo is translated "unequally yoked together with," and it means "to have fellowship with one who is not an equal." Obviously, Paul is referring to those who are spiritually unequal. The Greek word for unbelievers is apistos and it means "those who are unfaithful, not to be trusted, unbelieving." These are the ones who are not following the truth and who are not maintaining the unity of the fellowship of the body of Christ. There are two different words used in verse 14 which are translated "fellowship" and "communion." The first word, metoche, means "a sharing, communion, or fellowship." The second word, koinonia, means, "an association, fellowship, community, communion, or joint participation." Both of these words denote a group that has binding ties, in this case the election and truth of God.

In verse 17 of 2 Corinthians 6, Paul uses the writings of Isaiah and Jeremiah to say, "Come out from among them and be separate, says the Lord. Do not touch what is unclean, and I will receive you." The word translated "come out" is exerchomai and means "to go out of an assembly, i.e. to forsake it; to go forth from one's power, escaping from it in safety." Please read the last verse once again! Paul is saying that we should escape from those who are unbelievers, we should forsake them; we are to have no part with them. The church of God, the body of Christ has no part with the works of Satan (in a Jewish context meaning the flesh which opposes the truths of God). God told Israel to be separate, and he has also called us out of the world and its ways. What is your response when you are show error which concerns the practice of your faith? What is your spirit like when you encounter correction? Should we follow false teachers back into the bondage from which we came out of? Shouldn't we maintain the purity of Christ's body and keep the unity of the faith?

Paul also has included instruction for us in his epistles to the church in Thessalonica. 1Thessalonians 1:6 shows that we are followers of the apostles and God. Paul clarified this relationship when he admonished us to imitate him as he imitates Christ. We are bound to God and the truth, and there is nothing wrong with following the direction of someone else who is following God. But we are each responsible for our own salvation individually (Philippians 2:12). In verse 12 of chapter 2, Paul tells us to have "a walk worthy of God" who calls us. Looking in chapter five, we are told to pursue what is good (verse 15) and to test all things, holding onto that which is good (verse 21). Paul continues in verse 22 by saying, "Abstain from every form of evil." He tells us to stay away from it, do not have anything to do with it (even if it is religious evil and untruths masquerading as Biblical truths). In 2 Thessalonians 1:12 he explains that the name of Jesus Christ should be glorified in us. Can Christ's name be glorified if his people are polluted by the presence of unbelievers, those who have departed from the truth and are not walking in it? Can Christ's name be glorified if his people are polluted by observing and adhering to a religious system that is a mixture of paganism and Judaism passed off as truth? I dare say not!

In 2 Thessalonians 3:6 Paul writes, "But we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you withdraw from every brother who walks disorderly and not according to the tradition which he received from us." The word for withdraw used here, stello, also means "avoid; to remove one's self; withdraw one's self; to depart; to abstain from familiar intercourse with." We are not to be associated with those individuals who walk disorderly, who have turned away from the teachings of God as found in His Holy Scripture. The word for disorderly means "walking outside of the prescribed boundaries." These prescribed boundaries would be delineated by the word of God, the tradition we received from the apostles. Did you hear that? Is your church following the tradition of the Apostles or is it following some man and his doctrine? Is it following a denomination's doctrine that can be proven to oppose teachings in the Bible?

Let us not forget that in Matthew chapter 7, verses 21-23 Jesus tells many who believe that they are "right" with God to depart because they practice the work s of "iniquity." The Greek word for iniquity is defined in the Strong's Concordance as "those who are not subject to Jewish Law." Let me ask you, are you subject to Jewish Law or do you practice a "lawless" faith? Are Yahweh's commandments a pattern for your life or have you been taught that the "Law" was done away and we are no longer under law but grace only? Does your church submit to Jewish Law? Does your church disregard Matt. 5:17 where Jesus tells all to "quit thinking I have come to destroy the Law." Does your church teach you to submit to Jewish Law or is it like so many churches today that are infected with dispensationalism that you have been told that the "law" was done away with in Christ? On a more personal level let me ask you: Did you celebrate Easter or Passover this last year; did you observe Rosh HaShannah, the Day of Atonement, and Tabernacles? Do you know the Sabbath is not Sunday no matter what your pastor says? Did you give 33% of your tithe last year to the widows, orphans, sick, lame, and blind as Jewish Law and the Bible commands? Did you allot the other 33% of your tithe to observe and celebrate the Festivals of the Lord and teach your children the proper worship of Yahweh that surrounds His Holy Days? Did your other 33% of your tithe which was given to your church go to propagate more false teachings coming from your pulpit instead of financing Yahweh's Kingdom as taught by truly anointed men of God? Jesus told us that "Greater works we are to do than he every did." We are deceived to want to see physical eyes opened and deaf ears opened in the miracle services that continually beckon us and our money. Let me ask you, is it not at these miracle services that many tithe to the ministry and thus rob Yahweh in ignorance as the ministry does not give the money to the designated areas in Holy Scripture? Are we not accomplices to robbery and not know it? Now listen closely. Did not Jesus say that in order for us to believe, that he would heal a cripple physically to reveal the "greater works of God" that are done spiritually (for example...forgive sin)? Spiritual miracles are always greater than physical miracles. With this understanding, Bet Emet understands that the greater works than Jesus did are being done through straightforward teaching that "opens the eyes of the spiritually blind, opens the ears of the spiritually deaf, and raises the spiritually dead to obedience" who have innocently trusted in the commandments of men to the neglect of the commandments of God. How can we continue to negate the very words of Christ in Matt. 5:17 where he says "quit thinking I have come to destroy the Law." I believe it is about time to reconsider what we have been taught and what we have listened to and begin to let the Scriptures, rightly divided linguistically, culturally, and historically, be our authority for our faith and practice. Can you think of a better idea?

The Greek word paradosis is translated "tradition" and it refers to "a giving over which is done by word of mouth or in writing; objectively, that which is delivered, the substance of a teaching; of the body of precepts." So, this is not referring to the traditions of men, but the word of God which was delivered through the mouths and pens of the apostles.

In verse 14, Paul tells the church in Thessalonica to note those who do not follow the teachings he has delivered.

After noting such individuals, the church members are not to keep company with them. Paul says to not be counted with individuals who reject the teachings of God which he is delivering. In verse 15 he says that we should not consider those who are walking astray as enemies, rather, we are to admonish them as brothers. We should warn and exhort these individuals so that they might return to the fellowship of Jesus Christ.

Romans 16:17 provides an admonition similar to that of 2 Thessalonians. Paul states here, "Now I urge you, brethren, note those who cause division and offenses, contrary to the doctrine which you learned, and avoid them." Too often we think these type of Scriptures apply only to cults, but that is not the case. One of the important things to notice here is the source of the divisions which are being created. They are coming from those who are deviating from the doctrines delivered to the church: the doctrines of God which are from His Word. The divisions do not come from those who are remaining loyal to their calling by avoiding those who are not being loyal to the Scriptures. Paul tells us to avoid these people. The Greek word Paul uses is ekklineo and it means "to turn one's self away from; to keep aloof from; to shun." In other words, Paul is saying, stay away from those individuals. This is hard for our culturalized mind to comprehend, but the Scriptures are the standard that God has set for you and I; He did not ask our opinion or advice in telling us what is required of us for fellowship with Him through His son.

In 1 Timothy 6 Paul provides us with more instruction about what we are to do when false and deceptive teachers enter in among us. In verses 3 through 5 he says, "If anyone teaches otherwise and does not consent to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, but is obsessed with disputes and arguments over words, from which come envy, strife, reviling, evil suspicions, useless wranglings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, who suppose that godliness is a means of gain. From such withdraw yourself." The word Paul uses for "teaches otherwise" is heterodidaskaleo and it means "to teach other or different doctrine." Did you hear that? This seems clearly to speak to today, because we have definitely seen this occur; we have received other doctrine (over 1500 different and conflicting ones at present). What are we told to do? Verse 5 says, "From such withdraw yourself." Do you understand that means to leave your fellowship if they lead you into error and seek out those who fear God and are submitted to His Word as their sole authority!

Withdraw in this verse is from the Greek word ahistemi and it means "to remove; to stand off; to go away; to depart from." Isn't Paul speaking directly to us and our situation at this present time? Definitely so if your church teaches and models the Sabbath as Sunday, the tithe collected for the expenses of the church instead of distribution to the widows, orphans, sick, lame, and blind, and the remaining parts of the tithe being distributed equally between the teaching levite, janitors, and choir along with the festival tithe which is yours. So few understand or submit to the festival tithe since they belong to congregations that have replaced God's Holy Days and Festivals with pagan holidays which are been remodeled and had the name of "Jesus" affixed to them. Such is blasphemy to God's truths of Holy Scripture.

In verse 11 of 1 Timothy 6, Paul says, "But you, O man of God, flee these things and pursue righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, gentleness." The word translated flee, pheugo, carries the meaning "seek safety by flight; to escape safely out of danger." Paul is telling us to run away from the evil and unrighteous because fellowshiping with them is dangerous. We are to pursue, or follow, to run after "righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, gentleness," the attributes of God.

Paul provides even more admonition for us in the epistle to Titus. In Titus chapter two, Paul explains the qualities of a sound church. In verse 8 he says that if we exhibit these characteristics, "one who is an opponent may be ashamed, having nothing evil to say of [us]." The word for opponent, enantios, means "one who is against, opposite, or contrary." If we are submitted to God and following him, remaining in our fellowship with God, it is very clear who the contrary one, the opponent, is, and he or she will not be able to condemn us.

In Titus 3:9-11 Paul says, "but avoid foolish disputes, genealogies, contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and useless. Reject a divisive man after the first and second admonition, knowing that such a person is warped and sinning, being self-condemned." The word translated here as reject is paraiteomai and it means "to shun; to avoid; to refuse; to decline." The word for a divisive man is hairetikos and it means "a heretic; a follower of a false doctrine." Paul is telling us to admonish, or correct, someone who is going astray, following a false doctrine, and then to avoid such a person, to not have association with him/her. We are to remain separate (this is true holiness).

Jude gives us further instructions in his epistle. He discusses false teachers who enter into the church and "turn the grace of our God into licentiousness and deny the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ." (verse 4) In verse 18 he tells us there will be mockers in the last time. He says they are "sensual persons who cause divisions, not having the Spirit." (verse 19) Jude points out that they are the ones causing divisions. If we follow Paul's instructions and separate ourselves from such deceivers, we are not creating division, we are remaining faithful to our calling. These false teachers do not have the spirit of God, and are therefore not considered sons of God (Romans 8:14); they are not even part of the body of Christ. So, even if they say they are Christians, they are not because they do not have the spirit of God. If they did have the spirit of God, they would be following God and walking appropriately. Since they are not members of the body of Christ, separating ourselves from them, in essence, removing them out of our fellowship, is not rebellion or division; it is a necessary action to maintain the unity of the faith.

Jude continues in verses 20 and 21 saying, "But you, beloved, building yourselves up on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." Those of us who are truly of the body of Christ, the ones God has called out of this world, and who are being led by the spirit of God are to continue growing in grace and knowledge (2 Peter 3:18), building ourselves up in the faith. We are also to keep ourselves in the love of God. The word translated keep, tereo, means "to attend to carefully; to take care of." We are to be working out our own salvation with fear and trembling (Philippians 2:12).

John tells in 1 John 1:3 that "that which we [the apostles] have seen and heard we declare to you, that you also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." According to this passage, John says that the apostles, the physical leaders of the church, the ministers, are able to have fellowship with us, the members of Christ's body, because they deliver the truth, the things that they have seen and heard. It seems that their fellowship with us, or ours with them, is dependent upon what they are teaching. This application is congruent with the many things Paul says which we have already covered. John goes on to say that the fellowship that we have is actually with God and Jesus Christ. We need to diligently endeavor to remain in that fellowship, the fellowship that really matters.

When Peter and the other apostles were told not to preach in Jesus' name they said, "We ought to obey God rather than men." (Acts 5:29) Is that a fair assessment of your attitude when confronted with the many challenges toward the practice of your faith that have been shown to violate God's will in His Holy Scriptures? Again, the instruction is clear: our allegiance is to God, first and foremost. Jesus Christ is the head of his church, his body, and we are to be in subjection to him. 2 Corinthians 8:5 shows that the Christians in Corinth first gave themselves to God and then to the apostles. They made sure they were in subjection and obedience to God first, and then they submitted to the apostles as they followed God. It is fine and right to follow the example and teachings of individuals as long as they are following God, but if they stray from that which was once delivered, should we not follow God rather than those individuals?

In Acts 19, it is recorded that Paul visited Ephesus. In verse 8, Luke explains that Paul taught in the synagogue for three months. Verse 9 says, "But when some were hardened and did not believe, but spoke evil of the Way before the multitude, he departed from them and withdrew the disciples, reasoning daily in the school of Tyrannus." Verse 9 seems to indicate that some of those to whom Paul had been preaching rejected his instruction after having first accepted it. The Moffatt Bible translates this verse as, "But as some grew stubborn and disobedient, decrying the Way in presence of the multitude, he left them, withdrew the disciples and continued his argument every day from eleven to four in the lecture-room of Tyrannus. So, some turned away from the truth and were speaking against it, causing divisions and confusion. What was Paul's response? Not surprisingly, it was exactly along the lines of his instruction in his epistles to the Corinthians, Ephesians, Titus, etc. Let me ask you: Do really and truly believe that obedience is greater than any sacrifice you can bring God? Are you courageous enough to obey Paul in this regard? Paul removed himself and the disciples, those who were receiving and holding onto the truth, from fellowship with the dissenters; he separated them, marked them off from the unbelievers. Verse 10 shows that they continued meeting in a place outside of the synagogue for two years.

In Romans 8, Paul gives us encouragement for times when we face persecution and trials. He says in verse 31, "If God is for us, who can be against us?" Paul asks in verse 35, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" In verses 38 and 39 he continues, saying, "For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other created thing, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Nothing can come between us and God's love. Only our sins separate us from God (Isaiah 59:2; Hebrews 6:4-6). We can and should maintain our fellowship with God and with one another, being like minded and unified in the faith. We need to hold fast to the Head, Jesus Christ, because that is the source of our spiritual nourishment and growth (Colossians 2:19). "God is faithful, by whom you were called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord." (1 Corinthians 1:9) We are called into the fellowship of Jesus Christ, and there is no place for the fellowship of demons with it (1 Corinthians 10:20).

God clearly told the Israelites to be a separate nation and to not fellowship with their heathen neighbors (Exodus 33:16; Deuteronomy 7:6; Ezra 6:21;10:11; 1 Kings 8:53). In Deuteronomy 12, God explained to the Israelites why they were to remain separate from the heathen nations. In verse 30 and 31 God says, "Take heed to yourself that you are not ensnared to follow them, after they are destroyed from before you, and that you do not inquire after their gods, saying, 'How did these nations serve their gods? I also will do likewise.' You shall not worship the Lord your God in that way. . ." These words are applicable to us today. We are to worship God in spirit and truth (John 4:24), not according to pagan customs and practices. In the book of Proverbs, Solomon says, "My son, do not walk in the way with them [sinners]. Keep your foot from their path." (Proverbs 1:15) He also says, "Do not enter the path of the wicked, And do not walk in the way of evil. Avoid it, do not travel on it; Turn away from it and pass on." (Proverbs 4:14-15) These proverbs are quite clear: do not follow unrighteousness, remove yourself from those who are walking astray. We don't even want to be counted among them. Solomon also says, "The way of the Lord is strength for the upright, But destruction will come to the workers of iniquity." (Proverbs 10:29) We should follow the paths of the Lord; His way is the right way. Those who deviate from the ways of God bring destruction upon themselves.

In Psalm 94, David speaks of God as the refuge of the righteous. This psalm contains much instruction and wisdom for us today. I will not quote all of it here, but I encourage you to read it, thinking about how David's words apply to our situation today. In verse 20, David asks, "Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, Have fellowship with you?" The obvious answer is no. God is faithful to protect and preserve us, and he will deal with those who are following after unrighteousness.

We should follow the admonition of Jesus Christ in Luke 11:35-36 and make sure that our whole body is full of light and not darkness. This applies to us individually in our own lives; we should be becoming perfect as our Father in heaven is perfect (Matthew 5:48). Also, it has a larger application: we should be striving to keep the body of Christ full of light and not darkness. Our fellowship should glorify the name of God.

We are told in several places to rejoice when we are persecuted for adhering to God's way of life. Jesus said we are blessed when men hate us and exclude us and call us evil (Luke 6:22). Peter says that we are blessed when we are reproached for the name of Christ (1 Peter 4:14). If we suffer with Christ, we will be glorified together (Romans 8:17). We are told in Philippians that it has been "granted on behalf of Christ, not only to believe in Him, but also to suffer for his sake." (1:29) " All who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution." (2 Timothy 3:12) 1 Peter 3:14-15 says, "But even if you should suffer for righteousness" sake, you are blessed. 'And do not be afraid of their threats, nor be troubled.' But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and always be ready to give a defense to everyone who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear."

IN CONCLUSION:

Paul tells us in Acts 20:30 that false teachers would rise up from among us, "speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves." Warnings such as this are spread throughout the New Testament. Paul spoke at some length regarding our responsibility as a church, as the body of Christ, when false teachers and deceivers try to lead us astray. Other New Testament writers also spoke about what we are to do. The instructions given in the Holy Bible regarding what we are to do when faced with false teachers and brothers who are walking astray tell us to avoid them and to not associate with them. By fellowshiping with these individuals, the name of God is tarnished. There is one faith, one baptism, one body, and it is not divided. There is a unity, a harmony, of the faith, and we are to maintain it. We are not to be counted among those who are not walking after the truth which has been delivered to us. It seems quite clear what our responsibility is when the situation arises where false teachers are among us and when brothers walk astray: we are to avoid them, have no fellowship with them, be separate from them, maintaining the unity of the faith. God's house, his church, cannot be divided against itself; it will not stand if it is. God is not the author of confusion. We are to avoid those who cause divisions and teach false doctrines. This much is clear. We must exercise spiritual discernment in order to determine if such actions are appropriate in the present time. Are individuals walking astray and teaching false doctrines as the word of God, bringing shame upon the name of Christ? We are to note those who are walking disorderly, correct them, and be separate from them. That is our responsibility in this matter. We are not to invite such a person into our house or even greet him/her (2 John 10). We must maintain the unity of the faith that was once given to the saints and which was handed down faithfully into the early part of the fourth century until it was eradicated by the paganism of Rome.

God gives us encouragement in his holy word: "Because you have kept My command to persevere, I also will keep you from the hour of trial which shall come upon the whole world, to test those who dwell on the earth. Behold, I come quickly! Hold fast what you have, that no one may take your crown." (Revelation 3:10-11) "The God of peace will crush Satan under your feet shortly. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you." (Romans 16:20) "God is faithful, by whom you were called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord." (1 Corinthians 1:9) "And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose." (Romans 8:28)

TILL WE ALL COME IN THE UNITY OF THE FAITH...WHICH FAITH?

Before we begin understand one thing. When a definite article is used such as "the" it means unique, special, only one of a kind When a definite article is used such as "a" it means one of several. Notice now that when Paul says:

Ephesians 4:13 "Till we all come in the unity of the faith" he was referring to only ONE faith...and that the faith that existed at that time.

Answer for yourself: What should this mean to you?

You must decide when reading the materials from Bet Emet Ministries if you are in "the" faith that Paul was referring to at that time. Either your faith is grounded in the faith of the first century church, Biblical Judaism or, if you rather...Messianic Judaism....OR if your faith lies outside the faith of Yeshua.....seen today as Gentile Christianity which is a replacement religion and opposes much of what "the" faith once given to the saints possessed. Now, on with the article.

Slowly over the years of my Pastorate in Dallas, Texas I have witnessed a slow awakening, and I stress "slow" awakening of the Gentile Christian Church to the Jewish roots of their faith. This is encouraging, especially in light of the great need for such a "restoration" once you come to the knowledge of the truth concerning how Gentile Christianity has strayed from the ideals and Apostolic Religious Doctrines that James and the Jerusalem Church desired for her. I have witnessed over the years a new emphasis within the Church on the singing of the Psalms in their worship, the use of banners at various occasions in the tradition of the Tribes of Israel, the celebration of the Biblical feast days (Passover, Unleavened Bread, Pentecost, Rosh Ha Shannah, Yom Kippur, Tabernacles, etc.). This is wonderful and necessary for our repentance if we ever wish to return to the faith of Yeshua which is Biblical Judaism and not Christianity by the way. Not only that but sacred dancing, especially in Charismatic churches, is prominent. With the deplorable condition of our public school system home schooling has become a viable alternative. Sabbath celebrations in homes of traditional Sunday Christians are very encouraging. Some have even gone so far as to teach the correct doctrine regarding the Biblical Tithe. Many are beginning to use the Hebrew name of God (Yahweh) where this was unheard of only a few years ago. Some are displaying Jewish symbolism (Menorah, Star of David, Shofar, etc.) in their congregations. These are but a few of the elements drawn from our Judaic heritage that are now becoming common place in the worship, practice and teachings of many Christian congregations today who are studying their Jewish roots of their faith. Literally prophecy is being fulfilled in our midst and many fail to realize it.

But not all are open to such attempts at recovering the truth and rich heritage of their faith. Although many of these activities are not yet the accepted norm in all Christian circles, it is only the beginning of a rapidly developing trend which can hardly be ignored. But in spite of the many who have failed to "discern the times" those who have are contributing to a Judeo-Christian restoration that was prophesied in the Jewish Scriptures.

BUT MAINLINE CHURCHES SEEM DISINTERESTED WITH THIS JUDEO-CHRISTIAN RESTORATION

However, some in Christian leadership are expressing apprehension in returning to "the faith once given to the saints. I can remember speaking about this great need with my previous senior Pastor and he could only say we are not living in the first century any longer. True, but what escaped him is that the Commandments of God are eternal; whether it be the first century or the twentieth century. His fears were born out of a fear of legalism which is propagated by an incorrect emphasis on the Pauline writings.

May God hasten the day when something is judged, not by whether it is Jewish or Christian, but by whether or not it is Biblical centered

JUDEO-CHRISTIANITY...WHAT THE CHURCH NEEDS TO MODEL

I find that most people are familiar with the term "Judeo-Christianity". The term can be found to be used frequently by scholars, Bible students and commentators who write on the early church. Simply said, it means "having roots in both Judaism and Christianity". Judaism and Christianity were publicly coined words. The word "Christian" was first used in A.D. 42 in the city of Antioch as seen in Acts 11:26. Eventually it was adopted for the purpose of differentiating between believing Jews who had faith in Yeshua as the Messiah and Jews who did not accept Yeshua as their Messiah. Ultimately it became an identity for the entire Gentile Church. The irony of the whole thing is that the vast majority of those who call themselves followers of the "Christ" and identify with the term "Christian" have little in common with the religious belief system of Yeshua or first century Biblical Judaism. This is an undeniable fact to those who study the Jewish Yeshua of the first century and then compare what Yeshua believed vs. what they have been taught by their Gentile Churches. The term "Judaism" was born of similar circumstances and was, no doubt, coined for the purpose of implying a "divorcement" from Christianity and their errant beliefs which often contradicted Moses, the Writings, and the Prophets.

the proper system of worship and practice for the people of God is not "Christian" in a religious sense, but "Jewish" simply because "Jewish worship" patterns for us best the Divine example in a Biblical sense and therefore remains eternal and universal for all nations

Nevertheless, these are acceptable terms when understood in a complimentary fashion and we will use them for identification and orientation. But the phrase Judeo-Christianity is perhaps most ideal in that it expresses and maintains the inherent bond between that religious faith which Yahweh authored at Sinai.

What most Christians fail to grasp is that when they read Ephesians 4:5, the "One Faith" of Scripture is not "Gentile Christianity" but "Biblical Judaism"...quite simply the Faith of God and the ONLY Faith ever given by God to man

SO WHY THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE TWO? ISN'T CHRISTIANITY TO BE THE FULFILLMENT OF JUDAISM AND IF SO HOW CAN IT CONTRADICT IT SO?

In the Book of Malachi God, through the prophet said: For I am the LORD, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Do you really believe the above Scripture? Do you really? If you really believe that God is the same yesterday, today, and forever, then I challenge you to be brutally honest with yourself in answering the following questions:

Answer for yourself: Why then is there such a startling difference between Christianity and Judaism on so many religious doctrines and beliefs?

Answer for yourself: How can two religions, Judaism and Christianity, that came from the same God who is One and a complete unity have so many conflicting doctrines like those on atonement, salvation, Christology, Messiah, days of worship, etc.?

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua start an entirely new religion in spite of the fact that he is recorded saying in Matt. 5:17: Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Is Yeshua responsible for all of the differing doctrines and practices that bear the name of Christianity today as found in over 2000 different Christian denominations in the world today?

Answer for yourself: Is there a difference between the "Christ of Faith" and the "Christ of History" and if so do you know what it is?

Answer for yourself: Who is the "real Yeshua" as distinguished from the various thousands of different denominations and non-denominations that exist today who claim to follow Yeshua but have so many conflicting doctrines?

Answer for yourself: Could it be that the Jews, who follow the same religion that Yeshua did, be right and those who follow the New Testament and its doctrines which can be shown to "opposed to Judaism" when compared to the unforged Hebrew Scriptures, be wrong? Of course this question predisposes that the reader is aware of the adulterated and forgery and purposeful mistranslation and misquotation that is abundant in our Christian Old and New Testaments.

These are reasonable questions that deserve sensible, factual answers.

HAVE WE COMPLETELY MISSED THE MARK IN THE GENTILE CHURCH?

Answer for yourself: One may question: "What difference does it make as to how I worship God so long as I have accepted Christ as my personal savior?"

As startling as it may sound to you, the vast majority of Biblical texts are devoted NOT to the message of redemption, but rather how one is to obey and please God, serve God, and honor God AFTER becoming a believer

Perhaps you need to sit down and contemplate on the above thought. Because the statement is true. Ministries like Bet Emet are called to share such insights with a Gentile Church which has departed from "the faith once given to the saints". (Jude 1:3). Much of what the Gentile Church teaches the non-Jewish believer today are unfortunately "falsehoods" which are recorded in the New Testament by the anti-Semitic writers of the New Testament. I know you have been taught that the New Testament was written by the Apostles, but other than a few writings by Paul (7), the vast majority of this literature defies identification as to authorship. One thing is certain, however; scholarship today can prove that most of these writings were drafted by non-Jews with strong anti-Semitic leanings. Thus we have a document that is full of Replacement Religion and religious dogmas and doctrines and which conflicts with the Bible Yeshua used, the Hebrew Scriptures written by "holy men of old". That means those who follow the teachings in the New Testament without comparing with the writings of Moses and the Prophets taken ONLY from the Hebrew Bible and Hebrew Scriptures of Judaism cannot be assured they are being obedient to the God they say they love. One's love for God must motivate us to be "sure" we are right in what we believe and how we respond. That means you will have to study hard and often be exposed to materials which will challenge you to your very core. But love for God demands we pay whatever price to ensure we are not opposing Him and disobeying Him out of misdirected zeal.

The precaution given to ancient Israel is a valid one for the Church today. God pleaded with them on several occasions not to worship Him through learning the ways of the heathens. In this day of restoration and renewal of the Church, there is a turning away from many of the man-conceived concepts of worship which have been handed down to us by the historic church fathers with a return to Biblical patterns, even if they do appear Jewish in nature.

Dear child of God...if you have not already you soon will see that "Jewish" means "Biblical"

PILATE'S QUESTION....IT MUST BE YOURS AS WELL

Pontius Pilate asked a significant question of public concern, both for our day and his, when he inquired of Yeshua, "What is truth"? (John 18.38). The greatest of men still struggle to find the answer to this all-consuming question as they seek to please the living God. We at Bet Emet Ministries are dedicated to finding the truth in order to assure that we are worshipping the Father in Spirit and Truth. Our dedicated study for the past fifteen years has shown us that much of what we were taught by Christianity was anything but truth and surely not given by the Spirit. Repentance was the order of the day and remains such today.

Failure of multitudes of believers to fully answer this profound question for themselves has left the Gentile Church in a quagmire of conflicting doctrines and practices. I know many of you who read this article might say that Yeshua said, "I am the Truth"; but sadly this question can not be answered satisfactorily with such a simplified answer. Nearly everyone at some time has found himself a victim of these conflicts only to ponder the same question: "What is truth"? Perhaps one of the greatest mistakes to be made in our pursuit of divine truth has been the failure to acknowledge the source of truth...the Jewish people who were entrusted with Divine revelation for the whole of mankind.

THE SOURCE OF BASIC TRUTH FOR ALL THE WORLD...INCLUDING THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH CAME FROM GOD THROUGH THE JEWISH PEOPLE AND THEIR TEACHINGS. MANY TEACHINGS IN CHRISTIANITY THAT DOES ORIGINATE WITH THE JEWISH PEOPLE CAN BE SHOWN TO BE NOT SOUND DOCTRINALLY AND WILL INVARIABLY BE FLAWED IN ITS CONCLUSIONS AND APPLICATIONS...NO MATTER HOW NOBLE IT MIGHT SOUND..

Because of the anti-Semitism of the early Gentile leaders of the Church, we have the gradual drift of the Christian Church from its Hebraic and Jewish Roots that has robbed the believers of their rightful heritage, the power that goes with the Word of God when obeyed, and has rendered the Christian Church a very divided people (over 2,000 different denominations containing multitudes of conflicting doctrines. We are without an excuse when we look to that "one faith" and "one Lord" and "one Baptism" when we ponder the myriads of conflicting doctrines and practices within the corporate body of Christ. Somebody got off tract and it was not the Jew who yet today follow the faith and religion of Sinai. Can you guess who erred?

Answer for yourself: Where is the "faith once given to the saints"? (Jude 1:3).

WAS YESHUA TO CREATE A NEW RELIGION AND REPLACE JUDAISM WITH WHAT WE HAVE TODAY OR WAS HE A REFORMER WITHIN JUDAISM?

Any time Judaism is mentioned along with the Law you can hear sincere Christians respond: "I am not under the Law". Such responses come from a fear of legalism and a return to bondage. But such statements are based upon an inadequate knowledge and understanding of Judaism in the first place. Although that is often the reaction of some when one does something that appears to be Jewish in nature we must remember that Yeshua said, "Think not (although some still do) that I am come to destroy the law...". Contrary to what you might think or have been told Yeshua was not advocating a legalistic system for achieving righteousness, nor was he attempting to terminate the Law, which is the guideline or pattern for moral discipline, praise and worship. Biblical Judaism was simply God's chosen system of praise, worship and service.

Yeshua did not come to start a new religion for the world, let alone his church which he was to build. Yeshua came to reform Biblical Judaism (Sinai faith) which was intended by both him and his Father to be the faith taken to the Gentiles in the Great Commission because within it we find the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah for the Gentile world as their covenant with God.

Clearly "Christ is the end [the Greek word for "end" in this verse is actually the word "goal"] of the law for righteousness" (Romans 10:4). Christ-likeness is the goal and when we examine the life of "the Christ" among us then we see that he adhered to Judaism and taught repentance toward the Laws and Commandments of God which frame one's Covenant with God.

For example, Yeshua never terminated the Passover celebration. He never intended that we replace the Passover and substitute Easter observance [a pagan festival and rite] for the Passover which was given and commanded by God for both Jews and Gentiles alike. Sadly for most of us, although most of us are unaware, our churches, some on a weekly basis, substitute "crackers" and "grape juice" as a pseudo-Communion for the Passover which was to be celebrated only ONCE A YEAR. When this principle of reform is understood and the "fear factor" is eliminated, the Church is going to see an accelerated restoration of Judeo-Christianity. Charges of legalism and of being Judaizers in the historic context will diminish. Taking the former as an wide example for all the Festival day, we as Christians have failed to heed Yeshua's warning to worship the Father in Spirit and in Truth for our worship is flawed and unacceptable to our Father for the most part if we follow the traditional pattern of most churches where paganism is mixed with Biblical Judaism. The sad fact is that most of the church is unlearned and uninformed about such things because their focus has been limited to redemption only to the exclusion of other important doctrines in the Bible such as worship and teaching.

THIS IS NOT TO BE UNDERSTOOD AS LEGALISM..BUT OPPORTUNITIES TO DRAW CLOSER TO GOD THROUGH REPENTANCE & OBEDIENCE TO HIS WORD

Having understood the above warning from Yeshua in John 4, the return to Judeo-Christianity through intense study and repentance, thus leading to a return to a more Biblical pattern of worship of the Father cannot be construed as legalism or a return to religious bondage. Those who say different are simply wrong and have failed to grasp the real message of the Scriptures.

"An over-Hellenized over-Latinized Christianity needs a re-Judaizing process to bring it back to its founding Jewish roots and RENEW it more in keeping with its own inherent ideals." (Edward Flannery- Catholic scholar)

HOW THE NON-JEWISH BELIEVER LOST THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS

Discerning Christian scholars are beginning to recognize the record of the Holy Scriptures and the truth of history. In a very real sense Gentile Christians have been discriminated against by their own leadership. They have been denied their right of equal access to the Judaic heritage guaranteed them by the New Testament. Presbyterian scholar Harry E. Gaylord described it accordingly, "The Christians, as they were eventually called, did not have a uniform approach to Jewish law, but they were not trying to break away from Judaism. They were a group within Judaism trying to make their views normative. First generation Christianity was a part of Biblical Judaism, but the next generation would depart from it."

Answer for yourself: Since the inherent Jewishness of the gospel of Yeshua is so clear in the first century, the obvious question is, "What brought the massive divorcement of Christianity from Biblical Judaism?"

For the answer one need only trace the course of history. After the death of the apostle Paul and the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, subsequent generations, which included more and more Gentiles, made every effort to remove all traces of Jewishness from the gospel of Yeshua. As the Church became increasingly Hellenized (Greek) and Latinized (Roman), many of the concepts of polytheism (other gods) began to appear, gain prominence and become entrenched in the Church. Not only that but the Gentile Church began to collect the writings of the earliest believers in Yeshua and corrupt them through numerous alterations whereby purposeful misquotations and mistranslations of the Prophets were used to create new ideas that were foreign to the original writers. Many Jewish texts were taken out of context on purpose and edited in the Gentile Church's canon of Scripture called the New Testament. Misquotations, mistranslations, and misapplications of the "inspired Old Testament", the Bible Yeshua used, became replete within the pages of the Bible you carry today. And you are not aware most likely because you have, since you are a New Testament Christian instead of an Old Testament Christian, never verified for yourself if what you are reading in your Christian Old and New Testament is a faithful representation of what the Prophets and Moses wrote. You have taken for granted that the New Testament is correct, for after all, it has a black binder which says "Holy Bible" on it. You accepted such a document without question...or should I say "by faith". You have been deceived and not know it...that is up to now. The Church remains a victim of many of these elements today because few study such things...and if you do you are "suspect" by your Pastor. Today's Christian has been brainwashed to prefer "preaching" instead of "study". Yet when I try to find "preaching" as gift to the church I only find the "teacher" instead. Sadly the Christian Church today needs to pray that God send them courageous teachers for only when the teacher does his job is the congregation equipped to be the real proclaimers or "preachers". We have it just backwards today. In spite of such deception restoration and doctrinal renewal for the Church is on God's agenda (Deut. 32:2). Many are beginning study for themselves and come to the point in their lives where they are beginning to "...ask for the old paths, where is the good way..." (Jer.6: 16). They will be the prophetic ones who "....shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in" (Isaiah 58:12). Bet Emet Ministries is one of many who have felt the call to return to the old paths which is the good way, and in doing so, build the waste places destroyed by Gentile Christian anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism. In our pursuit to return to the "faith once given to the saints" we may not have Gentile Christianity's support, but rest confidently in the fact that we are raising up David's tabernacle in fulfillment of Scripture by helping to restore the paths and foundations for many who seek the truth about the God of the Bible. Shalom.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

The present renewal of the Church in Spirit is going to result in a renewal and restoration of Biblical truth in the area of worship and practice.

Answer for yourself: What is the end purpose of and need for this Judeo-Christian restoration?

Quite simply said Paul said it best in the book of Ephesians. Notice this was written to the non-Jew and not the Jew. This is of utmost importance and remains so for the Gentile Christian today.

Eph 2:11-12 11 Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; 12 That at that time ye were without Messiah, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: (KJV)

After reading the above verse you can more easily understand why "salvation is of the Jews" and not the Church. The non-Jew has nothing apart from Israel and the Revelation of God given to them by the Jews. Only when the non-Jewish believer come to the startling understanding that much of his religious belief system is based upon a corrupted, adulterated, an flawed document, his Christian Bible, will he be able to fully understand why the Jews, who do not accept the New Testament, are the ONLY bearers of true salvation in the world today. Only after verifying through diligent personal study for yourself what I said is the truth will you then be able to "fulfill" the following passage, not only in your life, but before the God you love.

Eph 4:13 13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Messiah: (KJV)

The trip for the contemporary Christian believer to acquire such knowledge is long and hard. Many, many tears will flow as he is confronted with the startling facts and realization that he has believed "the lie" which we were warned about to avoid. Anger for being victim to such deception is unavoidable. Only by the grace of God will compassion come to cleans such anger whereby you can experience the compassion of God for your fellow believers who are still trapped in such lies and false religion. May God speed your hunger for truth and your discipline to acquire it. You are a valuable piece of God's puzzle, for without you "unity of the faith once given to the saints will impossible". Shalom. Craig Lyons M.Div.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH THE GENTILE AS PICTURED IN THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES

Before we examine the New Testament for examples of how the non-Jew and God-fearer related to the "Pattern of Worship" we need familiarize ourselves with the terms for them used in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Old Testament. The following is taken from the Encyclopedia Judaica.

Ancient Israel was acquainted with two classes of "Gentiles" or "strangers" and we find references to them in the Old Testament:

- The resident aliens who lived with the Jewish people long-term
- The foreigners who considered their sojourn in the land more or less temporary

The "foreigner" were referred to as zarim (Myrz) or nokhrim (Myrkn), terms generally applied to anyone outside the circle the writer had in view (e.g., Ex. 21:8; 29:33). They retained their ties to their original home and sought to maintain their former political or social status. On occasion they came as invaders (II Sam. 22:45-46; Obad. 11). More often they entered the land in the pursuit of trade and other commercial ventures.

Answer for yourself: What is of importance in our study concerning the "Pattern of Worship" that might be noticed concerning the "resident alien" and the "foreigner"? Concerning "the foreigner" the usual laws were not applicable to them, and they were protected by folk traditions concerning the proper treatment of strangers (cf. Job 31:32) and by special conventions resulting from contractual arrangements between the Israelites and their neighbors (cf. I Kings 20:34). In the legislation of Deuteronomy, an Israelite may charge a foreigner usury though he may not do so to a fellow Israelite (Deut. 23:21), and the septennial remission of debts does not apply to the debts of foreigners (Deut. 15:3).

Of importance for our study concerning the "Pattern of Worship" it is important to note that the "stranger" or "foreigner" was barred from the cult (Ex. 12:43):

Exod 12:43-45 43 And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover: There shall no stranger eat thereof: 44 But every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof. 45 A foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof. (KJV)

Also of importance for our study concerning the "Pattern of Worship" it is important to note that the "stranger" or "foreigner" was not bound by the ritual laws, and it was permissible to sell him animals that had died a natural death (Deut. 14:21):

Deut 14:21 21 Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it unto an alien: for thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk. (KJV)

The fact that Deuteronomy includes a special prohibition against foreigners' ascending the throne (Deut. 17:15) and that Solomon specifically requested that God listen to their prayers (1 Kings 8:41) may indicate the important position some foreigners occupied during the age of the monarchy.

I King 8:41-43 41 Moreover concerning a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake; 42 (For they shall hear of thy great name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched out arm;) when he shall come and pray toward this house; 43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for: that all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that this house, which I have builded, is called by thy name. (KJV)

NOW...LET US LOOK AT THE RESIDENT ALIEN..."THE GER"-PROSELYTE

In contrast with the foreigner, the ger, the resident alien, lived more or less permanently in his adopted community. Like the Arabic "jar", he was "the protected stranger," who was totally dependent on his patrons for his well-being. As W.R. Smith noted, his status was an extension of that of the guest, whose person was inviolable, though he could not enjoy all the privileges of the native. He, in turn, was expected to be loyal to his protectors (Gen. 21:23):

Gen 21:23-24 23 Now therefore swear unto me here by God that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned. 24 And Abraham said, I will swear. (KJV)

Of MAJOR importance for our study in identifying and recovering "the Pattern of Worship" we must notice that this "resident alien" in Israel was bound by the Laws of the Jews (Num. 15:15-16).

Num 15:15-16 15 One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you(the resident gentile), an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD. 16 One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that this commandment of obedience to these "ordinances" was to be FOREVER for both the Jew and the non-Jew who is akin with Israel? How long is "forever"?

Answer for yourself: What is an "ordinance"?

Strong's Concordance: # 2708 chuqqah (khook-kaw'); feminine of 2706, and meaning substantially the same: KJV-- appointed, custom, manner, ordinance, site, statute. 2706 choq (khoke); from 2710 (root word); an enactment; hence, an appointment (TIME, space, quantity, labor or usage): KJV-- appointed, bound, commandment, convenient, custom, decree (-d), due, law, measure, X necessary, ordinance (-nary), portion, set time, statute, task.

In order to make sure you see this let me reiterate. God commanded of the non-Jew who gathers with, assemble with, or dwell with Israel to observe the same "appointed times", the same "appointed customs", the same "necessary set times", the same "commandments", the same "appointments in time" which were commanded of the Jews. This dear ones, these appointed times, are the Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths of the Lord.

Brown-Driver Briggs Hebrew Lexicon teaches the above as does the Strong's Concordance but they go one step further: The word also carries the idea of "standing in awe" together with the Jews when they stand before YHWH.

Now for a real shocker. On the contrary, the Israelites themselves were gerim (Ex. 22:20) as were their ancestors (Gen. 15:13; cf. 23:4; Ex. 2:22).

Ex. 22:20 And a stranger shalt thou not wrong, neither shalt thou oppress him; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

Gen. 15:13 13 And He said unto Abram: 'Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years;

Gen. 23:4 4 'I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight.'

Ex. 2:22 22 And she bore a son, and he called his name Gershom; for he said: 'I have been a stranger in a strange land.'

Aliens were apparently attracted to their ranks when they left Egypt (Ex. 12:38, 48), and their numbers were further augmented during the time of the conquest of Canaan (Josh. 9:3ff.). By far the greatest number of gerim consisted of the earlier inhabitants of Canaan, many of whom were neither slain as Deuteronomy commands (cf. e.g., 7:2) nor reduced to total slavery (cf. I Kings 5:29; II Chron. 2:16–17). Immigrants also were numbered among them—foreigners who sought refuge in times of drought and famine (cf. Ruth 1:1) and refugees who fled before invading armies.

Since all of the landed property belonged to Israelites (cf. Lev. 25:23–24), the gerim were largely day laborers and artisans (Deut. 24: 14–15; cf. 29:10). Both the Book of the Covenant which classed them among those who were dependent (Ex. 23:12) and the Decalogue which referred to them as "your stranger" (gerkha; Ex. 20:10; cf. Deut. 5:14) attest their inferior position in Israelite society. While a few acquired wealth (cf. Lev. 25:47), most of them were poor and were treated as the impoverished natives. Thus, they were permitted to share in the fallen fruit in the vineyard (Lev. 19:10), the edges of the field, and the gleanings of the harvest (Lev. 23:22). Like the other poor folk they were also granted a share in the tithe of the third year (Deut. 14:29) and the produce of the Sabbatical Year (Lev. 25:6).

Since the foreigners' defenselessness made them vulnerable, the Israelites were frequently reminded of God's special concern for the weak (Ex. 22:21–22; cf. Deut. 10:17–19) and were enjoined not to molest them (Ex. 22:20; cf. Jer. 7:6). They were not to be abused (Deut. 24:14) and were to receive equal treatment before the law (Deut. 1:16; cf. 24:17; 27:19). In case of accidental homicide, the cities of refuge were open to them as well (Num. 35:15), or there was to be "one standard for stranger and citizen alike" (Lev. 24:22).

Lev 24:22 22 Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country: for I am the LORD your God. (KJV)

Moreover, the Israelites were enjoined to be especially solicitous of the welfare of the ger and to befriend him as one of their own, since they could recall the sufferings of their own people in the land of Egypt (Lev. 19:34; cf. Deut. 10:19).

With the passage of time, the gerim were assimilated culturally and religiously. Doeg the Edomite, for instance, was a worshiper of YHWH by the time of Saul (I Sam. 21:8), as was Uriah the Hittite in the reign of David (II Sam. 11:11). Hence, the ger, in contrast to the nokhri, was required in many cases to conform to the ritual practices of the native Israelite.

That means they shared the same "Pattern of Worship"!

THE PATTERN OF WORSHIP AS APPLIED TO THE GER AND RESIDENT ALIEN GENTILES & NON-JEWS

Thus, gerim were subject to the same laws as were the Jews in the following areas:

- Non-Jews were concerned with ritual purification (Num. 9:2–14) and the observance of the Passover (immersion/mikvah was required before observance as well).
- Non-Jews concerned with laws of incest (Lev. 18:26).
- Non-Jews were observant of some of the food taboos (Lev. 17:10–16 [prohibition of eating blood and immersion/mikvah connected with repentance] but cf. Deut. 14:21).
- Non-Jews were expected to observe the Sabbath (Ex. 20:10; Deut. 5:14),
- Non-Jews were expected to participate in the religious festivals like the Passover, Unleavened Bread, Shavuot (Pentecost), Tabernacles, (Deut. 16:1–22),
- Non-Jews were to undergo Mikvahs/immersion which was required before observance of Festivals like Shavuot [Pentecost] ("being born again") (Exodus 19:10–11).
- Non-Jews were expected to fast on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:1–34).
- Non-Jews were permitted to offer up burnt offerings (Lev. 17:8; 22:18; Num. 15:1–16.) and,
- Non-Jewish males must be circumcised in order to partake of the sacrificed paschal lamb (Ex. 12:48–50; Num. 9:14).

Above we just looked at many ways the non-Jew was instructed concerning various commandments concerning worship that applied to him as one who "stood besides Israel" in the worship of the God of Israel. We saw without a doubt that these non-Jews who worshipped the God of Israel were required to keep the Sabbath, the Biblical Festivals like Passover (Pesach), Unleavened Bread (Hag Ha Matzah), Pentecost (Shavuot), the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), the Festival of Tabernacles, the Sabbath, be immersed or mikvahed prior to observance of these "appointed times" with God, to be circumcised if they were to observe the Passover and partake of the lamb, to fast on prescribed holy days, to refrain from blood and other food laws (Laws of Noah), as well as various morality laws.

Indeed, they, no less than the Israelites, were expected to be loyal to YHWH (Lev. 20:2; cf. Ezek. 14:5–8). This loyalty did not require of these non-Jews that they keep all of the 613 mitzvot given to the Jews but many of them as we have seen. Beyond the minimum of the 66 Laws of Noah we see the concept of Isa. 56 being factored in here where the non-Jew was required to "chose things that please YHWH" which were over the minimum Laws of Noah.

YET THERE WERE DIFFERENCES

However, social differences did remain, and some gerim were better received than others. While third generation offspring of Edomites and Egyptians might "be admitted into the congregation of the Lord" (Deut. 23:8–9), Ammonites and Moabites were not to be admitted "even in the tenth generation" (23:4). Furthermore, even while the Holiness Code admonished Israelites not to subject their fellows to slavery (Lev. 25:39), they were specifically permitted to do so to the children of resident aliens (25:45–46). A Hebrew slave belonging to a ger could be redeemed immediately, and if not redeemed served until the Jubilee Year (25:47ff.), but one belonging to an Israelite served until the Jubilee (25:39ff.). Correspondingly, a Hebrew could serve as a hired or bound laborer (25:40) of an Israelite, but only as a hired laborer of an alien (25:50). Indeed, the humble position of the ger generally was emphasized by the usage of the term in the Holiness Code: e.g., "The land is Mine; you are but strangers resident with Me" (25:23; cf. 25:35,).

In practice, of course, there were Israelites who became propertyless and destitute and had to support themselves as day laborers (Deut. 24:14; cf. Lev. 19:13), and no doubt there were also gerim who became prosperous and acquired land. This narrowed the gap between the two classes and resulted in frequent intermingling. Marriages between the two groups did take place, only marriages between Israelites and the aboriginal inhabitants of Palestine being prohibited in Deuteronomy 7:3–4. On close examination it appears that even in the theory (and it was hardly more) of the author of Ezra-Nehemiah only marital alliances with the non-Israelites of Palestine were illegitimate, because the laws of Deuteronomy 7:3–4 and 23:3–9 applied to them. The absorption of converts from other nations is reported with equanimity—Ezra 2:59–60 (= Neh. 7:61–62); Ezra 6:21; Nehemiah 10:29 ("and everyone who withdrew from the uncleanness of the peoples of the lands [note the plural] to the teaching of God"). The phenomenon of such conversions is alluded to in Isaiah 56:3 and Zechariah 2:15; 8:20ff., and the predictions of the conversion of the gentiles in Isaiah and Jeremiah are well known. In late Second Temple times, the term ger had become virtually synonymous with "proselyte," and strangers were admitted to the religious fellowship of Israel (Jos., Apion, 2:28).

THE GER TOSHAV AND THE LAWS OF NOAH

Whereas, as stated, the word "ger" in the Bible was taken to refer to the proselyte, the ger toshav, the "resident stranger," was regarded as belonging to a different and special character. He was a non-Jew who accepted some, but not all of the commandments of the Torah, as a result of which he was permitted to reside in the land of Israel and enjoy many of the privileges of citizenship. Various views are expressed by the rabbis as to the qualifications which entitle the resident gentile to be accepted as a ger toshav, ranging from the renunciation of idolatry to one who accepts the whole of the discipline of the Torah with the exception of the dietary laws \(Av. Zar. 64b\).

Answer for yourself: How did Judaism settle this difference of opinion?

The halakhah was decided that it applies to the person accepting the seven "Noachide Laws" \(Maim. Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 14:7; Sh. Ar., YD 124:1\). The laws, privileges, and restrictions of the ger toshav are exhaustively dealt with in the Talmud. As, however, it was laid down that the acceptance of a ger toshav was permitted only during the period that the Jubilee was in force, and that law was no longer in power in Talmudic times, the discussion was purely academic.

We at Bet Emet have a website dealing exclusively with and in-depth concerning the Laws and Covenant of Noah for your futher study.

THE NON-JEW AND HIS RETURN TO GOD'S SABBATHS WHICH CONSTANTINE OUTLAWED

Answer for yourself: Why don't we as Christians and followers of Jesus and "the Christ" keep and observe the Biblical Holy Days in the Christian Church today?

We can begin to look at Constantine to find the loss of the Biblical Holy Days and the Sabbath for the non-Jew.

Let us learn an important truth from 2 Thess. 2:3

"Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day will not come unless the falling away comes first, and the man of sin is revealed, the son of perdition who apposes and exalts himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped so that he sits as God in the temple of God."

Let us look no further than Constantine to be one of many who fulfills this passage. As far as the history of christianity is concerned, Constantine was one of the most influential men that ever lived. From the Writings of the Apostles (Gospel's), until Martin Luther nailed his theses to the church door in 1517, there was no single person that so changed the course of church history as Constantine did. Indeed, his influence was so vast that it continues to tower over Christendom in this, our own time. Both in church customs, doctrines and in church government, christianity owes sunday and a lot more to Constantine's intervention.

It may be news to you but Constantine began to change the Biblical Holy Days, forsaking the Shabbot and assigning Sunday as God's day. He outlawed the 7 Biblical Festivals and Feasts of God as well. He replaced them with pagan holidays derived from Sun Worship which find their origins with men. If we look at the Shabbot this should not be surprising to us for after all, the Gentiles (pagans) were already used to Sunday worship due to their background in "Sunday" - "Sun" worship. The logic of Constantine was very simple: "As more and more Gentiles came into the faith, why make them learn of God's Holy Sabbath and His Laws?" The root for all these changes comes from his intense antisemitism and hatred of the Jews as we find in his Easter Letter.

At the beginning of the 4th century, a monumental event occurred for the Church. In AD 306, Constantine became the first Christian Roman Emperor. At first, he had a rather pluralistic view and accorded Jews the same religious rights as Christians. However, in AD 321, he made Christianity the official religion of the Empire. This signaled the end of the persecution of Christians, but the beginning of discrimination and persecution of the Jewish people.

Already at a council in Elvira (Spain) in AD 305, declarations were made to keep Jews and Christians apart, including ordering Christians not to share meals with Jews, not to marry Jews, not to use Jews to bless their fields, and not to observe the Jewish Sabbath.

Imperial Rome, in AD 313, issued the Edict of Milan, which granted favor to Christianity, while outlawing synagogues.

Then, in AD 315, another edict allowed the burning of Jews if they were convicted of breaking the laws. As Christianity was becoming the religion of the state, further laws were passed against the Jews:

- The ancient privileges granted to the Jews were withdrawn.
- Rabbinical jurisdiction was abolished or severely curtailed.
- Proselytism was prohibited and made punishable by death.
- Jews were excluded from holding high office or a military career.

These and other restrictions were confirmed over and over again by various Church councils for the next 1,000 years.

In AD 321, Constantine decreed all business should cease on "the honored day of the sun." By substituting Sunday for Saturday as the day for Christian worship, he further advanced the split. This Jewish Shabbat / Christian Sunday controversy also came up at the first real ecumenical Council of Nicea (AD 325), which concluded Sunday to be the Christian day of rest, although it was debated for long after that.

Answer for yourself: What should this tell us? Simply that up until the early 4th century non-Jewish believers in God were taught to keep and observe the Sabbath along with the Jews!

Overnight, Christianity was given the power of the Imperial State, and the emperors began to translate the concepts and claims of the Christian theologians against the Jews and Judaism into practice. Instead of the Church taking this opportunity to spread its Gospel message in love, it truly became the Church Triumphant, ready to vanquish its foes (first it was the Jews and later it would be Gnosticism and any who would dare to disbelieve the imperial religious doctrine).

After 321, the writings of the Church fathers changed in character. No longer was it on the defensive and apologetic, but aggressive, directing its venom at everyone "outside of the flock," in particular the Jewish people who could be found in almost every community and nation.

1Thes 1:9 9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; (KJV)

The above passage refers to Non-Jews who turned from idols to serve the living God of the Jews. They had just come out of idolatry. And that was fine when gentiles first entered the faith. They didn't know the Law, that they had a Covenant with God or that God expected of them to observe and keep His "appointed times" and Holy Days" like the Sabbath. But they could learn. They attended the synagogues, on Shabbot and observed "ALL" of the Jewish Biblical Holy Days. But Constantine and others made sure they did not continue to learn the Ways of God. He made sure that everything Jewish was removed from the then "existing" church.

You might want to look up the word "gentile". It means pagan. It means anyone outside Judeo Christian faith. Webster's dictionary states: "Gentile....anyone belonging to a non Jewish nation; anyone who is not a JEW OR A CHRISTIAN." Yet Christians today claim the title of Gentile. This is part of the Lie that Constantine started and it obviously continues today. If you are a believer in the God of Israel through Yeshua then you are no longer a Gentile. You are grafted in to the Olive tree, which is Israel. And that being so then you should resemble Israel in your worship!

Rom 11:24 24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Have you ever noticed that any reference to Yeshua and the early church being a part of Judaism brings accusations of "Pharisee" "Legalist" and after that comes "one who would stone Christ" and finally "Christ Killers". This kind of talk brought us the Inquisition, the Crusades and the Holocaust.

CONSTANTINE'S COUNTERFEIT JESUS

A terrible deception has occurred and the vast majority of 2.5 billion Christians haven't a clue. Today in Gentile Christianity we have accepted a Constantine Jesus instead of the Jewish Messiah. Through Constantine's clever ruse of "replacement religion" we have centered in Christianity today not a Jewish Messiah but a Gentile Messiah. This person will look for all the world like the Messiah pictured in Christian paintings. He will look extremely "Gentile". This false messiah has and will continue to infiltrate the church. He will speak of Easter and Christmas and Sunday as if they were God's Holy Days. He will not allow Sabbath worship. He will declare Sunday as the Sabbath Day. As long as you worship the "Gentile Jesus" you won't have to worry about persecution. Nobody is going to bother you. You will be safe in your church and deceived the false comfort provided by errant theology. All this because you believed The Lie. The lie that you are separate from Israel. The lie that says the Olive tree is dead. The lie that says the Law is dead. The lie that says you are somehow better than Israel because you will be 'taken out' of the world in the day of Jacob's trouble. And the lie that says the Commandments of Almighty God are passed away. The lie says that you, as a Gentile Christian believer, have replaced Israel and that you are "the New Israel".

TIME TO STUDY FOR YOURSELF AND EXPOSE THIS LIE

Rom 11:17-18 17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree (Israel); 18 Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee. (KJV)

We must begin at the beginning; namely with the Biblical Calendar. We can call this for all practical purposes the Jewish Calendar for I have found, as you will if you do the study, that "Jewish" is a synonym for "Biblical". I wish that could be said for the Christian Church but it simply is not so; in fact the opposite is more often the rule. The Lord's Calendar is a diary of His Appointments of His "appointed times" with mankind. These are specific times on which He wants to meet with us. The word 'set time' in Hebrew is "moed". It means an 'appointment' and a 'rehearsal'. These are appointments set in eternity as rehearsals for what is to come. We find time and time again when consulting the Hebrew words for the non-Jewish believer in God in the Hebrew Scriptures example after example of the non-Jew keeping and observing the Sabbath and the these Biblical "appointed times" and Biblical Festivals and Feasts with the Jew in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Old Testament. Many never see this for they know not where or how to look or study at this level. Words like "alien", "foreigner" and "stranger" go unnoticed in the Old Testament in contexts regarding these Holy Days of the Lord yet everyone of them is a beautiful picture of the overall "Pattern of Worship" given by God to all His children; to all mankind. Again and again God emphasizes to both the Jew as well as the non-Jew that we are to keep the Feasts at their appointed time as "rehearsals" for Eternity.

In verse 14 we read, "A foreigner living among you who wants to celebrate the LORD's Passover must do so in accordance with its rules and regulations. You must have the same regulations for the foreigner and the native-born."

Isa 56:1-2 1 Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. 2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil. (KJV)

But you read the above verse thinking this was a commandment for the Jew only most likely. But let us keep reading.

Isa 56:6-7 6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant; 7 Even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer: their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people (nations). (KJV)

Wow. Here we have the example of non-Jews keeping the Sabbath of God let alone participating in Temple worship and the Sacrificial System. It would appear to me and hopefully you that these non-Jews are definitely "grafted" into the Israel of God more so than Christians today regardless of what they want to believe about themselves.

Isa 56:8 8 The Lord GOD which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather others to him, beside those that are gathered unto him. (KJV)

Take a look at this chapter and you will see the church as it was/is supposed to be. We were supposed to learn about and keep the Lord's Sabbaths (the weekly sabbath as well as God's "High Sabbath" which are more commonly known as the Biblical Festivals and Feasts. We are plainly Commanded here to keep the Sabbaths of the Lord. We are now getting the chance to learn and do as many are returning to the Hebrew roots of the church. Let us do so in thanksgiving and delight.

GENTILES AND JEWISH CLASSIFICATION

In the Jewish worldview all gentiles who are ethical monotheists will achieve salvation. Judaism does not denigrate gentiles and does not see them as condemned to eternal damnation. Rather we see them as fellow human beings, from other nations, searching for God and for meaning in life. Judaism wishes them well with their search and celebrates those who succeed in becoming ethical monotheists. Jews are obligated in many rituals and ceremonies and those Jews who fail to fulfill these rituals are considered sinners. Gentiles, however, are not obligated in these commandments and are only obligated to be ethical monotheists. Those who fulfill this obligation receive their full reward in the world-to-come.

There are three main categories of gentiles [see R. Yom Tov ben Avraham Alshevili, Chiddushei HaRitva, Makkot 9a n.].

THE NOACHIDE MONOTHEIST:

This person is generally called a Ben Noach (or Noachide) meaning a proud descendant of the biblical Noah. In the Jewish tradition Noah and his sons were commanded to fulfill seven commandments which amount to ethical monotheism [see Aaron Lichtenstein, The Seven Laws of Noah]. Those gentiles who observe these commandments are considered righteous gentiles. They are, however, not Jews and are not considered part of Jewish society. They are righteous people and recognized for their accomplishments. However, they remain part of the human brotherhood but not part of Jewish society.

THE GER TOSHAV: NON-JEWS WHO GO BEYOND THE LAWS OF NOAH AND WHO, BEFORE A BET DIN (COURT) VOW TO OBSERVE THEIR COMMANDMENTS AS ETHICAL MONOTHEISTS

The Path of the Righteous Gentile states: "When one of the Children of Noah resolves to fulfill the Seven Universal Laws, his or her soul is elevated. This person becomes one of the Chasidei Umot Haolam - Pious Ones of the Nations - and receives a share of the Eternal World. The Holy Scriptures calls one who accepts the yoke of fulfilling the Seven Universal Laws a Ger Toshav - a Proselyte of the Gate. This person is permitted to live in the land of Israel and to enter to the Holy Temple in Jerusalem and to offer sacrifices to the God of Israel."

As the Rambam explains, the Ger Toshav is a person that actively accepted upon himself in front of a Jewish Bet Din to fulfill these Mitzvot, in a way that's similar to conversion. [According to some opinions he undergoes Brit milah (circumcision or the drawing of blood from his penis as well already circumcised). As opposed to a regular goy that adheres to the 7 Noahide laws out of his or her own rational understanding, feeling that that's the "humane thing to do", and has not committed him/herself to keep these laws on a definite basis, the "Ger Toshav" consciously accepts that Hashem, our God, commanded him to keep them (through Moshe) and for that basic reason, he/she is fully committed to fulfilling them. Moreover, if he is interested in keeping more than the basic seven laws, he can commit himself to more Mitzvot at the time of his "conversion", and can even accept upon himself Shmirat Shabbat- something that a regular goy is forbidden to do. A "Ger Toshav" can come to Bet din and decide upon any number of Mitzvot from the minimum seven up to a maximum of 613, and from that point on is obliged to keep them. A "Ger To Shav" cannot accept all 613 Mitzvot- because if he did, he'd simply be a... Jew! Here we find a non-Jew who not only accepts the Laws of Noah but understands and implements Isaiah 56 into his life and goes beyond the minimum observance as he "chooses those things that please God" as detailed in the texts of Isaiah 56.

By pledging that he will fulfill his obligation to be an ethical monotheist he enters Jewish society. He is not a convert and does not become Jewish. In fact, he can worship any monotheistic religion he chooses. He is, however, a righteous gentile and is gladly received into the Jewish community. He is welcome to live in Jewish neighborhoods (should he so choose), is supported by Jewish charities (if he so needs), and is considered part of the fabric of Jewish society in many ways [see Talmud Pesachim 21b; Talmud Avodah Zarah 65b; Nachmanides, Additions to Book of Commandments, 16; Maimonides, Mishneh Torah, Hilchot Zechi'ah Umattanah 3:11, Hilchot Melachim 10:12; Ra'avah of Posquieres, Comments to Mishneh Torah, Hilchot Issurei Biah 14:8]. Both the Ben Noach and the Ger Toshav are righteous gentiles. However, the Ben Noach has not entered Jewish society and perhaps does not wish to. Therefore, he is treated like a stranger. He is respected as a righteous human being, one who is fulfilling his divine purpose in the world. However, he is not part of the Jewish community.

GENTILES WHO ARE NOT MONOTHEISTS

The third category is of the gentile who is not an ethical monotheist. He is violating the covenant God made with Noah and his descendants and will be punished for those sins. It is with these people that Judaism has a very ambivalent attitude. On the one hand, they are acting contrary to God's purpose in the world. For this reason, Judaism tries to distance Jews from them. On the other hand, they are people created in God's image and must be respected as such. The compromise is that their positive traits, examples of which we will shortly see, are recognized and respected. However, their negative traits are never fully forgotten and full societal integration with such people is discouraged.

Those gentiles who have the status of Ger Toshav, who have requested acceptance into Jewish society and have pledged obedience to their commandments, are treated almost like Jews. Those who have the status of Ben Noach because they have not requested acceptance are respected but are not treated like brethren. They receive letter-of-the-law treatment because to treat them beyond that would be to detract from our brothers. What has a Ger Toshav gained if a Ben Noach is treated the same? What extra connection is there between fellow Jews and within the entire Jewish/Ger Toshav society if everyone is treated extra specially? Within the Jewish/Ger Toshav society all members, both Jewish and gentile, are joined together as a community united in its single goal of worshipping the one God. While Judaism treats all human beings with the respect due to someone created in the divine image, those within the Jewish/Ger Toshav society get slightly better treatment. They are handled above and beyond the letter of common human interaction.

There are those who point out these differences in treatment and wish to demonstrate that Judaism is anti-gentile. Quite the opposite. Judaism is one of the few religions that recognizes that even those outside its faith can be saved and allows them into its community. Righteous gentiles have a place in the world to come and can choose to join Jewish society if they wish. If they decline this invitation then they are given the full respect that these righteous people deserve. We shall show that the differences in treatment are reasonable and that all gentiles are treated honestly and respectfully.

CONVERSION OF THE GENTILE

There is ample evidence of a widespread conversion to Judaism during the period of the Second Temple, especially the latter part of the period, and the word ger, which in biblical times meant a stranger, or an alien, became synonymous with a proselyte.

Among the notable converts to Judaism may be mentioned the royal family of Adiabene, Aquila and/or Onkelos, Flavius Clemens, the nephew of Vespasian, and Fulvia, wife of Saturninus, a Roman senator. Unique, as the only case of forced conversion in Judaism, was the mass conversion of the Edomites by John Hyrcanus.

In addition to those outstanding figures, however, it is obvious that proselytism was widespread among the ordinary people. The statement of the New Testament that the Pharisees "compass sea and land to make one proselyte" (Matt. 23:15), suggesting a vigorous and active proselytization may possibly be an exaggeration, but on the other hand, the near pride which the rabbis took in the claim that some of their greatest figures were descended from proselytes point to an openhanded policy toward their acceptance. Such incidents as the different approach of Shammai and Hillel to the request to be taught the principles of Judaism by a potential proselyte (Shabb. 31a) and the incidental mention of "Judah the Ammonite proselyte" (Ber. 28a) point to the fact that the movement was not confined to the upper classes. In fact Josephus states explicitly that in his day the inhabitants of both Greek and barbarian cities evinced a great zeal for Judaism (Contra Ap. 2. 39).

It was during this period that the detailed laws governing the acceptance of proselytes were discussed and codified, and they have remained standard in Orthodox Judaism.

LAWS OF CONVERSION

The procedure, established by the tannaim, according to which a non-Jew may be accepted into the Jewish faith, was elucidated as follows: "In our days, when a proselyte comes to be converted, we say to him: 'What is your objective? Is it not known to you that today the people of Israel are wretched, driven about, exiled, and in constant suffering?' If he says: 'I know of this and I do not have the merit,' we accept him immediately and we inform him of some of the lighter precepts and of some of the severer ones... we inform him of the chastisements for the transgression of these precepts... and we also inform him of the reward for observing these precepts... we should not overburden him nor be meticulous with him..." (Yev. 47a; cf. Ger. 1, in: M. Higger, Sheva Massekhtot Ketannot (1930), 68–69). This text refers to a person who converted through conviction. The halakhah also accepts a posteriori, proselytes who had converted in order to marry, to advance themselves, or out of fear (Yev. 24b, in the name of Rav, see TJ, Kid. 4:1, 65b–d; Maim. Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 13:17; Sh. Ar., YD 268:12). The acceptance of a proselyte "under the wings of the Divine Presence" is equivalent to Israel's entry into the covenant, i.e., with circumcision, immersion, and offering a sacrifice (Ger. 2:4, in: M. Higger; loc. cit. 72).

A proselyte had to sacrifice a burnt offering either of cattle or two young pigeons. R. Johanan b. Zakkai instituted that in those times when sacrifice was no longer possible, a proselyte was not obliged to set aside money for the sacrifice (Ker. 9a). Therefore, only circumcision and immersion remained. R. Eliezer and R.

Joshua disagreed as to whether someone who immersed himself but was not circumcised or vice versa could be considered a proselyte. According to R. Eliezer, he is a proselyte, even if he performed only one of these commandments. R. Joshua, however, maintained that immersion was indispensable. The halakhic conclusion is that "he is not a proselyte unless he has both been circumcised and has immersed himself" (Yev. 46). The act of conversion must take place before a bet din, consisting of three members; a conversion carried out by the proselyte when alone is invalid (Yev. 46b–47a). There is a suggestion that the three members of the bet din must be witnesses only to his acceptance of the precepts but not to the immersion. Maimonides, however, decided (Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 13:7), that a proselyte who immersed himself in the presence of two members only is not a proselyte. The schools of Shammai and Hillel differed on the issue of a proselyte who had already been circumcised at the time of his conversion: "Bet Shammai states: 'One must draw from him the blood of circumcision'; Bet Hillel states: 'One need not draw the blood of circumcision from him'" (Tosef., Shah. 15:9; TB, Shab. 135a). Most of the rabbinic authorities decide in favor of Bet Shammai (Tos. to Shab. 135a; Maim. Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 14:5; Sh. Ar., YD 268:1), and "who hast sanctified us with Thy commandments and hast commanded us to circumcise proselytes and to draw from them the blood of the covenant" (Shab. 137b) is said in the circumcision benediction of proselytes.

A proselyte must observe all the precepts that bind Jews. The statement: "There shall be one law for the citizen and for the stranger that dwelleth amongst you" (Ex. 12:49), which refers to the paschal lamb, the sages interpreted to mean that the stranger (proselyte) was the equal of the citizen concerning all the precepts of the Torah (Mekh. Pisha, 15). They tried to equalize the status of the proselyte and that of the Jew; certain differences stemming from the origin of the convert, however, remained. According to an anonymous Mishnah, a proselyte may not confess himself after taking out the tithes since the statement occurs in the confession "the land which Thou hast given to us"; nor does he read the section on the first fruits, where the statement is: "which the Lord hath sworn unto our fathers to give unto us." The proselyte, praying by himself must say: "the God of the Fathers of Israel"; in the synagogue he says: "the God of your Fathers" (Ma'as. Sh. 5:14; Bik. 1:4). According to one tradition, R. Judah permitted a proselyte to read the section on the first fruits, claiming that Abraham was the father of the whole world (TJ, Bik. 1:4, 64a; but in Tosef., Bik. 1:2 this permission is only extended to the Kenites). The Palestinian amoraim, R. Joshua b. Levi and R. Avihu, agreed with R. Judah. The authorities (particularly R. Samson in his commentary to Bikkurim (ibid.), and Maimonides in his letter to Obadiah the Proselyte, below) in permitting a proselyte to say "the God of our Fathers" in the prayers based themselves on the same rationale.

A proselyte terminates all former family ties upon conversion and "is considered a newly born child (BORN AGAIN)." His Jewish name is not associated with that of his father and he is referred to as "the son of Abraham (our father)." Later, it became the custom to name the proselyte himself after the first Jew who knew his Creator "Abraham the son of Abraham." According to the letter of the law, a proselyte may marry his relatives. The sages, however, decreed against this "So that they should not say: 'We have come from a greater sanctity to a lesser sanctity'" (Yev. 22a, Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 14:12). The disqualifications pertaining to testimony of relatives in judicial cases of family members do not apply to the proselyte; his relatives also may not inherit from him. If no heirs were born to him after his conversion, his property and his possessions are considered not to belong to anyone, and whoever takes hold of them becomes their owner (BB 3:3, 4:9; Git. 39a; Yad, Zekhi'ah u-Mattanah 1:6).

A proselyte may marry a Jewish woman, even the daughter of a priest (Kid. 73a; Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 19:11; Sh. Ar., EH 7:22). A female proselyte, however, cannot marry a kohen, unless she was converted during childhood, not later than the age of three years and one day (Yev. 60b; Kid. 78a). R. Yose permits the marriage of the daughter of a male or female proselyte to a kohen; R. Eliezer b. Jacob, however, disputes the matter. The statement "From the day of the destruction of the Temple, the kohanim have preserved their dignity and followed the opinion of R. Eliezer b. Jacob" shows that tradition tended toward the latter's opinion. The amoraim, however, decided that he be followed only in those cases where the marriage has not yet taken place. If a female proselyte is already married to a kohen, she is not bound to leave him (Kid. 4:7; TB, Kid. 78b; Yad, Issurei Bi'ah 19:12). A proselyte may also marry a mamzer ("bastard"). According to some opinions, the permission may extend over ten generations, while others claim it should be only until his heathen origin is forgotten (Kid. 72b, 75a).

A proselyte cannot be appointed to any public office. The rabbis based their decision on the verse: "Thou shalt appoint over thee a king from among thy brothers—appointments shall be only from among thy brothers." This injunction does not apply to a proselyte whose mother or father are of Jewish origin (Yev. 45b; Kid. 76b; Tos. Sot. 41b, Yad, Melakhim 1:4). A proselyte may not hold the office of judge in a criminal court; he may act as such in a civil court (Sanh. 36b) and also judge a fellow proselyte, even in a criminal law case (Rashi to Yev. 102a). Unless one of his parents was born Jewish, most authorities bar a proselyte from acting as judge even in a civil court (Alfasi on Sanh. 4:2, Yad, Sanh. 2:9, 11:11). Others are of the opinion that even in a civil court he can only judge a fellow proselyte (Tos. Yev. 45b; Ra-Sh-BA on Yev. 102a).

THE GRAFTING OF THE GENTILES INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD #1

A sensible immigrant anywhere will normally accommodate himself to local custom. Unsubtle natives often demand such conformity, or else. Even cultured citizens regard it as a polite compliment. In either-case, the newcomer's speedy recognition of the beauty and wisdom of one's traditional ways is taken as a mark of the foreigner's perceptiveness and good taste. It is also a bid for warmer welcome and for better odds in favor of smooth integration. Such was God's perspective as well when He included the Gentile among His people... Israel.

To the natives of ancient Israel, even such mundane matters as what one ate (and when) or wore; how one plowed, planted, reaped, or built a house, came under priestly regulation (because God had commanded such in His Law at Sinai as well as later), was declared to be the law (Torah-instruction) of Israel's God.

Answer for yourself: Could the nice foreigner, eager to be the tactful guest, avoid involvement then in what we could call his hosts' religion?

It would not be easy. Perhaps he preferred participation. In that case he might come to share the natives' conviction that, for whatever success he enjoyed, he was beholden to their God whose "client" he had now become.

"Client" is a technical term for such a guest. The Hebrews had their own word for him-ger. Though most English versions of the Bible inveterately translate this word as "stranger," it often signifies "proselyte." For the utter alien whose dissociation from Israel's faith and fashion of life was total, Scripture employs more precise designations, such as the Hebrew words ben (son of) nechar, nachri, zar, and acher.

The ger was to "some degree" incorporated in the community of Israel. This implied religious affiliation. The varying degrees of affiliation were not clearly defined or categorized in Biblical antiquity, but would later become so. That came later.

Regardless of where he originated or what his ancestral faith, elementary morality was expected of every resident in ancient Israel. Monotheism might appeal to one ger; another might enjoy the Sabbath of the Hebrews or their holy dietary regimen but entertain reservations about circumcision. However, if and when a ger assumed all the group oblations (ethical, ethnic and ecclesiastic), he became a full-fledged member of the congregation of Israel (Grafted IN) and his progeny were legally indistinguishable from other Israelites.

Converts were probably not attracted to the religion of Israel primarily by its rituals. They might have been if these had been sacraments—as in the mystery cults and later in Christianity. Israel's religion offered no magical means of redemption; and never claimed "no salvation outside this church."

Answer for yourself: What then did appeal to men who had outgrown paganism?

The purity of Israel's God-concept; its freedom from idolatry, image worship and adoration of saints; its sublime ethics; its rational hopes for the future; its faith in such a Kingdom of God as, under His guidance, men of flesh and blood could build on earth.

For the enlightened heathen seeking Israel's God, an ancient Temple prayer, (prayed during the time of Jesus) requests God's gracious concern, expressing the trust that thus others may similarly be drawn to Him:

As for the alien (stranger) who does not belong to Thy people Israel, but who comes from a distant land for Thy sake (for men shall hear of Thy great fame . . .), when he comes and turns in prayer toward this temple, then do Thou hearken to this alien's petition . . . so that all nations in the world may learn what Thou art and worship Thee as does Thy people (I Kings 8:41 ff).

The Holy Bible In Basic English

And as for the man from a strange land, who is not of your people Israel; when he comes from a far country because of the glory of your name: 8:42 (For they will have news of your great name and your strong hand and your out-stretched arm;) when he comes to make his prayer, turning to this house: 8:43 Give ear in heaven your living-place, and give him his desire, whatever it may be; so that all the peoples of the earth may have knowledge of your name, worshipping you as do your people Israel, and that they may see that this house which I have put up is truly named by your name.

Answer for yourself: What does all of this mean that we as non-Jews are to learn to worship God as does the Jewish people?

Let us examine some of the Hebrew meanings to words in the above verse:

I Kings 8:41-43 41 Moreover concerning a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake; 42 (For they shall hear of thy great name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched out arm;) when he shall come and pray toward this house; 43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for: that all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that this house, which I have builded, is called by thy name. (KJV)

41 Moreover concerning the stranger that is not of Thy people Israel, when he shall come out of a far country for Thy name's sake-- 42 for they shall hear of Thy great name, and of Thy mighty hand, and of Thine outstretched arm--when he shall come and pray toward this house; 43 hear Thou in heaven Thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to Thee for; that all the peoples of the earth may know Thy name, to fear Thee, as doth Thy people Israel, and that they may know that Thy name is called upon this house which I have built.

Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon: 3372 yare'- 1) to fear, to revere, to be afraid a) (Qal) 1) to fear, to be afraid 2) to stand in awe of, to be awed 3) to fear, to show reverence, to honor, to respect b) (Niphal) 1) to be fearful, to be dreadful, to be feared 2) to cause astonishment and awe, to be held in awe 3) to inspire reverence or godly fear or awe c) (Piel) to make afraid, to terrify 2) Theological Wordbook of the Old Testament: to shoot, to pour

Strong's Concordance: 3372 yare' (yaw-ray'); a primitive root; to fear; morally, to revere; cause to frighten: KJV-- affright, be (make) afraid, dread (-ful), (put in) fear (-ful, -fully, -ing), (be had in) reverence (-end), X see, terrible (act, -ness, thing).

- Answer for yourself: Were prayers in the Temple, prayed by first century Jews as well as non-Jew for the Gentiles of the world to come to know God and worship Him and revere Him as did His people Israel?
- Answer for yourself: Were prayers in the Temple, prayed by first century Jews as well as non-Jews for the Gentiles of the world to come to understand God and acknowledge God in hopes that they would come to know of Him and ultimately revere and worship Him as did His people Israel?

- Answer for yourself: Were prayers in the Temple, prayed by first century Jews as well as non-Jews for the Gentiles of the world to come to know by experience God through the proper worship of Him as had Israel?
- Answer for yourself: Were prayers in the Temple, prayed by first century Jews in hopes that the Gentiles of the world might not only themselves come to know the true worship of God, but cause other fellow Gentiles as well to know God as they had?
- Answer for yourself: Were prayers in the Temple, prayed by first century Jews for the Gentiles of the world to come to revere (fear) and stand in awe of God, thus honoring Him and respecting Him?

Common to each of the above questions is the idea that Israel is the source as well as the example to all non-Jewish nations for the Revelation of God among mankind. We find this fact in both the Old and New Testaments as well.

Dearly beloved, I have begun to lead you to a path more pleasing to God than you have ever embarked before in your life. As we can see from the above examples we as Christian Gentiles and followers of "the Christ" are to worship God as does the Jewish people. They have the "Pattern of Worship" for us even today which we need to learn and follow. In this article, of which much is to follow, I will prove my point to you beyond any doubt: that as Christians we are to worship God according to the "Pattern of Worship" given by God for both the Jew as well as the Gentile.

LOOKING AT I CHRON. 28:11...A VERY IMPORTANT SCRIPTURE FOR OUR STUDY

1 Chr 28:10-15 10 Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it. 11 Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat, 12 And the pattern of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things: 13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

Let us look and examine the the Hebrew word for :service and see what we find hidden in the Hebrew:

The Strong's Concordance teaches us that the Hebrew word for "pattern" is as follows:

8403 tabniyth (tab-neeth'); from 1129; structure; by implication, a model, resemblance: KJV-- figure, form, likeness, pattern, similitude.

Strong's Concordance teaches us that the Hebrew word for "service" is as follows:

5656 `abodah (ab-o-daw'); or `abowdah (ab-o-daw'); from 5647; work of any kind: KJV-- act, bondage, + bondservant, effect, labour, ministering (-try), office, service (-ile, -itude), tillage, use, work, X wrought.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon: teaches us more as we look at the Hebrew word used for "service":

5656 `abodah or `abowdah- labor, service

- a) labor, work
- b) labor (of a servant or a slave)
- c) labor, service (of captives or subjects)
- d) service (of God)

Now let us look a little deeper into the root word for the Hebrew word "service" as taken from the Strong's Concordance:

5647 `abad (aw-bad'); a primitive root; to work (in any sense); by implication, to serve, till, (causatively) enslave, etc.: KJV-- X be, keep in bondage, be bondmen, bond-service, compel, do, dress, ear, execute, + husbandman, keep, labour (-ing man, bring to pass, (cause to, make to) serve (-ingself,)), (be, become) servant (-s), do (use) service, till (-er), transgress [from margin], (set a) work, be wrought, worshipper,

What we see from these words is that there is a "MINISTRY" and "SERVICE OF OR UNTO God" and a "worship of God" that was given by the Spirit of God according to a "PATTERN" that as bondservants of the Most High we are compelled to follow

Answer for yourself: Did you see the picture emerging from the above passages as these Hebrew words were explained in depth to you?

Now we see that there does for certain exist a "Pattern" of "service" or a "Pattern of ministry" of or unto God in the Hebrew Scriptures in the Old Testament but for our purposes we need to know if there exists such a "Pattern of service" or "Pattern of Worship" in the New Testament.

The sad fact of the matter is that as contemporary Christians we do not follow the pattern of worship which was given to David and which can be traced to continue until the 4th century, and our efforts at worship are often anything but reverence and honor toward God when we change HIS PATTERN OF WORSHIP and substitute man-made Sabbaths for the Sabbaths of God, substitute man-made holidays that originate from pagan sources and Sun Worship for the Almighty's Biblical Feast Days, and pervert the Tithe and Offerings as is being done by the vast majority of Christian Churches today. "It can't be" is probably your response. Let me assure you "we are Nadabs and Abihus in Christian garb." God is not pleased and you will not find out unless you study for yourself or you die, whatever comes first. It is our intention at Bet Emet Ministries to save you the shame destined for you in the world to come and lead you in a "more perfect way" as was Apollos by revealing to you these Biblical truths which have for too long been overlooked by too many. I ask you read this series of articles both with your mind and your heart. We at Bet Emet Ministries are eager to help you better understand the Hebraic meaning of the Scriptures which influence the most important part of your life...your worship and relationship with God. Now back to the teaching.

Jesus (Yeshua) prayed this Temple prayer often and it was, and still is his earnest desire and will that all Gentiles be reached with the message of God's salvation and come to the knowledge whereby they worship his Father in Spirit and in Truth. Notice, and this is very important, that the prayer is not only that we come to the knowledge of God and worship him, but that we as non-Jews WORSHIP GOD AS DOES THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL.

Please understand that not all worship is accepted by God. You only have to ask Nadab and Abihu and their stunning deaths in their first worship service speaks volumes that should alert us today to the fact that all worship is not accepted by God and even may be judged by God. In other words, the Temple prayer prayed by multitudes of Jews, as well as Jesus and his Apostles (which would later take the message of Gentile Salvation into all the world) was for the Gentile to learn the correct forms of worship that both honor God and show Him respect.

Answer for yourself: Does the observance of Easter or Passover please God? Which did God and Jesus command be observed? I'll give you a hint, it is not Easter!

Answer for yourself: Are you aware which of the above two religious observances was given to us by God and which was given to us by pagans?

Answer for yourself: Having understood that Easter is a pagan fornication festival adopted by the ancient Catholic Christian Church (check me out in your Encyclopedia) to which they added the name of Jesus (notice that Easter and Passover are TWO different dates on your calendar....why?), can you any longer participate in such an observance once you understand that God hates such things as He says in the Bible?

This is exactly what I am trying to make you understand. Observance of pagan forms and manifestations of worship always led Israel to be judged and taken into captivity.

Answer for yourself: What will be the fruit of such observances by the Christian Churches come judgment day?

More to follow in the next article. Shalom.

THE GRAFTING OF THE GENTILES INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD #2

Having seen in the first of this series of articles that there is a pattern for our worship given by God to David which laid out the way the Jews and non-Jews are to worship God, and understanding that “the” pattern for such worship existed well into the fourth century for both Jews and Gentiles before it was changed by the pagan leadership of Rome, let us continue in our study into how Gentiles are ingrafted into Israel and the responsibilities that it entails.

One alien (Gentile) from a distant land was the Syrian general, Naaman. He came not, it is true, to the temple of God, but to the "man of God," Elisha, asking a cure for his leprosy. His mission accomplished, he confessed:

Now I know that there is no God in all the earth except in Israel (II Kings 5:15)

Elisha did not seek in any way to persuade Naaman to become a proselyte or a convert to Judaism. The prophet merely accepted his simple promise of faithfulness to God and blessed him at their leave-taking.

When, long centuries later, a antisemitic Gospel writer, ignoring his master's rule against anger and abusive name-calling, raged:

Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you scour sea and land to make a single proselyte, and when he is converted you make him a son of hell twice as bad as yourselves. (Matthew 23:15)

Hidden in his haystack of hyperbole was one slim needle of truth. Converts were always welcome in Israel.

Answer for yourself: Does the New Testament teach that God shows no partiality, but welcomes the man of any nation who reveres Him and does what is right. (Acts 10:35)?

Acts 10:35 35 But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that there is two requirements to be "accepted with God"?

What does the word "nation" mean in the above verse?

The Strong's Concordance teaches us that the Greek word for "nation" is as follows:

1484 ethnos (eth'-nos); probably from 1486; a race (as of the same habit), i.e. a tribe; specially, a foreign (non-Jewish) one (usually by implication, pagan): KJV-- Gentile, heathen, nation, people. So this is a picture of the non-Jewish nations of the world who can "be accepted" with God if they only "fear Him" and "worketh righteousness"! This is far cry from what most hear taught in their Christian Churches today where we are taught that to be "saved" and "accepted with God" that we have to accept the latest creed of faith of our denomination or non-denomination regarding the identity of Jesus or his mission.

Answer for yourself: What does the Greek word for "feareth him", as in "fearing God" mean?

The Strong's Concordance teaches us that the Greek word for "feareth" means:

5399 phobeo (fob-eh'-o); from 5401; to frighten, i.e. (passively) to be alarmed; by analogy, to be in awe of, i.e. revere: KJV-- be (+sore) afraid, fear (exceedingly), reverence.

The Thayer's Greek Lexicon teaches us that the Greek word for "feareth" also means:

5399 phobeo- to put to flight by terrifying (to scare away)

- a) to put to flight, to flee b) to fear, to be afraid
 - 1) to be struck with fear, to be seized with alarm
- a) used of those startled by strange sights or occurrences
- b) used of those struck with amazement
 - 2) to fear, to be afraid of one
 - 3) to fear (that is, hesitate) to do something (for fear of harm)
- c) to reverence, to venerate, to treat with deference or reverential obedience

Answer for yourself: Do you notice that "reverence" of God is connected with "obedience"?

Answer for yourself: Does Paul use this term "nations" in the New Testament to refer to Gentiles, even Gentile Christians? He sure does.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that in the Book of Numbers it says that Israel is NEVER to be numbered among the nations, thus when discussing "nations" the reference is always to non-Jews?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the phrase "in every nation" refers to non-Jews and not Jews?

Answer for yourself: Since Paul uses this term to refer to Gentiles, even Gentile Christians, is it possible that Gentile Christians can worship incorrectly and not worship in true worship of the true God? It may be hard for you to swallow, but the answer is "yes". Thus the need for Bet Emet and other ministries to warn the Christian of today.

Answer for yourself: Is Luke, the author of Acts, telling us that in every nation there are to be believing Gentiles who are reverencing, venerating, and responding to God with reverential obedience yet who might not be "Christians" but that they as well are "accepted with God"? He sure is! This just so happens to be what Judaism, the religion of Jesus, always taught as well.

Answer for yourself: We are told that we are to "work" righteousness.

Answer for yourself: What does the word "worketh" mean in the Greek language?

The Strong's Concordance teaches us that the Greek word for "worketh" means:

2038 ergazomai (er-gad'-zom-ah-ee); middle voice from 2041; to toil (as a task, occupation, etc.), (by implication) effect, be engaged in or with, etc.: KJV-- commit, do, labor for, minister about, trade (by), work.

The "root" word Strong's Concordance also teaches us is taken from: 2041 ergon (er'-gon); from a primary (but obsolete) ergo (to work); toil (as an effort or occupation); by implication, an act: KJV-- deed, doing, labour, work.

The Thayer's Greek Lexicon adds:

2038 ergazomai- 1) to work, to labor, to do work 2) to trade, to make gains by trading, "do business" 3) to do, to work out a) to exercise, to perform, to commit b) to cause to exist, to produce 4) to work for, to earn by working, to acquire

Answer for yourself: Since we are to work "righteousness" then what does this word mean?

The Strong's Concordance teaches us that:

1343 dikaiosune (dik-ah-yos-oo'-nay); from 1342; equity (of character or act); specially (Christian) justification: KJV-- righteousness.

The above definition from Strong's Concordance is somewhat vague but the one from the Thayer's Greek Lexicon is not:

1342 dikaios-

a) in a wide sense, upright, righteous, virtuous, keeping the commands of God

- 1) used of those who seem to themselves to be righteous, who pride themselves to be righteous, who pride themselves in their virtues, whether real or imagined
- 2) innocent, faultless, guiltless
- 3) used of him whose way of thinking, feeling, and acting is wholly conformed to the will of God, and who therefore needs no rectification in the heart or life
- 4) approved by or acceptable by God

b) in a narrower sense, rendering to each his due and that in a judicial sense, passing just judgment on others, whether expressed in words or shown by the manner of dealing with them

Answer for yourself: Did we just read that in every nation non-Jews who produce works of righteousness and labor in accomplishing righteous acts are "accepted with God"?

Answer for yourself: Did we equally see that we can not only can obtain and acquire works of righteousness by our obedience but we as non-Jews can also EARN by working a state of "acceptance by God"? It sure appears so and again this is what Biblical Judaism has taught from the beginning of time.

Answer for yourself: Understanding that Acts 10:35 is in the New Testament, did you see for yourself that the Law has not passed away, but instead, Peter testifies after the death of Jesus that in every nation of the world Gentiles (remember Paul uses the term for Gentile Christians in the New Testament) who reverence God and labor to be righteous (attaining a condition of acceptance with God by correct feelings that promote correct actions) by being upright and by KEEPING THE COMMANDS OF GOD are accepted (saved) by God?

Answer for yourself: Although it goes against the vast majority of Christian teaching today, did you notice that the words of your Bible, understood in their original language, describe that there exists a condition whereby man can make himself acceptable with God and ATTAIN BY HIMSELF a condition of acceptance before God, even after the cross of Christ?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that if we are to "worketh righteousness" (labor to be righteous by obeying the commandments) that evidently there are things (obeying the commandments) by which man can do (not just believe) for himself to strengthen his relationship with God (make himself acceptable with God), thus meaning that "Jesus did not do it all" as we have been taught our whole lives?

Answer for yourself: Are you to believe preachers you have heard your whole life that reiterate the past preaching of a received "tradition" from the reformers of the middle ages, or will you allow the very inspired words of the Bible be your authority for what you are to believe?

We all want to be accepted with God and we were just told how; namely, to obey the Commandments of God that make up our Covenant and our Covenant stipulations. For the non-Jew it begins with 66 Commandments that frame the Covenant and Laws of Noah. For the Jew that number is 613.

The object of our obedience of the Commands of God is our demonstration of our love for and "fear of God" as required in the above passage. This also is how we "work righteousness" as we let these Commandments of God in our respective Covenants, Jewish and non-Jewish, dictate to us what we are to do and not do. This might be news to you but our Covenant stipulations, the Commandments and Laws that from our Covenants with God, when obeyed or disobeyed, determine our actual standing before God.

Answer for yourself: What does the word "accepted" mean in the Greek?

Let us first look at what the Strong's Concordance has to say:

1184 dektos (dek-tos'); from 1209; approved; (figuratively) propitious: KJV-- accepted (-table).

The "root word" means: 1209 dechomai (dekh'-om-ahee); middle voice of a primary verb; to receive (in various applications, literally or figuratively): KJV-- accept, receive, take.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that this word, "accepted", is in the Middle voice? What does this mean in Greek grammar? Voice refers to the role of the subject in the action. Understand that since our verb is "active" in that "the person has to work righteousness" and performs some sort of action, then the verb is active which means that the subject is the performer or responsible for the action (the agent). So you and I are responsible to "fear God" and revere God in our actions as well as responsible to "do righteousness" and thereby acquire a condition of acceptability with God.

Answer for yourself: Having seen in prior articles dealing with Acts 15 and the Acts 15 Jerusalem Council where we saw the debate centered over what would be required of the non-Jew to be accepted among the Jews and the Israel of God then would it not apply that this passage detailing that the non-Jew must "fear God" and "work righteousness" would equally refer to the non-Jew "being accepted into the family of God as well (being grafted into Israel)? It sure would.

Answer for yourself: Can you think of a passage in the New Testament whereby we are warned that many mistakenly believing that they are accepted with God will come to God and Messiah and be rejected instead?

Matt 7:21-23 21 Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. 22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? 23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. (KJV)

The death penalty...which is exactly "what" one earns for committing SIN, as Romans 6:23 says (THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH)...hung over us, just as it does for anyone who PRACTICES SIN (remember transgression of the LAW is defined as "sin" in the New Testament). Only those who turn FROM sin, turn FROM breaking the Law, and turn TO Yahweh in OBEDIENCE to Yahweh's every Word" will be given the gift only Yahweh can give...Eternal Life! We will be given access to the Tree of Life!

As we Read in Isaiah 59: 1-2, it is OUR SINS (INIQUITIES) that separate us from God.

Isa 59:1-2 1 Behold, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: 2 But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear. (KJV)

Now back to the point; we can either "work righteousness" and be accepted with God or as Matt. 7:21-23 states we can "work iniquity" and be not accepted and be told to depart from God. The choice is ours; that is if we are instructed correctly by our Spiritual teachers. But that is not always the case.

Let us examine the Hebrew word for "iniquity" used by Isaiah the Prophet in Isa. 59:1-2:

Isa 59:1-2 1 Behold, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: 2 But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear. (KJV)

The Strong's Concordance teaches us concerning the Hebrew word for "iniquities":

5771 `avon (aw-vone'); or `avown (2 Kings 7:9; Psalm 51:5 [7]) (aw-vone'); from 5753; perversity, i.e. (moral) evil: KJV-- fault, iniquity, mischief, punishment (of iniquity), sin.

The "root word" as taken from the Strong's Concordance:

5753 `avah (aw-vaw'); a primitive root; to crook, literally or figuratively (as follows): KJV-- do amiss, bow down, make crooked, commit iniquity, pervert, (do) perverse (-ly), trouble, X turn, do wickedly, do wrong.

This same English word is defined in the Strong's Concordance in the New Testament in Matt. 7:23 as "those not submitted to Jewish LAW" and it is our breaking of Yahweh's Law, that cuts us off from Yahweh. Let us now look at this in both the Greek and the English texts.

Let us examine the Greek word for "iniquities" as taken from the Strong's Concordance from Matt. 7:21-23.

458 anomia (an-om-ee'-ah); from 459; illegality, i.e. violation of law or (genitive case) wickedness: KJV-- iniquity, X transgress (-ion of) the law, unrighteousness.

The "root word" is Strong's number 459 anomos (an'-om-os); from 1 (as a negative particle) and 3551; lawless, i.e. (negatively) not subject to (the Jewish) law; (by implication, a Gentile), or (positively) wicked: KJV-- without law, lawless, transgressor, unlawful, wicked.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that this passage Matt. 7:21-23 teaches that even Gentiles who work "iniquity" and who are not subject to the Jewish Law are told to depart from God?

These same Scriptures tell us that the REASON Yahweh will NOT listen to someone, is BECAUSE they are a SINNER...they practice sin. For your information this is the same word used by Yeshua [Jesus] in Matt. 7:23 where he tells "many" who come to him expecting "acceptance" to depart from him because they practice iniquity (Strong's number 458 & 459 meaning "the practice of not submitting to Jewish Law").

Now let us examine what Thayer's Greek Lexicon has to teach us about the word "iniquity":

- 1) the condition of without law
- a) because ignorant of it
- b) because of violating it
- 2) contempt and violation of law, iniquity, wickedness

This is a very frightening revelation for a Christian who has grown up in church his whole life and who has been taught that he is not under the Law but under grace as well as being taught disdain for the Holy Law of YHWH which is literally his Covenant stipulations.

Answer for yourself: Is transgression of the LAW of Moses, which contains within it the Gentile's Covenant and Laws of Noah as spoken of following the Cross in the New Testament considered "sin?" Definitely yes.

Answer for yourself: Please note that Ephesians 2:1 says that these converts "WERE" (past tense) cut off from Yahweh, having no hope because something had separated them from Yahweh. What does Isaiah tell us in 59:1-2 that separated the Gentiles from God? Our iniquities, our sin which is transgression of the Law.

Answer for yourself: The New Testament, in I John 3:4, defines "SIN" as what? Transgression of, violation of, and ignorance of the Mosaic Laws. So it is these transgression of our Covenant Laws and Commandments that separate us from God and do not allow us to be accepted because we spend our lives under incorrect teaching that assures we don't "work righteousness" which is demonstrated by obedience to these Commandments of God residing in our respective Covenants with God.

Answer for yourself: Does Matt. 7:21 teach us in the New Testament that those who are without the Law, or who are ignorant of the Law, or who violate the Law, or who are destitute of the Mosaic Law (usually Gentiles) are told by Yeshua to depart from him? Yes. Can you imagine the horror waking up "dead" and being told by the one you expect to receive you to "get out of here"?

Answer for yourself: Even worse does Matt. 7:21 teach us in the New Testament that those who depart from the law are "wicked?" Yes. Have you ever thought that accepting, believing Christian dogmas, and acting upon them in faith, in particular those regarding the Jewish Law, has made you "wicked" in the sight of God? The next time your preacher teaches you that the Law is done away with in Christ or that "Christ is the end of the Law" just remember that.

Answer for yourself: Does Matt. 7:21 teach us that if we are ignorant of the Law, thereby showing our contempt of it, should we expect to likewise hear "depart from me" from Yeshua in the world to come? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does Matt. 7:21 teach us in the New Testament that those who violate the Law and are destitute of the Mosaic Law are told by Yeshua to depart from him. Yes.

Answer for yourself: If your church has taught you that the Law has passed away, thus making you destitute of the Law of Moses, should you expect that Yeshua will tell you to depart from him as well? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Do you realize that if the Law of God (Laws of Moses-Torah) is not valid today, then we are not sinners? Is that possible since that Yahweh teaches us that if we say "we have not sinned" then we are LIARS? No.

Answer for yourself: If I John 3:4 is a New Testament Scripture, then how is it possible that "sin" can be defined as "transgression against the LAW" if the LAW HAS PASSED AWAY AND WE ARE NO LONGER UNDER LAW BUT UNDER GRACE? It can't!

Answer for yourself: Is transgression of the LAW following the Cross in the New Testament considered "sin?" Yes.

Answer for yourself: Before the CONVERSION of these GENTILE EPHESIANS, they lived in SIN. What did one earn for committing SIN which is defined in the New Testament as transgression of the Law? Death and separation from God ("depart from me").

Answer for yourself: Romans 6:23 says THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH and death hung over all men, just as it does for anyone who PRACTICES SIN. Then is it a true statement that only those who turn FROM sin, turn FROM breaking the Law, and turn TO Yahweh in OBEDIENCE to Yahweh's Every Word" will be given the Gift only Yahweh can give...Eternal Life? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Do you find it difficult to believe that this is the same word used by Yeshua [Jesus] in Matt. 7:21 where he tells "many" who come to him expecting "acceptance" to depart from him because they practice iniquity (Strong's number 458 & 459 meaning the practice of not submitting to Jewish Law)? Not any longer.

Answer for yourself: Can you begin to see the importance of identifying with Israel who has always revered the Covenant Law instead of organizations (Churches) that teach the Law has passed away? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that it is within THE LAW of God where we find commandments concerning how we as Gentiles are to worship God according to "the pattern" given by David and handed down well into the fourth century? This website is showing you this.

Answer for yourself: Do you now better understand that since most of Christianity does not pay attention to the validity of the Law for their lives, that they overlook the pattern for how God is to be worshipped (Festivals and Sabbath and righteous giving of the Tithe instead of the way it is handled by most today), thus causing multitudes to worship God in vain?

It is with this understanding that ministries like Bet Emet and others are trying to reach Christians in the hope of revealing to them the beauty of the Hebraic Roots of their faith in hopes they will repent and worship God in Spirit and in Truth, for He is worthy of correct worship and love.

Please understand that before the Word of Yahweh was given to the Gentile People as a whole, they were cut off from Yahweh. Before this, ONLY the Tribes of the Children of Israel were given Yahweh's Laws, which GUIDED one to faith and obedience, thus culminating in Yahweh's SALVATION.

Bet Emet Ministries believes in examining our "belief systems" to see if we are in "the faith." We, at Bet Emet, through educational newsletters attempt to examine our "religious belief systems," our Bibles, concepts, religious doctrines, ancient meanings of biblical words, and the influence of ancient culture on the writers of the biblical text, and much more. After all, what are we to do one day when standing before God at the Judgment Seat and after confession that we have prophesied in his name, and in his name cast out demons and in his name done many wonderful works (we thought), and hear: "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity?" This frightening example is to warn us that "many" will have a "religious belief system" that will guarantee their disqualification from entering the Kingdom of Heaven.

Answer for yourself: Is that you? Could that be You? How can you prevent yourself from awaking from the dead and finding that you are personally fulfilling Matt. 7? Don't you thing you better start examining YOUR "belief system" while you still can?

We at Bet Emet Ministries have had to repent of many doctrines we were taught in good faith that could not stand the text of critical examination. God desires we have faith in "truth" and not faith in "error or lies." We invite you to tell your friends that such an opportunity is available at Bet Emet Ministries. More to follow in article three. More to come in article three. Shalom.

Many centuries before the earliest writings of the New Testament, Isaiah said: "Israel shall with Egypt and Assyria form a triple alliance, a blessing to the world around and blessed by God Who said, 'Blessed be Egypt, My people; Assyria, the work of My hands; and Israel, My heritage.' (Isaiah 19:24f.)"

In order for you to feel the full force of Isaiah's prophecy, imagine some preacher today proclaiming, "Blessed is Russia, God's people; Red China, the work of His hands; and America, His heritage." This does put some strain on the imagination. Yet Isaiah dared. Israel's prophets happened really to believe that we have indeed all one Father. The spirit of these prophets pervades the entire Torah, the entire Pentateuch. It is to these first five fundamental books of the Bible that we now turn.

TORAH

The traditional view of Biblical authorship is that the prophet Moses, in the thirteenth pre-Christian century, wrote down the Torah on Mount Sinai at the dictation of God. The Pentateuch (first 5 books of the Bible) contain the earliest literary records of the religion of Israel and are first in importance among the sacred texts of Biblical faith. "The Five Books of Moses" are the primary source of Israel's faith. To examine what the Pentateuch has to say about proselytes and the Gentiles coming into relationship with God and His people Israel is, therefore, of utmost importance for the Christian today in relation to his obedience or disobedience to the "pattern of worship" as shown in previous articles. To begin with Torah is truly to put first things first.

Many modern scholars believe that the stories of Creation, the Patriarchs and Joseph are legendary. They may be. But it is precisely in the realm of its folklore that a people reveals its elemental thought and feeling, its basic beliefs, its loftiest aspirations. The political history of Israel, as of other folk, was influenced by external circumstances—climate, geography, wars. Its myths and legends are the expression of its inward spiritual experience. Its folklore bespeaks a people's soul.

Literally, the first concern of the Hebrew Bible is not with Hebrews but with humanity. Scripture opens not with the birth of Abraham, traditional father of this folk, nor of Moses, historic founder of their faith, but significantly with the creation of the world and the advent of man.

In the religion of Israel so incomparably precious is man that whereas in Genesis God evokes every other component of His universe by mere command, saying, "Let there be" . . . light, land, sea, sky, sun, moon and stars; creatures of the waters, air and earth . . . "and so it was"—when He contemplates His masterpiece, He says not "Let there be man" but...

"Let Us make man in Our image . . ." Thus God molded-- from the dust of the ground . . . breathing from His nostrils the breath of life . . . (Genesis 1:26 and 2:7)

In the Creation story so holy is mankind that God broke with His own divine precedent of verbal command only to create man. Even the Almighty had to labor in the sweat of His brow, as it were, to fashion man. He made only man in His image; and, to do this, He literally inspired him with His own breath or spirit. That is how "man became a living being" (Genesis 2:7).

Do we have here a scientific, historically accurate account of man's origin? Hardly. But surely this is a completely accurate version of what the religion of Israel teaches about the supreme importance to God of man both during and after man's creation.

Obviously then, God is not Israel's exclusive deity. He is concerned with the fate of all mankind, even men as distant as those of India and as dissolute as those of Sodom. The peoples of Chaldea, Phoenicia, Philistia, and Ethiopia; of Tyre, Sidon, Cyprus, Rhodes and the distant isles are all part of His divine plan.

Answer for yourself: Does the Torah favor or forbid the admission of these diverse folk into the religion of Israel when formalized at Sinai when a "mixed multitude" of Gentiles stood with Jews? No.

Answer for yourself: Did Israel in Bible times discourage, tolerate or seek proselytes? That is a little harder for the situation was different at different times, but for the most part accepted Gentiles into the faith..

So much is certain: The Torah is source for the tradition that, from the inception of this folk and faith, the religion of Israel was born with and borne by converts. Julius Lewy, in his article "Origin and Signification of the Biblical Term 'Hebrew'" (Hebrew Union College Annual, 1957, pp. 1-13), has supplied some evidence that etymologically the very word "Hebrew" is itself not a proper noun designating a specific people, but rather a widely used general Semitic term signifying a resident alien or ger.

ABRAHAM

The first Hebrew was himself a convert. With his wife Sarah, Abraham left their Aramean kin and their home in Chaldea to found a new and blessed nation.

Abraham took Sarah his wife . . . and all the souls which they had made in Haran and they started off for Canaan, (Genesis 12:5)

Later rabbinic tradition has it that these "souls" were male and female converts which Abraham and Sarah respectively "made", i.e., brought to "spiritual birth" by initiation into the new Jewish faith.

Rebecca, the wife of Isaac, began life as a heathen in Syria. So did Rachel and Leah, the wives of Jacob, as well as his concubines, Bilhah and Zilpah. On their maternal side each of the traditional founders of the twelve tribes of Israel was the son of a convert. In addition, two of them, Judah and Simeon, married women of Canaan.

Also, the tradition that Israel's founder was not born an Israelite was never permitted to die or be forgotten. To this very day it is prescribed that at least twice a year—once in spring at the Haggadah which is the reading on Passover and again in late summer during the Sabbath Torah reading in the synagogue. Every Jew will recall this tradition by reciting the words

My father was a wandering Aramean. (Deuteronomy 26:5)

Abraham was alert to the contaminating pagan influence of the ethnic stock from which he came. As Christians and followers of Jesus and "the Christ" we should be as well. In commissioning his servant, Eliezer of Damascus, to journey to Syria to fetch "from my father's house" a bride for Isaac, he warned his steward:

Beware of taking my son back there, . . . God took me away from my father's house,, If the woman is unwilling to follow you, then you are free from this oath of mine (Genesis 24:6..ff)

That Abraham's fear was well founded is apparent from the account of Rachel's theft of her father's household gods when she fled from Syria with her husband Jacob (Genesis 31:19-35). Once they are removed from their idolatrous girlhood homes, these brides of the Patriarchs become exemplary matrons. From them issue sons who father the tribes of Israel.

The Torah (and, therefore, Judaism) regarded these men and women as the flesh and blood ancestors of Israel, their marital alliances as valid, their progeny not only as legitimate but also the bearers of the religious heritage of Israel. The Torah teaches and wants its adherents to understand that non-Israelites can become members of Israel (ingrafted) and beget Israelites. Not only the Patriarchs and their Aramean consorts could do this, but peoples of any race, nation or religious origin.

Moses' wife, Zipporah, by whom he had Gershom, was the daughter of a priest of Midian. David was the husband of Maacah, daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur, and mother of Absalom. The mother of Rehoboam, Solomon's son and successor to the Judean throne, was Naamah the Ammonite. Just take a minutes to look the Gentile lineages and it quickly becomes apparent that Gentiles have been continually identifying with God and the faith He gave to all men.....which is best expressed as Biblical Judaism. It is this faith that obey the Commandments of God and sees no need to relegate them to antiquity as if they are "passed away." Let us never forget as Christians that it is these Commandments that reveal to us how we, as God's people, are to please Him in our responses to him. Such is called obedience and is expressed continually by following God and His plan and pattern given for not only worship, but life as well.

CIRCUMCISION

That most converts to Judaism have been females may, in part at least, be ascribed to the traditional requirement that full conversion of males required circumcision. This has been the physical sign of the covenant between God and the men of Israel since Abraham's day. To an adult male this was no small decision and kept many from making formal identification with Israel.

The Lord appeared unto Abraham and said . . . "Every male among you is to be circumcised.... That is the sign of the covenant between us.... Every male ... is to be circumcised when he is eight days old, whether he be born in your household or acquired from any foreigner that is not of your race." (Genesis 17:1-12)

The covenant for the Non-Jew, the Covenant of Noah, does not consist of the rite of circumcision. The covenant is that the Jew and Gentile are to serve God and be holy as God is holy. Circumcision is but the external sign of this covenant. Analogously, the bow in the sky was merely the symbol of God's compact with Noah. As the rainbow antedated the Deluge, so circumcision was a common pre-Israelitish custom. But, whatever the incentive for the practice among other peoples, for Israel it signified consecration, the casting off of spiritual uncleanness as preparation for assumption of membership in this covenanted people.

PASSOVER

Besides native born Jewish males, including native born slaves, the ger (the Gentile who came to faith in God and accepted His religion) who wished to participate in the Passover had to be circumcised.

When a ger with you desires to keep the Lord's Passover, let all male members of his family be circumcised; then he shall count as a native. (Exodus 12:48)

Historically, Passover is the most ancient of Hebrew festivals. Religiously, the Exodus was the most significant event in the annals of Israel—so important that it is the only historical event included in the Decalogue and there mentioned in the very first sentence. It was the sign of the fulfillment of the covenant on God's part. To participate in the Paschal celebration whereby he partook of the lamb of the Passover a Non-Jew had to identify himself completely with Israel, the people of the covenant. Circumcision was the physical sign of this identification, the external fulfillment of the covenant on the part of each Israelite and any who wished to make full identification with Israel (being grafted into the Israel of God). It was a requirement for the full-fledged male ger, the complete convert. He must be circumcised to celebrate the Passover.

THE LAW

The “universalism” of the prophets runs through not only the legend and lore of the first book of the Pentateuch. It also animates the principles and policies outlined in the other four books. Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy lay down the general rules. No where is God's will that Gentiles and Jews both are required to obey the Laws of God is seen more clearly than in the following passages:

There shall be one and the same law for the native (Jew) and for the ger (Gentile). (Exodus 12:49; Leviticus 24:22; Numbers 9:14, 15:15, 16, 29; Deuteronomy 1:16)

As you (Jew) are so shall the ger be before God. (Numbers 15:15)

Answer for yourself: Does this in anyway sound as if the Gentile who comes to God has a completely different covenant or a different religion from the Jew?

The ger who dwells with you shall he to you as the homeborn and you shall love him as yourself. (Leviticus 19:34)

Specifically, the ger (Gentile) was to enjoy equal freedom from injustice and oppression. If indigent, he was entitled, with the poor, the orphan and the widow, to sustenance from the gleanings of grainfield, vineyard and olive orchard (Lev. 19:10; 23:22; Deut. 24:19ff), and to maintenance from loans, tithes and other public funds (Lev. 25:6; Deut. 14:28ff; 26:12ff). The cities of refuge, in which the native Israelite could obtain emergency asylum, were open to the ger as well (Numb. 35:14ff; Joshua 20:9).

The same moral prohibitions—against unchastity (Lev. 18:26), idolatry (Lev. 20:2; Ezekiel 14:7ff), blasphemy, murder, maiming of man or beast (Lev. 24:16-22; Numb 15:30)—applied to the ger as to the native Israelite.

Answer for yourself: In the above examples cited concerning the ger (Gentile) what is it that all the Scriptures have in common? These are manifestations of Commandments and the Law of Moses as well as the Laws of Noah. We see the Gentile being the recipient of blessings from the Jews as well as obeying the Law of God.

Along with the whole community he was invited to learn Torah (Deut. 31:12; Joshua 8:33ff) and to enter the covenant with God (Deut 29: 10ff)

Deut 31:12 12 Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law: (KJV)

Notice that the Gentile (stranger) who identified with Israel was to hear the words of the Law in order to learn, fear God, and observe, obey, and do all the commandments of the Law that pertained to him.

Let us turn to the Strong's Concordance and look at the Hebrew word for "hear" in this context:

8085 shama` (shaw-mah'); a primitive root; to hear intelligently (often with implication of attention, obedience, etc.; causatively, to tell, etc.): KJV-- X attentively, call (gather) together, X carefully, X certainly, consent, consider, be content, declare, X diligently, discern, give ear, (cause to, let, make to) hear (-ken, tell), X indeed, listen, make (a) noise, (be) obedient, obey, perceive, (make a) proclaim (-ation), publish, regard, report, shew (forth), (make a) sound, X surely, tell, understand, whosoever [heareth], witness.

Answer for yourself: Remembering that Jesus quoted from Deuteronomy quite a lot during his ministry, did God say that the Gentile was to hear the Law in order to understand the Law?

Answer for yourself: Does the Hebrew word for "hear" carry the implied meaning of obedience? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does the Hebrew word for "hear" carry the implied responsibility that once you hear the Law you are obliged to proclaim, tell, and cause others to hear the Law as well? Yes

The Hebrew word for "hear" is in the Imperfect Tense.

The imperfect expresses an action, process or condition which is incomplete, suggesting a "process" preliminary to its completion. In other words the Law was to be taught to the Gentile back then and CONTINUALLY as well as a process that began in the past but has current effects. The sad fact of the matter is that little "current effects" of teaching the Law as a continual process to the Gentile is seldom seen today because the church has misinterpreted the English New Testament so often that we have lost its meaning and are totally devoid of the true message intended for Gentile believers today.

The truth is that the Gentiles were "to begin to 'hear'" the Law and Commandments and were to continually hear them because up to the time of the giving of the Law, the Gentiles of the world had fallen into sin and spiritual darkness and had lost the revelation of God. Thus, they were living as pagans and needed the Revelation of God at Sinai to begin their restoration.

The writer of the Epistle of the Ephesians sums up the condition of the Non-Jewish Gentile in the world when he said:

Eph 2:12 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: (KJV)

A phrase such as "Hear", refers not only to the present (Gentiles are to hear and obey the Law), but assumes that the search has continued for some time. The Imperfect Tense relates not so much as to one occasion, as to a continued condition.

Answer for yourself: Please answer honestly. Can you say that your experience as a Christian has been one of a “continued condition” whereby you have continually heard and understood the Law in preparation for your obedience to it? Most likely not.

The Imperfect Tense also stresses an action (hearing, learning in preparation of obeying the commandments) that consist in its frequent repetition.

Answer for yourself: Has your Pastor studied the original languages of the Bible to get to the real meaning of the words of God and Jesus, or has he leaned on his own understanding and interpreted the English of his Bible based on his own cultural experiences? Most likely the latter.

The imperfect Tense is used to express the "future", referring to an action which is about to be accomplished.

Answer for yourself: How many of you can truthfully say that you expect your church this next Sunday to begin to understand these passages and begin to teach you the Law and Commandments regarding such things as how a Gentile is to worship God, what God will receive as worship and what is vanity to Him? Remember dear brothers and sisters, the whole purpose of our obedience to the Law is to please and love God in the manner He requires, and it is precisely these issues which are commanded by God in His Law for both the Jew and Gentile as I have shown so far. Lastly, remember the Law was to be taught in the future to Gentiles of all generations.

Answer for yourself: Have you been taught yet concerning the Laws and Commandments which frame your Covenant with God and which, when obeyed, determine your standing before God?

THE GRAFTING OF THE GENTILES INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD #4

THIS IS STARTLING WHEN YOU FINALLY SEE IT!

The same RITUAL requirements were made of Gentile believer as was the Jewish believer. He incurred the same taboos (Numb. 19:10)...

Num 19:10 10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever. (KJV)

This passage opens up a line of study that seems to have no end. Let us look at the word in the Hebrew in the above passage which is translated in the English as "statute":

Strong's Concordance:

2708 chuqqah (khook-kaw'); feminine of 2706, and meaning substantially the same: KJV-- appointed, custom, manner, ordinance, site, statute. 2706 choq (khoke); from 2710; an enactment; hence, an appointment (of time, space, quantity, labor or usage): KJV-- appointed, bound, commandment, convenient, custom, decree (-d), due, law, measure, X necessary, ordinance (-nary), portion, set time, statute, task.

Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon:

2706 choq- a statute, an ordinance, a limit, something prescribed, due

- a) a prescribed task
- b) a prescribed portion
- c) an action prescribed (for oneself), resolve
- d) a prescribed due
- e) a prescribed limit, a boundary
- f) an enactment, a decree, an ordinance
 - 1) specific decree
 - 2) law in general
- g) enactments, statutes
 - 1) conditions
 - 2) enactments
 - 3) decrees

◦ 4) the civil enactments prescribed by God

If we look over the above definition which is for the word "statute" we see that God gave both the Jew and the Non-Jew Laws, Commandments, ordinances, necessary ordinances, tasks, manners, customs, appointed times and set times, as well as boundaries where one Law stops and another continues. This is a perfect picture of the similarity as well as dissimilarities between the Covenant and Laws of Noah and the Covenant and Laws of Moses. And to top it all off God says that these "set times, appointed times, and tasks" are Eternal and forever!

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that another name for "chuggah" is festival? That is right. God gave tasks and prescribed ordinances and Laws and Commandments that are Eternal and forever regarding His Holy Days and Appointed Set Times to both Non-Jews and Gentiles. We saw about the stipulation and commandment that for a Non-Jew to observe the Passover that he had to be circumcised. This is but one of many examples.

Answer for yourself: Did God give the Gentile believer (stranger) customs, manners, statutes, enactments, specific decrees, laws in general and commandments FOREVER? He sure did.

Answer for yourself: Just do to the nature of the question, did you see that a ceremonially condition of uncleanness can affect the Gentile as well as the Jew? Wow that is quite a revelation is it now when we thought that uncleanness affected only the Jew!

Answer for yourself: Are you beginning to understand that we as Christians are often "unclean" before God, and are for the most part unaware because our actions and behaviors are sin before God? The sad fact of the matter is that we are unaware of our real spiritual condition before God because we lack the hearing of the Law and Commandments which would teach us the errors of our ways.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the condition of "uncleanness will limit God's presence in your life?

Let us look at the Hebrew word for "unclean" as used in this verse.

The Strong's Concordance:

2930 tame' (taw-may'); a primitive root; to be foul, especially in a ceremonial or moral sense (contaminated): KJV-- defile (self), pollute (self), be (make, makeself, pronounce) unclean, X utterly.

Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon:

2930 tame'- to be unclean, to become unclean, to become impure a) (Qal) to be or become unclean 1) sexually 2) religiously 3) ceremonially b) (Niphal) 1) to defile oneself, to be defiled a) sexually b) by idolatry c) ceremonially 2) to be regarded as unclean c) (Piel) 1) to defile a) sexually b) religiously c) ceremonially 2) to pronounce unclean, to declare unclean (ceremonially) 3) to profane (God's name) d) (Pual) to be defiled e) (Hithpael) to be unclean f) (Hothpael) to be defiled

Answer for yourself: According to the Scriptures shown to you, can Gentile believers like you and me "become unclean" RELIGIOUSLY and CEREMONIALLY? Sure can.

Answer for yourself: As Gentile believers, can we by actions done in a religious context profane God's Name instead of exalt it? Sure can.

Answer for yourself: Can you begin to see that because we as contemporary Christians are basically unlearned about the Law (defined as Torah, Instruction, Teaching in Hebrew), and since unlearned, often fail to obey customs, ordinances, statutes, and enactments which were given to us by God but of which we are unaware? In so doing do we render ourselves unclean and profane the Name of God and not even know it? We sure do!

Gentiles could not eat blood (Lev. 17:10) or animals that died of natural causes or was killed by other predators (Lev. 17:15).

Answer for yourself: Why is this important and what should it teach us?

What is of major importance to us is that the Gentile Observed the same sacrificial procedures (Lev. 17:8; 22:18; Numb. 15:14,26) and the Passover prohibition of leaven (Ex. 12:19) and partook of the Paschal meal (Ex. 12:48; II Chronicles 30:25)as did the Jews.

Lev 17:8 8 And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, that offereth a burnt offering or sacrifice, (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Can you see for yourself that God intended and desired that Gentiles worship THE SAME WAY AS THE JEWS by bring the same offerings?

Answer for yourself: Can you begin to relate what you have learned to the worship of God as seen in the Gentile believer's participation in the Festivals and Sabbaths of God as well let alone the Sacrificial System of Israel? It would appear, and is so. that one law was given and shared often between the Jew and the Non-Jew.

Exod 12:49 49 One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you. (KJV)

Num 15:16 16 One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you. (KJV)

Num 15:29 29 Ye shall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Can you begin to see that since we as Gentile believers don't worship God according to "the pattern" as does the Jews (they never changed it) that this goes a long way in explaining how and why we have a Replacement Religion today in Gentile Christianity and a "replacement theology" which often has led us to worship God in vain? I hope so. It is time to return to our Hebrew Roots of the Christian Church for, as I have shown you, there is another message in the original language of our Bibles that you don't get when you only read it in English.

Lev 22:18 18 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, Whatsoever he be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his freewill offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt offering; (KJV)

Num 15:14 14 And if a stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Does Numbers 15:14 indicate that the Gentile is to worship (“do as the Jew does”)? It sure does.

Answer for yourself: Since God is the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow, does your church lead you in worship of God in Jewish (understood as a synonym for Biblical) ways?

Answer for yourself: If now why not since that is what the Bible teaches in both the Old and New Testaments? If that is not your experience I and others at Bet Emet call upon you to seriously consider your options since having come to the truth?

Num 15:15 15 One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Since we are dealing in the passage in the context of sacrifices and worship, did you notice that God said FOREVER the Gentile and Jew are to have the same ordinance, same custom, and the same appointed times (Biblical Feasts)?

Answer for yourself: Is the above your experience or have you wasted much of your life worshipping God in vanity?

Num 15:26 26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance. (KJV)

The Gentile believers were commanded to observe the Passover with the Jews according to the Pattern of Worship (Exodus 12:19). We will see that not only the Passover but God commanded forever that the Non-Jew observe with the Jew the Day of Atonement; Yom Kippur, according to the pattern for worship (Lev. 16:29).

Exod 12:19 19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Can you see for yourself that Gentile believers are to worship God by observing and celebrating the Biblical Feast of Passover and Unleavened Bread? Is that your experience as a Christian and do we follow Paul's admonition to the Gentile Corinthian Church to observe the Passover as well?

1 Cor 5:8 8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Again, does your church mobilize yearly to have their Gentile congregation obey God by observing the Passover and the Festival of Unleavened Bread (one Law for both remember)?

Exod 12:48 48 And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof. (KJV)

2 Chr 30:21-25 21 And the children of Israel that were present at Jerusalem kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness: and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud instruments unto the LORD. 22 And Hezekiah spake comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace offerings, and making confession to the LORD God of their fathers. 23 And the whole assembly took counsel to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness. 24 For Hezekiah king of Judah did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests sanctified themselves. 25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that not only in the times of Moses did Gentile identify with Israel and keep the Biblical Feasts, but continued to do so [remember the Imperfect Tense that said it was a continuing process of teaching Gentiles to hear and obey] for hundreds of years, even up to and through the days of Hezekiah?

The Gentile believers, like the Jews, were commanded to observe the Sabbath rest along with the Jews according to the Pattern of Worship (Ex. 20:10; 23:12; Deut. 5:14)...

Exod 20:10 10 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: (KJV)

Exod 23:12 12 Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed. (KJV)

Deut 5:12-14 12 Keep the sabbath day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee. 13 Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work: 14 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy manservant and thy maidservant may rest as well as thou. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the Gentile believers were commanded to keep the 7th day Sabbath (not Sunday) as did the Jews?

The Gentile believers were commanded to observe forever the Day of Atonement; Yom Kippur, according to the pattern for worship (Lev. 16:29).

Lev 16:29 29 And this shall be a statute for ever unto you: that in the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month (Yom Kippur-Day of Atonement), ye shall afflict your souls, and do no work at all, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you: (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you in your Christian Church observe Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, last year?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the pattern for worship which lasts FOREVER for both the Jew and Gentile required the believing Gentile to observe the Day of Atonement on the 10th of seventh Hebrew month of Tishri?

The Gentile believers were commanded to celebrate and observe the Feasts of Tabernacles along with the Jews according to the pattern for worship (Deut 16:13).

Deut 16:13-14 13 Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine: 14 And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Again, do we find the Gentile believer keeping the Feast of Tabernacles “like” the Jews?

The Gentile believers were commanded to celebrate and observe the Feast of Pentecost along with the Jews according to the Pattern of Worship (Deut. 16:9-11).

Deut 16:9-11 9 Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn. 10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee: 11 And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are among you, in the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to place his name there. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Again, do we find the Gentile worshipping God according to the Jewish (Biblical) pattern in keeping the Festival of Weeks (Pentecost)?

GRAFTING OF THE NON-JEW INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD

Answer for yourself: By now the picture should be becoming very clear; as Gentiles grafted into the Israel of God by faith in God through Christ, are we then, as believing Gentiles, to worship God “AS DO THE JEWISH PEOPLE” by adopting the Biblical Pattern of Worship? It sure would seem so!

No class-conscious discrimination existed in the minds of the authors of the Bible as to the kind of proselyte sought or acceptable. The "mixed multitude" (Exodus 12:38) of non-Israelites who fled Egypt during the Exodus were among the gerim included in the address delivered by Moses to his people at the end of their forty years' wilderness wandering:

You stand all of you today before the Lord your God . . . the men of Israel together with . . . the ger who is in the midst of the camp . . . that you may enter into the covenant of the Lord your God, that He may confirm your position this day as His people and that He may be your God, as He swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. (Deuteronomy 29:9-12)

In the mind of the Deuteronomist, the ger was an integral part of the compact made between God and the Patriarchs, His own first gerim. To the ger, as well as to the native Israelite, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are “your fathers.”

In the sight of God, the ger was the same as any other Israelite.

For the Lord your God is never partial. He secures justice for the orphan and the widow and He loves the ger . . . (Deuteronomy 10:17ff)

Not only does God love the ger. He calls upon Israel to do likewise. For parents He demands honor

Honor your father and your mother . . . (Exodus 20:12)

and reverence

Everyone shall revere his mother and his father. (Leviticus 19:3);

for His prophets He requires proper respect and protection

Touch not My anointed ones, and do My prophets no harm. (Psalm 105:15)

The ger who dwells with you shall be treated like a native; and you must love him as much as you love yourself. (Leviticus 19:34).

THE GRAFTING OF THE GENTILES INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD #5

The Prophets of Israel also have much to say about the inclusion of Gentiles into Israel and the people of God. The universalistic expressions of the post-Pentateuchal portion of Scripture are, if anything, even more ardent and eloquent in advancing the ideal of mission and espousing the cause of the convert than the writings attributed to Moses.

The author of the remarkable tenth chapter of Genesis believed all the peoples of the civilized world to be a single family. The prophet Isaiah foresaw a time when all men would be reunited through the influence of Judaism. They will converge on Zion encouraging each other to make this pilgrimage to become God's disciples.

In after days, it shall be that the Lord's hill shall rise towering over other heights; to which all nations shall stream and many fold proclaim, "Come, let us go up, to the Lord's hill, to the house of Jacob's God, and He may instruct us in His ways and we may walk in His path; for revelation comes from Zion, and from Jerusalem God's word.: (Isa. 2:2ff).

Isa 2:2-5 2 And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the LORD's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. 3 And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem. 4 And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. 5 O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD. (KJV)

Let us look at the Hebrew word for "ways" in verse 3 above:

Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon:

1870 derek- a way, a road, a distance, a journey, a manner a) a road, a way, a path b) a journey c) a direction d) a manner, a habit, a way e) used of the course of life (figurative) f) used of moral character (figurative)

Strong's Concordance:

1870 derek (deh'-rek); from 1869; a road (as trodden); figuratively, a course of life or mode of action, often adverb: KJV-- along, away, because of, + by, conversation, custom, [east-] ward, journey, manner, passenger, through, toward, [high-] [path-] way [-side], whither [-soever].

Answer for yourself: Does the Bible teach that prophetically in the future all the Gentile nations will learn to walk in the ways and paths of God whereby they learn God's way for living one's life by instruction by the Jew and the House of Jacob? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does Isaiah tell us that the way God has arranged for that to happen is for His Law, the Torah, and His Commandments of Deuteronomic and Mosaic Law consisting of instruction and directions to go out from Zion through the teaching of the House of Jacob unto all the Gentile nations? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Didn't someone fail to tell Isaiah that the Law and Commandments, many of which require certain actions from Gentile believers, was to pass away and allow Gentiles believers, like today, to express their worship in over 2,000 different varieties of Christian denominations, where there is little unity and agreement?

Answer for yourself: More than that, who failed to tell Isaiah that the Gentile Christian Church was to replace Israel and that the Gentile no longer needs to heed the admonition of Yeshua: Salvation is of the Jews?

Answer for yourself: Don't you think that is almost impossible since most Christian Churches teach that the Law has passed away or is replaced by grace?

Answer for yourself: Dear Christian brothers and sisters, are you coming to the awareness that you if you adhere to men's doctrines in the church instead of the Apostles Doctrine and continue to be involved in a "replacement worship" instead of "true Biblical Worship" which God gave to both Jews and Gentiles, then you have the sure rebuke of God staring you in the face because you failed to study to show yourself approved before God? These things I have discovered came only from years and years of dedicated and in-depth Bible study and inquire. While other Pastors played golf I studied because of my intense love for God and His Word. In such committed efforts I discovered these things I present to you today.

The same hope, expressed in almost identical words, occurs in the book of Isaiah's younger contemporary, Micah (Micah 4:1ff).

Isaiah preached in a period of profound tension and anxiety. His homeland, Judea, was recurrently under threat from its powerful neighbors. Yet he looked beyond that era of impending disaster, imminent conquest and ultimate exile, to the day when allies and enemies alike would join Israel as proselytes

Isa 14:1 1 For the LORD will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob. (KJV)

Of course this was once prophecy but is being fulfilled daily by the Christian's repentance and return to the Jewish Roots of his Christian faith.

Let us look at the word "joined" above:

Strong's Concordance:

3867 lavah (law-vaw'); a primitive root; properly, to twine, i.e. (by implication) to unite, to remain; also to borrow (as a form of obligation) or (caus.) to lend: KJV-- abide with, borrow (-er), cleave, join (self), lend (-er).

Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

3867 lavah- 1) to join, to be joined a) (Qal) to join, to be joined, to attend b) (Niphal) to join oneself to, to be joined unto 2) to borrow, to lend a) (Qal) to borrow b) (Hiphil) to cause to borrow, to lend to

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that his "joining" of the Non-Jew to the Israel of God and the House of Jacob is not done by God but by one's own efforts whereby "one joins himself" by his own efforts as seen in study and repentance and obedience to what he learns is required of the "Pattern of Worship" given to Israel by God?

Answer for yourself: Can you honestly say that in your Christian walk that your experience has been to be joined with Israel in Praise and Worship according to the "Pattern of Worship" I have shown you in the previous article when we saw the many examples of Non-Jews being commanded and expected by God to observe and keep the Biblical Sabbaths and Festivals as detailed in the Hebrew Scriptures?

Answer for yourself: If you cannot say "yes," then don't you think it is about time to review your commitment to God once you have come to this new knowledge and truth? I hope so.

The prophets generally did not separate their hope of Returning Israel to God's will and their dream of converting the gentile to Biblical Faith. Both are the goal of God. To them, both were aspects of one mission, parts of the same endeavor to turn the wayward—whatever their origin—toward God. So, when Isaiah pleads for the conversion of Israel, he submits that scarlet sins cannot become snowy white as pure innocence, but repentance and obedience have redemptive Power not merely for the seed of Abraham but for any man, for all mankind.

Micah, uttering his sublime definition of ethical monotheism, invites not Israel alone but all humanity

It has been told you, O man [Jew and Gentile], what is good and what God demands of you—only to do justice and cherish kindness and live in tranquil fellowship with your God. (Micah 6:8)

"The Phoenicians," says William Addis, in Peake's Commentary on the Bible, "were familiar with the idea that a man might become the client of a god and so put himself under divine protection. They used the same word for 'client' as the Hebrews, viz., ger (Gentile). Hence we have such names in Phoenician as Gerastart, 'client of Astarte,' Gerhekal, 'client of the temple,' etc. But to be the client of Israel's God, moral qualities are necessary."

Eph 2:12 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: (KJV)

The above description is a perfect description of the standing of the Non-Jew outside the Israel of God. In order for one having no inherited rights in the community of Israel to enjoy the privileges of membership, to "sojourn in God's tent," he must lead a blameless life; do right; speak truth; honor other yirey Adonai, "God-fearers" like himself; stand by his oath without retracting no matter what the consequences; refuse to take a bribe or interest on a loan. So it is written in the fifteenth Psalm. He who would "ascend God's hill" must have "clean hands and a pure heart" and "never break his word." So it is written in the third and fourth verses of the twenty-fourth Psalm.

Despite their close acquaintance with man's inhumanity to man, prophet and psalmist devoutly believed that their ethical faith was within the spiritual grasp of all mankind. When Scythian hordes were ravaging the whole

Near East from Egypt to Babylon, a prophet whose words are included in the book of Zephaniah announced total conversion of the world as God's final judgment

I will grant the nations a purified speech so that all of them will call upon God's name and serve Him unanimously. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia to the farthest reaches of the north My worshippers shall come bringing Me their offerings. (Zephaniah 3:9,10)

The prophet Jeremiah's career coincided with a period first of great peril--the invasion of Palestine by Pharaoh Psammetichus II and the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar--and then of calamity--the extinction of the 400-year-old Davidic monarchy and the subsequent Babylonian exile. Yet Jeremiah looked forward to a time when Jerusalem would be the center of a religiously regenerated world

In those days they will call Jerusalem "the throne of God" and all nations shall gather to it living no longer by the superstitions of their benighted minds (Jer.3:17).

Jer 4:1-2 1 If thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the LORD, return unto me: and if thou wilt put away thine abominations out of my sight, then shalt thou not remove. 2 And thou shalt swear, The LORD liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; and the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory. (KJV)

Not Israel alone, but also its hostile neighbors—nomadic marauders from Syria, Moab and Ammon—will suffer exile; but when in their captivity these people adopt the religion of Israel and Israel's God they be returned to their respective countries.

Jer 12:14-16 14 Thus saith the LORD against all mine evil neighbors, that touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit; Behold, I will pluck them out of their land, and pluck out the house of Judah from among them. 15 And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out I will return, and have compassion on them, and will bring them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land. 16 And it shall come to pass, if they will (these former evil Gentile neighbors) diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, The LORD liveth; as they taught my people to swear by Baal; then shall they be built in the midst of my people. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Does God expect Gentiles to learn the way of His people Israel or the ways of the Catholic Church, the Baptist Church, or the Methodist Church?

Answer for yourself: Do you know more about living in the paths and ways of your denomination than the ways of the Jewish People, the real people of God?

To the exiles in Babylon, Ezekiel preached that, no matter what had befallen them at the hands of foreigners, they were never to forget their religious obligation to the client of God, the ger who voluntarily sought admission into the religious community of Israel. Even in captivity, perhaps more especially there, they were to have compassion on him, remembering always that one and the same law held both for him and the native Israelites. Ezekiel rebuked his people for their ill-treatment of proselytes.

I leave you to the scorn of nations and the mockery of the world.... Gerim are oppressed, widows and orphans abused . . . You scorn what is sacred to Me. Natives wrong the weak and wretched and indict injustice upon gerim. (Ezekiel 22:4, 7-8, 29)

Answer for yourself: Have you as a typical Christian unaware of facts such as I have shown you, without intent SCORNE WHAT IS SACRED TO GOD and esteemed over His Word what men have deemed important?

He reiterated the prohibition against idolatry. Half-hearted worship of God, whether by native Israelite or convert, is equally reprehensible.

Ezek 14:7-8 7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to inquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself: 8 And I will set my face against that man, and will make him a sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; and ye shall know that I am the LORD. (KJV)

We need to look at the word "cut off" in the above verse.

Strong's Concordance:

3772 karath (kaw-rath'); a primitive root; to cut (off, down or asunder); by implication, to destroy or consume; specifically, to covenant (i.e. make an alliance or bargain, originally by cutting flesh and passing between the pieces): KJV-- be chewed, be con- [feder-] ate, covenant, cut (down, off), destroy, fail, feller, be freed, hew (down), make a league ([covenant]), X lose, perish, X utterly, X want.

Answer for yourself: If we as Christians separate ourselves from God because we don't adhere to the "Pattern of Worship" given to both Jews and Gentiles in the Bible, and accept an alternate and well-intentioned substitute which God has told us He cannot accept, then will we be the Bride of God and Messiah in the world to come?

Answer for yourself: If we as Christians separate ourselves from God because we don't adhere to the "Pattern of Worship" given to both Jews and Gentiles in the Bible, and accept in our mind and understanding an alternate and well-intentioned substitute which God has told us He cannot accept, then will be cut off from God's covenant and people in the world to come? It may be hard for you to accept considering what you have heard preached most of your lives, but this is what the Bible teaches!

Answer for yourself: If we as Christians separate ourselves from God because we don't adhere to the pattern of worship given to both Jews and Gentiles of Israel in the Bible, and accept an alternate and well-intentioned substitute which God has told us He cannot accept, then how can we expect to be the Bride of Christ one day when God specifically through the Prophets warns us that if we separate from Him [in replacing Biblical Holy Days with Christianized paganism and their holidays, substitute Sabbaths of men's creation for the Sabbaths of God's Commandments, and replace righteous giving of the Tithe for the perversions done in the name of God today where the tithe is used for everything under the sun], then God will cut and separate those who do those things from the Israel of God, and please remember it is only to Israel that He promised to marry at Sinai. Granted, Gentiles and Jews made up the "mixed multitude" at Sinai, but the bigger question for you is "will you be in that number when the roll call is made in Heaven for the Marriage Supper, or will by fulfill Matt. 7 personally when told to "depart-be cut off from Israel-from Yeshua because you practice iniquity?" Please refer to an earlier article when I showed you the non-compliance to the Mosaic Laws [containing Laws for worship such as Festivals, Sabbaths, and giving] are neglected, not obeyed, or just plain ignorance of them is maintained by the believer.

God's prophet envisioned the day when every knee would bend in homage to God and every tongue swear in His name, when He would be acknowledged sole, universal Lord of all mankind. God, he said, calls upon Israel to make His glory manifest to the gentiles (today this includes the Christians as well).

Here is the message of God the Lord . . . I, the Eternal, have called you . . . I formed you . . . to be a light unto the nations, to open eyes that are blind and to free captives from their bondage. (Isaiah 42:5)

Israel's task is to be a light in the darkness of religious ignorance, to give vision to eyes blinded by superstition, to free minds enslaved to idolatry. Such is the call of Bet Emet Ministries

Second Isaiah felt that the divine work of salvation, encompassing both Jews and gentiles, had already begun. He saw in Cyrus, though not a conscious convert, a worshiper of Israel's God who would spread His religion among all mankind. But far more than Cyrus, it is Israel, possessor of the true religion, which is to be the instrument for the conversion of the gentile. Unto Israel shall come men from all nations giving their adherence to God and marking on their hands the inscription "the Lord's" as a sign that they have become proselytes, naturalized Israelites.

Turn to Me and you are saved, all the ends of the earth!. . . Every knee must bend to Me and every tongue vow loyalty. (Isaiah 45 22-23)

Isa 49:6 6 And he said (speaking of Israel), It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did God say that the Jews, as the true worshippers of God because the Gentiles were not, were given to the Gentiles to illuminate their way

Answer for yourself: Did God say that the Jews, as the true worshippers of God were to illuminate the eyes of the Gentiles to God's Law, thereby facilitating their return back to God in repentance and the truths that their forefathers had but lost? He sure did!

It is too small a service for the God of all the world merely to set the clans of Jacob up again....I now appoint you to bring' light unto the nations that My salvations may reach the world's end (Isa. 49:6)

After the return from exile the Jerusalem community will be restored, not only by the return of dispersed native Jews, but also, according to Isaiah, by the addition of new converts...

Let not the descendant of a foreigner say "God will excommunicate me"...Foreigners who joint the Lord, to worship Him and love Him...will I bring to My holy hill, and make joyful in My house of prayer...My temple shall be called a house of prayer for every nation. Here is what God says, Who gathers Israel's outcasts in: "I will gather yet others in besides those already gathered." (Isa. 56:3-8)

Answer for yourself: Did you again notice that personal action is required to join oneself to the Lord? This of course means actions like study, repentance upon study, and then the positive action to implement into one's life what he learned from his study in areas like recovering "the Pattern of Worship" for ones life. The destiny of the gentiles in the glorious future is seen in that many nations will join themselves to God and will become His people

Citizens of great cities shall yet come, saying,

*"Let us go up at once to pay homage to God and to seek the Lord of hosts . . ."
." Many a people and mighty nation shall come to seek God in Jerusalem, to do obeisance to the Eternal. "In those days," the Lord of hosts declares, "ten men from nations of every language will seize the robe of a single Jew and say 'We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you!'"
(Zechariah 8:21-23).*

Dearly beloved, this is prophetic of the Jews instructing the Gentiles of the world in the proper paths of God because they don't have it, even in the Christian Church there is great errors taught along with truth. Rest assured, as Bet Emet does her part, and others contribute their efforts, we will one day see the truth of God's Word cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

Of these prophetic passages, Fleming James has written, in his Personalities of the Old Testament, "The Gentiles must become converts to Judaism . . . but are not to be coerced; they will come of their own free will, come because they see the need of divine help, come with love and expectancy. And they will be welcomed, will be made God's people just as much as the Jews themselves. True, there will be an exaltation of the Jew, but a noble one. For the saying lays on him a responsibility; if they wish to go with him he must receive them, must teach them and make room for them.... He must share his God with all peoples."

THE PSALMS

The psalmists, whose "delight is in the Law of the Lord" and who lament when "there is no more any prophet," piously follow the letter of the Law and give exultant expression to the spirit and vision of the prophets in their hymned references to the proselyte. Like the priest and the prophet, the psalmists too believed that God is specially concerned for the welfare of proselytes and that all the world will come to serve Him.

"How precious is Thy love, O Lord; the children of men take refuge under the shadow of Thy wing . . . Unto Thee shall all men [Gentiles] come . . . Dwellers at the world's far edge are awed at the proofs of Thy power . . . Sing homage, all the earth, to God . . . Bless us, O God, till men [Gentiles] worship Thee at the world's farthest end . . . All nations Thou best made shall come and bow before Thee . . . Thou, only Thou, art God . . . Let every nation know His wondrous deeds . . . Praise the Lord, O families of the nations . . . Confess that the Lord. He is God . . . Laud Him, all ye races . . .

The testimony of the psalmist is not for Israel alone. What God has done for Israel, He can and will do for all the nations, since His sovereignty is worldwide. It is not enough for Israel to acknowledge the incomparable greatness of God. In fulfillment of prophecy, the psalmists invited all peoples of the world to join Israel in the True Worship of the one and only God. God's goodness to Israel is but a revelation to all mankind of His ways in dealing with those who "fear" Him. The psalmist felt that the nations, by whatever names they call their gods, were potentially "fearers" of the Lord.

"God-fearers," yirey Adonai, represent to the psalmist worshipers of God who are not of Jacob's seed. Such "fearers of the Lord" seem to be a fourth category of religious communicant in Israel, the other three, of course, being priest, Levite and native Israelite.

Bless the Lord, Israel's household; Bless the Lord, Aaron's household; Bless the Lord, Levi's household; Bless the Lord, O fearers of the Lord (Gentiles).
(Psalm 135:19-20)

Israel trusts in the Lord . . . Aaron's household trust in the Lord . . . Fearers of the Lord trust in the Lord . . . The Lord remembers us and will bless Israel and Aaron's household; He will bless the fearers of the Lord (Gentiles), the humble with the great. (Psalm 115:9-13)

Fearers of the Lord, praise Him; Glorify Him, ye seed of Jacob. (Psalm 22:24)

There are Psalms which seem to have been specially composed for, and perhaps by, such Lord-fearers or proselytes.

I sought the Lord and He answered me, He rescued me from all my superstitious fears... The angels of the Lord camp around His "fearers" and save them. Try the Lord; you will find Him good; happy the man who take shelter with Him. "Fear" the Lord, ye saints of His. His "fearers" never want for anything. Apostates may be famishing and starving, but those who seek the Lord lack no good thing. Come, listen to me, my children; I will teach you the "fear of the Lord...." None who take shelter with Him shall be desolate. (Psalm 34:5, 8-12, 23)

On Thee, O God, I set my heart . . . Show me Thy ways, O Lord, Teach me Thy paths . . . Remember not the errors of my youth . . . Any man who "fears" God He will teach the right course to take. His own life will continue prosperous and his posterity will inherit his property. The secret of God is for them that "fear" Him and His compact is to instruct them . . . Preserve and deliver me, disappoint me not as I find refuge with Thee. May my devotion and my loyalty preserve me, for I hope in Thee. (Psalm 25:1,4,12-14,20-21).

More to follow. Shalom

THE GRAFTING OF THE GENTILES INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD #6

On the theme of proselytism, apparently the only negative note in all of Scripture is that sounded by Ezra-Nehemiah, which, until modern times, was combined into one book in the Hebrew Bible. Upon seizing control of the Babylonian empire, Cyrus decreed that the Jewish exiles in Babylon might return home to Judea. His successor, Artaxerxes Longimanus, commissioned Nehemiah as civil governor and Ezra as spiritual mentor to reconstruct the national and religious life in the Jewish homeland. On their arrival in Judea, they found a general decline and decay in religious observance. They were particularly distressed that certain of their coreligionists had "married women of Ashdod, Ammon and Moab," and that "their children . . . could not speak in the Jewish language (Nehemiah 13 :23-24)."

Nehemiah cursed the Jewish husbands -and made them swear by God that they would not marry their daughter to the sons of foreigners, nor marry their sons to their daughters, nor marry foreigners themselves. Was this not the sin of Solomon? . . . There was no king like him . . . beloved by his God . . . Yet even he was led to sin by his foreign wives. (Nehemiah 13:25-26)

"Divorce yourselves from the people of the land," Ezra commended, "and from the foreign women" (Ezra 10:11).

Upon receiving this order, "the crowd wept bitterly." And, while Shechaniah ben Jehiel agreed with Ezra, saying,

We have broken faith with our God by marrying foreign women.... Come, let us make a compact with our God to put away all thee wives and their children. (Ezra 10:2-3)

Jonathan ben Asahel and Jaziah ben Tikva were opposed to this and they were supported by Meshullam and by Shabbethai the Levite. (Ezra 10:15)

It must be offered in extenuation of Ezra-Nehemiah's drastic measures that these were dictated by desperate circumstances; the survival of their people and its way of life were at stake.

Also worth noting are these items: Ezra-Nehemiah had nothing at all to say for or against converting these women and children to Judaism. The prophetic ideal of proselytism just does not seem to have entered their sharply focused minds.... The entire situation is unique. Nothing of the sort occurs elsewhere in the Bible nor, for that matter, in all subsequent Jewish history. The stand which Ezra-Nehemiah took against foreigners as such is contrary to that of their Biblical predecessors, and it did not go unchallenged by their literary successors.

Which brings us, albeit briefly, to the books of Job, Jonah, Esther and Ruth.

JOB

Job was a citizen of Uz. His philosophy, conduct and character are exemplary Jewish, as his vindication by God, to say nothing of the inclusion of this book in the Biblical canon, makes abundantly clear. Yet Job is not ethnically a Jew. Significantly, the Jewish author of this Hebrew masterpiece presents his great hero, a towering spiritual giant, as a non-Jew. What the author must have thought of Ezra-Nehemiah and their attitude toward their non-Jewish neighbors, can easily be guessed. It was just as well left unrecorded.

JONAH

In that prophetic gem, the book of Jonah, God rebukes the title-figure for his Ezra-like chauvinism and his reluctance to help save the sinful pagan city of Ninevah, capital city of Babylon, "wherein are more than 120,000 persons who know not right from wrong, and also much cattle." Per contra, the heathen sailors show themselves exceedingly reluctant to jettison a worshiper of Israel's God. They strain every sinew to row Jonah to a haven of safety. When they have exhausted every humane possibility, are finally compelled to cast him into the sea, and behold the resultant calm, then "they 'feared' the Lord exceedingly, sacrificed and made vows to Him."

Jonah had been unwilling to convey God's message to the Ninevites because, among other consequences from his point of view undesirable, their repentance would reflect unfavorably on his often admonished but still unrepentant fellow Israelites. His worst fear was realized. The heathen Ninevites repent of their wickedness and, from the king on down to the last man in the kingdom, call earnestly on God. Everyone must turn from his evil life. . . Who knows if God will not relent . . . and save us (Jonah 3:8-9)

They turn, God does relent and they are saved. In direct contrast with Ezra-Nehemiah, this wonderful story would have men believe two things about the heathen: They are endowed by their Creator with potentially high moral and religious fervor; and they are ready to turn to Him if given the chance, if only invited to do so.

ESTHER

The blood thirsty Persian king, Ahasuerus, having already executed his first wife, Vashti, is induced by his vizier, Haman, to order the massacre of all his Jewish subjects, His Jewish queen, Esther, points out that this will mean her own death, "If it please the king," she pleads, "let the decree be reversed," For gore-loving Ahasuerus, this will not suffice, First, Haman must hang, Then, instead of peaceably revoking the original order, the king commands the Jews to slay their attackers (Esther 8:10-14), To save their lives, "many pagans became Jews" (Esther 8:17),

What interests us here is the use, in Esther 8:17, of the Hebrew term mit'yahadim, "to become Jews," the only place in the Bible where this word occurs. Yet, in the author's time, it must have been a sufficiently well understood term indicative of the current day practice of Gentiles identifying with Israel. What is more important, he approved of the conversion to Judaism of heathen enemies. He evidently enjoyed thoroughly the idea of men who had sought to take the lives of Jews being transformed into men who sought to live their lives as Jews.

RUTH

Some Biblical scholars believe that the book of Ruth was deliberately intended as a rebuttal to Ezra-Nehemiah, as a specific propaganda piece favoring conversion. Consider the names of its characters: Ruth—"the companion"; Naomi—"my sweet one"; Mahlon—"sickness"; Chilion—"wasting"; Boaz—"in him is strength"! It is nonetheless a charming narrative about a beautiful and loyal heroine, the Moabite girl who married the boy from Judea whose family had migrated to Moab because, ironically enough, here was a famine in Bethlehem, which means literally "the food house." Ruth's in-laws were apparently welcomed with kindness in the land of their traditional enemies, the Moabites, of whom it is written, in the book of Deuteronomy . . . No Moabite shall be admitted into the congregation of Me Lord; none of his descendants even to the tenth generation shall be admitted into the congregation of the Lord . . . (Deuteronomy 23:4).

Ruth herself became so deeply attached to the Jewish faith and the Jewish way of life that, after her husband died, she insisted on accompanying her widowed mother-in-law back to Bethlehem. In exquisite and memorable words that are a model of fealty and have since become a widely used formula in the Jewish conversion ceremony for women, Ruth made her declaration and her vow

Entreat me not to leave you.... Wherever you go will I go; whet ever you stay will I stay; your people shall be my people and you God, my God. Wherever you die will I die and there will I be boned. May God destroy me and worse if aught but death part you and me. (Ruth 1:16-17)

Encouraged by Naomi's sage counsel and Boaz' affection and diligence, Ruth fulfills the ritual requirements for marriage to Boaz. In due course she bears him a son who becomes the father of Jessie, in turn, begets King David, from whose line, according to later tradition, the Messiah will come.

Whatever else the author of this story may have had in mind, he surely cherished the hope that there would be Jews who would concur in his belief that a woman of worth, even though of the specifically proscribed people of Moab, could nonetheless become a valiant Jew, a loving wife and mother in Israel, a progenitress of Judean kings. There were such Jews. Among them were those sages who considered this lovely little book worthy of inclusion in Holy Writ; and also those who ordained that the scroll of Ruth be read by all Jews everywhere at Pentecost when they recall the Giving of the Law at Sinai where, like Ruth pledging her fidelity to Judaism, "The people of Israel together with the ger" had covenanted with God, saying, "All that the Lord has spoken, we will do and obey."

Answer for yourself: What of the rest, the rank and file in ancient Israel, the plebeian populace? Did the ordinary citizen of Tekoah or Jerusalem, the man-on-the-street in Anathoth or Bethel, the average dweller at Ramah, Gilead or Galilee swallow whole the propaganda, intended or incidental, of the books of Ruth and Jonah? Did they really believe that Moabites and Ninevites were deservedly as cherished by God as were Israelites? Did they entirely agree with Amos that the Hebrew was in God's sight merely the equal of the Ethiopian, the Phoenician and the Syrian? With Isaiah, that Egypt was also His people and Assyria the work of His hands? With the psalmist that anyone with clean hands and a pure heart may ascend the hill of the Lord? How popular among the returning Jewish exiles was Ezekiel's scheme of counting proselytes as natives and assigning them land of their own in Judea? Or the priestly injunction that the ger must be to you as the native, and you are to love him as you love yourself? How enthusiastically did they take up their divinely appointed task of being "a light to the gentiles"? Or observe the ordinance that there be one and the same law for the native and the convert?

That there was, on the part of common men, some resistance even to the simplest of these requirements we may suspect from the curious circumstance that the elementary rule, "You must not injure or maltreat a ger" occurs no less than six times in the Law and very frequently in the Prophets. The commandment "There shall be one and the same law for homeborn and ger" also occurs six times. If these rules were generally observed in the performance rather than in the breach, what need for all this emphatic reiteration? Telltale also is the fact that, when the Torah commends the ger to the people's compassion, he is so often placed in the sad company of those traditional objects of pity and exemplifications of defenselessness, the poor, the widow and the orphan. What the plight of an ordinary, poor proselyte's widow or orphan must have been is not pleasant to consider.

But, then, xenophobia, the dislike of the unlike, was present in Abraham's day and has not died in ours. If the ancients found it difficult to love the proselyte as they loved themselves, moderns do not find it easy to love even their homeborn neighbor that much either—the native Negro, for example, or the Puerto Rican fellow citizen. The prophets' fellow countrymen were not all prophets or psalmists or even priests. And it was not only the dream of mission and the obligations of religious hospitality set forth by their spiritual guides that the commoners resisted. There were certainly other features of prophetic preaching which also failed of complete fulfillment among the general populace.

It was never easy to squeeze a grand ideal into a small soul. Little men found it passing hard to share their divine legacy with others. Their minds were not yet big enough to encompass the breadth or the depth of their spiritual treasures. They simply did not realize how very much there was to share. They did not fully comprehend how limitless is God's love. Nor did they understand that human love is no commodity or store of energy that is consumed with use, but rather a plant that deepens and grows stronger and ever more beautiful as it expands and reaches outward and upward.

The teachers of the religion of Israel kept repeating, in an endless variety of ways: There is hope for the salvation of the homeborn and there is equal hope for the salvation of the outlander! Prophet, priest and psalmist possessed a patient, tireless courage that made them remind Israel ever and again: You are all gerim before God.... He loves the alien.... Therefore, you, too, must love the Ger.... Let him be unto you as the homeborn and love him as you love yourselves . . . for many nations will join themselves to the Eternal and become His people.... He Who gathers Israel's exiles in says, "I will yet gather to them those who were gathered against them."

Doubtless there were in Bible times Jewish leaders whose limited philosophy and pattern of existence would have pleased Ezra. But we like to think, and have some reason to believe, that many in that far distant age were prouder of their prophets who taught that life is more nobly lived when it pleases God. After all, this is the people who produced these prophets and preserved their teachings.

The memoirs of Ezra-Nehemiah furnish one magnifying mirror to reflect the surface coarseness of some men in Biblical days. But a host of prophets, psalmists and priests provide an abundance of spiritual telescopes through which men may look out upon nobler goals and acceptance of the Non-Jew within the Israel of God was one of them.

THE “GRAFTING IN” OF THE GENTILE INTO ISRAEL & THE ROLE OF YESHUA'S DEATH

After Jesus'/Yeshua's death and "believed" resurrection and the subsequent evangelization of the non-Jewish world, no longer would the Gentile HATE the LAW (613 Commandments) which was, in and of itself, a major obstacle in his coming to MONOTHEISM and turning from IDOLS and PAGANISM.

Answer for yourself: How was that accomplished?

With circumcision as the first obstacle to overcome for the adult Gentile male, this was quite a hurdle for a grown man to overcome who had engaged in idolatrous-fornication-worship his whole life. Besides circumcision, there were LAWS concerning and regulating one's whole life which Gentile multitudes deemed much too difficult and restrictive to accept (kosher food laws for example), thus relegating them to remain as Pagans, ignorant of pleasing God and suffering separation from God as their inheritance after death.

I want you to please read this whole article very carefully because I wish to show you how Jesus, through his death and the resultant ministry of his followers who took the Laws and Covenant of Noah to the Gentile world, reaffirmed the right of the Gentile to inherit Eternal Life and opened the way for the Gentile to become part of THE ISRAEL OF GOD by establishing within Judaism a Messianic movement that would allow for Gentile inclusion [at the time of Jesus in the first century there was NOT a concerted effort by Israel to REACH the Gentile]. This is seen dramatically by James' declaration in the Acts 15 Church Council where he stated that ALL that was necessary for the Gentile to be part of Israel was adherence and obedience to the Laws of Noah (not 613 laws but only 66 laws given to Adam and Noah which were prior to the Laws of Moses at Sinai for Gentile Salvation).

This opportunity of faith and repentance has not been made to the non-Jew by the vast majority of Israel unless the Gentile male would first undergo "conversion requiring circumcision" and this was purposefully done in order to keep these "unclean dogs" at arms-length from the Jews. How convenient!

WAS THIS A NEW GOSPEL...OR WAS PART OF ISRAEL REPENTING AND RETURNING TO THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS BY YHVH?

Guess what? This was not new to James, the Messianic Community within Judaism or Judaism itself. This had been understood and known since Noah and the Covenant given to Noah. The problem was that as Gentiles had repeatedly been used by YHVH to judge His people Israel through war and captivity, the Jews harbored resentments and hatred to the Gentiles, which culminated in their withholding ETERNAL LIFE from Gentiles by not giving them the knowledge and invitation to the Covenants, the Torah and Monotheism.

Just look at Jonah who refused to go the Ninevites (Assyrians) who had attacked and killed his forefathers. In Acts 15, James quotes 4 of the 7 Laws of Noah which were understood by Jews of his time as necessary for Gentile acceptance with God. The problem was that the Jewish establishment of Sadducees and Shammai's Pharisees would not take this message to the Gentiles and in fact persecuted them as seen in the early church after the Gentiles entered. It was the Hillel School of Phariseism (of which Jesus would be a the leading spokesman in his day) that the message of repentance and faith in the One God of Israel was taken to the Gentiles through the FIRST Great Commission in 20 B.C.E. Later Jesus' Great Commission in Matt. 28, would be a SECOND call to world evangelism and we see the fruit of it in the Apostle's journeys and Paul's journeys.

Paul was NOT saying that "Yeshua abolished the Laws of Yahweh", he was SAYING that Yeshua had abolished the ENMITY—the HATRED and OPPOSITION—to all of Yahweh's Laws (ESPECIALLY FOR THE GENTILES—after all who wants to be circumcised as an adult male where often, without the antibodies of the mother that the baby has in the first six months of his life, many men died following circumcision? Also, who would desire to abide by 613 laws anyway if you never understood them since you had no prior knowledge of them....sounds like the church doesn't it?).

Yeshua abolished , through his his death and subsequent ministry of his apostles, the "enmity" that brings "death" by alleviating the PRIOR NECESSITY OF ALL GENTILES TO BE CIRCUMCISED AND CONVERT TO JUDAISM AND THUS BEING FORCED TO ACCEPT ALL 613 LAWS OR MITZVOTH FOR ACCEPTANCE AND INCLUSION IN ISRAEL (the redeemed of the LORD). Accepting 66 Laws of Noah for Eternal Life is much easier and appealing to Gentiles than accepting 613 Laws (especially if circumcision is not among them!). This was the "mission" and "Gospel" as originally taught by the Jerusalem Church before the "Pauline altered message" would take hold long after his death. Scholars today estimate that in the first century Paul more than likely had no more than 50 converts his whole life; the reason being the Apostles and their associates followed him everywhere and tried to "undo" his false teachings of a "lawless Gospel." One only needs to read the New Testament to see these "Jews" are a constant plague against Paul and "my gospel". Little does Christianity today understand the dynamics involved in the Paul problem of the first century where he preached "another gospel" while blaming the Apostles that they were guilty of the same. Ironical, isn't it?

Let the reader understand...no Jew ever hated the Law...they all loved the Law for it was Yahweh's Word to them. So any hostility to the Law was from the Gentile who lacked proper understanding of the Law as does the Gentile Christian Church of today. Just look to David as a type of Messiah and try to understand how he could "delight in the Law day and night."

Answer for yourself: Does this sound like someone who saw the Law of God as bondage?

AN IRONIC PARADOX:

Just the opposite of what is taught today by mainline Gentile Christianity did Yeshua accomplish on the Cross.

Instead of ABOLISHING THE LAWS, JESUS REALLY PROMOTED THE LAW (THE LAWS OF NOAH TO THE GENTILES (through the Great Commission) although not realized in full at the time of the Cross, but UNDERSTOOD COMPLETELY BY JAMES (HIS HAND-PICKED PASTOR) AT THE ACTS 15 CHURCH COUNCIL IN 50 A.D.). It would take 20 years for it to happen, but when it did, the flood-gates were opened for Gentile inclusion and acceptance in the Israel of God. Notice this flood-gate would come through the Messianic Branch of Judaism, and not the mainstream Sadducean or Pharisaical Judaism.

HAVING THIS BACKGROUND let us read these troublesome Ephesian Scriptures NOW CORRECTLY TRANSLATED AND UNDERSTOOD, LEAVING OUT THE ADDED WORDS:

Eph 2:15

Having abolished In his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for us to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace;

First of all know for certain that in the Greek of Eph. 2 there are no such words as "even," "contained," or "so" in the verse; they have been added by the editors of your New Testament and are identified as such by their being in italics in the verses. We must read these verses without such additions if we ever hope to arrive at the truth of the verse and what was intended to be understood by the original writer.

- 15 Abolishing the ENMITY (toward the Law-the only translation after removing the word "even" which is not in the best manuscripts); the hatred and opposition to the Law, the Commandments, and the Ordinances, through His own flesh, in order to create in Himself one new man from the two; making peace,

2189 echthra- 1) enmity 2) cause of enmity

To be correct then we must understand that Jesus' death abolished the CAUSE of this hatred and enmity toward the Law of Commandments as seen by the Gentiles at that time in Israel. To say that Jesus abolished the Law or Commandments by his death is a TOTALLY INCORRECT UNDERSTANDING OF THE VERSE; BUT SUCH AS BEEN DONE TO MAKE SURE THAT THE READER COMES AWAY FROM THE PASSAGE NO LONGER UNDER THE LAW!

By adding words to the New Testament we end up with false doctrines that lead us into sin. Almost no greater lie could be told that that which we have here; supposedly that Jesus' death abolished the law and commandments in ordinances. Rightfully understood his death abolished the hatred toward the Law by the non-Jew because in time the ministry of Jesus will no longer require enforced circumcision for inclusion of the non-Jew and the relaxation of such bigotry of the Jews toward the non-Jews and we see this fact in James' ruling at the Jerusalem Council in Acts 15 where only the Laws of Noah are required for Gentile inclusion into the Israel of God.

- 16 That would reconcile both in ONE BODY TO YAHWEH...having KILLED THE ENMITY through himself.

Answer for yourself: Understanding now how Jesus abolished the hatred and opposition toward the Law for the Gentiles by removing the "death penalty" for transgression of the Law [by his disciples' mission to the Gentile world following his death whereby the Laws and Covenant of Noah was taken to the pagan world in which faith and obedience to the laws of God and repentance of them when transgressed was taught ensuring Eternal Life to the non-Jews] and [nailing those handwriting or ordinances WHICH WERE AGAINST US...the death penalty was against us but blessing for obedience to the Law was not...which would be the fruit of the non-Jew receiving the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah from teachings that accompanied the Great Commission], then why do you most likely have such opposition toward the LAW in your religious belief system in your Christian Church today as you hear it preached by multitudes of preachers today?

Answer for yourself: Can you not see not that your New Testament has been forged in order to teach just opposite to what Jesus wanted you to know and live out?

There are two reasons:

- First, most are not aware or have forgotten that yes; disobedience to the Law brings death but obedience to the Law brings blessings. So the death penalty is imposed by God because we fail to obey His Word.

The non-Jews of the world at the time of Yeshua were not being taught about God nor was His Word being brought to them. They were not taught about the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah as their Covenant with God. Thus, they had no knowledge of the Laws of God and the Covenant of Noah with its covenant stipulations and the responsibilities they had before God to obey His Commandments. They did not know how to make themselves acceptable to God. Therefore, living in ignorance of the Laws of God guarantee that out of ignorance alone they would be violators of God's Laws and this brings the Heavenly Death Penalty. But when known and observed, the Laws of God bring blessings from God. Understand that those "ordinances and Laws" which were not against us remain and were not nullified by Yeshua's death, but ironically promoted as they would later be taken to the non-Jewish world through the Great Commission. The sure death penalty was abolished....at least hopefully providing that these Laws were taught and given and accepted by the non-Jewish races of the world. One more thing; when the passage speaks of "being made nigh by the blood of Jesus" this is nothing more than an allegory or picture for his death that would later catalyze a movement out of a Gentile hating Judaism that would go to the Gentile world. Had Jesus not died then there would not have been an outreach, there would not have been an Acts 15 and 16, and the world would have dwelled in darkness up to today! To attach to Jesus' blood some mystical atonement reveals one's complete lack of understanding the Jewish Sacrificial system and reveals just how much paganism has crept into the Jesus' stories and how Jesus has been modeled after pagan sun-gods and sun-godmen!

- Secondly, because you read a Bible that has words added to it that the earliest Greek manuscripts did not thereby changing what the earliest manuscripts taught and what the earliest believers held dear to their faith. Our "corrupted" New Testament translations have literally brainwashed us. Our corrupted Christian Bibles and translations with added italicized words is all we have ever read and heard and have not studied the subject for ourselves. Besides that, we were taught that these "added words" only help to bring out the intended meaning of the text better. Such is a lie. More correctly, such "italicized passages" serve the agenda of the translators in making sure you receive their "theological position". Unsuspecting and not knowing that such words in "italics" in our Bibles were not in the earliest Greek texts, millions are persuaded to the theological position of the translators of their Bible instead of the apostles.

Answer for yourself: In light of what I have shown you, should you not began to re-think your religious belief system concerning the Law of God and the attending obedience to those Laws pertaining to the Gentile believer in God? Definitely!

This opens a can of worms when you begin to study Paul and the Paul problem in-depth!

This is important for these "same laws" command a type of worship that is not only neglected in Christianity today, but outright rejected and replaced by Gentile paganism in the disguise of "orthodoxy."

Ephesians 2:15-16 NOW AGREES perfectly with all the other Scriptures of Yahweh, which command His People to Keep His Laws. In Romans 8:6-7 we again read about ENMITY and Yahweh's LAW, which says:

- 6 For to be CARNALLY MINDED is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.
- 7 Because the CARNAL MIND is ENMITY AGAINST—bitterly opposed to—YAHWEH: for it is not subject to the Law of Yahweh, nor indeed can be.

Answer for yourself: Is being "carnally minded" being NOT subject to the Law of God?

Yes. I cannot say for you but surely you understand that "carnally minded" which is the fruit of not subjecting yourself to the Laws of God is not a condition you want to be in when you die and meet your Creator.

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather odd that Paul would speak of "not being submitted to the Laws of God" in the book of Romans long after the Cross while yet maintaining that the "Law has passed away" and that we are "no longer under the Law"? [THINK]

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather surprising that the Law of God existed for Paul after the cross when he wrote the book of Romans? You should considering what you have been taught most likely and begin to open your mind to the "double-speak" of the New Testament. Is contains a "mixed" message; one of Paul, or those who altered him and Rome along with the true message of Yeshua and the early church.

Answer for yourself: Are preachers who teach the LAW has passed away considered carnal minded by God? Sure are! Maybe you should ask your Pastor this Sunday if he is carnally minded.

Lets examine the text in the Greek Scriptures:

6 For <1063> to be <5427> <0> carnally <4561> minded <5427> [is] death <2288>; but <1161> to be <5427> <0> spiritually <4151> minded <5427> [is] life <2222> and <2532> peace <1515>. {to be carnally...: Gr. the minding of the flesh} {to be spiritually...: Gr. the minding of the Spirit} 7 Because <1360> the carnal <4561> mind <5427> [is] enmity <2189> against <1519> God <2316>: for <1063> it is <5293> <0> not <3756> subject <5293> (5743) to the law <3551> of God <2316>, neither <3761> indeed <1063> can be <1410> (5736). {the carnal...: Gr. the minding of the flesh}

The writings of Paul in Ephesians 2:15-16 and in Romans 8:6-7 are in perfect accord with his writings in Romans 3:31, which says:

Answer for yourself: Did Paul teach the Gentiles in the church of Rome (according to the Greek words he used) that we are NOT to render idle, inactivate, destroy, abolish the Law thereby causing it to be deprived of its influence or power? He sure did.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul teach the Gentiles in the church of Rome that INSTEAD of abolishing the Laws and Commandments of God, we are to rather ESTABLISH THEM? He sure did.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul teach the Gentiles in the church of Rome that INSTEAD of abolishing the Laws and Commandments of God, we are to rather cause or make the Law and Torah to stand firm, to be kept intact thereby sustaining the authority or force of the Law? He sure did.

Paul, if he were a good Jew, would never "say" that Yahweh's Laws were abolished! It was his teaching, that: "The Law is HOLY, and the Commandments Holy, and Just, and Righteous," saying this in Romans 7:12. It would be elsewhere in the New Testament where he would later say that as his theology would evolve to such a point. We take up this sad issue at:

Of course, all YOU have to do to translate Ephesians 2:15-16 CORRECTLY, is just to take OUT the words that have been added to it by DECEIVING, LYING translators...who had CARNAL MINDS, and who had ENMITY AGAINST (hatred and opposition TO) Yahweh's Laws. Yeshua abolished that enmity; that hatred and opposition to Yahweh's Laws, through himself...for those who would OBEY. Your only problem is that no one every interpreted the Bible correctly for you by doing in-depth study of the original languages in which the Bible was originally written.

OTHER TWISTED SCRIPTURE EXPOSED: "BLOTTING OUT THE HANDWRITING OF ORDINANCES THAT WAS AGAINST US"

False teachers and lying preachers today proclaim to you, if you will listen to them, that "all those old Jewish laws are all done away with, that they were 'nailed to the cross'".

Colossians chapter 2, verse 14 is possibly on of the most misunderstood passages in all of the New Testament. For years I was taught that THE LAW was nailed to the cross and now we are UNDER GRACE.

Answer for yourself: Can you not agree that for the most part that is the message you have heard from the pulpit of your church most of your life?

We at Bet Emet Ministries can find no Scripture in the Bible which commands one NOT TO THINK FOR THEMSELVES. So with that in mind, let us rightly divide this Scripture from Colossians. The Apostle Paul begins to tell us in verse Colossians 2:10 that we are complete in Messiah, through identification with him through Mikveh (baptism) and are quickened and made alive with him through his resurrection following his crucifixion. So far..so good. In verse 14 he states "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way by nailing it to the cross."

As stated earlier as I grew up in church I was taught that the WHOLE LAW was done away with in Yeshua's death. Is that so?

Answer for yourself: Can you tell me what part of the Law is written against you? Is learning that we are not to murder something God told us to hurt us?

Answer for yourself: What part of the Law is contrary to you? Is learning not be live in idolatry meant to harm us?

Remember that it is "those parts of the Law which were contrary and written against us that Jesus' death, as explained above whereby the Covenant and Laws of Noah, with their Covenant responsibilities, were taken to the non-Jews. In this way the "death" penalty incurred by non-Covenanted and obedient people was taken FIGURATIVELY away and was, in the terms of Paul, 'nailed' to the cross through the results of Jesus' death and the subsequent resulting mission to the non-Jewish world by the Messianic fraction of Judaism in the first century."

Answer for yourself: But what if what "hurts" us within the "Law" was just "part" of the Law and not all of the Law?

Answer for yourself: Are you familiar with Hebrews where it states that when there is a change of the Priesthood that is of necessity a change in the Law?

THE MELCHIZEDEK PRIESTHOOD

First of all one must begin with the understanding that Melchizedek was a non-Jew; he was a Gentile and his ministry at that time was to non-Jews. Let us not forget that Jesus never had a ministry to non-Jews; only his followers would following his death after they were dispersed from Jerusalem. In a rather ironic way Jesus' death propelled from within Biblical Judaism a mission to the non-Jew as mentioned previously. In this way conversion with mandatory circumcision was not required any longer for non-Jews to come to God and be a member in good standing in the Israel of God. No longer was the Aaronic Priesthood the method whereby one was to approach God (again figuratively), but through the Melchizedek Priesthood (a non-Jewish ministry and Priesthood), and as stated, there was a change in the Law. That part of the Law was that no-longer non-Jews had to be circumcised. When this important point of contention becomes "real" for you then you can understand that in the whole of the book of Galatians written by Paul the ONLY LAW he was taking against and reiterating that the non-Jew was no longer "under" is the Law of Circumcision; all other Laws within the Covenant of Noah were BINDING! But notice, it does not say that there was the ABOLITION OF THE LAW OR THE CESSATION OF THE LAW!

Answer for yourself: We begin again, what part of the Law was contrary to you?

Answer for yourself: When Yahweh said "Thou shall not kill"....was that given as a commandment against you or to help you by warning you of what to avoid in order that He can bless you?

Answer for yourself: When Yahweh said "Thou shall not commit adultery"...was that given as a commandment against you or to help you by protecting you from destroying your family or getting a communicable disease, or worse...aids?

Answer for yourself: When Yahweh said "Thou shall honor thy father and thy mother"...was that given as a commandment contrary to you or was it because in obeying it you receive the manifestation of the promise that you will live long and prosper?

It seems to me, as to any parent who has children, you give your children "do's" and "don't's" BECAUSE YOU LOVE THEM AND WISH THEY BE KEPT FROM HARM AND RECEIVE BLESSING INSTEAD OF HARM.

Answer for yourself: Can you not see the intent of each of Yahweh's commandments is to bless you and not curse you? I hope so. Since these were never "required" to be kept without breaking for SALVATION, ONLY A GOAL TO BE STRIVED FOR BECAUSE OF GOD'S MERCY IN SALVATION BY FAITH, THEN HOW COULD YOU EVER ENVISION THESE COULD CEASE AND PASS AWAY AS MANY ARE TAUGHT IN THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH TODAY?

Answer for yourself: Can you find one commandment which was given "against" you by Yahweh? There is none.

Answer for yourself: Can you name one commandment which is impossible to keep or obey? There is none. If you will be honest with yourself there are many commandments you might not want to obey but not one, not one is too difficult to do. In reality it is a matter of the heart.

SO WHAT IS CONTRARY TOWARD US IN THE LAW?

So, as Paul stated there must be something in the Law which was contrary to us and we must find out. This one is easy. The soul that sinneth shall die! Included in the Law are both blessings and curses. The curse of the Law is the death penalty for our disobedience of the Law. We have all sinned and come short of the glory of God.

Yet, the handwriting of ordinances written contrary to us [in the Law] are not the blessings when we obey the Law and Commandments of God....but rather...the curse of the DEATH PENALTY when we disobey the Law.

The DEATH PENALTY for sin is definitely written in the Law and it is CONTRARY TO US...and it was metaphorically nailed to the cross in Yeshua's (body) death became the stimulus for the mission to the non-Jewish world whereby the non-Jews would be taken the revelation of God, the Word of God, and the Covenants of God was the result. This is all hind-sight. Again it bears repeating that up to this time little concern had been given the non-Jewish world by mainline Judaism as it had fallen under the influence of Rabbis which harbored hatred for non-Jews. In would be in this "renewed" revelation from God taken to the non-Jewish world that the gift of salvation would be made available to the non-Jewish people of the world along with the resultant responsibilities toward or "Saving" God. In this way, by coming to saving faith along with accountability to God the non-Jews would come to understand how they were once under the death penalty from God and how now though faith and repentance that such a death penalty was to be removed.

Answer for yourself: Dear non-Jewish believer, who was once alienated from God and the commonwealth of Israel, who was once a stranger to the Covenant promises, who was once without God in the world, is it not true that directly linked to Jesus' death is your current relationship to God, for had it not been for this tragic event, which Rabbi other than Jesus has come to you with the knowledge of the Covenants of God, faith, and repentance except him and those who come in his name (even thought much else shared at times by them is terribly wrong...the basics are right)?

If you will be honest so much is directly attributable to Yeshua's death, and again, this event ultimately caused his followers to repent of their "biased" anti-Gentile religious belief system and take salvation to the world; and in this way the death penalty that rested on the non-Jewish world was to be removed.

Thus, the only thing nailed to the cross was the judgment rightly coming to me and you, but not our eternal responsibilities to imitate Yeshua's message and Yahweh to the best of our abilities by obeying the commandments which are in reality various attributes of God acted outonly manifestations of Yahweh's attributes

The Positive Commandments, which you have been taught you are "not under and have passed away" are nothing more that attributes of God and what He is and what He does; the Negative Commandments only the attributes of God and what He is not and what He does not do. To be like God, to be Holy for He is Holy, then we must model our lives around them regardless of how Paul has been interpreted; for in last analysis, your standing today before God is solely determined not on your faith to disobey, but your faith in God to obey as you "reach for the mark of the high calling in God" as you learned by Yeshua's example and in his name. This tragic message of the Law not valid today is the result of the two differing Gospels in the New Testament.

It is in obeying the commandments we become like God. Yahweh would never take away the pattern, only the Gentile Christian Church who misinterpreted the pattern as bondage would, and did for over 1800 years. They forgot that Yeshua said "my burden is easy and my yoke is light." Let us never forget that.

SO WHAT IS THE BOTTOM LINE FOR THE GENTILE BELIEVER?

Ephesians 2:11-18, CORRECTLY INTERPRETED tells us:

- 11 Therefore, remember that in times past you were Gentiles; who are called The Uncircumcised by those who are called The Circumcision made in the flesh by hands
- 12 Remember that at that time you were without Messiah, being aliens outside the citizenship of Israel, strangers to the covenants based upon promises, having NO HOPE and WITHOUT YAHWEH in the world.

- 13 But now, in Christ Jesus, you who were once far off, have been BROUGHT NEAR THROUGH the blood of Messiah (in early Christian Gnosticism the reference to "Jesus Christ" was an allegory to the rising/dying godman in you as you awaken to the Divine within yourself...see <http://firstnewtestament.netfirms.com>)
- 14 For He is our peace, Who has MADE BOTH ONE, and has broken down the dividing wall separating us (ONLY IF YOU UNDERSTAND THE MESSAGE IN THIS ARTICLE)
- 15 Abolishing the ENMITY; [the hatred and the opposition] TOWARD the Law, the Commandments, and the Ordinances, through His own flesh, in order to create in Himself ONE NEW MAN from the two; making peace.
- 16 That would RECONCILE both in ONE BODY TO YAHWEH through the sacrifice...having KILLED) THE ENMITY THROUGH HIMSELF.
- 17 And he came and preached peace to you who were afar off, and to those who were near:
- 18 Because through Him we both have access to the Father by ONE SPIRIT.

See and UNDERSTAND that the carnal mind is AGAINST Yahweh's Laws! It is BITTERLY OPPOSED TO THEM! Therefore, the "ENMITY" THAT WAS DESTROYED BY THE CROSS IS NOT THE LAWS OF YAHWEH THEMSELVES—as the carnal minded, worldly, LYING preachers would have YOU to believe. The "ENMITY" THAT WAS DESTROYED BY THE CROSS IS THE HATRED AND THE OPPOSITION TOWARD YAHWEH'S LAWS—which the Carnal Mind harbors.

Answer for yourself: As a Christian will you allow the Yeshua's death work in your heart, what it accomplished in the first century, and let it destroy the "lies you accepted as truth" from well meaning preachers (kind of like the Rabbis of the first century if you can see the analogy) who know no better because they have let themselves be brainwashed and failed to study better?

Answer for yourself: Will you repent of this false doctrine that destroyed the manifestation of your love for God...obedience to His word?

Please understand, that you probably obey many of God's Laws without even knowing, but many you don't know which God holds you accountable for those you don't; regardless of conscious disobedience or ignorance. Sadly in the Christian Church today there is rampant paganism masquerading as righteousness. Such beliefs, conducts, and behaviors, whether done knowingly or unknowingly, along with many other Christian religious beliefs are contrary to the written Word of God and are sin because they cause you to disobey not obey the Commands of God given since the beginning but taint your worship of the Creator

We at Bet Emet Ministries call upon you and ask you to reconsider the Sabbath commandment, the multitude of commandments concerning the Festivals of the Lord, as well as the commandments concerning both how and where you are to Tithe. It only begins here. It gets much harder when you look into the truth that has been kept from you about who Jesus really was; was he God, is he to be prayed to, is he to be sung to, what is the mass, what is communion, are we to take the Eucharist, how much Sun-Worship is revered in Christianity today and passed off as pleasing to God? It get real hard real quick if you truly want to come to the truth concerning Jesus and really return to his faith, the faith that once went into all the world before it was corrupted and changed ultimately by Rome. This is where you should start your study and your repentance, for these issues lie at the very heart of whether your worship is in Truth and in the Spirit of Truth, or else falls into the category of Nadab and Abihu. They did not know their worship was displeasing to God until they were dead. This is what I desperately am trying as the Pastor of Bet Emet Ministries to prevent happening to millions of good people whose only sin is the sin of not knowing the truth because they trusted "unworthy shepherds" to lead them.

Now, having a much better understanding of the condition of the Gentile-Christian believer after repentance and faith in Yeshua's real Gospel and message of the first century, we find the Gentiles coming into spiritual union with the root of the Olive Tree (Israel), and where they previously had been considered a "Gentile" who was at one time separated from God, excluded from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope, without (any knowledge) of God in the world (Ephesians 2:12), now they had become fellow-heirs (of Abraham), fellow-members and citizens of Israel and the Israel of God, and fellow-partakers of the promise (made to Abraham).

More to follow as we continue to rightly divide the Word of God as we seek our place as Gentile believers in the Olive Tree of Israel as well as adhering to the Covenant of Noah.

WILD OLIVE BRANCHES-GENTILES GRAFTED INTO ISRAEL...DO YOU "LOOK" LIKE ISRAEL?

Maybe some of you remember in junior high school in your science classes studying plants and grafting into the stem of a plant a "twig" from the plant or possibly another plant related to the primary plant. In doing so you grafted into a plant a "foreign" plant and the two became one. This new "implanted foreign" plant would take hold and grow and use the food of the mother plant for its nutrients. Soon we have a healthy "engraft" which took on the visible characteristics of the mother plant. This is exactly what Paul is saying to the Christian Church today. If we are grafted into Israel we should resemble Israel. Whether we do or not is for you to decide after you continue your study into these areas.

Now the Apostle Paul, in his epistle to the church at Ephesus, was speaking to the Gentile-Ephesian "believers" (WILD OLIVE BRANCHES WHO HAD BEEN GRAFTED INTO ISRAEL), who WERE strangers before Yahweh's Word was delivered to them.

FROM STRANGERS TO FELLOW CITIZENS OF ISRAEL

When the Gentiles came to faith in God (Yahweh), they were no longer "strangers"! They had accepted Yahweh's Holy Laws as well as Yeshua's religion which contained laws and commandments, which they had broken in times past, and they were given the opportunity to be JUSTIFIED through faith in and obedience to the Laws of Yahweh. In Ephesians 2:19, KJV:

19 Now <3767> therefore <686> ye are <2075> (5748) no more <3765> strangers <3581> and <2532> foreigners <3941>, but <235> fellowcitizens <4847> with the saints <40>, and <2532> of the household <3609> of God <2316>;

Answer for yourself: As fellow citizens with Israel (Gentile believer), does the word in the Greek Scriptures mean we are in union with the Jews? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does the Bible, that we accept as the supreme authority for faith and practice of our faith, say that Gentiles like you and I who come to faith in the God of Israel attain the same citizenship with others in Israel, thus calling us fellow citizens of Israel? Yes.

Answer for yourself: As Gentiles who have been received into the fellowship, commonwealth, and communion of the saints of Jewish Israel, are we considered as fellow-citizens of Israel and the people of God? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Are fellow citizens of the SAME NATION (both Jew and Gentile) under the same LAWS of that nation? Sure are!

Answer for yourself: As Gentiles, who have come to faith in the One God of Israel through the endeavors of the followers of Yeshua following his death, did these non-Jews think at that time that they belonged to a "separate religious affiliation" from the Israel of God or did they understand that they were to identify, as did the Jews, with the Israel of God since they were grafted into the same religion as the Jews, only with slightly different responsibilities and covenants, thereby making them FELLOW CITIZENS OF ISRAEL? That should be easy...they did not think that they had created a new religion.

Answer for yourself: Now the Apostle Paul was speaking to the Ephesians (WILD OLIVE BRANCHES WHO HAD BEEN GRAFTED INTO ISRAEL), who WERE strangers before Yahweh's Word was delivered to them. When they received Yahweh, they were no longer "strangers"! They had accepted Yahweh's Holy Laws, which they had broken in times past, and they were given the opportunity to be JUSTIFIED through repentance and obedience to the Commandments of God as found in the Torah. In Ephesians 2:19, they are no longer called strangers because they had become what? Fellow citizens of Israel

Answer for yourself: These Gentile believers were equals citizens with who in the Israel of God, and of the household of God? The Jews

Answer for yourself: Are fellow citizens who are of the SAME NATION (both Jew and Gentile) under the same LAWS of that nation? Yes of course.

Answer for yourself: Sadly, today the vast majority of Christian Churches find their identity in their denomination or non-denomination and do not see themselves as a part of what? Fellow citizens of Israel.

Answer for yourself: By failing to recognize that as Gentiles we are part of Israel, most Christians identify with their denomination and non-denomination. This is in direct opposition to the Scriptures in the New Testament as well as the Old Testament which clearly instructs that the believing Gentile finds his position in the Household of God as part of whom along with the Jews? Fellow citizens of Israel.

Answer for yourself: What was the denomination of the church which Yeshua founded and which was led by James in the first century which took the Great Commission unto the world? It was Biblical Judaism, and this may startle you, but if you were to research the topic like I and multitudes have, you will see that believing Gentiles like you and me kept the Saturday Sabbath, the Biblical Feast days well into the fourth century until they were changed by Gentile paganism in the Christian Church/State of Rome.

Answer for yourself: As we have seen, can you now understand why there was to be ONE LAW for the Jew born in the land and the stranger (Gentile) that lived among them? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Did the Apostolic church set the correct example by not promoting numerous “sects” and “denominations” with multitudes of conflicting doctrines, statutes, and commandments like we see today in Christianity with over 2,000 different denominations? They sure were.

Let us continue with Ephesians 2:6 as we see our Biblical position as Gentile believers:

- 6 And hath raised [us] up together, and made [us] sit together in heavenly [places] in Christ Jesus:
- 7 That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in [his] kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.
- 8 For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: [it is] the gift of God:
- 9 Not of works, lest any man should boast.
- 10 For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. ordained: or, prepared}

Take notice of the change that follows in the thought processes of the Apostle Paul where he contrasts what we were before Yeshua's ministers revealed to us Yahweh and what our standing is now since receiving “the” faith of Yeshua and coming to faith in Yahweh.

11 Wherefore remember, that ye [being] in time past Gentiles in the flesh (before faith, repentance and acceptance of the Covenant given to Gentiles with its corresponding Laws and Commandments within the Torah), who are called Uncircumcision (it was customary for all Gentile males to remain uncircumcised) by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands (the Jews);

Notice again the previous condition of all Gentiles (called the "uncircumcised") who had never converted to Judaism and were without faith "in" and knowledge "of" Yahweh.

Then we read in Ephesians 2:12, KJV:

12 That AT THAT TIME you were without the Messiah (his faith), being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the COVENANTS OF PROMISE (plural),

12 That <3754> at <1722> that <1565> time <2540> ye were <2258> (5713) without <5565> Christ <5547>, being aliens <526> (5772) from the commonwealth <4174> of Israel <2474>, and <2532>strangers <3581> from the covenants <1242>of promise <1860>, having <2192> (5723) no <3361> hope <1680>, and <2532> without God <112> in <1722> the world <2889>:

"At that time"...what TIME was the Apostle Paul speaking of to these Ephesians? As Ephesians 2:2 says: "at the time they were walking in DISOBEDIENCE TO THE LAWS OF GOD."

We may be called "Christians," but the Bible informs us that God calls us "Israel."

- 2) to make a covenant, to enter into a Covenant with one,

These DISOBEDIENT Gentile-Ephesians were "strangers" to the citizenship of Israel, as well as to the Covenants of Promise BECAUSE THEY WERE ESTRANGED BY DISOBEDIENCE TO THE LAWS OF GOD

Yahweh only makes a COVENANT with those who OBEY HIM.

The Lordship of Yeshua is only valid to the degree you submit to his rule in your life and that means obedience to His Father's Laws that pertain to you. Read for yourself the Blessings for obedience to GOD'S LAWS and the Cursings for disobedience to GOD'S LAWS, which are recorded in Deuteronomy 28:1-24 and Deuteronomy 29:15-19 for your instruction.

Let us summarize and notice that because of the ministry of Yeshua:

1. Gentile "believers" were no longer aliens from the commonwealth of Israel
2. Gentile "believers" were no longer strangers from the covenants of promise (remember the Abrahamic covenant has promised that through Abraham all the nations (Gentiles) would be blessed (with the opportunity of eternal life)
3. Gentile "believers" no longer lived without hope of life after death
4. Gentile "believers" no longer lived without the knowledge of the True God of all life as the Covenant of Noah along with the Laws of Noah were extended to them for their acceptance

Answer for yourself: Does Yahweh wish the Jew to pattern himself after the Gentile or the Gentile after the Jew? In the Bible it is always the Gentile who is to follow the Jew for salvation is of the Jew, and will always be of the Jew.

Ephesians 2:13-14:

13 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ (let us understand that through the death of Yeshua was catalyzed the taking of the Torah to the Gentile world, whereas before his death, no attempts were being made to give eternal life to the Gentile world).

Please notice that in verse 14 that the Gentile and the Jew had come into unity and the middle wall of separation between Jew and Gentile that consisted of such things as hatred, misunderstanding, prejudice, conflicting beliefs, doctrines, and religious rituals and ceremonies had been removed in order that both Jew and Gentile could find harmony in unity in the worship of God.

Answer for yourself: Let me ask you...does that condition of mutual acceptance and unity between Jews and Christians exist today in your church or in this world?

Answer for yourself: Where can you find this today? Why and how did we lose it (one new man in Messiah), since it is evident that it existed in the first century?

Answer for yourself: Does Yahweh wish the Jew to pattern himself after the Gentile or the Gentile after the Jew? You will have that answer after you finish these articles.

TWISTING SCRIPTURES TO OUR DESTRUCTION

The Book of Ephesians chapter two and verse 15 states:

- 15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, [even] the law of commandments [contained] in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, [so] making peace;
- 16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby: (thereby: or, in himself)
- 17 And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.
- 18 For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.
- 19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God;
- 20 And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner [stone];

Possibly there is no greater error in Scriptural interpretation than the TWISTED Scripture in Ephesians 2: 15-16 where we find that multitudes "claim" that Yeshua "nailed the Law of Commandments to the cross" thereby giving mankind (the Gentile church) freedom from the LAW! That is the premise and quite understandable from a quick reading in English version of the text. Such a mistaken understanding is because our English Bibles contain added words which were never there in the Greek Scriptures which influence our reading to perceive the Law was abolished. If you will begin to study for yourself instead of trusting that your preacher has preached to you I promise you that you will come to many Bible truths that have for too long been overlooked. If you will do this then you would discover what I did that completely altered the direction of my life and SHOULD ALTER YOURS IF YOU ARE A TRUE LOVER OF GOD!

HOW COME THE CHURCH HAS MISSED THIS?

Today the vast majority of Christian Churches find their identity in the denomination or non-denomination and not as a part of Israel. This is in direct opposition to the Scriptures in the New Testament as well as the Old Testament which clearly instructs that the Gentile finds his position in the Household of God as part of Israel along with the Jew. The reason for so much misunderstanding today in the Christian Church concerning their relationship with the Israel of God is because there have been words ADDED to Ephesians 2:15-16 (as well as other passages in the New Testament) which have TWISTED THE MEANING OF THE GREEK SCRIPTURES thereby falsely leading multitudes to believe the Law has passed away! Following is a copy from the King James Version, with the added words underlined:

Ephesians 2:

- 15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man so making peace;
- 16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby:

LET US BE CAREFUL IN OUR STUDY

As you can see from a close and careful reading of Ephesians 2:15-16 that the translators of the King James Version, by the USE of ADDED WORDS, PURPOSELY, with the INTENT TO FALSIFY, deceived THIS WORLD into "thinking" that Yeshua came to do away with the Law as we shall more clearly see later in this article! If we read the above Scripture and INCLUDE the words "even" and "contained" we come to the conclusion that Yeshua abolished in his flesh the law, commandments and ordinances through the cross. But dearly beloved "even" and "contained" are added to the Greek manuscripts before translating into English by the publishers of our Bibles.

Take time to read this text of the New Testament and leave out the italicized words and listen to the new meaning it brings to your awareness

Dear child of God, these words are not in the Greek texts recovered from ages of antiquity by archeologists. But by these "additions" by men "who want you to know their theology" we are unsuspectingly led astray from the real message God intended us to have.

If you remove these two "added" words we find that the ONLY THING ABOLISHED BY YESHUA AND THE CROSS IS THE "ENMITY." More on this later...let us continue with Ephesians.

Answer for yourself: As you can see from a close and careful reading of Ephesians 2:15-16 that the translators of the King James Version, by the USE of ADDED WORDS, PURPOSELY, with the INTENT TO FALSIFY, deceived THIS WORLD into "thinking" that Yeshua came to do what in regards to the Law? Nail the Law to the cross which he did not.

As stated earlier Yeshua's death and presumed resurrection were understood as a catalyst to motivate a Gentile-hating Judaism to repent in part (the followers of Yeshua) and take to the non-Jews of the world not "conversion", which required circumcision which for an adult was an effective deterrent to his acceptance of Biblical Faith, but the Laws of Noah which originally God gave to the non-Jew (did not require circumcision). No longer were 613 commandments placed upon the non-Jew along with circumcision for acceptance by the Jews; rather, 66 commandments dealing mainly with moral issues were his to keep and observe. Such repentance by Israel (the followers of Yeshua) in their attitude to the non-Jew was instrumental with the doing away with the hatred and opposition toward the Law on the part of the Gentiles by removing forced circumcision as a prerequisite. This main fact is the whole reason for the writing of the book of Galatians where Paul speaks only about one law not given to the non-Jew....circumcision. Paul never intended, in Galatians, that the Law pass away. He was only saying that the non-Jew was never under the Law of CIRCUMCISION as it was not part of the Covenant of Noah or the Law of Noah, but was conveniently used by the Jews to keep the non-Jew from fellowship and inclusion with them as they considered the non-Jew unclean and basically "dogs." I sure wish Christianity would study their history more and see such truths as this which have been overlooked for almost 2000 years.

Answer for yourself: If we read the above Scripture and INCLUDE the words "even" and "contained" we come to the conclusion that Yeshua abolished in his flesh the law, commandments and ordinances through the cross. But dearly beloved "even" and "contained" is added to the Greek manuscripts before translated into English. If you remove these two "added" words we find that the ONLY THING ABOLISHED BY YESHUA AND THE CROSS IS NOT THE LAWbut what? Hatred toward the Law by the Gentiles, since now they could come to saving faith without the need for circumcision as an adult male, and so goes the husband and father, so went the family.

Answer for yourself: Since Paul wrote the book of Ephesians, and taught Yahweh's LAWS to these same Ephesians (chapter 6:2-3) well after Yeshua's death and presumed resurrection, WOULD Paul teach that these SAME LAWS were "'nailed to a cross", and not to be KEPT'? The answer is, DEFINITELY NOT!

BE ON ALERT FOR ITALICIZED WORDS IN YOUR BIBLES

First, I would like to remind you of the fact that when one reads the Greek Scriptures (the New Testament) and finds WORDS IN ITALICS, that means: the italicized words have been ADDED TO THE SCRIPTURES in translation WHICH WERE NOT THERE IN THE BEGINNING! In other words, it was not given by Yahweh, was not in the Greek manuscripts, and is not intended to be added to the context for often it ALTERS THE TRUE MEANING OF THE PASSAGE AND WE ARE LED INTO ERROR AND SIN WITHOUT KNOWING IT BY SUCH PLACEMENT OF ITALICIZED WORDS. Such is the erroneous teaching that the LAW HAS PASSED AWAY. This is just such the case in Ephesians 2:15-16: The ADDED WORDS in these Scriptures in the King James Version have DECEIVED millions of people for HUNDREDS of years! Let us investigate once again Ephesians 2:15-16, KJV, [added words bracketed]!

SO NOW WE SEE MORE CLEARLY

15 Having abolished in his flesh the ENMITY [hatred toward something] (EVEN) the law of commandments (CONTAINED) in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, (so) making peace;

16 And that he might reconcile both unto Yahweh in one body by the "cross", having slain the ENMITY [hatred toward something] thereby.

Answer for yourself: What was abolished by the Cross (understood to mean the death of Yeshua)?

Understand the Jews loved the Law and did not hate it. The hatred toward the Law by the Gentiles was canceled by the death of Yeshua on the Cross as subsequent to his death whereby his followers would go into all the world thereby reaching the non-Jewish peoples of the world with the message of monotheism and the resulting responsibilities necessary for those coming to God to obtain salvation. No longer was the Gentile forced to "convert" and undergo circumcision to receive God's gracious gift of salvation. Circumcision had been used as a tool by Jews who hated Gentiles to discourage their coming to God and they used it effectively as they wished to have little or no contact with them since considering them unclean and not worthy of Eternal life (one only needs to read the accounts of Shammai to understand this situation). Circumcision was used to prevent the non-Jewish adult male from making conversion to Judaism. As an infant circumcision was no big thing as the baby carries the mother's antibodies against infection which lasts up to six months in the baby's blood. But for an adult this was a real problem as many died of the procedure due to infection. Now understand that by removing such an obstacle then the "death penalty" for transgression of the Law was removed for the non-Jew as he could now repent and come to saving faith without the need for circumcision. Not all of Israel was ecstatic over such actions taken by the Messianic community of Israel. It was even a slow procedure for the Apostles themselves as it literally took years and persecution to get them to respond in this manner. But no longer were the non-Jew kept from salvation as the Messianic part of Israel repented and began once again to be a "light to the Gentile" by directing them to God without all the excess baggage which had up to that time had effectively been used to prevent the conversion of the non-Jewish world. Now though faith, repentance, obedience, and observance of the Covenant of Noah along with its Commandments and Covenant stipulations, the non-Jew would have the "death penalty" which stood over his life removed and all this is traced to Yeshua's death on the cross and "believed resurrection" by his followers. In would be in the wake of Yeshua' death and the resulting ministry of his followers which developed afterwards that, in the fulfillment of the Great Commission, that the Jews, or at least some of them, would break from Jewish bigotry and go into all the world with the "good news" of faith in God and repentance to the non-Jewish world.

Let us regress for just a moment. First, we have established the FACT that there have been words ADDED at very critical places in these Scriptures. Now your pastors and preachers, most likely, have told you that the "ENMITY" in the verse refers to Yahweh's Law itself. As you can now see for yourself such is not the case.

Answer for yourself: Having seen for yourself the truth about these added words and that the Greek Scriptures do not contain them, are these Christian Pastors and Teachers correct in their interpretation or have they committed a grievous error and led you into sin (rejection of the Law and your covenant stipulations as non-Jews) without your knowledge? You be the judge!

Yahweh's LAW, however, is not the "ENMITY" slain as mentioned in the verse. Yeshua "abolished" on the cross the ENMITY (better understood as hatred toward something), for Paul has plainly said so in Romans 2:13, Romans 3:31, Romans 7:7, and Romans 7:12.

Romans 2:13

For NOT the "hearers" of the Law are just before Yahweh, but the "DOERS OF THE LAW" will be justified.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul teach "doing the Law" for justification AFTER THE CROSS? DEFINITELY YES!

Romans 3:31

Are we then "doing away with the Law through faith? BY NO MEANS! Rather, we ESTABLISH the Law!

Answer for yourself: Did Paul abolish or establish the Law in the Gentile churches (like yours) in Rome before or after the cross? The Law was established in Paul's preaching definitely after the cross!

Romans 7:7

Shall we therefore "say that the Law is 'SIN'? NO! By no means! But to the contrary, I did not know SIN (transgression of The Law) except THROUGH THE LAW, for I did not know lust, unless the Law had said (in Exodus 20:17 and Deuteronomy 5:21) Do not covet."

Romans 7:12

Therefore the LAW is HOLY, and the COMMANDMENTS holy, and Just, and Righteous.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul say this before or after the Cross of Christ? Definitely after!

Answer for yourself: Did the Jews love the Law or hate the Law? They loved the Law.

Answer for yourself: Then who do you suppose hated the Law (having not grown up with it and understood it properly like you and me)? The Gentiles for the reasons given above.

The Apostle Paul taught The Ten Commandment Law to the Ephesians, as proven by Ephesians 6:2-3, which says:

- 2 Honor your father and mother, which is the first Commandment with a promise:
- 3 That it may be well with you, and you may live long on the earth.

The LAW to honor one's father and mother, in order that your days may be long upon the land, is Commandment Number Five of The Ten Commandments, found in Exodus 20:12, and repeated in Deuteronomy 5:16.

Notice that the Apostle Paul was NOT teaching the "abolishment" of The Commandments (correctly understood as the ten categories that organized all the LAWS OF YAHWEH), or he would NOT have been teaching the Ephesians to OBEY the 5th Commandment!

This is made all the more difficult because Paul tells us in Romans that the "Law is holy, just and righteous."

Answer for yourself: So "what" was the ENMITY that Paul said was "abolished" on the Yeshua's cross if it is not the LAW?

To understand, we must look at the status and situation of the Gentile in first century Israel.

WHAT IS THE "ENMITY" WHICH WAS ABOLISHED & WHY IS IT VERY IMPORTANT FOR THE CHRISTIAN TODAY?

In Ephesians 2:15-16 we find the Greek word which is translated as "ENMITY". This word comes from the Greek word "echthra", word #2189 in Strong's Greek Dictionary, which is a derivative of word #2190 which means "hostility toward something.:"

Thus, the word ENMITY in Ephesians 2:15-16, should have been WRITTEN: enmity TOWARD something or enmity TO something.

A Critical Lexicon and Concordance To The English and Greek New Testament, by Ethelbert W. Bullinger, Zondervan Publishing, Grand Rapids, MI., pps. 250-251, corroborates the FACT that the word ENMITY means: OPPOSITE TO, hating another, and adverse to Him:

"The ENMITY is TOWARD something, which in this case is hatred toward The Law of Yahweh!" So dear Christian, Yeshua's death and subsequent events traced to his death destroyed the hatred toward the Law by the non-Jew and not the Law...by catalyzing a movement to the non-Jewish world where the Laws of Noah...66 Commandments and not 613 were given to the Gentile without the requirement of circumcision...no longer conversion and forced circumcision on adult males was required for acceptance into the Israel Of God!

I bet that is a real revelation to most of you, especially considering you have been taught to hate the Law since you were children in Sunday school. Yeshua destroyed the hatred and opposition to Yahweh's LAW by catalyzing a Messianic movement whereby the non-Jews of the world were brought to God without the obstacle of circumcision, therefore making "peace" between the Gentile and the Jews...thus making the two...one...thereby breaking down the middle wall of opposition and separation between them. Now it was possible that both the Jew and the non-Jew would LOVE THE SAME THING: BOTH JEW AND GENTILE COULD LOVE THE LAWS OF YAHWEH! (The Laws of Noah are so simple..any non-Jew could easily live by them and most already were if they were righteous beings).

Answer for yourself: How so? By re-establishing the Laws of Noah for the Gentile as seen in Acts 15 (Messianic branch of Judaism in the second Temple period of which Yeshua belonged).

More on that later in forthcoming articles in this series.

THE GENTILE GOD-FEARER AND DIFFERENT LEVELS OF COMMITMENT TO GOD

The conviction that Judaism was the one true religion given by God for all men and that it was destined to become the universal religion for all mankind was a peculiarity of the Jews. No other religion in the world and time made any such pretensions or cherished such aspirations. It was an exclusiveness the rest of mankind did not understand and therefore doubly resented. It is today as well. Such a belief in the future universality of the "true religion," the coming of an age when "the Lord shall be King over all the earth," when "the Lord shall be one and His name One," led to efforts to convert the Gentiles to the worship of the one true God and to adherence to both faith and obedience according to the revelation He had given. Thus Judaism became the first great missionary religion of the Mediterranean world.

THE VEHICLE FOR INSTRUCTION:

Judaism's religious influence was exerted chiefly through the synagogues, which the Jews set up for themselves, but which were open to all whom interest or curiosity drew to their services. To Gentiles, in whose mind these services, consisting essentially of readings from the Scriptures and a discourse, along with prayers and hymns of praise, were inviting. In that time period in the Hellenistic world (Greek influenced), polytheism (belief in many gods) and idolatry was so decisively prevalent, that the souls of men cried out for something more. Such was the difference between the Gentile and the Jew. As a Gentile came to renounce heathenism and adopt Judaism along with observations such as the Sabbath, Festivals, and conformity to the rules of clean and unclean foods which were necessary conditions of social intercourse, it was seen to be a respectable degree of commitment and conversion on behalf of the Gentile that he be accepted alongside the Jew as God's people. This was before faith in Christ which only solidified such a commitment. The rejection of idolatry by the Gentile was an acknowledgment of the whole law, since one who renounces idolatry is called in Scripture a "Jew."

CONVERTS & VARIETIES OF COMMITMENT OF THE GENTILE

Gentile "believers" were called religious persons who "worship, or revere God," although in a strict sense they resided both inside and outside of the mainstream of Judaism. Yet, they were expected to share with "Jews by birth" the favor of the God they had adopted, and were encouraged in this hope by their Jewish teachers. It was not uncommon for the next generation to seek incorporation in the Jewish people by circumcision, thus becoming a full-fledged "convert to Judaism." These Gentiles were seen as the ones "clinging to the skirt (prayer shawl) of the Jew" (Zech. 8:23).

Zech 8:23 23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you. (KJV)

Oh, by the way, this passage is prophetic and is yet to occur.

Answer for yourself: How is it that Gentiles will follow the Jews to Zion to learn of God if we Protestants and Catholics have all truth? Why are we trying to convert Jews to Christianity when the picture of the world to come is that Gentiles will come up to Zion and set at the feet of the Jews and Rabbis as we learn of God from them? Maybe Israel is the light unto the Gentiles after all! Think on that for a while.

Much confusion has arisen from the habit of describing such Gentile adherents of the synagogue as a class of proselytes or semi-proselytes, and trying to find a category for them in Jewish law. Jewish law knows no such semi-proselytes, nor any other kind of proselytes than such as have, by conversion and immersion/mikvah, not only become members of the Jewish church but has been naturalized in the Jewish nation. One should NOT make a distinction where none existed.

PHILO'S DEFINITION OF A PROSELYTE:

"Proselytes are such as have resolved to change over to the true religion, and are called proselytes because they have become naturalized in a new and godly commonwealth, renouncing the mythical fictions and adhering to the unadulterated truth." Under the Laws of Noah (7 commandments containing some but not all the Laws of Moses unless fully converted), proselytes enjoy equal rights in all respects with the native born Jews, as is only just, inasmuch as they have left country, friends, and kinfolk for the sake of virtue and holiness. There can be no question that Philo means by "proselyte" one who has deserted his false gods and his people to cast in his lot with the Jews.

OTHER VIEWS ON THE PROSELYTE:

Tacitus (a roman historian) speaks of proselytes as such as "practice circumcision like the Jews." A proselyte is not one who had merely embraced the monotheistic theology of Judaism, but has addicted himself to the Jewish ordinances and customs, and in doing so severed himself from his people, friends, and kinsmen; for which reason he is to be treated with peculiar benevolence. He has become a naturalized citizen of a new religious commonwealth in which he has a full quality of rights and duties with born Jews. NOTICE a proselyte was considered as part of Israel!

THE "GER" -HEBREW FOR PROSELYTE:

In the Greek Bible, "proselyte" is the usual translation of the Hebrew "ger." The older associations of this word were both civil and social. The "ger" was an alien immigrant, or the descendant of such an immigrant, resident in Israelite territory by permission, without any civil rights. This is the position of the "ger" in the older Hebrew legislation and in Deuteronomy. They are distinguished from foreigners (nokrim), who may be casually and temporarily in the country, and from the descendants of the ancient Canaanites. Israelites are commanded not to oppress these aliens, who had no legal protection; and they are frequently presented as objects of charity.

Later, in the Persian period, the word "ger" comes to be applied to foreigners (men of other than Jewish descent) who join themselves to Jehovah, or to Israel as the worshippers of Jehovah. Thus in Isaiah 14:1, in the restoration, when God reestablished Israel in its own land, "the 'ger' (converts the Jews have made in the exile) will join themselves to them and attach themselves to the house of Jacob." Such converts are described in Isa. 56:6ff.

"The aliens who join themselves to Jehovah to minister unto him, and to love the name of Jehovah, to be his servants, every one that keeps the Sabbath from profaning it, and hold firmly to my covenant (laws), I will bring them to my holy mountain and make them rejoice in my house of prayer; their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be acceptable upon my altar, for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah who gathers the dispersed of Israel, yet will gather others unto him (Israel), besides those that are gathered of (Israel) himself."

The laws for the "ger" (Gentile proselyte) or "gerim" (Gentile proselytes) in Lev. 17-25 put them, so far as religious duties and privileges go, in all respects on the same footing with Israelites by birth; they are subject to all the obligations of the Law, precisely as the "gerim" (proselytes) in the rabbinical law are. This is true, not only of religious commandments and prohibitions but also civil law: "You shall have one civil law; the proselyte (ger) shall be treated like the native born, for I am the Lord your God." For living as a resident alien ("ger," in the original civil sense) in the land of Israel the verb is "gur," as in sojourn; for conversion to Judaism and adoption into the people as well as their religion a new form was needed and created, the "ger in a religious sense" understood as "becoming a proselyte."

THE GER - GENTILE CONVERT RESTS BENEATH THE WINGS OF THE ALMIGHTY:

A favorite figure in the Psalms for the confident security of the religious man is having a refuge, or shelter, beneath the wings of God, or beneath the shade of his wings, as the young of birds do under their mother's wings for safety from danger. The same figure is frequently employed of conversion. The proselyte came beneath the wings of the Shekinah; one who converts a Gentile brings him under the wings of the Shekinah. The origin of this use is doubtless Ruth 2:12, where Boaz speaks for the Moabitish convert the reward for her goodness to Naomi from "the God of Israel, beneath whose wings thou art come to take refuge."

The legislation in the middle books of the Pentateuch (first 5 books of the Bible) thus puts the "gerim" on the same footing with native Israelites, not only before the civil law, but in religious duties and privileges, and Philo repeatedly emphasizes this parity of the naturalized and the native Jew as one of the notable features of the Mosaic Law.

DISTINCTIONS DO EXIST HOWEVER:

The Passover was the most distinctively national of all the festivals, but the law admits the proselyte to it, though no foreigner, no settler, no hired servant may eat of it. For such participation it is necessary that one be circumcised, "for no uncircumcised man shall eat of it" (Ex. 12:48). In Num. 9:14 it is assumed that the proselyte is circumcised, and the only requirement is that he shall conform strictly to the ritual of the Passover: "Whether proselyte or native, you shall have the same ordinance." This Scripture puts the proselyte on the same footing as the native in all the commandments contained in the Law. "As the native born Jew takes upon himself to obey all the words of the Law," so the proselyte takes upon him all the words of the Law. The authorities said, "if a proselyte takes upon himself to obey all the words of the Law except one single commandment, he is not to be received." Thus Paul would say in Gal. 5:2 to the Galatians: "I solemnly warn every man that gets himself circumcised (Paul was referring to conversion to Judaism) that he is under obligation to fulfill the whole law (613 commandments)". Since Paul was reared as a Pharisee, he made reference to both the Written Law and the Oral Law in this passage.

REQUIREMENTS FOR CONVERSION & "BEING BORN AGAIN"

The initiatory rite by which a man was made a proselyte comprised three parts: circumcision, immersion in water (mikvah/baptism) and the presentation of an offering in the Temple. In the case of a woman there was no circumcision, and after the destruction of the Temple no offering could be made. Circumcision alone is prescribed in the Written Law. The offering of a sacrifice is, thus, not one of the conditions of becoming a proselyte, but only a condition precedent to the exercise of one of the rights which belong to him as a sacrificial meal. As soon as he was circumcised and immersed, he was in full standing in the religious community, having all the legal rights and powers and being subject to all the obligations of the Jew by birth. He had "entered the covenant." It is interesting to note that this immersion of conversion was different from other immersions of purification in that the presence of official witnesses was required for conversion. Two scholars would stand by him and rehearse to him orally some of the lighter and some of the weightier commandments. When he had been immersed and had come up from the water (following circumcision if a male), one is like an Israelite in all that he does. In the case of the woman proselyte, women made her sit in the water up to her neck, while two scholars recited the same commandments, both positive and negative and it was assumed that the initiant assumed "the yoke of the commandments." As the Israelite came into the covenant only by three things, circumcision, immersion, and sacrifice, precisely so the proselyte comes into the covenant by the same three things. Israel was circumcised before leaving Egypt, they were baptized in the Sinai desert, and after they pledged themselves to keep all God's commandments they were sprinkled with the blood of the covenant sacrifice.

Now listen well. The status of a proselyte who embraces Judaism is at the moment of his reception like that of a "new born child" or as if "born again." Being "born again" is not a Christian concept by and of itself.

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather strange that Christianity has stolen the term and uses it but has dropped the original meaning which meant one's conversion and acceptance of the 613 Commandments for full conversion to Judaism? That is but one example of Replacement Religion for you.

It goes without saying that before a Gentile proselyte converted to Judaism that it was customary that before his initiation that he adhere to the seven Laws of Noah which were given to all heathen to observe if they lived within the land of Israel. The laws of Noah were the foundation from which one pursued righteousness.

The sincere and genuine proselyte (fully converted through circumcision, immersion, and having brought a sacrifice) is called "ger zedek," or "righteous proselyte" (Psalm 118:20). They are such as embrace the religion from religious motives, "for the sake of God," and therefore live in conformity to His will revealed in the Oral and Written Laws as they pledged themselves at their reception. Another name for such converts is the "get emet," or "true proselyte." To the righteous proselytes are sometimes applied texts in the Old Testament which speak of the righteous, or of such as fear God, the "truly righteous." We call them those who fear God or God-fearers. In the daily prayers in the Temple petitions for God's blessings upon the righteous proselyte are invoked.

The word "ger" by itself having come to mean proselyte or convert to Judaism who has received circumcision and baptism not only into the religion of Judaism but into the Jewish people, occasioned the necessity to find a distinctive term for the resident alien.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN RIGHTEOUS GENTILES: GER ZEDEK VS GER TOSHAB

The "ger toshab" was an alien but not a full convert to Judaism. He was a resident in Jewish lands by permission on the condition that while he resides that he would:

- Not engage in the worship of other gods or in idolatrous practices,
- Not blaspheme the name of God.
- He had to pledge himself in the presence of 3 observant persons to abstain from idolatry.
- He was to be subject to the jurisdiction of Jewish courts
- He had to keep free of flagrant crimes, homicide, robbery, theft, adultery and fornication.
- He also had to abstain from eating flesh with the blood or "life" in it (part of the Laws of Noah).
- He had to observe and commit to observance of the Seven Commandments that God gave to Adam and Noah and were consequently binding upon all mankind.
- He was not required to join in the worship of Israel nor to take upon himself any further obligations to observe the commandments of God to Israel (Mosaic Law), although these were optional to him (Isa. 56).
- He was not required to observe and keep the Sabbath but he enjoyed the exemption from labor on the Sabbath which gives rest on that day to slaves and hirelings of every race, as well as animals.
- He was not required to be circumcised.

Upon his circumcision he would become fully Israel and a full convert and his status would then change from a "ger toshab" to a "ger tzedek".

The "ger toshab" is not a proselyte or a "semi-proselyte" and was not considered a convert to Judaism at all. The "ger toshab" as uncircumcised, also was called the "ger arel," and is not to be confused with the circumcised proselyte "ger ben berit" who has come into the covenant of God with Israel (ger mahul). The "ger toshab" was a heathen and was allowed to eat "carrion" or the flesh of animals not correctly slaughtered which no Israelite or proselyte could partake. The "ger" to whom an Israelite may give it in Deut. 14:21 is the "ger toshab". Also, it was permissible to take usury from a "ger toshab" as with any heathen, but forbidden to take usury from an Israelite or "true proselyte;" the "ger zedek."

Since the 18th century another category of proselytes emerged, the "Ger sh'ar" or the "proselyte of the gate" which is distinct from the "ger zedek," or full proselyte or God-fearing Gentile. The "ger sha'ar" or "proselyte of the gate" suggests converts who lingered at the door of the synagogue as derived from passages in the Bible which speak of the "ger (alien) who is in thy gates" or residents in Israelite towns and cities (Ex. 20:10, Deut. 5:14).

In the 4th century a question arose as to whom the 4th Commandment concerning the Sabbath applied to, the "ger zedek" or "ger sha'ar" and the former opinion prevailed. In other words the full-convert is required to observe and keep the Sabbath, having become as one born in the land, while the ger toshab was not, yet he still could choose those things that pleased God if he so desired (Isa. 56). Often such "strangers" are listed with names in Deut. along with the widows, orphans, and the landless Levites. Here we find the proselyte of the gate who was likewise often the object of charity.

ATTITUDES TOWARD PROSELYTES:

The attitude of the religious leaders of Judaism toward proselytes differed in different circumstances, and individual teachers had their own beliefs. Rabbi Shammai would have nothing to do with one who was not prepared to give implicit assent, before knowing its contents to the unwritten Law as well as the written Law. Many had bad opinions of all proselytes, fearing that with persecution that they would fall back into their old ways because they were naturally bad people. It is for this reason the Scriptures had so often admonished Israelites not to give them offense by word or deed. The School of Hillel, unlike the School of Shammai, welcomed converts, and admitted them even though their knowledge was imperfect and the observance of Judaism faulty. Hillel, to whom Jesus agreed, coined a motto: "Be one of the disciples of Aaron, a lover of peace, following after peace, loving mankind, and drawing them to the Law"

(religion)." A tradition illustrating the different temper of the two masters states that a foreigner came to Shammai saying, "Make a proselyte of me, on condition that you teach me the whole of the Law while I stand on one foot." Shammai drove him off, beating him with a measuring stick, whereupon he gave Hillel the same proposition. Hillel received him as a proselyte and taught him: "What you do not like to have done to you, do not do to your fellow man. This is the whole of the Law; the rest is explanation of it. Go and study and learn it."

NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN JEW AND GENTILE PROSELYTE:

Proselytes are dear to God, for you will find that the same things are said about them as about Israel:

- the Israelites are servants (Lev. 25:23) and proselytes are called servants, as it is said, "To love the name of the Lord and to be servants to him" (Isa. 56:60);
- the Israelites are called ministers, as it is said, "And ye shall be called the priests of the Lord, ministers to our God shall be said of you" (Isa. 61:1), and the proselytes are called ministers, as it is said, "The foreigners who attach themselves to the Lord to minister unto him" (Isa. 56:6);
- the Israelites are called friends, as it is said, "The offspring of Abraham, my friend" (Isa. 41:8) and the proselytes are called friends, as it is said (of God), "Friend of the proselyte" (Deut. 10:18).
- The word "covenant" is used of the Israelites in Gen. 17:13 and so it is used of proselytes "Who hold fast my covenant" (Isa. 56:6).

The parallels are striking and it shows that God puts no difference between them in a spiritual sense.

IN CONCLUSION:

The preaching of Christianity made converts among proselytes to Judaism as well as among the looser adherents of the synagogue. There was such, according to Acts 2 and Acts 10, among the converts on the Day of Pentecost as Gentile converts from all 70 nations had come up to celebrate the Festival of Shavuot (Pentecost).

There were, on the other hand, proselytes to Judaism who came over from the Gentile church at times. In times of persecution Christians sometimes joined the Jews to evade the test applied by the Roman officials to adore the emperor, to which Jews were not subject. Later, Christian emperors would make conversion of Christians to Judaism a crime in itself with severe penalties both for the Christian convert and the Jew who converted him. Against all such attempts of pagan or Christian rulers to shut up Judaism in itself and prevent its spread in the first three centuries the Jews persisted in their missionary efforts to make the religion God had revealed to their fathers the religion of all mankind. It is with this understanding that we will continue in the next newsletter our study in the Book of Acts.

As a Gentile Christian you find the example of what is required of you as:

- Adhering to the Laws of Noah which is the minimum requirement
- Choosing those things that please God which go beyond the minimum commandments of our Noahide Covenant which demonstrate your love for God and your fellowman created in His image.

EARLY GENTILE BELIEVERS WERE TO OBEY THE TORAH

We need first to get acquainted with the term used in the Jewish Scriptures for the non-Jew: "stranger."

Strong's Concordance defines "stranger" :1616 ger (gare); or (fully) geyr (gare); from 1481; properly, a guest; by implication, a foreigner: KJV-- alien, sojourner, stranger.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon defines "stranger": 1616 ger or (fully) geyr- sojourner

- a) a temporary inhabitant, a newcomer lacking inherited rights
- b) used of foreigners within Israel, though they had conceded rights

Answer for yourself: Do you remember that we just read about the "ger" and the "ger toshav" in the prior articles? Do you remember that the Ger Toshav goes beyond the Laws of Noah (66 Commandments) and choose other mitzvoth to include into his life? I would hope so and by now you should be familiar with this term and the responsibilities that it entails.

In order to understand what comes next it would be important to begin to look for a "pattern" in the verses that follow not only in this article but the rest in this series as you will come to see that God included the non-Jews in the giving of the Torah. The reason for this is simple; before Moses gave the Jewish people the Torah God had given by revelation the Torah to the non-Jew and we find that Joshua and others presented the Torah and opportunity to enter the Covenant to the non-Jew throughout the history of Israel.

This pattern can be found not only in the Jewish Old Testament Scriptures but the New Testament as well. Having seen this then one has to wonder how we lost and deviated from such a pattern which was established in antiquity by God to the point where we have lost such obedience and observance today. One would have to ask Rome that question.

Leviticus 24

- 22 Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country (Jews): for I [am] the LORD your God.

You need to re-read that verse above and let the implications of it sink in into your mind and spirit.

Joshua 8

32 And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel. (KJV) Josh 8:32-35 32 And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel. 33 And all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark and on that side before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well the stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount Ebal; as Moses the servant of the LORD had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel. 34 And afterward he read all the words of the law, the blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law. 35 There was not a word of all that Moses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, with the women, and the little ones, and the strangers that were conversant among them. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that non-Jews were a part of not only the reading of the Laws of God but also this Covenant renewal? By now you should understand that this "one manner of Law for all" from Leviticus 24 is to be understood in that the non-Jews who heard Joshua read the Laws understood that within the reading of these Laws that certain Laws pertained to them and certain others did not. Regardless the non-Jew is seen re-affirming his Covenant and commitment to God and His Commandments as part of his Covenant. These Laws are called "Torah" or the instruction of God.

2 Samuel 22

- 45 Strangers shall submit themselves unto me: as soon as they hear, they shall be obedient unto me. {Strangers: Heb. Sons of the stranger} {submit...: or, yield feigned obedience: Heb. lie}

Psalms 18

- 44 As soon as they hear of me, they shall obey me: the strangers shall submit themselves unto me. {As soon...: Heb. At the hearing of the ear} {submit...: or, yield feigned obedience} {strangers: Heb. sons of the stranger}

Psalms 119

- 19. I [am] a stranger in the earth: hide not thy commandments from me.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the yearning of the non-Jew to learn the Commandments of God? By now you should be understanding that one's Covenant with God is framed by Laws and Commandments that when kept bring not only one's right-standing with God but acceptance by Him as well.

1 Peter 2

- 11 Dearly beloved, I beseech [you] as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul;

Acts 28

- 23. And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him (remember Paul was in Rome and many who came to him were non-Jews) into [his] lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and [out of] the prophets, from morning till evening.

It sure looks to me that not only in the Old Testament but the New Testament as well, and even long after Jesus' death, that non-Jews were still taught the Laws and Commandments of God. Why? Because these frame his Covenant with God and assure when obeyed his acceptance with God.

GENTILE BELIEVERS OBSERVED SIMILAR LAWS AS THEY PARTICIPATED IN THE SACRIFICIAL SYSTEM

We need first to get acquainted with the term used in the Jewish Scriptures for the non-Jew: "stranger."

Strong's Concordance defines "stranger" :1616 ger (gare); or (fully) geyr (gare); from 1481; properly, a guest; by implication, a foreigner: KJV-- alien, sojourner, stranger.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon defines "stranger": 1616 ger or (fully) geyr- sojourner

- a) a temporary inhabitant, a newcomer lacking inherited rights
- b) used of foreigners within Israel, though they had conceded rights

In order to understand what comes next it would be important to begin to look for a "pattern" in the verses that follow not only in this article but the rest in this series as you will come to see that God included the non-Jews in the giving of the Torah. The reason for this is simple; it can be shown that non-Jews kept those parts of the Torah concerning the sacrificial system along with the Jews. This is startling revelation that has immense impact upon the role of the non-Jew in the Israel of God.

This pattern can be found not only in the Jewish Old Testament Scriptures but the New Testament as well. Having seen this then one has to wonder how we lost and deviated from such a pattern which was established in antiquity by God to the point where we have lost such obedience and observance today. One would have to ask Rome that question.

Leviticus 17

- 8 And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man [there be] of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, that offereth a burnt offering or sacrifice,

Leviticus 22

- 18 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, Whatsoever [he be] of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his freewill offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt offering;

Numbers 15

- 14 And if a stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever [be] among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

What must not escape our understanding in these verses is that according to Leviticus 24:22:

Leviticus 24

- 22 Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country (Jews): for I [am] the LORD your God.

Please understand that "this one manner of law" applied to not only the offerings but the whole of the sacrificial system as a form of the non-Jew's atonement as will be shown next:

Lev 17:8-11 8 And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, that offereth a burnt offering or sacrifice, 9 And bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer it unto the LORD; even that man shall be cut off from among his people. 10 And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that eateth any manner of blood; I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people. 11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the non-Jew found his atonement the same way the Jew did...through the sacrificial system. Now...do you know how the sacrificial system worked? Before you say yes...you need to read the following because if you are a Christian I guarantee you don't because Christianity is almost totally ignorant of how the dynamic of the Sacrificial System in the Jewish Scriptures operated.

You need to re-read that verse above and let the implications of it sink in into your mind and spirit...because we have been taught incorrectly.....

EARLY GENTILE BELIEVERS WERE ARE CALLED "STRANERS" IN SCRIPTURE & WORSHIPPED ALONGSIDE THE JEWS

Deuteronomy 31

12 Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that [is] within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law:

1Kings 8

41 Moreover concerning a stranger, that [is] not of thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake;

1Kings 8

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for: that all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as [do] thy people Israel; and that they may know that this house, which I have builded, is called by thy name. {this...: Heb. thy name is called upon this house}

2Chronicles 6

32 Moreover concerning the stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, but is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and thy mighty hand, and thy stretched out arm; if they come and pray in this house;

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, [even] from thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as [doth] thy people Israel, and may know that this house which I have built is called by thy name. {this...: Heb. thy name is called upon this house}

Isaiah 14

1. For the LORD will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.

Isaiah 56

3. Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I [am] a dry tree. 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths, and choose [the things] that please me, and take hold of my covenant:

Isaiah 56

6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant:

Ezekiel 14

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself:

Ezekiel 47

22 And it shall come to pass, [that] ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you, and to the strangers that sojourn among you, which shall beget children among you: and they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel; they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel.

Ephesians 2

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God;

Romans 11

20 Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not highminded, but fear:

1Peter 2

17 Honour all [men]. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king. {Honour all: or, Esteem all}

The term "fear God" refers to the non-Jewish Godfearers like Cornelius in Acts 10 and others to which Paul would minister later in Asia, Minor. Let us continue our study but before going notice please how the non-Jewish worshiper of God, the "stranger" is called with the Jew in the worship of God.

EARLY GENTILE BELIEVERS CELEBRATED THE SABBATH

We need first to get acquainted with the term used in the Jewish Scriptures for the non-Jew: "stranger."

Strong's Concordance defines "stranger" :1616 ger (gare); or (fully) geyr (gare); from 1481; properly, a guest; by implication, a foreigner: KJV-- alien, sojourner, stranger.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon defines "stranger": 1616 ger or (fully) geyr- sojourner

- a) a temporary inhabitant, a newcomer lacking inherited rights
- b) used of foreigners within Israel, though they had conceded rights

In order to understand what comes next it would be important to begin to look for a "pattern" in the verses that follow not only in this article but the rest in this series as you will come to see that God included the non-Jews in the observance of not only the Festivals but the Sabbath as well. This pattern can be found not only in the Jewish Old Testament Scriptures but the New Testament as well. Having seen this then one has to wonder how we lost and deviated from such a pattern which was established in antiquity by God to the point where we have lost such obedience and observance today. One would have to ask Rome that question.

Exodus 20

- 10 But the seventh day [is] the sabbath of the LORD thy God: [in it] thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that [is] within thy gates:

Exodus 23

- 12 Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed.

Leviticus 25

- 6 And the sabbath of the land shall be meat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee,

Deuteronomy 5

- 14 But the seventh day [is] the sabbath of the LORD thy God: [in it] thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that [is] within thy gates; that thy manservant and thy maidservant may rest as well as thou.

Isaiah 56

- 3. Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I [am] a dry tree.
- 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths, and choose [the things] that please me, and take hold of my covenant;

Answer for yourself: Can there be any doubt that God included the non-Jews in the observance of the Sabbath?

Answer for yourself: Can we find this "Pattern of Worship" continuing as we find non-Jews observing the Sabbath in the New Testament as well? We sure can. We only need look at the ruling of James in Acts 15 as well as the example of Paul where he, in Troaz, Asia, Minor, kept the closing Sabbath Havdalah Services with non-Jew in Asia, Minor.

The point in sharing these examples of non-Jews which kept the Festivals and the Sabbath is to make you think. We hear today even from some Jews that the Gentile believer does not have to keep the Sabbath as it is not part of the Gentile's Covenant with Noah. Well it would seem from the texts that they did and God seems to have declared it to be so. Even if not part of the Covenant of Noah we find in the passage above from Isaiah 56:3-4 that God is pleased when non-Jewish believers "choose" to keep His (God calls them 'My' Sabbaths) Sabbaths and choose to observe and keep those things related to God. Let us never forget that the Sabbath is not Sunday but Friday evening to Saturday evening.

ABRAHAM'S EXAMPLE: CIRCUMCISION REQUIRED FOR GENTILE BELIEVERS TO PARTICIPATE FULLY IN THE FEASTS OF THE LORD

We need first to get acquainted with the term used in the Jewish Scriptures for the non-Jew: "stranger."

Strong's Concordance defines "stranger" :1616 ger (gare); or (fully) geyr (gare); from 1481; properly, a guest; by implication, a foreigner: KJV-- alien, sojourner, stranger.

Brown-Driver-Briggs' Hebrew Lexicon defines "stranger": 1616 ger or (fully) geyr- sojourner

This pattern can be found not only in the Jewish Old Testament Scriptures but the New Testament as well. Having seen this then one has to wonder how we lost and deviated from such a pattern which was established in antiquity by God to the point where we have lost such obedience and observance today. One would have to ask Rome that question.

Genesis 17

12 And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which [is] not of thy seed. {he that is eight...: Heb. a son of eight days}

48 And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the Passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

As you can see from the above verse it was mandatory that before a non-Jew was permitted to observe the Passover he had to be circumcised. Many will think that this was just a "Mosaic" ordinance but that is not true. When one considers Abraham we find some interesting things concerning Abraham's knowledge of the "Passover" and his sanctification of this "appointed time" long before Moses. Let us look at the text for clues but these "clues" span over 4 chapters so bear with me in reading these long texts:

In reading these texts I want you to notice two things:

- God is making a covenant with Abraham and his seed as an EVERLASTING COVENANT
- Abraham is commanded to "circumcise" himself and every man child and this circumcision was to be a token and distinguishing mark of that covenant

Gen 17:1-11 1 And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect. 2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. 3 And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying, 4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. 5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. 6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. 7 And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. 8 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God. 9 And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations. 10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised. 11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you. (KJV)

In reading these texts I want you to also notice:

- Once Abraham is in covenant with God and after circumcising himself then he prepares "unleavened" bread.

Answer for yourself: When in the Bible does it mention "unleavened" bread and what if any is there any connection with unleavened bread with any "appointed times with God" or "Festivals"? Yes; the Passover.

Of course you know that the children of Israel would bake unleavened bread when in Egypt just prior to the Exodus but this event has not happened yet. The account of Abraham is long before the Exodus so we must "think" and look for clues in the text.

Gen 19:1-3 1 And there came two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom: and Lot seeing them rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground; 2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, Nay; but we will abide in the street all night. 3 And he pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.

Answer for yourself: Since not being in a hurry so that they did not have time to add yeast to make "leavened" bread don't you see that there was really no reason to bake "unleavened" bread unless this "feast" mentioned in Gen. 19:3 as connected to the baking of "unleavened" bread as well as the prior circumcision of Abraham indicates that Abraham by revelation understood the LORD'S Passover and was in anticipation keeping the Passover which required not only circumcision but also the eating of unleavened bread?

Other than instances where the various offering involved the Levitical Priests and included the offering of unleavened bread (trespass offerings, thanksgiving offerings, meat offerings, heave offerings, and the vow of the Nazarite, etc.) where it was consumed as connected to the presentation of various offerings we are led to conclude that since associated with the word "feast" in the text that this instance concerning Abraham was none other than the Passover.

The only place we find the admonition of eating "unleavened bread" in the Bible is connected with the ordinances of the Passover:

Exod 12:1-8 1 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying, 2 This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you. 3 Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house: 4 And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it according to the number of the souls; every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb. 5 Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats: 6 And ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening. 7 And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it. 8 And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it. (KJV)

So here we find Abraham, a non-Jew but yet a Hebrew, being circumcised and keeping and observing the Passover long before Moses and Sinai!

Answer for yourself: Could this be a pattern for the non-Jew in the Bible; that God desires that he as well as the Jew, keep and observe the Passover as indicated in the further requirements of circumcision to the "stranger" before he observes the Passover?

48 And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the Passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

As you can now understand when we re-read the above passage Moses is doing nothing but reiterating the already known wishes of God in Exodus 12:48 when he again commands the non-Jew (stranger) to keep the Passover and be circumcised. So the conclusion of this is simple: keeping the Passover is to be observed by non-Jews as well as Jews and circumcision is required prior to keeping the Passover and this is not a "Jewish thing" but a Godly thing. In passing also not that God did not say to keep the pagan feast of Istar or Easter (Istar was know to Abraham); God commanded that non-Jews keep and observe the Passover

Acts 16 3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his [Timothy] father was a Greek (his mother was Jewish, thus making it necessary for circumcision since being a Jew).

What most Christians and Jews fail to realize in the above verse is that although Judaism today recognizes "Jewishness" coming from the mother's side God has given us understanding in physiology today that teaches us that the chromosomes are determined by the male and not the female. That being the case we see again Divine revelation, although not understood completely at the time, made allowances for Timothy to be circumcised not really because of Jewish tradition but because of a Gentile circumcision was to be required according to the Covenant of Abraham (himself a non-Jew) and any participation in the Passover or other Biblical Festivals by non-Jews likewise required it. It is permissible to understand this "Jewish custom" but I believe it is better to understand the Heavenly decree and the reasons behind it; especially in light of what is required of the non-Jewish believer when Scripture is understood correctly.

What is important to see in this short study is that non-Jews were not allowed to participate fully in the Biblical Festivals unless the males were circumcised. Notice also that the death of Jesus/Yeshua did not alter ANYTHING IN THIS REGARD....because 25 years later in Acts 16 Paul felt obligated to circumcise the non-Jew Timothy. So these same admonitions applies today to the Christian believer.

Shalom.

Deuteronomy 16

- 9 Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from [such time as] thou beginnest [to put] the sickle to the corn.
- 10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give [unto the LORD thy God], according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee: {a tribute: or, sufficiency}
- 11 And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that [is] within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that [are] among you, in the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to place his name there.

Answer for yourself: Can there be any doubt that God included the non-Jews in the observance of Shavout (Pentecost) which was the rejoicing over the giving of the Torah to mankind? Don't you find it strange that a non-Jew would be rejoicing over the giving of the Torah (613) to the Jews or is it just possible that he, being instructed correctly in the Covenant and Laws of Noah, was rejoicing in God giving him the Torah in the Covenant of Noah which contained the Laws of Noah which, when obeyed, brought right-standing and acceptance with God? You see he was rejoicing and observing this Feast because he was thankful that God had given him the knowledge whereby he could be in good relationship with God. What did they know then that we have not been taught today?

- 33 And they shall eat those things wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate [and] to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat [thereof], because they [are] holy.

Leviticus 16

- 29. And [this] shall be a statute for ever unto you: [that] in the seventh month, on the tenth [day] of the month, ye shall afflict your souls, and do no work at all, [whether it be] one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you:

In summary, let me quote the Apostle Paul whom Christianity has mistakenly understood as well as his message concerning the Law of God. When writing to Gentiles who have come to the knowledge and faith in the one true God of Israel, and as they have begun to join themselves to Israel and celebrate the feast of the Lord, Paul says...

Colossians 2

16. Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath [days]: {in meat...: or, for eating and drinking} {respect: or, part}
- 17 Which are a shadow of things to come...

The Apostle Paul strongly urges believing Gentiles who have come to Faith in Yahweh and Jesus to let no one tell them that because they participate in the celebration of the feasts of the LORD they have put themselves under bondage and the Law. The Law was not to be restrictive. Jesus said his yoke was easy (the yoke of the Law of Moses) and his burden was light. King David in Psalm 119 said that he delighted in the Law and meditated in it night and day. If we presume to believe that the Law and celebration of the festivals was bondage then we have failed to understand the message of not only Paul, but Jesus as well. Let us resolve together to make a commitment to rediscover our Hebrew Roots and "choose those things that please God."

Deuteronomy 16

- 13 Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine: 14 And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates. 15 Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice. 16 Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the LORD empty: (KJV)

Zechariah 14

- 16. And it shall come to pass, [that] every one that is left of all the nations (Gentiles) which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles.
- 17 And it shall be, [that] whoso will not come up of [all] the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain.
- 18 And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that [have] no [rain]; there shall be the plague, wherewith the LORD will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. {that have no: Heb. upon whom there is not}

Answer for yourself: Can there be any doubt that God included the non-Jews in the observance of the Festival of Tabernacles? Don't you find it strange that a non-Jew would be observing the Festival of Tabernacles where today in most Gentile Christian Churches the Festivals are not observed but in their place Gentile holy days from prior paganism are kept in Jesus' name instead?

THE ACTS 15 COUNCIL AND ITS IMPORTANCE FOR THE CHRISTIAN "GODFEARER"

Unknown to most Christians is the crucial and critical importance of Acts 15 in their Bibles. In it, hidden behind 2,000 years of history and lost interpretation of a major "theological event" between the Jewish people and the "non-Jews" of the world is the very "Pattern" given by God in the beginning of time for the unification of all mankind in the true worship of the Divine. This event which is so often passed over in reading of the New Testament is the turning point in relations between the Jewish people and the "non-Jews" concerning not only how they were to "fellowship" together without required conversion of the "non-Jew" but the promotion of the Divine Pattern of worship given by God in the beginning of time. Over time as your studies into these areas increase on this website and others by Bet Emet Ministries this fact will become glaringly apparent to you the reader. Understand for now that this unify of all mankind, both Jew and "non-Jew" as the one people of God makes significant strides in Acts 15 when James and other Jews in Israel come to realize that Israel must drop the "man-made" requirement for Gentiles (non-Jews, i.e. pagan) to be circumcised before they can be recognized as part of the Israel of God.

Let us begin by noting that Luke is the author of the Book of Acts, or at least that is the accepted church tradition while others scholars today question this and ascribe the writing of the this New Testament book to the second century. Being as that may we need to look at the writer's account of the discussion regarding the relation of the Gentiles to the Law of Moses which in reality forms the centre of Acts both structurally and theologically. This is necessitated by not only Paul's preaching to the non-Jews in Antioch as well as the Antioch problem that developed over table fellowship between the Jews and "non-Jews" and the degree of observance expected of the non-Jew to Jewish Laws \(the Covenant of Moses\).

Answer for yourself: Are you familiar with this very big, big problem that surfaced with Paul in Antioch and which threatened the whole of Judaism as it existed historically in the first century? Are you aware that this Antioch Problem will split Judaism right down the middle? Are you aware that it will open the door to "non-Jews" to become the people of God without "circumcision" being imposed as well as "forced conversion" of "non-Jews" in the first century among the followers of the Jewish Christ? Are you aware that this polarizes even more the Schools of Hillel and Shammai? Well if you are not then stop right here and read the articles before you continue in order to understand the dynamics of what is occurring with James and the Jerusalem Council regarding Paul and his ministry among the "non-Jews". That being done then we can continue.

Within this matter of contention in Antioch between the men from James who came down from Jerusalem and the Pauline emphasis we see the degree of obligation then existing in the first century required of the "non-Jews" which they had to obey concerning various "kosher laws" if they were ever to eat together and fellowship together with other Jews. The Jews, knowing already that the "non-Jews" have their own unique Covenant with God, the Covenant of Noah that brings them Eternal Life, are here concerned with the acceptance of the "non-Jew" with other Jews without prior conversion which had been the current way of dealing with the "non-Jew" up to that point. The School of Shammai required full conversion of the "non-Jew" before any acceptance of the "non-Jew" by Israel. The School of Hillel said otherwise. Now something new was happening through the preaching of Paul in Asia, Minor, where the "non-Jew" was being accepted by the Jews without prior conversion. Having said that let us also reflect that in the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah there is also obligations given the "non-Jew" regarding eating of meat and this comes to a head in Antioch when the men from James arrived and discerned the compromises being made both by Jews as well as the "non-Jews" in regards to these important points of Law. Violations of both the Laws of Moses by the Jews and the Laws of Noah by the "non-Jews" were occurring in these Pauline churches and Paul allowed this to occur in the name of "expediency" to "win the Souls" of the "non-Jews" and make both "peoples" one. This became a critical issue for the Jerusalem Church as we shall see.

Gal 2:12 12 For before that certain came from James (Jews), he (Peter) did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision (Jews from James). (KJV)

Basically everyone got into trouble for these compromises and something had to be done and the Jerusalem Church Council of Acts 15 was soon to follow to decide this matter.

Once the Pauline mission had begun to evangelize Gentiles who had not previously been circumcised and converted to Judaism, the problems of the conditions of their membership and inclusion into the Israel of God began to arise. It had evidently been the policy of the church at Antioch and its missionaries that such Gentiles should not be required to keep "ALL" the Jewish law which up to that time was tantamount to the "non-Jew" making full-conversion to Judaism. This was the policy taught by the School of Shammai and required of all "non-Jews" in order to be accepted in Israel. This point is passed over in silence in chapters 11-14 but is clear from 15:1.

Acts 15:1 1 And certain men which came down from Judaea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved. (KJV)

Notice if you will "saved" meant contextually not only "eternally" but included "acceptance into the Israel of God" as well as fellowship with the Jewish people.

But even though this, required conversion of the "non-Jews", was the "status quo" in Israel at that time this policy was unacceptable to some Jewish believers for two reasons:

- First, they found it hard to believe that Gentiles could be "saved" and become members of the Israel of God, become like them "the people of God" without accepting the obligations of the Jewish law...in other words being accepted socially and religiously without first making conversion and being "born again" in the Jewish manner.
- Secondly, there was also the question of how Jewish believers, who continued to live by the Jewish law, could have fellowship at table with Gentiles who did not observe the law and were therefore ritually unclean...this problem was particularly acute when the church met to 'break bread'. This is the heart of the Antioch Problem!

But notice something if you will. Notice the audience to whom Paul spoke. We find in this audience the presence of "God-fearers" (13:16b, 26) who were not only present but were already in some ways connected to Judaism,

Acts 13:16 16 Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand said, Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience. (KJV)

We find that in this audience in Jerusalem at the Council the presence of those who "fear God" which is the term used for "non-Jews" who worship the God of Israel and abide by the Laws of the Covenant given by God to the "non-Jews". We have a mixed audience! These Godfearers had, at least in religious ways, a level of commitment to the Laws of Moses and the Laws of Noah well beyond the average Gentile (Gentiles who practiced Isa. 56). The narrative in Acts 15 leaves it ambiguous as to whether these Gentiles were "accepted" as Gentiles as just "Godfearers" or whether they had to become previously proselytes to Judaism \(made full conversion\), or had to some degree submitted to Jewish religious practices (Acts 15:1) in order to be "saved".

Answer for yourself: That brings up a big question. What, is the extent of the free offer of the gospel to Gentiles in Acts 13?

Acts 13:47-48 47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth. 48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Were these "ordained to eternal life" to remain as Gentiles or do they still need, and were expected by Paul and others to in some way adhere to Judaism (i.e., kosher laws, circumcision, immersion, etc.)?

This issue, of course, becomes the reason for the Jerusalem council in Acts 15 and is resolved there by the Jewish leaders connected with the Messianic Movement within the Judaism of its day.

We now turn specifically to the problem as outlined in Acts 15. In Acts 15:5 certain Christian Pharisees (those who supported the Judaizing wing of the church) argued that it was necessary for Gentiles to be circumcised and "ordered to obey" the law of Moses (fully) in order to be saved. This means that they accepted the "non-Jews" only if they became "full converts" and "proselytes". Luke says in 15:2 that this caused "no little dispute between Paul and Barnabas and the Judaizers". Israel was divided on this issue after so many "non-Jews" were turning to God from idols.

Answer for yourself: Why was this division in the first place? Simply because there were Jews, like James and others, who knew that circumcision was never required by God of the "non-Jew" in the Covenant of Noah and to require that of these "non-Jews" turning to God simply was not right and many refused to undergo such a dangerous procedure when adults. Thus many men and their whole families turned away from God and His salvation because of this required circumcision enforced by the School of Shammai and possibly died away from God and this is not the fruit that God expected of His "Royal Nation and Holy Priesthood" (Israel).

The term ("sharp dispute") in 15:2, the stronger of the two words Luke uses to describe the debate, occurs nine times in the New Testament, seven of which are in Luke-Acts (Luke 23:19, 25; Acts 15:2; 19:40; 23:7, 10; 24:5). In each case in Luke-Acts the term carries not the meaning of "existence" or "continuance" but the force of either "riot," "discord," or "strife." One only needs to see how John Mark left Paul and Barnabas because of his uneasiness with a mission to the Gentiles. With that in mind, it may well be that his return to Jerusalem (13:13) sparked the issue with the Jewish "Christians" there, with the result that they sent men to Antioch to command the Gentiles to be circumcised and obey the law of Moses (supposedly these are the so called "men from James" which he will later deny ever sending). This required circumcision and full conversion had been standard practice for "non-Jews" to be accepted by the Jews up to now. The point is that the inclusion of the Gentiles into the Israel of God without prior "full conversion (circumcision, kosher, etc.) severely threatened to divide Judaism along ethnic lines and put an end to the Jewish mission in the Diaspora (i.e., the witness to Jews living outside Palestine around the Mediterranean in cities such as Alexandria, Antioch, and Rome...this remember is the purpose of the Priesthood of Israel). Concerning the issue of Jew/Gentile relations in the church and Luke's portrayal of the Jerusalem council, Witherington remarks:

Here the matter must be resolved as to what constitutes the people of God, and how the major ethnic division in the church (Jew/Gentile) shall be dealt with so that both groups may be included in God's people on equal footing, fellowship may continue, and the church remain one. Luke is eager to demonstrate that ethnic divisions could be and were overcome, despite the objection of very *conservative Pharisees (adherents of the School of Shammai and not the School of Hillel)

The issue was not easily resolved, however, for Luke says that it was only after “much debate” that any defining progress was made (cf. 15:7ff.). The fact that Peter stood up and brought to their remembrance what had happened in his case and how God had “chosen” the Gentiles to hear the gospel through his mouth and believe (cf. also Acts 13:48) indicates that the mission to the Gentiles was God’s decision and that Peter was involved in it. Although most Christians think Paul was the instigator of the mission to the Gentiles and “non-Jews” that is not the case. Thus the gospel to the Gentiles had occurred about ten years earlier, with the then leader (Peter) of the Jerusalem church when sent to the house of Cornelius in Acts 10. This is where Peter took the “keys to the kingdom” to the “non-Jew” Cornelius first. The outreach to the “non-Jews” without required circumcision began within Israel with Peter and Cornelius. Peter’s big revelation was the fatal blow to the School of Shammai and his bigotry toward the “non-Jews”:

Acts 10:34-35 34 Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: 35 But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. (KJV)

Those at the council knew that to be true, though given the point of the debate, they may not have recognized the precedent God had set in doing it. Thus Paul’s “law-free” approach (the “non-Jews” were freed from 613 laws that involved full conversion but were not freed from the 66 laws in their Covenant of Noah) could not be scorned as a movement apart from God’s desire and against Moses (remember the Laws of Noah are in the Laws of Moses). Peter’s conclusion is that the God who knows the hearts of all men gave the Spirit to the Gentiles in the same way as he had done with the Jews (see the Cornelius event in Acts 10... his ears and understanding of Peter speaking Hebrew was given to him as we find in Acts 2 at Pentecost when the ears and understanding of Peter speaking Hebrew was made know to these 70 different converts from all over the world who did not know Hebrew..we have here the reverse of the Babel curse). Thus, the conclusion we see in Acts 15:11 is made clear to Peter and blown away he says that Jews are saved by the grace of God in the same way as Gentiles. The repeated mention of the identical manner of reception of the Spirit by Cornelius, a “non-Jew” who is not converted as were the “non-Jews” who were converts in Acts 2 indicates Luke’s focus on unity among the Jews and Gentiles in the church. This is crucial that you understand this! This event with Cornelius will turn the School of Shammai and Judaism upside down. In fact, Peter says that God “made no distinction between them and us, cleansing their hearts by faith” as well (15:8-9). To turn around, says Peter, and force Gentiles to keep the Law (all the Law including forced circumcision) is to put God to the test (v. 10).

After Peter stopped speaking, Paul and Barnabas, in v. 12, told all that God had done among the Gentiles through them (opened their understanding to Hebrew being spoken by Peter as seen in Cornelius, a “non-Jew”, as was done 17 years earlier to the “non-Jewish” converts (considered Jews now) from all over the world”. This miraculous event with Cornelius supported Peter’s testimony. But when they finished speaking James did not refer to their stories, but to that which Peter had done. He uses the word “first” to indicate that what God had begun through Peter, he was now carrying on through Paul and Barnabas (15:14). This indicates the continuity and unity between the Petrine offer of the gospel to Gentiles and Paul’s mission to the Gentiles. Both were initiated by God. This is clearly the case in the unfolding of the narrative of Acts. Peter was given a vision which led to the meeting with Cornelius where the same miracle occurred in Peter’s presence again as had happened at Pentecost 17 years earlier when the curse of Babel was reversed and Cornelius, by the Spirit of God, understood Peter speaking Hebrew although Cornelius had no knowledge of Hebrew prior to that time. The texts calls this “salvation” (10:9-16).

Answer for yourself: But was not Cornelius already a “Godfearer”? Yes. Had not Cornelius already believed in the God of Israel and prayed and even given alms? Yes. Then was not Cornelius already "saved" in the traditional Christian sense? Yes. Then does this word "salvation" not mean "Heaven" or "Hell" but rather refers to the non-covert "no-Jew" being included along side the Jew in the Israel of God? It sure does. We have to be careful reading the words "salvation, save, saved, etc.) in the texts because out of 17 words for "save, saved, salvation, saving, etc. in the Bible only one word out of 17 words refers to things occurring after we die and it is used only 3 times in the whole Bible. One has to be a keen reader in understanding that Cornelius was already a believer in God since his prayers and alms had previously come up to God. Thus this salvation spoken of in the texts refers not to believing the theology about some Jesus but being included alongside the Jews in the Israel of God.

Acts 10:2 2 (Cornelius) A devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always. (KJV)

Strong's Concordance tell us that the root word for "devout" in the Greek is:

4576 sebomai (seb'-om-ahee); middle voice of an apparently primary verb; to revere, i.e. adore: KJV--devout, religious, worship. So by definition Cornelius was ALREADY a worshipper of God and can be considered a Godfearer and saved "eternally". That being the case he was already "saved" as such but here the event recorded in Acts 10 is a major teaching tool by God to alert Peter that there is no difference with God between the "non-Jew" and the Jew regardless if Judaism and the School of Shammai made it so or not. Peter, who brought interpreters with him since Cornelius would not have understood Hebrew/Aramaic, began preaching and the Spirit fell upon Cornelius and his understanding of Hebrew was miraculously given him and he understood what Peter was saying. This is exactly what happened when Peter got up to preach at Pentecost to pilgrims from 70 different nations and dialects from all over the world which had traveled to Jerusalem to observe the Festival of Pentecost and the Spirit again opened their minds and hearts and they were given the spirit of understanding of Hebrew. This is the miracle given only to Jews (converts are considered full Jews) in Acts 2 which is repeated before Peter in Acts 10 to not a convert; rather only to a Gentile "non-Jew" who was not converted but only adhered to faith in God and the few Laws given him in the Covenant of Noah (66 to be exact).

Answer for yourself: But is Acts 10 and Acts 2 not about "speaking in tongues" as we hear in our Christian Pentecostal and Chiasmatic churches? Sorry, Acts 2 is not about blabbering tongues the way the Pentecostal and Charismatic churches teach so we need to grow up and interpret these texts correctly and stop acting improperly since being improperly instructed people before the Presence of God in our worship and allowing ourselves to be led astray by emotional hucksters who call themselves preachers of the Word of God. We need to repent of such sins now for unrestrained emotionalism is a poor substitute for worship in Truth and in Spirit. Acts 2 is not what Paul later speaks of when mentioning glossolalia. In the first Centuries C.E., glossolalia meant the ability of a person to communicate in a foreign language that they had never learned. e.g. a person raised speaking Greek and unable to speak any other language would suddenly be conversing in Aramaic or Hebrew. This the context of Acts 2 and Acts 10. Sadly, at the present time, it refers to a person who suddenly, in a state of religious ecstasy, starts speaking sounds that sound like language but do not represent any known tongue. This is not the same and travesty when contrasted with the true events which reveal the grace and power of God. Anybody can utter unintelligible sounds when prompted by pastors or others but this again is now what occurred in Acts 2 and Acts 10. God, please give us better teachers to the Body of Christ.

We see rather that Peter quickly comes to understand as recorded in Acts 10:34-35:

Acts 10:34-35 34 Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: 35 But in every nation he that feareth him (in nations outside Israel all "non-Jews" who are not converts), and worketh righteousness (obey the Laws of God which define which works are accepted and not accepted by God), is accepted with him. (KJV)

What a verse. What a verse. The whole of Salvation rapped up in one verse. The testimony of 10,000 years of Egyptian religion passed on to their "Jewish children" in one verse (35). This is it bothers and sisters. So simple, yet so elusive since we never hear this in our Churches today which denigrate the Laws of God which define what God considers "true righteousness and what is not true righteousness". We instead hear:

Rom 10:4 4 For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. (KJV)

Rom 6:14 14 For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace. (KJV)

Rom 6:15 15 What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid. (KJV)

Unbelievable statements in view of countless contradictory evidence in the New Testament which is anything but a theological unity.

The council had listened to the testimony of Peter, and Paul and Barnabas. They heard the reoccurrence of the "Jewish Pentecost" among the "non-Jew" Cornelius (the Gentile Pentecost). The conclusion was obvious. It only remained for James to give the scriptural precedent according Amos 9:11-12 (Acts 15:16-17).

Amos 9:11-12 11 In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old: 12 That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith the LORD that doeth this. (KJV)

It was happening before their eyes; not ours today. Prophecy was truly being fulfilled before their eyes. God was working out the words of Amos now before them. Man's theologies spouted by Shammai and his bigotry was falling apart. The two peoples of God, Jew and "non-Jew" were being united without required circumcision and conversion to Judaism as the School of Shammai maintained.

Acts 15:16-17 16 After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: 17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is this all about and is Acts 15 the defining moment for Judaism as God's Holy Nation and Royal Priesthood? Yes it is as I will explain.

Zechariah 4:2-4 And he said to me, "What do you see?" So I said, "I am looking, and there is a lampstand of solid gold with a bowl on top of it, and on the stand seven lamps with seven pipes to the seven lamps. The two Olive trees are by it, one at the right of the bowl and the other at it's left." So I answered and spoke to the angel who talked to me, saying, "What are these, my Lord?"

Zechariah 4: 11-14 Then I answered and said to him, "What are these two Olive branches that drip into the receptacles of the two gold pipes from which the golden oil drains?" Then he answered me and said, "Do you not know what these are?" And I said, "No my Lord." So he said, "These are the two anointed ones, who stand beside the Lord of the whole earth.

Jeremiah 11:16 The Lord called you a thriving olive tree with fruit beautiful in form.

In Genesis 48 we read of Joseph's Sons being blessed by Israel as two branches or tribes of the people of God, the younger becoming a multitude of Nations (Gentiles).

Genesis 49:22 Joseph is a fruitful bough A fruitful bough by a well His branches run over the wall.

These prophetic utterances towards the end of the Old Covenant era are of great interest in these new days of the 2000 millennium. We know that the Israelite Nation was divided into two Kingdoms for much of the Old Covenant period, the Northern and Southern Kingdoms. We know also that the Israelites (Jews) are God's chosen nation of people who have never been able to be erased from human history. Other nations have been completely destroyed by various means and no longer walk the earth, but the Israelites are still with us and still exerting great influence on world events. His branches run over the wall. Is an interesting reference and could be easily interpreted to mean that through Joseph the people of God will extend beyond the boundaries of being born into the Jewish nation.

Romans 11: 17 And some of the branches were broken off, and you ("non-Jews", being a wild olive tree, were grafted in among them, and with them became a partaker of the root and fatness of the olive tree.

Here is clear reference to both the Jews and the Gentiles being grafted together into ONE tree in the ONE ROOT.

Consider Ephesians 2:11-12. Therefore, remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh - who were called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands, that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel...

Ephesians 2:15-16 ...so as to create in Himself one new man from the two, thus making peace and that He might reconcile both to God, in one body...

There is and has been for most of the New Covenant era, enmity between the Christians and the Jews. Labelled wrongly as Christ killers, Jews have been slaughtered and persecuted by the world and Christians alike. Christians have believed that they have replaced the Jews as God's chosen people. But the Word is very clear, there are two Olive trees which will become one in God and their enmity will be put aside. We work and look forward to the time when Christians and Israelites will rise from the death of division and distrust and stand as the witnesses of the One God on the earth teaching the one true message of God given Israel in the beginning. Then and only then can these two Olive trees become one people of God in His Christ but this will never happen until Christianity faces the truth about its antisemitic theology.

What you just read is most likely a composite citation and that Luke understood the mission to the Gentiles not as a purely "Christian" thing, but according to a cumulative prophetic witness associated with Davidic hope. Thus the boundaries of the "people of God" are widened to include the Gentiles on equal footing with the Jews on the basis of Davidic hope. The speakers are making the important affirmation that Gentiles can be God's people in the full sense that Israel is without full conversion. This is a major ruling based upon summary re-evaluation of what God has been doing among the "non-Jews" in front of the witness of the Jews. Davidic hope in Luke-Acts is for all, regardless of ethnicity, and places all in the same position in terms of the reception of covenant blessing, including the reception of the Spirit.

Thus through the combined witness of the missionaries and James' citation from the Jewish Scriptures and the reference to Amos, the "law free" (free from 613 laws and full conversion but not free from the 66 laws of the Covenant of Noah) mission to the Gentiles was officially sanctioned and acknowledged by the Jerusalem church. The ambiguity surrounding Gentile inclusion in Davidic promise in chapter 13 is settled in chapter 15.

James makes his remarks in response to the summary testimonies of the missionaries. Some requirements were stressed so as to make table fellowship between Gentiles and their more scrupulous Jewish brothers possible and that the mission to the Jews in the Diaspora not be hindered. The point is to maintain a practical unity in the church. James considers these "requirements" as not optional and the text makes this very clear:

Acts 15:28 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; (KJV)

BUT THERE WERE SOME "NECESSARY THINGS"....SOME LAWS WERE REQUIRED AFTER ALL

The only thing they asked was that the Gentiles maintain love for their Jewish brothers and sensitivity toward Jewish ritual purity for the sake of the Jewish-Christian witness in the Diaspora (15:20-21). Thus Luke accomplished his purpose of demonstrating how the Gentiles came to be accepted as Gentiles into what had hitherto been a predominantly Jewish church.

James first begins by mentioning Moses being "read" to these "non-Jews" in the Synagogues every Sabbath. From this we see the picture of the "non-Jew" observing the Sabbath in the first century.

Acts 15:21 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

Next we find the decree of James as look at the very important mention by James of various "Necessary Things" which seemed good to the Holy Spirit that the "non-Jew" "must do":

Acts 15:29 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. (KJV)

Acts 15:29

29 That ye abstain from:

- meats offered to idols,
- and from blood,
- and from things strangled,
- and from fornication:

from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

Answer for yourself: Some believe that the above admonitions refers to 4 of the 7 precepts of the Laws of Noah at that they do when examined in a particular way. This is true but however is there a deeper meaning here that most miss that fits the context of Acts 15 better?

Answer for yourself: In addressing the Gentile question as so many "non-Jews" were coming to faith in God through the outreach of the Jesus Movement in first century Judaism (Second Temple), what are the implications in the above verse that today's Christian needs to be made aware?

In order to find the meaning, both historically and culturally, we need to look at the original words as taken from the Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

1494 eidolothuton-

- sacrificed to idols, the flesh left over from the heathen sacrifices it was either eaten at the feasts or sold (by the poor and the miserly) in the market

The Greek word for "blood":

129 haima-

- 1) blood
 - a) used of man or animals
 - b) refers to the seat of life (the soul is in the animal's blood)
 - c) used of those things that resemble blood, grapejuice
- 2) bloodshed, to be shed by violence, slay, premeditated murder

The Greek word for "strangled":

4156 pniktos- suffocated, strangled

- a) what is strangled, that is, an animal deprived of life without the shedding of blood
- b) used of cooking: our "smothered" as a culinary term

The Greek word for "fornication":

4202 porneia-

- 1) illicit sexual intercourse
 - a) adultery, fornication, homosexuality, lesbianism, intercourse with animals, etc.
 - b) sexual intercourse with close relatives; Lev. 18
 - c) sexual intercourse with a divorced man or woman; Mk. 10:11,12
- 2) metaphorically, the worship of idols; used of the defilement of idolatry, as incurred by eating the sacrifices offered to idols before eating (a form of idolatry)

Answer for yourself: Now for a very important question. Is there a common theme among these four "admonitions"? Yes there is and can you see it?

These admonitions which James called "necessary" and "which seemed good to the Holy Spirit" all involved "eating" and "table fellowship" in some way where the Jew and "non-Jew" were to be "one" as God's people. By being one not only in dietary concerns the Gentile could come and learn from the Jew and thereby both would have the same witness of the same truth through a unified message where both Gentile and Jew come together as the two sticks in Joseph's hand with a united message for the world (Judah and Ephraim).

Answer for yourself: What are we missing here?

Simply that the Jews are given many "kosher" commands which are not voluntary and although the "non-Jews" are not given many of these "required Laws" concerning "kosher" for unity and table fellowship to occur between the "Jew" and the "non-Jew" then the "non-Jew" will have to understand Isa. 56 and the principles laid out there and "voluntarily" acquire other mitzvot not given to him by God in order for such communion between "Jew" and "non-Jew" to occur. Sure, as a "non-Jew" are you not required to eat only "clean food" as this is not required in the Covenant of Noah but we must choose "those things that please God" as Isaiah 56 commands of the "non-Jew". We don't have to eat "kosher"; but we "get to" and in so doing when we choose to not eat shrimp before a Jew we literally tear down that middle wall between the Jew and "non-Jew". This and other such issues were the problem at Antioch. That is our task as "non-Jews" and our role in fulfilling the words of Amos 9 and Genesis 49 through our lives. We, as "non-Jews" have a huge responsibility and obligation toward our Jewish brothers and sisters and in so doing maybe we can undo somewhat the horrors done to the Jewish peoples by the Christian Church during the Dark Ages that sadly have not yet abated due to the gross ignorance of Christians about the true nature of their birth faith.

THE ANTIOCH PROBLEM

Simply said these 4 items referred to the prior problem concerning Paul and his teachings that led up to the Antioch Incident and the problem of table-fellowship; Jews with "non-Jews". This was not meant to be a treatise upon the 7 Noahide Laws or the Noahide Covenant although these items are contained within them. This was concerned only about the "Paul problem" at Antioch and the violation of the Covenant of Noah and Moses to whom both Jews and "non-Jew" had fallen victim because of Paul's laxity and teachings which were opposed to the Torah in places. This might be hard for you to hear but Paul was teaching a form of "idolatry" as defined by the Covenant of Noah and Moses and this will be proved in the following articles which follow. Paul was not perfect and neither are we and this is why Paul was always a problem for James and the Jerusalem Church.

In other words one can see that the Acts 15 Council was to deal with the violation of Covenant Stipulations for both Jew and "non-Jew" [Moses and Noah] due to incorrect teaching and laxity in keeping the Commandments of God as taught by Paul; both for the Jew and the "non-Jew" concerning not only "table fellowship" but it runs deeper; deep as idolatry as defined by these Laws!!! READ THEM AGAIN ABOVE. Let us not forget that these "believers" were the first followers in "the Jewish Christ" and the accurate understanding of the dynamics of Acts 15 has a message to you if you consider yourself a follower of the Jewish Christ (called Jesus)!

It is to the Antioch Problem to which we must now turn to understand thoroughly the reason for the Acts 15 Council and the implications for all "non-Jews" who desire to be followers of Jesus and "the Christ"

THE LAWS OF NOAH....ONE MUST NOT EAT ANY LIMB TAKEN FROM A LIVING ANIMAL #1

If you have studied with us this far then you know by know that long before the Jewish people existed God made Covenants with non-Jews and that their relationship and good-standing with God was determined by how they lived up to their Covenant stipulations (Laws). In particular we have been looking at the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah where a non-Jew was considered "righteous" by God if he lived up to his Covenant and repented when he strayed from his Covenant Commandments and returned to obedience unto God.

In our day and time if you are reading this article then you are most likely a contemporary Christian and most likely highly indoctrinated by your denominational or non-denominational theology. If you have been faithful to study with us up to this point then you have seen beyond any doubt that the Jesus Movement of the first century instructed non-Jews who came to faith in God through Yeshua's followers to obey the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah. As a typical Christian or otherwise I assume that you are basically a "good person" and not the chiefest of sinners. Yet when we examine in detail these Laws of Noah which frame our Covenant with God then we encounter many things that not only challenge how we live in America today but which should bring shame to the best of Christians as you will come to quickly realize that your Gentile denominational religious belief system in normative Christianity has caused you to sin in many areas which before now you had no knowledge that such beliefs and actions were sinful. It is our hope at Bet Emet Ministries that your love for God is greater than your love to eat with the Pastor after Sunday's service and that you take to heart the matters that will be discussed here for let us end this introduction with these words:

1 Jn 5:3 3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous. (KJV)

-182: ONE MUST NOT EAT ANY LIMB TAKEN FROM A LIVING ANIMAL (DEUT. 12:23)

In the Laws of Moses, which many are but reiterations of the previous Laws of Noah, Maimonides/Rambam codifies this Commandment as #182 of the negative Commandments given by God by which man must not do. By this prohibition we are forbidden to eat a limb of a living creature: that is, to cut off a [whole] limb from a live animal or fowl and eat as much as an olive's size of the limb in its natural condition [that is, together with its veins and sinews]; and even though there is only the smallest amount of meat on it, whoever eats it is punished by whipping. The prohibition is contained in His words, Thou shalt not eat the life with the flesh (Deut. 12:23).

There are distinctions between this prohibition as it pertains to a Jew and as it relates to a non-Jew. A Jew's prohibition is only concerned with kosher animals, while for a Gentile it applies to all animals.

The Sifr'e says:

"Thou shalt not eat the life with the flesh: this refers to a limb of a living creature." The verse is interpreted similarly in the Gemara of Hullin (102b [Sonc. ed. p. 569])³ where we also read: "He who eats a limb [severed] from a living creature, and also flesh [severed] from a living creature, is liable twice." The reason for this is that there are two prohibitions, of which the first, Thou shalt not eat the life with the fles forbids eating a limb, and the second, Ye shall not eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field (Ex. 22:30) forbids eating the flesh of a living creature, as we have explained.

This prohibition occurs again, in another form, in His words to Noah forbidding the eating of a limb of a living creature: Only flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof shall ye not eat (Gen. 9:4).

"It is forbidden to cut off a limb of a living animal and eat it, because such an action would produce and develop cruelty; besides, the heathen kings used to do it; it was also a kind of idolatrous worship to cut off a certain limb of a living animal and eat it" (Moreh Nebuchim III, 48).

THE RABBIS COMMENT

All commentaries are unanimous in their explanation. The purpose of this prohibition against eating the limb of an animal while the animal is still alive-a mitzvah which is applicable to the Noahide as well as to the Jew-is for man to refrain from an act of unspeakable cruelty and inhumanity. Maimonides adds another reason to that given above. This was a heathen practice and should, therefore, not be imitated by the Jew or the non-Jew.

THE LAWS OF NOAH.....A TORN OR MAULED ANIMAL IS FORBIDDEN TO EAT #2

If you have studied with us this far then you know by know that long before the Jewish people existed God made Covenants with non-Jews and that their relationship and good-standing with God was determined by how they lived up to their Covenant stipulations (Laws). In particular we have been looking at the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah where a non-Jew was considered "righteous" by God if he lived up to his Covenant and repented when he strayed from his Covenant Commandments and returned to obedience unto God.

In our day and time if you are reading this article then you are most likely a contemporary Christian and most likely highly indoctrinated by your denominational or non-denominational theology. If you have been faithful to study with us up to this point then you have seen beyond any doubt that the Jesus Movement of the first century instructed non-Jews who came to faith in God through Yeshua's followers to obey the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah. As a typical Christian or otherwise I assume that you are basically a "good person" and not the chiefest of sinners. Yet when we examine in detail these Laws of Noah which frame our Covenant with God then we encounter many things that not only challenge how we live in America today but which should bring shame to the best of Christians as you will come to quickly realize that your Gentile denominational religious belief system in normative Christianity has caused you to sin in many areas which before now you had no knowledge that such beliefs and actions were sinful. It is our hope at Bet Emet Ministries that your love for God is greater than your love to eat with the Pastor after Sunday's service and that you take to heart the matters that will be discussed here for let us end this introduction with these words:

I Jn 5:3 3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous. (KJV)

-181: ONE MUST NOT EAT ANY LIMB TAKEN FROM A LIVING ANIMAL (EXODUS 22:30)

You shall not eat any flesh that is torn by beasts in the field, you shall cast it to the dogs (Exodus 22:30)

By this prohibition we are forbidden to eat terefah.

Answer for yourself: What is terefah?

Terefah is the flesh of an animal torn by a wild beast, or by a wild bird, or the flesh of any injured or diseased animal which, although ritually slaughtered, is known to be one which could not have lived more than a year; or the flesh torn from a living clean beast.

Animals and fowl that may not be eaten (aside from "unclean" animals) are divided into two classifications: Nevelah ("carcass") and terefah ("torn"). Nevelah refers to the flesh of an animal or fowl that died of natural causes or was not slaughtered by shehi'utah, i.e., in accordance with Jewish law. Terefah* refers to the flesh of an animal or fowl that was killed by a predatory animal [one who eats blood] or one that had physical defects or injuries with which it could not have survived for twelve months. The flesh of an animal with such physical defects is forbidden food, even if the animal was ritually slaughtered. The general rule is that any injury with which the animal cannot survive renders it terefah or unfit for consumption under Jewish law.

Any of the following eight defects discovered on examination following ritual slaughter renders an animal terefah:

- a. Derusah: An animal or fowl whose flesh was torn by a bird of prey or a wild beast.
- b. Nekubah: An animal or fowl with a perforated vital organ; e.g., a perforated heart.
- c. Hisurah: An animal or fowl with an underdeveloped or atrophied organ; e.g., a lung of less than normal size.
- d. Netulah: An animal or fowl that is found to have, for example, no liver.
- e. Pesukah: An animal or fowl with a cut windpipe.
- f. Keru'ah: An animal or fowl with a torn membrane, such as that of the stomach.
- g. Nefulah (lit. "a fallen animal"): An animal or fowl whose "limbs were loosened from one another" as the result of a fall from a high place.
- h. Shevurah (lit. "a broken animal"): An animal with most of its ribs fractured.

An animal with these defects is terefah, regardless of whether they were inflicted on the animal by accident, by other animals, or by a man (e.g., a hunter).

It is contained in His words, Ye shall not eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field (Ex. 22:30)

The prohibitions in this Commandment and the preceding one are repeated as regards the priests in His words, That which dieth of itself, or is torn of beasts, he shall not eat to defile himself therewith (Lev. 22:8).

The reason why the prohibition is repeated in their case is that, since Scripture commands them to eat of the sin-offering of a bird which is [slaughtered] by melikah - a method of slaughtering which if used in the preparation of ordinary food would undoubtedly be invalid, as it makes the meat nevelah - it might occur to us that they are permitted to eat even as ordinary food [the flesh of an animal which has been slaughtered by] melikah, or has been improperly slaughtered; Scripture therefore explains that they continue to be in the same position as laymen with regard to the admonition against eating nevelah or terefah. This is the explanation given by the Sages, who also mention this verse in connection with another law, which is not relevant to the present work (Hullin, 100b (Sonc. ed. p. 557)).

But a domestic or wild animal that is inferred by one of the accepted modes of interpretation to have become terefah is forbidden food, even though it has been ritually slaughtered; and one who ritually slaughters it and eats of its flesh is punished by whipping under Rabbinic law.

The things that make [an animal or bird] terefah are explained in the third chapter of Hullin. The provisions of this and the nine preceding Commandments are explained in the same chapter [of Hullin], in the last chapter of Makkoth, and in the first chapter of Bekoroth.

In his Mishneh Torah Maimonides enumerates seventy diseases and injuries which render a beast terefah (Kedushah, Hikhoth Shechitah X, 9). Later scholars have devoted much time and thought to the exhaustive study of this subject, with the result that the certification of meat as kosher carries with it a maximum guarantee of fitness for human consumption.

THE RABBIS COMMENT

Hinnukh: An animal that has been mauled by a wild beast falls prey to infection and disease even if the direct cause of the animal's death was shehitah. The meat of such an animal is detrimental to man's health. Hinnukh adds that whatever food is bad for a man's body will also be bad for his soul.

Abrabanel: This, too, was the reason why hunting is forbidden. However, although we are forbidden to eat the meat of animals killed by a hunter, we may derive other benefits from such meat; e.g., it may be given to one's dogs.

Ibn Ezra, Da'at Zekemm: Why does the Torah mention no other means of disposing of terefah meat than to feed it to dogs? Because dogs act as the guardians of flocks of sheep and herds of cattle. Should one of the herd, nevertheless, become prey to a wild beast, the dogs should be given the meat of the dead animal and should be rewarded for their efforts to protect these animals.

FURTHER COMMENTS...EATING THE LIMB OF A LIVING ANIMAL

There is some discussion as to whether the prohibition of eating the limb of a living animal was originally given to Adam the First Man or not.

One opinion states that it was, indeed, included in the original commandment forbidding the eating of fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

According to this opinion, Adam who was clearly given vegetation for food, as it is written, "And God said, Behold I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of the whole earth, and every tree upon which there is fruit of a tree bearing seed, to you these shall be for food." (Gen. 1:29). Adam was not forbidden to eat meat, but was merely forbidden to kill animals for food. If the animal had died of itself, it was permissible as food. What Noah was given, therefore, was a refinement of this commandment, in which God allowed man to kill animals for food, but forbade him to eat the flesh of any animal while the animal was still alive. According to the other opinion, Adam had received six of the Seven Universal Laws and had been forbidden to eat the flesh of an animal in any manner. Only after the Flood was the leniency of permitting animal flesh instituted. (Maimonides)

This commandment is one which is revealed explicitly in scripture, as it is written, "Every moving thing that lives shall be for you for food; just as the green herbs, I have given you everything. But flesh with its living soul, its blood, you shall not eat." (Gen.9:34) This, of course, does not mean that an animal's blood is its soul and that what man was being forbidden was animal blood. It is taught by the sages that the vitalizing animal soul is contained within the blood, and this is what the commandment refers to, for when an animal dies, this vitalizing soul departs. So long as this vitalizing soul remains within the animal, its flesh is forbidden to man as food.

At first glance, this commandment seems peculiarly out of place as one of the Seven Universal Laws.

Answer for yourself: How can eating the limb of an animal take its place side by side with such obvious fundamental principles of human morality such as those prohibiting idolatry or murder?

Besides a few bizarre and isolated sociological perversions in Africa and China, one is hard put to imagine who would even consider eating an animal's meat while the animal lives.

And yet, this is precisely why this commandment may well represent the essence of the Seven Universal Laws. Although mankind is enjoined to obey these commandments as they appear, the letter of the law only serves as a minimum, a starting point, which guarantees God's favor and insures human morality. But if man wishes to realize his greatness spiritually, he must tap into the infinite potential of the seven laws, using them to refine and elevate himself. We see here that eating the limb of a living animal serves as a hint as to the potential refinement that man can attain through his eating habits and by practising kindness to every creature.

For what man ingests as food is absorbed in his bloodstream and in every cell of his body and thereby becomes part of his essential being.

The person who eats snakes and monkeys will surely be different from the man who eats nuts and berries. And the mystical teachings state that the Holy Spirit will never rest on one who kills any creature, even the lowliest insect, purposelessly. (Teachings of the AriZal, Rabbi Isaac Luria Ashkenazi)

The early sages differ concerning the act of consuming the blood of an animal. The sages say that the Children of Noah contend that they are not forbidden blood as food. The Children of Noah may eat the flesh of an animal that dies by itself, but there is an opinion that states that only the flesh of an animal killed through slaughtering is permissible. One is guilty of transgressing this commandment subject to punishment by the courts whether he eats the limb of a living animal or for merely the flesh of living animal, even the smallest amount. The actual transgression is the eating of a limb or any flesh while it lives. Use of an animal's hide or any other benefit is permissible. Although a person is subject to punishment for eating the limb or the flesh of a living domestic or wild animal, he is not so condemned for the limb or flesh of a living chicken. It is, however, forbidden to eat this as well. Fish and other creatures, including animals, that are killed may have a limb or flesh taken from them and eaten. Slaughtering does not have to be in a ritual manner as with Jews. However, the killing of any animal for food must be done in as humane a manner as possible. Fish are considered dead the moment they are taken out of the water, but even so, one may not eat a fish while it appears to be alive as this is a lack of refinement and the chief reason for the giving of the Seven Universal Laws was to refinement the nature of man.

When one slaughters an animal, even if its windpipe and esophagus are severed, so long as the limbs are still moving, the limbs and the meat that are separated from them are forbidden to a Gentile because of this law. However, if one eats the limb or flesh of an animal after it has been killed, but while it is still moving, he is not punished for this by the courts, for it is not actually considered the limb or flesh of a living animal.

Everything that is forbidden to a Jew because of the law of the Limb Of A Living Animal is similarly forbidden to a Gentile, except that the Gentile has the added strictness of being guilty for this particular transgression whether the animal is spiritually clean or unclean. The Jew is guilty only if the animal is a type that is spiritually clean. Animals, together with their lives, were given into the hands of mankind. The higher spiritual rank of man dictates that he not eat the limb of a living animal. Even though the flesh of man and the flesh of animal are related, the one may be incorporated within the other through eating. But the soul (in the blood) of an animal may never be incorporated within the soul of man. Therefore the admonition for mankind to not eat blood as did the pagans in their false ritual worship. Another reason is that it is this blood that contains the Divine Life Source in the form of the Soul which God gave as atonement for the sins of mankind.

The soul [blood] of an animal must first be separated from its physical being before the animal body may be absorbed within and become part of the human body. (Samson Raphael Hirsch commenting on Genesis 2:16 and 9:5)

ATONEMENT...THE SOUL...THE BLOOD...THE LIFE....WHAT IS GOING ON?

As a Christian Pastor I can say that out of all the Biblical doctrines which Gentile Christianity completely misunderstands and teaches incorrectly I can find no other more misunderstood teaching than what Gentile Christianity teaches concerning ATONEMENT and how it actually was accomplished. The confusion rests in the understanding of the "blood" as the vehicle for the "life" which is contained within the blood for God tells us if we read slowly and think that it is the "LIFE" that is in the blood that He gives mankind for atonement and NOT THE BLOOD. We read over this so often because we are subconsciously or consciously brainwashed by erroneous teaching our whole life to "think" blood when in reality we as Christians got it just backwards. The link above will straighten this all out and I strongly suggest that every Christian read the above information and make adjustments in their religious beliefs systems if they want to meet God with the truth one day. Shalom.

THE ANTIOCH PROBLEM AND HOW IT RELATED TO TABLE FELLOWSHIP BETWEEN THE JEWS AND NON-JEWS IN THE EARLY SYNAGOGUE-CHURCH

This series will reveal to the student many truths that lay behind these verses. We will see that the whole account is somewhat misrepresented by Paul in the New Testament to present the Apostle Peter in a somewhat negative light as well as the fact that the problems surrounding table fellowship between the Jew and the non-Jew were of major importance in the first century.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #1

I can just hear many of my readers now: "There he goes again, tearing down my hero Paul". Well it is not my desire to build up or tear down anyone; only to get to the truth behind accounts in the New Testament which have been recorded in such a slanted way as to obscure truth. It is in the spirit of truth and critical historical study that we investigated great time and research to get the bottom of Paul's rebuke of Peter.

This issues at stake in such research affects every non-Jewish believer on this planet. This will become crystal clear if you take the challenge and read the forthcoming articles which will strip away many of the lies and half-truths portrayed in the New Testament. Dear one, whether you know it or not, the New Testament you carry in which you hold beliefs concerning "inerrancy and infallibility" is more truthfully understood to be a Roman religious propagandist document in which religion was used as a political glue to hold the crumbling Roman Empire together in the 2nd through 4th century when the Canon of the New Testament was organized.

James D.G. Dunn, in Jesus, Paul, and the Law, states on page 2 that: "The Antioch incident was a crucial episode in Paul's career. The question was , How crucial?" He goes on to challenge his readers with such questions as:

- What was it that the men from James demanded from Paul and his church?
- Why was it that they demanded such from Paul and his Jewish-Gentile church?
- What was it that Peter and other Jewish Christians withdrew from, and why?
- What effect did this Antioch incident have upon the future of Jew-and Gentile relationships in the churches of Yeshua?
- What effect did this Antioch incident have upon Paul's relationship with the Jerusalem Church and was his defense of his Apostleship in many of his epistles stem from the Jerusalem's rejection of Paul and "his gospel"?

One of the issues raised by this study was is the changing relationship between Paul and the Jerusalem church before and up to the Antioch incident. Prior to the Antioch incident Paul had been much less independent of Jerusalem than subsequently-hence the somewhat defensive tone of Galatians 1:10-2:10. Without a doubt Galatians 1-2 reflects a transition in Paul's relationship with Jerusalem and Yeshua's Church authorities. What you the reader must understand from the outset is that it is this rejection of Paul and "his gospel" by the Jerusalem Church which plays such an integral part in the overall picture of Paul's theology and its development. The Antioch incident marked a crucial stage in the development of Paul's theology and his separation from the Jerusalem Church. In Galatians Paul is striving to assert his independence from Jerusalem. I challenge you to read Galatians 1-2 with the understanding that those whom Paul opposes and who opposed him were Yeshua's brother James and the elders of the Jerusalem Church. This puts a whole new spin on Paul's self-vindication in his epistles. The inner tension should be noticeable by all. The problem is ascertaining whom the adversaries of Paul actually are. You can understand my amazement when I discovered over the years of my study that the adversaries of Paul of whom he characterizes as "Judaizers" in the New Testament are the very one whom Yeshua walked with and taught for 40 days after his resurrection. To assume these "Judaizers" are wrong and that Paul is "right" makes Yeshua an incompetent who put the wrong men in charge of the Messianic Movement. To assume these "Judaizers" of Jerusalem, James and the Church of Yeshua are "wrong" is incredulous considering these same men had been filled with the "Spirit of Truth" on Pentecost. Surely the true anointing of God did not lead these men into error. James no less is the leader and head of Yeshua's church...the mother church for all missionary activity. It seems to me that these men at Jerusalem had it wrong then what does that say about Yeshua's competency in setting these men in authority especially in light of beliefs attached to him that he was resurrected from the dead and believed to be the Messiah of Israel. This is the tension we have. This is the setting we have that confronts our further study: Paul is opposed by James and the church and Paul is opposed to the same. Unfortunately we have only Paul's and Luke's account of the matter in the New Testament. Let it be remembered that this "Luke" was Paul's friend and companion in several of his trips. So if we are to come to the bottom of the matter then everything must be scrutinized for truthfulness. We can take nothing for granted nor shall we.

TROUBLING QUESTIONS TO CLOSE ON

As we close understand what is at stake here. If James and the Jerusalem Church can be found to be in the right then that means Paul was not observant of the dictates of the Acts 15 Church Council that preceded the Antioch incident. Let us never forget that Acts attests for us in Acts 15:23 that the church wrote letters of their decision and attests these letters were to be sent to the churches in Asia to inform them of the decision. Not only that but verse 28 states that "it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things". Take just a moment to notice that the decision of James and the Church was seen by the Holy Ghost to be "good" and "necessary" for the non-Jewish believer. We need to stop and take notice of such a thing and then ask ourselves: "What things"?

It seems certain things were mandated by God and enforced by Godly representatives for the non-Jewish believer to both observe and keep as part of his inclusion into the Israel of God whereby he received the gift of salvation. The seriousness of the matter is underscored by the fact that these "necessary" and "good" things will not be enforced by Paul to his Gentile churches; in fact Paul is instrumental in casting such things to the ground as if they were not important. This is the whole of the crux of the problem at Antioch. The letters informing of the Jerusalem Church's decision were intended to "strengthen" the Gentile Churches but the information within them had to be implemented among the Gentile converts and Godfearers. Paul would make several serious compromises the majority of which today escape the notice of the casual reader.

In the next articles I will point out each area of contention where Paul directly disobeyed both James, the Church, and the Holy Ghost and literally broke from being submissive to the Jerusalem authority and preached "his own gospel" in defiance of Jerusalem and the Holy Ghost's decision.

This I know is shocking to most because you have grown up with the positive account of Paul in the New Testament. But understand that this view of Paul is biased to say the least and far from the truth concerning this man. If you find the courage to continue reading I will prove, prove to you that the Paul of the New Testament is not a friend of Jerusalem Church let alone Yeshua whom you think he followed. In truth Paul did his own thing and this is what brought him into great contention with the Jerusalem Church and its authorities. Literally he would be summoned to Jerusalem twice to answer charges brought against him in his life; the first at the Acts 15 Council and finally in Acts 21 where he would publicly demonstrate under duress his obeisance to the Torah and complete the Nazarite vow which required of him the offering of blood offerings and sin offerings for atonement....and this 30 years after Yeshua's death. This fact alone should make one wonder what his true beliefs were concerning Yeshua's death being the final sacrifice for sin.

That was a lot to start with ...ponder what has been said ..and let us continue with the second article in this series. Shalom.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #2

If one reads Galatians chapter one and two it is very informative as to Paul's relationship with the Jerusalem apostles. This is one of the key questions relating to the beginnings of Christianity which has never achieved a completely satisfactory resolution. It is clear enough that in Galatians itself Paul is striving to assert his independence from Jerusalem and Yeshua's Church. This cannot be disputed in light of historical facts.

THE EXEGESIS OF GALATIANS 2....LOOK AT WHAT WE FIND

Paul finds himself in rather a difficult predicament. The facts of history already betrayed Paul as Gentile convert and a Sadducee, which when spurned in his love interest in the Chief Priest's daughter, defects to the Pharisees. So now we have Paul as a self-made Pharisee. Paul, wishing to defend his honor and reestablish his position in the religious hierarchy of Jerusalem, made such a attend following his "revelation" on the Damascus road. Paul desired independence from the Jerusalem Church yet needs their acknowledgment and authority for his missions.

In Gal. 1:15-17 we find Paul's admission that he, after receiving his revelation of Yeshua, "did not confer with flesh and blood, nor did he go up to Jerusalem to those who were Apostles". Paul makes a strong case that he did not "confer" with those who knew Yeshua best. That seems strange to me considering he persecuted the "way" of the Nazarenes and caused the death of many before his "enlightenment" on the road to Damascus.

The Greek word for confer, as taken from Galatians 1:16 tells us a lot:

4323 prosanatithemi-

- 1) to lay upon in addition to
- 2) to lay upon oneself in addition
 - a) to undertake besides
 - b) to put oneself upon another by going to him,
 - c) to commit or to betake oneself to another for the purpose of consulting him
 - d) to consult, to take one into counsel
 - e) to add from one's store

3) to communicate, to impart

DOES PAUL INCRIMINATE HIMSELF AND REVEAL HIS MOTIVES IN THIS WORD FROM GALATIANS 1:16?

I believe that he does. In fact Paul's choice of words betrays his hidden attitude toward authority in his life. Remembering his rejection by the Chief Priest and the Sadducees, Paul set out to establish his own credibility and authority in response to his being rebuffed by the Temple authorities. If you wish to read in-depth in these issues I highly recommend H. Maccoby's The Mythmaker: Paul And The Invention Of Christianity. This book will open your eyes and only begin a life-long study into "what is the truth about Paul?"

We find from this simple word study ["convey" in Greek] that although Paul had been a severe if not major persecutor of Yeshua's Church, after his "revelation" Paul braggingly stated that was not willing to confer, to consult, to take into counsel the Jerusalem authorities, or even to "add" to his store of knowledge concerning Yeshua from those who knew him best.

This does not sound right, does it?

According to this Greek word for "consult" Paul braggingly states in Galatians that he was not willing to lay up more knowledge concerning Yeshua from those who knew him best. He did not seem to need to add to his knowledge of Yeshua other than what he had received on the Damascus road. But more enlightening is the meaning that he was not to put himself in a humbled position of submitting to another or committing to another for the purpose of consulting him in hopes of gaining needed and necessary knowledge concerning Yeshua and Yeshua's gospel. Except for the Damascus road revelation we all know Paul was in direct opposition to Yeshua and had the wrong message. Not only that but Paul did not consult with flesh and blood about the significance of the revelation he had received about his understanding of "revelation of Jesus Christ" (v.12) as a call to preach the gospel to the Gentiles. For Paul it was not necessary for him to consult with any man about the meaning of the revelation he had received by Jesus Christ. He had a private interpretation to which he assumed he needed no witness from those he had previously been persecuting. What is most amazing to me is that Paul brags about not needing to go to those who were the apostles before him (v. 17), to those, that is, who remain within the circle of Yeshua's followers who were at that time regarded as the most qualified to give an authoritative interpretation of what he (Paul) had seen on the Damascus road. By the time he did first visit Jerusalem three years had elapsed and the meaning of the "revelation of Jesus Christ" at Damascus had been clearly established "in" Paul without any reference to outside-human-agency, including the Jerusalem Apostles.

PAUL'S FIRST VISIT TO THE JERUSALEM CHURCH

Galatians 1:18 states: "Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him 15 days". Verse 19 states: "But other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother".

Thayer's Greek Lexicon translates "see" in this manner:

2477 historeo-

- 1) to enquire into, to examine, to investigate
- 2) to find out, to learn by enquiry

3) to gain knowledge of by visiting, used of some distinguished person, to become personally acquainted with, to know face to face

Now we see after three years Paul's submission to the Jerusalem Church whereby he traveled to Jerusalem to enquire and find out information which he was lacking about Yeshua. We must understand that Paul probably never met or heard Yeshua teach so his information about him would be shallow indeed. Paul needed to "catch up" especially since he fashioned himself the Apostle to the Gentiles. Paul's trip was, according to the Greek word, intended for the sole purpose of gaining information and knowledge of Yeshua by visiting those who knew him best. The word carries the implication of "gaining information" and in this case from those who knew Yeshua best; namely Peter and James.

If Paul was so concerned at this stage of his life in asserting his independence from Jerusalem he would hardly have used a word which explicitly acknowledged his own personal indebtedness to Peter for information concerning the "Christ crucified" which he preached.

But we have good reason to conclude that Paul's attempt to distance himself from Jerusalem had a much more specific issue in view; namely, his own personal interpretation of the revelation given him on the Damascus road. Understand that Paul was not trying to stand aloof from Jerusalem in respect to everything to do with the new movement. What he wanted to safeguard was quite simply the claim that his basic understanding of the gospel to the Gentiles came direct from God (v. 11-12). It was precisely his understanding of his Apostleship to the Gentiles which he refused so resolutely to attribute to any human authority (v.1). This had been made perfectly clear by Paul in his refusal to confer with the Jerusalem authorities for 3 years following his "revelation".

What is important for us to know is that Paul was NOW quite ready, as seen in these passages, to acknowledge his indebtedness to Peter and James for further information concerning the background of Yeshua's ministry while on earth as well as the very beginnings of the new movement centered on the risen Yeshua.

That Paul would have had a natural curiosity about this Yeshua who had appeared to him outside Damascus is rather obvious and we can hardly doubt that the fortnight with Peter was largely spent in passing on such information. Paul used his time with Peter, the one who had been closest to Yeshua, to make inquiry, to draw out the sort of information which had not come to him with the apostle-making gospel-giving revelation three years earlier. What I want you to grasp is that after three years we find Paul submissive to the Jerusalem Church but that was to change over the course of the next few years.

PAUL'S SECOND VISIT TO THE JERUSALEM CHURCH

Galatians 2:1-2 states: "Then after fourteen years I went up again to Jerusalem....I laid before them the gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately before those of repute, lest somehow I was running or had run in vain".

The Greek word for "laid" is as follows:

394 anatithemai (an-at-ith'-em-ahee);

from 303 and the middle voice of 5087; to set forth (for oneself), i.e. propound:

KJV-- communicate, declare.

This is a very interesting word. The word carries the added idea of "declaring and communicating" with the added idea that the person to whom a thing is referred is asked for his opinion. In other words, something is laid before someone for his consideration. Paul is asking for approval of the Jerusalem authorities for the message he has been preaching for the last 14 years! This word carries the idea of submitting to a higher authority an issue which the one making he submission (Paul) was incompetent to resolve on his own. Dear reader what we read here in the Greek is that Paul is submitting to the Jerusalem authorities "his gospel" for their approval. This literally is Paul's acknowledgment that the authority of his gospel depended on Jerusalem's approval.

This is of major importance as we again see for over 17 years Paul was preaching "his gospel" without the sanction of the Jerusalem Church! Wow! Let that sink in!

During these 17 years Paul has been holding a delicate balance in defining his relations with Jerusalem. On the one hand Paul makes it clear that his second visit took place 17 years after the revelation which had determined and defined for him "his" gospel and Apostleship to the Gentiles. Nothing that happened at such a distance in time from that decisive event could undermine or call in question the direction or significance of his commissioning by God through Jesus Christ. Paul goes out of his way to point out that he went up in accordance with a further revelation thus presumably excluding any suggestion that his visit to Jerusalem was in response to a summons from James and the mother church. Furthermore he calls the Jerusalem leadership "men of repute", a phrase which acknowledges the high standing in which the pillar apostles were held by others, without constituting an endorsement by Paul himself. The use of the last expression in particular reinforces the impression that Paul's choice was designed to characterize the balance between Paul's recognition of the Jerusalem's Apostles' eminence and authority and his even firmer assertion of independence in the authority of his gospel and Apostleship.

PAUL DOUBTS THE VALIDITY OF HIS REVELATION...NOW PAY CLOSE ATTENTION

Let me set the stage for you. Paul had a revelation. Lets face it, revelations are not always easy to understand or comprehend without help from spiritual authorities at times. Paul sought no help for 3 years. Only after three years did Paul consult with the Jerusalem authorities; and then only Peter for 2 weeks where he asks for "information" about the one he preaches in hopes of "filling in the gaps" lacking in his knowledge of Yeshua. Paul then strikes out preaching this revelation for 14 years then has second thoughts as we see from Galatians 2:2. Notice Paul then, after 14 years, makes the rather phenomenal statement in Gal. 2:2: "Lest somehow I should be running or had run in vain" (Gal. 2:2). This clause certainly indicates not only serious doubt by Paul about the truthfulness of what he has been preaching for 14 years but a genuine concern on Paul's part that the success or failure of his missionary work among the Gentiles which depended upon the approval of the Jerusalem Church as well as its head Pastor James. Without a doubt the judgment of the Jerusalem apostles mattered to Paul; an adverse judgment concerning his gospel would have rendered his work past and present ineffective and useless.

Answer for yourself: How can Paul in the same breath both assert his independence of the Jerusalem apostles and yet also acknowledge that the effectiveness of his work depended on the approval of his gospel by these same Jerusalem authorities?

Paul knew, what few Christians know today, that Jerusalem's refusal to acknowledge all or part of Paul's "gospel message" would render it ineffective.

Answer for yourself: Did these Jerusalem authorities and apostles ever give Paul complete approval of his "whole gospel" or would they at the Acts 15 Church Council correct many parts of it and command Paul upon his return to Asia Minor to make sure that his churches under his tutelage be taught the truth in certain areas which at that time because of Paul they did not possess? These things will be searched out in future articles so stay tuned?

YET...PAUL WAS CORRECT IN SOME THINGS

Let me say at this point that one of the things Paul had been preaching was correct. Paul had been preaching that the non-Jewish believers in God, who accepted the Covenant of Noah along with the Laws of Noah, through the ministry of Yeshua and his followers, were grafted into the Israel of God without the need of circumcision. Paul was right on this. This is what the whole Galatians epistle is about; not about being "not under the Law, but only the non-Jew not being under the law of CIRCUMCISION as stated in the Covenant and laws of Noah." Christianity possibly has got nothing more incorrect than this, or maybe possibly its Christology.

You need to know that the acceptance of the non-Jew without circumcision was not the accepted or established practice of mainline Judaism at this particular time in Israel. Due to the intense Jewish hatred for the non-Jew, the rite of circumcision, given only to the Jew, was imposed upon the non-Jewish male in hope of providing an effective deterrent to his conversion to Judaism or other types of religious intercourse.

Guess what; it was working. Because of this potentially life-threatening procedure upon an adult male who no longer had his mother's antibodies to retard against infections as a child, hundreds of men wishing to draw closer to God died in such procedures. The bigoted Jews, who hated Gentiles because God had consistently used them to punish and persecute Israel for their disobedience to their covenant, were using such procedures to hold the non-Jew at arms length and limit both social and religious intercourse. Under the Laws of Noah, and the Covenant of Noah, which both preceded the Laws of Moses, such requirements were never imposed on the non-Jew. Because of the ministry of Yeshua and his followers such as James, the pastor of the Messianic Church of Jerusalem, and other, major repentance in the direction of Israel in this regard was to be accomplished. Understand however I am speaking only of the Messianic branch of Judaism only; the orthodox Judaism of the 2nd Temple period never relinquished such a requirement upon the non-Jew.

BUT UNDERSTAND....PAUL WAS WRONG IN OTHER THINGS

Having vindicated Paul on this point, it saddens me to say that Paul will defiantly oppose the other mandates of the Jerusalem Council which would come later as mandated by head Pastor James in Acts 15. The casual reading of Acts 15 without background in this area robs today's believer of such knowledge. A little study can show you Paul was wrong and defiant toward the apostles after Acts 15.

Because of his defiance to accept other parts of the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah as binding upon the non-Jew, as it had been for Abraham, Paul would distance himself from the Jerusalem Church and begin to tout his "own personal authority" and "his gospel" over against the authority of the Apostles of the mother church. This explains the many examples in his epistles where he defends his "Apostleship" against those of Jerusalem which had problems with Paul and his message.

Probably for many of you this is "news" to you...problems with Paul...the Apostle to the Gentiles! My dear one all is not what it appears in the New Testament. If you are acquainted with our ministry we have dealt heavily with the New Testament documents and scrutinized them with the aid of scholarly research to ascertain the truth from the error within them. Paul's refusal to accept the mandate of the Jerusalem Council would lead to such comments in the New Testament as this one:

"But from those reputed to be something-what they once were matters nothing to me; God shows no partiality-the men of repute added nothing to me (Gal. 2:6)".

Paul in writing Galatians following the Acts 15 Council would not and did not admit to accepting any requirements as such from the Jerusalem authorities. But as I have shown you James made a ruling and commanded letters be written of the Council's final decision and circulated among the churches in Asia Minor. James is the head of the church and not Paul!

These very important "mandates" for the Gentile Churches of Asia should have "added something to Paul". It is one thing for Paul to write in a letter intended for the churches of Galatia that the men of Jerusalem added nothing to his gospel and quite another to say that in front of James and the elders of Yeshua's Church in Jerusalem. When the cat is away the mouse will play! With such insights you should be able to re-read Paul in the New Testament and discern the tension between him and the Jerusalem elders and his self-vindication to the non-Jews of Asia Minor who knew not the decision of the Jerusalem Council. This is so lopsided it is staggering and we as believers took such rhetoric hook line and sinker never questioning what was the dynamics behind some of Paul's self-vindicating statements. You will see how serious this becomes for the non-Jewish believer as we get deeper into the dogmas and doctrines contained in the Jerusalem decree in Acts 15.

PAUL'S DILEMMA

Paul knew that to acknowledge the Jerusalem apostle's overall authority to determine the terms on which the gospel could be received and Gentiles accepted into Israel's Re-Newed Covenant would have jeopardized the Gentile mission if the "Judaizers" in Galatia could have claimed Jerusalem's authority. Yet, at the same time, the pillar apostle's authoritative ruling in Acts 15 (James') was one Paul had to appeal to if his gospel was to be effective and his vision of Gentile converts being brought into the people of God to be fully realized. It was this attempt to hold on to Jerusalem's authority and yet at the same time to hold it at arm's length which explains the great lengths Paul goes to in his epistles to play up his Apostleship and play down the authority of the "pillars" of Jerusalem. Above all else Paul wanted to make it clear that the pillar apostles acknowledged the validity of his circumcision-free gospel to the Gentiles. That was where he wanted his readers to recognize the significance and force of Jerusalem's authority: Titus was not circumcised despite strong advocacy on the part of some that he should be.

Paul will tell a blatant lie in Galatians 2:6 when he says: But of these who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: God accepteth no man's person:) for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me: (KJV)

Paul will later say "They added nothing, no further content, request, instruction or requirement to the circumcision-free gospel...except the encouragement to remember the importance of almsgiving (Gal. 2:10)".

If you keep reading you will see this is a outright lie Paul tells in rebellion to the Jerusalem message he was commanded to communicate with his churches in Asia Minor. Paul will not do it!

What Paul writes in Galatians chapter 2 is simply not true. This is where the problem comes in. One only needs to read Acts 15 and James's decree to understand that certain stipulations from the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah were mandated upon non-Jewish believers coming to faith in God, even if through Paul and his ministry. To say these "pillars" added nothing is far from true. It is in these declarations by James that Paul will cast aside when trying to "win souls to Christ". You need to understand that at this point Jerusalem's backing was absolutely crucial to Paul's whole understanding of his gospel and its outworking in his missionary strategy.

On the other hand Paul had no desire to lean on Jerusalem's authority more heavily than was absolutely necessary. Hence once again the distancing phrase, "those reputed to be of some account" and its echo three verses later "those regarded as pillars" (Gal. 2:6-9). Notice also the highly revealing parenthesis, "what they once were makes no difference to me; God shows no partiality". Here Paul's language indicates clearly enough both at that time the Jerusalem apostles were accorded a status and authority ["what they once were"...notice the imperfect tense] which is now a matter of indifference to him [again note the change of tense]. Notice also that in his view the Jerusalem apostles are still accorded too high a status and authority by some-but not by God. If this is not stabbing in the back I don't know what it!

It is to these actions of Paul's rebellion and defiance we will investigate in the further articles.

In closing of this article let me conclude with this thought. In laying "his" gospel before the Jerusalem apostles what Paul sought was not so much their approval, without which his gospel would have no validity, as their recognition of his gospel's validity, without which his gospel would lose its effectiveness.

Paul would gain the apostle's approval for "his" gospel of "no circumcision" for salvation and inclusion of the non-Jewish believer into the Israel of God. What escapes most Christians today is that when reading the Book of Galatians they tend to get the idea Paul opposed all the Law. He did not. It was just for Paul the Laws of Noah and the Laws of Moses were like a salad bar...he would pick this one and reject this one. This is never what God intended for His children, as we said before, one's relationship with God is totally dependent upon one's Covenant and his effort to maintain Covenant stipulations thereby maintaining relationship with God. For the non-Jewish believer, the Christian, this is the Covenant of Noah.

More in the next in this series as we look deeply into what the issues were that Paul put aside from the Acts 15 Council and the following incident at Antioch where he makes full breach with the Jerusalem Church. Shalom.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #3

In the first two articles in this series I have tried to lay a foundation into the background into what were the dynamics involved as the Antioch incident where the men from James rebuked Peter, Barnabas, and Paul along with his church. These events, when properly understood, hold tons of important information that should be of interest to today's Christian if he truly desires to live a life pleasing to God. Failure to understand the truth behind the skewed pictures of the event in the New Testament guarantees the reader that his life will not prosper from such restored truth and hopefully his repentance in several areas of his life. This will become more apparent as we dig deeper.

PAUL'S REVELATION...&...FIRST VISIT TO THE JERUSALEM CHURCH THREE YEARS LATER

We have made note previously that when Paul had his "revelation" on the Damascus road, Paul writes (Gal. 1:16-24) that he did not immediately confer with those who had been apostles before him; instead, he went due south to Arabia and then returned to Damascus. Only after three years did he visit Jerusalem for a fortnight's conference with Cephas (Peter); among the apostles he saw only their leaders, Cephas and James the Lord's brother. Presumably in consequence of this meeting he then went to "the regions of Syria and Cilicia," avoiding "the churches of Judaea" even though they had been informed of his conversion and his mission work. Paul implies, and we have no word from the Jerusalem church to state otherwise, that the Jerusalem leaders agreed with him that he should confine his activities to the Gentile mission; at any rate, he was not to work under the direct jurisdiction of Jerusalem or in proximity to it. He also implies that there was no question about the right of the apostles at Jerusalem to govern the churches of Judaea.

The church of Jerusalem was the church of the twelve apostles. From I Corinthians 15:5-7 it appears that their jurisdiction was based on appearances of the risen Christ—on the one hand, to Cephas, the Twelve, and a large group of disciples; on the other, to James and to "all the apostles." The list of appearances seems to reflect the combination of two groups of appearances which were especially related to Cephas and to James, and the authority of the Jerusalem church thus rested on a double foundation (Peter and James). Paul's own claim to apostolic authority was obviously parallel not to that of Cephas, who had been a disciple of Yeshua in Galilee and at Jerusalem, but to that of James, a convert only after the resurrection like himself. From the account in Galatians it is by no means clear that Cephas and James recognized Paul's apostolate when he first visited them. Indeed, it looks as if they waited for fourteen years before explicitly recognizing that by divine favor he had been entrusted with the mission to the gentiles (Gal. 2:7-9). If this is so, the leaders of the church of Jerusalem must have enjoyed a primacy greater than Paul not only in Judaea but also among Jews in other areas of the Christian world. Dear one this means that for all Messianic Jewry the Church of Yeshua in Jerusalem was the ONLY authority for the Yeshua's Movement...even in Asia Minor where Paul would go later.

FOURTEEN YEARS LATER....PAUL'S SECOND TRIP TO THE JERUSALEM CHURCH TO GET THEIR APPROVAL FOR WHAT HE WAS PREACHING

What happened after fourteen years was that Paul went to Jerusalem from Antioch, taking with him both Barnabas and a Greek convert named Titus. The purpose of the visit was to hold a private conference with the Jerusalem leaders and to set before them Paul's gospel to the gentiles (Gal.2:1-10). The results of this conference were extremely important for the later history of the Pauline mission and of the Christian church. Jewish Christians, under the influence of R. Shammai, continued to advocate the practice of circumcision for non-Jews although it was never required in the Laws of Noah; Paul indignantly rejected it and refused to have Titus circumcised. The leaders of the Messianic Movement within Judaism (church) agreed with Paul's position, and from them he apparently won the definite allocation of spheres of influence described in his letter. According to Paul the "pillar" apostles laid no additional requirements upon him, he says, and they recognized that by divine favor he had been entrusted with the gospel for the gentiles, just as Peter had been given it for the Jews. This statement by Paul is not true and we will see shortly in Acts 16 that there were several "additional requirements" called "necessary and which seemed good to the Holy Spirit by James" which Paul would not do nor agree to. Paul and Barnabas were henceforth to work with gentiles; James, Cephas, and John with Jews. In ratifying this agreement they shook hands with him and also required that he take up a collection in support of the Jerusalem community, presumably thus sealing the concordat. This collection from the non-Jews was evidently analogous to the tax which Jews paid for the support of the temple in Jerusalem.

PAUL'S RETURN TO ANTIOCH AFTER THE 2ND VISIT...NOT ALL GOES WELL

Following Paul's second meeting with the Jerusalem Church following his 14 years absence difficulties arose immediately after Paul's return to Antioch, for the agreement Paul made with the Jerusalem Church was unworkable in communities consisting of both Jews and gentiles. This needs some explanation for you to grasp the hidden political and religious dynamics behind the scenes which prompted the meeting of the Acts 15 First Church Council.

Prior to the Acts 15 Council, and follow the revelation to Peter in Acts 10 and 11 where he learned non-Jews were "clean" Peter came to Antioch and at first observed the local Christian custom of eating meals, as a Jew, with Gentiles. Since there were evidently many Jews in the congregation, the more conservative among them presumably informed James, at Jerusalem, that the Jewish Messianic Movement within Judaism (Christianity) was being undermined by Paul and his congregation at Antioch.

James sent emissaries to insist that Jews should not eat with Gentiles, and his concern was respected not only by Peter but also by Barnabas and the other Jewish Christians (Gal. 2:11-13). There are many reasons for this repentance on the part of Peter, Barnabas, and other Jews at Antioch when the men from James appeared because as you will see under the teaching of Paul some of the Commandments in the Laws of Moses were being violated at table-fellowship with non-Jews as well as some of the Laws from the Covenant of Noah which pertained to these same non-Jews. In other words, in the effort "to become all things to all men" Paul had compromised many Commandments and the men from James would not let these breaches of Law pass nor such disobedience to the Word of God for expediency sake.

Answer for yourself: Why would James, the Lord's brother and head of the Jerusalem Church, command Jewish believers not to continue to eat with non-Jewish believers?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that non-Jewish believers were sinning when they were eating and sharing table fellowship with the Jews, and in doing so tempting the Jews to follow in their sinful ways? Yes!

Answer for yourself: It is possible that at table fellowship in Antioch, between Jewish believers and non-Jewish believers, that important parts of the Laws of Noah from the Covenant of Noah, which were binding upon all non-Jewish believers, were being violated by Paul and the practice of his churches?

Answer for yourself: Had Paul justified the "breaking" and "bending" of these Noahide Covenant requirements and Laws in the hopes of "becoming all things to all men that he might win some"? He sure did. And the Christian Church today, under this same Covenant of Noah, sadly follows in the same footsteps and is not aware. This is the reason what the men from James continually dogged him in the New Testament everywhere he went. Paul's persecutions and "beatings" recorded in the New Testament are not from some stray Jews, they were not from "thugs"; rather it was from "brothers" from the Jerusalem Church who had been given a mandate by Yeshua before his ascension to teach all nations (Gentiles) to observe certain things (many of these things Paul would treat as if they did not exist or apply). These persecutions were simply the result of Paul violating the teachings of Yeshua and the Torah. But without a deep understanding of what comes next in these articles it is so easy to read Paul's accounts and feel sorry for him when we should be enraged against him. Paul defends himself by calling these righteous men who held up such standards of righteousness "Judaizers". Growing up in the church this term always had a "bad" connotation when in truth it is these "Judaizers" who were closest to Yeshua and were not compromising the Commandments of God like Paul and others. You can see how Paul literally blasphemes those keeping the Torah and relegates them all with the negative term "judaizers."

Along with this question we must factor in what we have already learned from the previous articles. Let me summarize:

- Paul was desperately attempting to justify himself after being spurned by the Chief Priest over his daughter. This material can be sent upon request as it fills in many gaps in the understanding of the motives of Paul.
- Remember again this is primarily due to Paul being a Gentile who converted to Judaism and such a one was "not good enough" for the Chief Priest's daughter, even after conversion.
- Coupled with this, after Paul's defection from the Sadducees and profession of Pharisee beliefs, was the tension created by needing the acceptance and authority of the Jerusalem Church in order to give credibility to his Gentile mission. Paul's prior persecution of the Messianic Movement while being part of the Temple police force as a Sadducee did not help in the matter as well.

At this point Paul could see that his own mission to the Gentiles was being endangered. Paul was literally trying to build a name for himself and promote his authority which had been rejected by both the Sadducees and the Pharisees. He had successfully claimed during his trip following his 14 year absence that circumcision was not to be required of Gentiles (never required in the Covenant of Noah), but if the Jewish dietary laws were to be observed, as thought by Paul, even by Jews in a mixed community, then both "freedom in Christ Jesus" (Gal.2:4) and the unity of the churches would be destroyed in Paul's estimation. Paul's ideas conflict with the Torah. The Jews were commanded to observe such Commandments forever (like kosher). There was no getting around this issue for a Jew and any table fellowship with non-Jews (take Antioch for example) would involve such issues. When the men from James came to the Antioch congregation they saw that at table fellowship between Jews and non-Jews that several breaches of the Covenant of Moses and the Laws of Noah were not being observed. Understand that such Laws of Noah are reiterated at Sinai and find their identity in the Laws of Moses as well.

A ONE-SIDED DEFENSE OF AN INDEFENSIBLE POSITION

Paul was caught red-handed if I might say so. He had two options:

- Repent and confess and return to the dictates of the Laws of Noah for his followers...or

- Write a defense of his position and propagate it to other non-Jews who would know no better since lacking background in the Laws and Covenant of Noah.

It is not hard to see what occurred. Now read Galatians and Romans and you will begin to see through the charade. Paul therefore denounced Peter's action of repentance from violating kosher food laws when accused by the men from James and it is recorded for us completely different in that he asked him, "If you as a Jew live in gentile, not Jewish, fashion how can you compel the Gentiles to practice Judaism?" Unfortunately he does not report Peter's answer. But Peter's and Barnabas' actions give us their answer. After being reminded of their Covenant obligations and how they had broken and compromised them both Peter and Barnabas, according to Paul, they both left Paul's fellowship and the church moved next door! The New Testament only records the biased view from Paul's perspective but as I have showed you he was wrong and the men from James was right. Even Peter and Barnabas were taken away by such liberal compromise in the efforts to "win some". The Christian Church is guilty of the same today!

If the standards are lowered then it would be much easier to gain followers; thus bolstering Paul's reputation and authority. But the men from James, as well as James, knew better. This is why the men from Jerusalem was sent to "spy out" the situation at Antioch. At this time, regardless of what Paul would have you think according to his writings, the Jerusalem Church remained highly skeptical of Paul after 14 years. That is why the Jerusalem Church continually "dogged" Paul in every city where he went and reported his every action to the authorities in the Jerusalem Church. That is why Paul would be summoned twice to return to the Mother Church over problems for which he was the instigator. We see that in Acts 15 and Acts 21 where Paul had to report to James. Again we have only a one-sided account in the New Testament whereby he went up by "revelation" but dear one read between the lines once you have the facts.

THE ANTIOCH INCIDENT CAUSED THE NEED FOR THE JERUSALEM COUNCIL OF ACTS 15

The church was in disunity. As you can see one of the principal occasions of disunity within the early Messianic Movement was provided by the conversion and mission of the apostle Paul. An authoritative decision on such matters was necessary if unity was ever to be restored to the Messianic Movement. Such an authoritative decision is reflected in the account of a council at Jerusalem provided in the book of Acts (15:1-35). In many respects the account runs parallel to Paul's narrative in Galatians, but the two stories are basically different. According to Acts, the apostles and presbyters of the Jerusalem church held a public discussion on the question of circumcision. Peter made an address in which he pointed to his own work among Gentiles and insisted that circumcision was unnecessary. Paul and Barnabas described their work. Finally James proposed that, in view of Mosaic precedents [which again you remember many are but reiterations of the Noahide Laws], Gentile converts should be given four requirements based on Leviticus 17-18. The apostles and elders agreed with James and composed a decree containing his four points. Again the practice of circumcision was "dropped" since it never was required by God in the Covenant of Noah and only enforced upon non-Jews by the School of Shammai as they hated non-Jews and used circumcision as a means to keep non-Jews from coming into religious fellowship with them as they held all non-Jews not worthy of the World to Come.

EXAMINATION OF THESE FOUR POINTS....CALLED BY JAMES "NECESSARY" AS WELL AS WHAT "SEEMED GOOD TO THE HOLY GHOST"

First of all let us look at the text:

Acts 15:28-29

28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things;

29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

This is James' decree at the Acts 15 Council which was prompted by the events at the Antioch incident earlier. Take note that the Messianic Community believed it "seemed good to the Holy Ghost" that these things be laid upon the non-Jewish believers. If the non-Jew would take upon himself these obligations and requirements which were ALREADY within the Covenant and Laws of Noah then table fellowship between the Jews and non-Jewish believers would not be a problem as it had been previously.

This "apostolic decree" is very important as the first pronouncement made by a Christian synod. Let us never forget that these decrees were over twenty years after the death and resurrection of Yeshua. This was what the Church of Yeshua considered "necessary" to impose upon non-Jewish believers in God.

In closing let us not forget that it would be the Apostle Paul who had failed to teach these dogmas and doctrines to his non-Jewish followers and would continue to not teach them after the Acts 15 Council. It is these very issues that would separate Paul from the Jerusalem Church finally in the latter years of his life. Because of Paul's refusal to accept the First Church's Council and their decision Gentile Christianity today stands outside of those things considered "necessary" and "good to the Holy Spirit".

It is to these issues we not turn as we try to regather truth long overlooked by Gentile Christianity which God commanded of us and still requires of us. Shalom.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #4

As stated previously the "apostolic decree" in Acts 15 referencing the Laws of Noah for non-Jewish believers is a very important since it is the first pronouncement made by a "Christian" synod. We will concern ourselves in the following articles primarily with those concerning table-fellowship between Jew and non-Jew.

This first item, abstinence from meats sacrificed to idols, is based on Leviticus 17:8-19 and was understood, at least by Paul (I Cor. 10:28), to refer to foods known to have been consecrated to pagan Gods but not to meals eaten at Temples.

The second, abstinence from blood, has to do with the dietary regulations of Leviticus 17:10-12, and was so interpreted later (Eusebius, H.E. 5, 1, 26). At one point, however, Tertullian took it in regard to murder (De pudic. 12, 4-5). So did the Rabbis by the way.

The third, abstinence from the meat of animals which had been strangled, without their blood being drained; was an ordinance certainly Jewish in origin (Lev. 17:13-14) and enforced among Jewish Christians (Clem. Hom. 7,8; 8,19; Clem. Rec. 4, 36). This was not discussed by Paul; it is absent from the text of Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Cyprian.

The fourth item, abstinence from "fornication," seems strange in this context, although Paul may refer to it in letters from and to Corinth (1 Thess. 4:3; I Cor. 5:1, 6:13; 7:2). Among Jewish Christians it was referred to rules about marital intercourse and ritual washings (Lev. 18:6-19).

THE TAMPERING WITH THE DOCUMENTS BY THE GENTILE CHURCH BEGINS

By the early second century two versions of James' decree were in circulation. One of them contained the four items listed above; the other omitted any reference to "things strangled" and added the "golden rule" that "whatever they do not wish done to themselves they should not do to others" (cf. Tobit 4:15; Didache 1,2). Witnesses to the third item include both Clement and Origen at Alexandria. The other version was known to Irenaeus and Tertullian, probably also to Theophilus of Antioch (Ad Autol. 2, 34).

What this modification indicates is that the decree was seriously regarded as Christian legislation and for this reason was modified later by those who wished to not accept James' decree! This decision from the Jerusalem Church for the non-Jewish believers in Asia Minor was to be transmitted to Antioch and throughout Syria and Cilicia by two Jerusalem "prophets," Judas Barsabbas and Silas, who were to accompany Barnabas and Paul in order to make sure that it was delivered. Later on, we learn that Judas and Silas delivered the decree at Antioch and then returned to Jerusalem (Acts 15:30-33); and Paul went so far as to circumcise the son of a Jewish mother and a Greek father (15:40-16:4). Indeed, Silas accompanied Paul through Asia Minor to Macedonia and Achaia, disappearing from the picture just before Paul's extended stay at Corinth (18:5).

The precise extent to which Paul may have regarded such a decree as binding upon Gentile converts—for example, outside Syria and Cilicia—is problematical. He and Silas (Sylvanus) wrote a letter from Corinth, insisting that God wills holiness and specifically referring to "abstaining from fornication" (I Thess. 4:3). Paul does not speak of dietary regulations (for obvious reasons as you will see shortly), but he praises "the churches of God in Judaea in Christ Jesus" as persecuted by the Jews just as the Thessalonians are persecuted by Gentiles (I Thess. 1:14). It is likely that he had told them of the apostolic decree, for the substance of it seems to appear in I Corinthians. Sections of practical counsel in that letter begin with discussions of "fornication" (5:I, specifically related to Lev. 18:7) and of "meats sacrificed to idols" (8:1). At the same time, it is evident that Paul cannot accept the legal principle underlying the decree. For Paul Christians are not bound by dietary regulations, though they may observe them for the sake of others (10:23-29).

1 Cor 10:23-29

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not [how can that be Paul when there are 365 negative Commandments?]

24 Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience sake: [what is this? Might this constitute idolatry for Paul and those who follow his advice?]

26 For the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof.

27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to go; whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience sake. [what is this? Might this constitute idolatry for Paul and those who follow his advice?]

28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, eat not for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake: for the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof: [is Paul more concerned that others might see him break the commandments of God than God seeing him?]

29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience? (KJV) [since when are you more concerned what men think of you than what God thinks of you Paul....after all did you not say you were not a man-pleaser but a God pleaser?]

SO WHAT'S THE PROBLEM?

Growing up as a Christian you might say as I did "this sounds good to me," however these Pauline suggestions violate Commandments given in the Old Testament in the Laws of Moses and the Covenant of Noah. We will see this in detail as we go on but understand Pauline theology that violates and contradicts the written Commandments of God is sin even if they sound good and are taught by the Christian Church today. Paul's "Christ" never gave him authority to do away with the Commandments of God and you need to face that fact now!

If Silas continued to adhere to the Jerusalem regulations, which were no more than the reiteration of the already existing Covenant responsibilities God had given the non-Jew in the Covenant of Noah, it is no wonder that he left Paul at Corinth. According to Acts 21:25, the elders at Jerusalem were still concerned with observance of them when Paul last visited the church there; they had heard that Paul taught—"becoming everything to everyone," as he wrote himself (I Cor. 9:22):

1 Cor 9:22 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. (KJV)

The Jerusalem church had even heard that Paul was even teaching and urging Jewish Christians not to observe the law (Acts 21:21):

Acts 21:21 21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs. (KJV)

The word "customs" is interesting:

1485 ethos- 1) custom 2) usage prescribed by law, institute, prescription, rite

The Jerusalem had heard that Paul was teaching "all" the Jews in his mission to not abide by "the law" which for us means the Commandments of God!

Yet we find under the authority of James and the Jerusalem church, according to Acts 21:26, that Paul submitted to James' mandate and submitted to the Nazirite vow of consecration (Num. 6:9-20.....oh, by the way, this included blood sacrifices and sin offerings.....and Paul did this over 25 years after Jesus' death which we are told is the last sin offering...THINK?). At Jerusalem, one would suppose, Paul accepted the practices of the church there. He was under Jerusalem jurisdiction.

It must be admitted that to try to coordinate Paul's account in Galatians with the "literary" narrative in Acts leads to many difficulties. It is most unlikely that in the long run Paul DID NOT regard the Jerusalem decree as binding upon his converts or himself.

THE ANTIOCH DINNER

If the decree was known at Antioch, problems arose there as soon as Cephas (Peter) visited the city. Swayed by emissaries from James of Jerusalem, Peter withdrew from table fellowship with gentiles and was followed by other Jews, including even Barnabas. Paul insisted that his action was; inconsistent and irresponsible (Gal. 2:11-14).

To be sure, the question of infringement as to authority arose in many of the provinces where Paul had previously maintained control over them not only by personal visits but also by writing letters and by sending his lieutenants especially Timothy and Titus, to them. At Corinth, he speaks of others as proclaiming "another gospel" (2 Cor. 11:4), using the same language as that employed in the Galatian controversy (Gal. 1:6-9). Ironically those whom Paul accuses of preaching another Gospel are the Apostles and the Jerusalem church and the Christian Church has missed this, maybe on purpose, for two thousand years!

This is the irony that I wish to expose to you. But not following through by upholding James' decree along with the mandate of the Jerusalem Church Paul caused those he taught along with his churches to be in violation of many of the dogmas contained in the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah.

Being so far removed today we find Gentile Christianity no better off in this regard and a strong rebuke and call to repentance is needed. It is to these issues we now turn.

It is our prayerful hope that you, upon examining these articles, will make the necessary corrections in your religious belief system and conduct before God. Shalom.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #5

The incident at Antioch, briefly described by Paul in Galatians 2, has long been a source of some perplexity to students of the New Testament. This has become possibly more evident to you since reading the first four articles in this series. In the patristic period the embarrassment of an account recorded in the New Testament where Paul openly condemned Peter for hypocrisy was avoided by such devious exegesis as that of Clement of Alexandria who maintained that a different Cephas was in view, or that of Origen who argued that the whole dispute between Peter and Paul was “simulated.”

Answer for yourself: What really went on in this incident at Antioch which is recorded in the New Testament from Paul's view only, and is it trustworthy? How can we be sure Paul's view as presented in the New Testament is correct?

Answer for yourself: Are there any other sources to illuminate this incident outside the New Testament, and do they confirm Paul's viewpoint or do they bring it into question?

Answer for yourself: What if you were to find that Paul's “viewpoint” is a gross distortion of the facts of the matter and in reality both Peter and Paul were BOTH rebuked by the men from James as the ambassadors of Yeshua's church?

Answer for yourself: Why would James, the Lord's brother and head of the Jerusalem Church, command Jewish believers not to continue to eat with non-Jewish believers?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that non-Jewish believers were sinning when they were eating and sharing table fellowship with the Jews, and in doing so tempting the Jews to follow in their sinful ways?

Answer for yourself: It is possible that at table fellowship in Antioch, between Jewish believers and non-Jewish believers, that important parts of the Laws of Noah from the Covenant of Noah, which were binding upon all non-Jewish believers, were being violated by Paul and his churches?

Answer for yourself: What if you were to find that it was Peter and Barnabas, Paul's close traveling companions, who were the ones to repent after the rebuke from the Jerusalem Church and that it was Paul who defiantly resisted the mother church's instruction?

WHAT IS TRUTH?

Dear reader I will prove to you as we conclude this series of articles on the incident at Antioch that Paul's defiance to conform to the Church's mandate is masked in the New Testament and is recorded in a distorted one-sided account in Galatians 2. Without these facts that I will show, the casual reader of the New Testament reads this "one-sided" pro-Pauline account and arrives at the wrong conclusion concerning the matter. One will read Paul's self-defense in his epistle and be led to believe Paul is right and that Peter and Barnabas is wrong. You must remember that this event at Antioch occurred after the cross of Christ and the decision brought from the Jerusalem Church is the dogma and doctrine that was to enforced on both Jew and non-Jew long after Yeshua's resurrection. That brings a lot of weigh to what the Jerusalem Church taught and SHOULD matter to Christians as the followers of this "Christ" today.

We need to LISTEN to what the Apostles said in this matter which was in reality both a rebuke to Peter, Barnabas, and Paul as well. We have no letters from Peter and Barnabas on this issue that has survived and only have Paul's account which is definitely one-sided. Let us examine other materials which have survived which paint an entirely different picture of the matter and exposes the truth which is a direct contradiction of Paul's account. Millions of Christians read the account of Paul's slander of the "Judaizers" and "false brethren" of which Paul speaks; never knowing that Paul is referring to the "pillars" from the Jerusalem Church in Galatians chapter 2 and are led to believe that Paul is right, never knowing that those he attacks and slanders are the Jerusalem Apostles who knew Yeshua best and walked with him for 40 days following his resurrection. Sadly the other side of the coin is not presented in the New Testament but believe me it does exist. So in the light of the fact that the Roman Church, wishing to promote Gentile religion over Biblical and Jewish faith, did not include both accounts of the incident at Antioch when they put the New Testament together. So what else is new? I will, and it is my hope that our readership will understand that this issue at Antioch goes to the very heart of the Olive Tree of Israel and how the non-Jew is to relate to the people of God.

LOOKING AT GALATIANS UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

Gal 2:1-16

1 Then fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up by revelation, and communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means I should run, or had run, in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of these who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: God accepteth no man's person:) for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.

11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,

16 Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

First of all you need to know that when the men from James came to Antioch they rebuked not only Paul, but Peter and Barnabas as well for violating their Covenant and its Covenant Laws! Not only that, but the non-Jews as well as they had been led to compromise their Covenant responsibilities under God according to the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah! Paul is right in saying that before the men from James arrived Peter did eat with the Gentiles and it was this compromise at Jew-Gentile table fellowship which violated Covenant Laws. It will become more apparent as we proceed which Laws were violated and are yet violated today.

What I want you to notice in the beginning is Paul' testimony that Peter repented (along with Barnabas) and withdrew and separated himself from eating with the Gentiles which had been taught wrong by Paul. They left Paul's fellowship and moved the church next door!

This occurred after the Cross of Christ and is a major statement on how the Church of Yeshua understood how they, the people of God, were to relate and accept the non-Jew into fellowship within Yeshua's church.

Answer for yourself: What has changed since then?

Answer for yourself: Should we not listen to what the ambassadors from Yeshua's Church have to say about how we, non-Jewish believers in God through the ministry of Yeshua, are to be "accepted" in the church of Yeshua?

Answer for yourself: If when listening to the message of the "men from James" we find that we as non-Jewish believers in God, have not "separated" ourselves from the very same activities that we encounter in the Antioch incident, are we then truly "accepted" by God although we feel accepted by our "denominational churches"?

Answer for yourself: Do our denominational churches today have greater authority than the "men from James", and if you believe they do, then where do you find that they get it?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible we have lost the true message of Yeshua and his followers after 1700 years of Gentile control of the Church of Yeshua?

Answer for yourself: How much has this "one-sided" account of Paul, among many others, as presented in the New Testament, prevented you from learning the truth about how Yeshua's Church would have accepted or rejected you into the people of God twenty years after Yeshua's death?

Answer for yourself: How does it feel to realize that you might be in good standing with your Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist, or your Catholic Church, but in Heaven not accepted by God in His assembly (Yeshua's Church) because you are yet guilty of the same conduct as were the Galatian non-Jews and you don't know it? Serious questions I must say!

IS ANY OF THIS MAKING SENSE TO YOU YET?

Answer for yourself: Can we assume that Peter accepted Paul's rebuke and amended his conduct? Or is the truth closer that Peter and Barnabas accepted the men from James' rebuke and altered their conduct and that Paul's defiance is cloaked in a supposed "rebuke" of Peter and Paul's later self-defenses in the Book of Galatians and Romans? Sadly millions trust this New Testament document for Divine truth when it can be shown to be "fixed" in hundreds of places. We have lost so much due to anti-Semitism and the Roman Church and "their documents: <http://geocities.com/faithofyeshua>.

Answer for yourself: What was the actual conduct that was "exposed" that caused Peter and Barnabas and the Gentile followers of Paul to repent and leave Paul's fellowship in Galatia?

Answer for yourself: What was the dynamics that would later cause Paul to say in 2 Tim 1:15: "thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia (a whole continent) be turned away from me (Paul)"? READ THAT AGAIN!

Answer for yourself: If Peter did not heed Paul but the men from James, what does that tell us about the development of Paul's missionary work, about his subsequent relations with Jerusalem and Peter, about factions within first-century Christianity (Peter and Paul parties, etc.)?

Answer for yourself: Did you ever stop to think that it was the Jerusalem Church and the Apostles which were responsible for Paul's troubles to which he refers constantly? Any wonder why "the Jews" are painted in such a negative light as if they did not know any better?

Dear one these issues were first raised in their present sharp form by the work of F. C. Baur, Paul: His Life and Works (1845); ET 2 vols: London/Edinburgh: Williams and Norgate, 1873). I learned of this in Seminary as we spent 2 minutes on it. I, being inquisitive, later investigated this on my own. It seemed important to me and hopefully you understand the immense repercussions that such knowledge can make if one has it. This is not new material only materials that you have NOT yet been exposed to as of yet. The New Testament presents one perspective; I assure you that opposing this "one view" is the testimony of Moses, the Prophets, and even Jesus that assures us that the Law and Covenants of God have not passed away in spite of what other "self-appointed" authorities of God might say. For centuries men have seen behind the deception of Galatians 2 and Paul's rebuke of Peter and it is time you do as well.

WHAT WAS THE NATURE OF THE TABLE-FELLOWSHIP THAT CAUSED THE PAULINE AND PETER SPLIT?

Answer for yourself: Again, where does the Antioch incident fit within the history of that period?

Answer for yourself: Can we assume that it formed the impetus to the Jerusalem council recounted by Luke in Acts 15?

Answer for yourself: Or is the issue more complex, with the historicity of Acts being called in question in part at least by Paul's account?

For all that the significance of the Antioch incident has been recognized in many such discussions, there has been remarkably little detailed work done on the incident itself. The question of whether or not Galatians 2.1-10 is an accurate portrayal of Acts 15 has been overlooked by many. And when commentators or historians have moved on to the Antioch incident they have not paused long over what must on any reckoning be a crucial question: What was the nature of the table-fellowship that Peter enjoyed with the Gentile believers?

Answer for yourself: What was involved in this table-fellowship which was so unacceptable to the men from James?

Answer for yourself: What precisely did he withdraw from when the men from James arrived?

EXISTING TABLE FELLOWSHIP OF THE JEW AND NON-JEW AT ANTIOCH

The ready assumption by most is that the whole Antioch incident was all simply a matter of the Jewish food laws and little more need be said. But was it quite so simple? Is this not another exegetical assumption which ought to be examined more closely? Without some clearer idea of what table-fellowship at Antioch involved prior to Peter's withdrawal, our grasp of what was at stake is seriously defective, and consequently also our ability to assess the significance of Peter's and Paul's conduct. You need to understand that the issues involved at table fellowship at Antioch involved commandments and conduct described in the Laws of Noah. The Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah is the Covenant whereby the non-Jew finds his standing before God! If the non-Jew converts to Judaism then he "moves up" so to speak, but Covenant relationship with God is determined by how one fulfills his Covenant responsibilities! It was these Commandments given by God to all non-Jews long before the Laws of Moses which Paul had compromised and was teaching others to do the same. Thus the consternation of the Jerusalem church over this incident and Paul.

At that time of the Antioch incident many of these "Commandments" given to the non-Jew as seen expressed in various "conducts" had been relaxed by Paul to his church and even Peter and Barnabas had been "taken in" by such violations of these Commandments in the name of "winning souls". God was not pleased that His Commandments were violated and broken in the name of "ministry" and such goes on today almost everywhere today in the Christian Church which has forsaken Judaism and the non-Jew's relationship to God within it. Instead, the Gentile Church "created another way" and walks in it today; never questioning is if "this new way" is accepted by God. The horror of such actions is masked by documents altered from the "original truths" once held by the Jerusalem Church and the Apostles, let alone Yeshua.

It is toward this area and aspect that I wish to focus in what follows. My belief that such an investigation is necessary is the product of reflection on several overlapping and wider issues, a reflection stimulated by various items of recent scholarship. The overlapping and wider issues inform us of the broader historical context within which we must attempt to assess if we are truly to understand the Antioch incident and will engage our attention in future articles in this series. In the light of our findings there we will attempt some exegesis of Galatians 2.11-18 in the hope of clarifying the incident itself, including the reasons for Peter's conduct and the force of Paul's response. Finally we shall consider possible implications for some of the more familiar questions connected with this passage.

Now let us continue on to deeper matters that will reflect on the non-Jew's relationship or lack of relationship with Yeshua's Church as seen from the eyes of the men from Jerusalem which reflect the mandate of the head Pastor of Yeshua's Church...James the Righteous...Yeshua's brother.

Shalom.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #6

THE HISTORICAL CONTEXT SURROUNDING THE ANTIOCH INCIDENT

The Antioch incident is usually dated in the late 40s of the first century, depending of course on such questions as the date of the Jerusalem council (Acts 15) and the relation between Galatians 2 and Acts 15. Scholars usually date anywhere between 43 C.E. and 51 C.E., but the majority of scholars prefer 48 C.E. or 49 C.E. as the most probable date (R. Jewett, Dating Paul's Life [Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SCM, 1979,1-2]. Since the crisis at Antioch was provoked by the arrival of "certain individuals from James" (Gal. 2.12), that is, from Jerusalem, it is important to clarify the relationship between the church in Jerusalem and the church in Antioch at that time, and to examine possible influences on these churches from the broader social and political situation within Palestine and within Palestinian and Diaspora Judaism. But for our further study you need to understand that most likely the Antioch Incident occurred in the late 40's and it was the impetus for the acts 15 Jerusalem Council which was quickly to follow in 48-49 C.E. It would be at this time and at this council that dogma would be decided that would determine how the non-Jew was to be "included" in the Olive Tree of Israel without complete conversion to Judaism. Dear one, this "Jerusalem decree" is the binding and loosing the Bible teaches about in the Old Testament and legally binding with God and His representatives regardless of what your particular denominational by-laws decree today. This is where most Christians miss it. They can be in good standing with their Pastor and Church today but totally disobedient to the Heavenly decree of James and the Jerusalem Church and not know it because they lack the necessary information about what truly went on with Peter, Paul, and the men from James.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE JERUSALEM CHURCH AND THE CHURCH AT ANTIOCH

One of the major weaknesses in many reconstructions of Christian origins and New Testament theology has been the failure to grasp the full racial and nationalistic dimensions of the early disputes within Christianity. As K. Stendahl pointed out in a famous essay, The Apostle Paul and the Introspective Conscience of the West, Harvard Theological Review 56 (1963) 199-215, Paul's teaching on justification through faith was not intended as an answer to a Luther-like agonizing after personal assurance of salvation. Paul's concern was rather with the relation between Jew and Gentile. His question was not, How can I be saved?, but, How can Gentiles be included within the messianic community of Israel?

You most likely need to read the above statement again.

If you can you need to procure for yourself K. Stendahl's Paul Among Jews And Gentiles And Other Essays

(Philadelphia: Fortress/London: SCM, 1976).

Stendal brings out clearly that this essentially racial or nationalistic concept of righteousness as a consequence of God's election of and covenant with Israel. This concept is further illuminated and received fresh illumination from the major study by E. P. Sanders with his characterization of Palestinian Judaism in terms of 'covenantal nomism' (Paul and Palestinian Judaism: A Comparison Of Patterns Of Religions (London: SCM, 1977). The heart of the book and Sanders' message is so needed to be heard by the Christian Church today.

Sanders teaches that one's place in God's plan is established on the basis of the covenant and that the covenant requires as the proper response of man his obedience to the covenant's commandments, while providing means of atonement for transgression (p. 75). One's intention and effort to be obedient constitutes the conditions of remaining in the covenant (p. 180).

This at first might not sound alarming but when you study our series of articles on the Christian and his covenant, and see how the New Testament has misrepresented the "new" or "renewed" covenant which has not occurred according to the Prophet Jeremiah regardless of what the unknown writer of the book of Hebrews attest, then one should be rather scared at the implications of such facts.

You can read all the Essene materials you want and see they thought themselves representatives of this "New Covenant" since they rejected Judaism in toto and the Temple-Priesthood. Don't look now, but if you are really familiar with their writings they are totally discredited as "falsehoods" since their prophecies failed and this relegates them to an ever growing company of "false teachers" according to the Torah. You need to learn the truth about the Essenes and their "New Covenant," because when they converted in mass to the Jesus movement following Yeshua's death, they brought their "New Covenant" theology with them. They simply were wrong as history attests! Their writings are equally wrong and is little more than apocalyptic star-wars religion. Read some good books on them; take L. Schiffman's Reclaiming the Dead Sea Scrolls to get an accurate picture of how reliable their writings were and if they are to be trusted and believed today.

The Christian today literally stands apart from God without a Covenant in force for he is either ignorant of or rejects the only Covenant God gave to him. Being totally ignorant of the Covenant God made with the non-Jew and its stipulations and responsibilities placed upon the non-Jewish believer, he is unable to recognize and fulfill its obligations. No intention or effort is made at all to remain in a Covenant that you are not aware your in. One needs only to look at the anti-Semitism of the Catholic Church for the last 1800 years and how it influenced the writing and collection of the New Testament to understand how such truths were lost. If you want this series to see the horrible facts for themselves let us know. Now back to the Antioch incident.

The point you need to see and understand is this: that earliest Christianity was not yet seen as something separate and distinct from Judaism. It was a sect, like other sects within first-century Judaism. The first Christians had some distinct and peculiar beliefs about Yeshua; but their religion was the religion of the Jews! This important and forgotten aspect needs to be researched by every Christian alive today. Let me suggest you begin your study by reading L.H. Schiffman, "At the Crossroads: Tannaitic Perspectives on the Jewish-Christian Schism", Jewish and Christian Self-Definition, Vol. II, Aspects of Judaism in the Graeco-Roman Period (ed. E. P. Sanders; London: SCM Press 1981) 115-156.

What the Christian Church must come to understand is that when Gentiles began to embrace these particular beliefs about Yeshua the question raised was still only in terms of what requirements were necessary for Gentiles to join themselves to the people who worshipped the one God. Historically the question was not "have you asked Yeshua into your heart?", "have you accepted the blood of Yeshua for your sin?", or "do you believe in Yeshua?" You might be amazed to find that these questions which seem to fill our pulpits today had no relevancy to the earliest Church of Jerusalem because such theologies had not yet been attached to Yeshua's life and death by his followers. Owing to Paul's teaching on these issues, and his drawing from mystery religions much of this teaching which he only reiterates to the non-Jews already familiar with such "beliefs," such will basically become the message and fruit of the non-Jewish Churches after the destruction of the Temple in 70

C.E. in the vacuum caused by the absence of the Jewish Authorities. The Gentiles would draw upon their prior pagan concepts of salvation and apply them to Yeshua. Since the canonization of the New Testament was entirely a Gentile endeavor it is not surprising that such traditions survive today as written in and among the scattered truths about Yeshua in the New Testament.

Contrary to what you have heard or even read in the forged New Testament, a Roman creationism, Paul's main argument in Galatians is about how one becomes Abraham's offspring, heir of his blessing (Gal. 3—4) and not how a non-Jew is "saved". As I will show you as we go along, circumcision was only one aspect of that debate concerning the Gentile's inclusion into the Israel of God, and it was probably the incident at Antioch which helped sharpen the issues for Paul as well as the Jerusalem Church.

Now something else that is of major importance when viewing the New Testament. This nationalistic dimension (Jew-Gentile relationship and table-fellowship) to the earliest development of Christianity within Judaism also helps us to recognize that the church at Antioch would not have seen itself as an entity independent of the Jews or of the Jewish believers in Palestine. It was simply the believing Jewish community at Antioch embracing more and more God-fearing Gentiles. The fact that the new movement was first given a distinctive name in Antioch (Christians-Acts 11:26) need not imply a distinction between the new movement and the synagogue, but only a distinction within Judaism. The absence of any mention of hostility from synagogue authorities in Antioch against the "Christians" in any of our sources is to be understood as very significant! This means that the first non-Jewish believers in God through the ministry of the followers of Yeshua understood that they were a part of Biblical Judaism and were now included in the Israel of God and not a part of something "new" and "different" as apart from Judaism! This is a major statement with profound consequences to the Christian Churches today. They did not consider themselves a "new" denomination!

Almost certainly the majority at heart would simply think of themselves as part of the Diaspora, with Jerusalem still serving as a source of pride and inspiration and a focus for faith and aspirations - despite the persecution which had forced many of the founding members to flee from the capital city (Acts 11.19-20). Stephen's views as represented in Acts 7 should not be understood as calling for an abandoning of Judaism. On the contrary they can be readily understood as a recall to a more primitive and purified form of Judaism. This would also involve the church at Antioch recognizing the church at Jerusalem as the fountainhead of their distinctive faith (cf. Rom. 15.27) and probably also as the authoritative interpreter of it. This is why when the men from James appeared and rebuked the church which had been taught its own version of Pauline Christianity, the church repented. The Jews removed themselves from table fellowship which included meats sacrificed to idols, meats that had not been tithed of correctly, and although not given to non-Jews, they non-Jewish believers took upon themselves the commandments concerning meats which had not been killed rabbinically according to Commandments concerning how the blood was to be drained from the meat before eating. This was given to Jews and if non-Jews were to share table-fellowship then this would have to be observed by them as well. All these issues are dealt with in the Laws of Noah. The failure of the Church of Antioch to adhere to these Commandments affected not only the non-Jew since they were included in the Laws of Noah but the Jews as well as they again were included in the Laws of Moses. And the Church at Antioch and its failure to observe such "necessary" things which "seemed good to the Holy Ghost" can be traced to Paul's leadership; or should I say lack of leadership! Later we will look at each of these issues in detail.

WHAT DOES THAT MEAN TO ME...A NON-JEWISH BELIEVER TODAY?

This means we today must listen to Jerusalem before we listen to Paul and Antiochian echoes. Sadly the Christian Church of today has it just backwards and this explains the mess we have in the world today which is the direct result of Gentile Christianity's theology of grace without Law. In other words the problems we find today in the Christian World are directly traceable to the Antiochian influence over the Jerusalem influence. It was never meant to be this way but such is the fruit of the anti-Semitism of the Gentile juggernaut called the Christian Church since the 3rd century.

PAUL'S RELATIONSHIP WITH THE JERUSALEM CHURCH BEFORE THE ANTIOCH INCIDENT...PAUL IN THE BEGINNING WAS DEPENDENT UPON JERUSALEM

Most significant here is the degree to which Paul's treatment of his own relations with Jerusalem prior to the Antioch incident reinforces the impression that up until the incident over "table-fellowship" at Antioch Paul too had taken it for granted that Jerusalem had this primacy and authority. I refer to the character of Paul's self-defense in Galatians 1-2. Prior to this event Paul was in the middle so to speak. He wanted his Gentile followers to see his "independence" from the authority of Jerusalem but yet was depended upon Jerusalem's recognition for the validity of his mission and his authority among the Gentiles. The dialectic between being independent of and being acknowledged by Jerusalem and James is the keynote of this important text and must not be forgotten. If this is news to you I suggest you read B. Holmberg's Paul and Power: the Structure of Authority in the Primitive Church as Reflected in the Pauline Epistles.

In Galatians Paul is writing AFTER the incident at Antioch, after his rebuke by the men of James, and after the Jerusalem Council which reaffirmed the Laws of Noah, and his antagonist exposition toward "law" is heavily colored by that later viewpoint. But in trying to assert his independence from Jerusalem, and the directness of his Apostleship and gospel from Christ, he cannot escape the fact that previously he had readily acknowledged the authority of the Jerusalem apostles. We have by Paul's own hand his testimony in Gal. 1:18 that "after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter and abode with him fifteen days." Peter, the apostle who knew Yeshua best, was sought out as well as James, Yeshua's brother by Paul. Later in the same epistle we have Paul's admission again in 2:1: "Then fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also. Andcommunicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means I should run, or had run in vain".

Let me show you how Paul was dependent upon the Jerusalem Church, at least at first before he will later break away from the Apostolic decrees made at the Acts 15 Council. In Gal. 1:16 Paul states that he "conferred" not with flesh and blood in the beginning following his revelation but would do so three years later.

- 1) to lay upon in addition to
- 2) to lay upon oneself in addition
 - a) to undertake besides
 - b) to put oneself upon another by going to him,
 - c) to commit or to betake oneself to another for the purpose of consulting him
 - d) to consult, to take one into counsel
 - e) to add from one's store
- 3) to communicate, to impart

Paul's use of the word "prosanatithemi" (to consult in order to be given an authoritative interpretation) in 1.16 is an implicit acknowledgment that the Jerusalem apostles were recognized by him at that time as the appropriate authorities to consult on the interpretation of the revelation given him at Damascus - the point (as he now insists) being that he had not consulted them (1:16-17). He does not disguise the fact that his first visit to Jerusalem had been 'to get information from Cephas' in Gal. 1:18), though the information was evidently something different from the gospel already received three years earlier through the revelation of Christ (1:12). The purpose of his second visit to Jerusalem was to consult the Jerusalem leadership about "his" gospel, but he does not hide the fact that what they thought or decided about his gospel would make all the difference to the success or failure of his mission to the Gentiles. The point is not that Paul's gospel might be judged invalid, but that its effect among the Gentiles might be nullified. So without a doubt one can see Paul yielding to Peter, James, and the Jerusalem Church in both of his visits. This means that Paul was in subjection to the Jerusalem authorities from Yeshua's Church and this is the way it should be. Sadly all this would change later after the Antioch incident.

The language Paul uses in Gal. 2.2 and 2:6 indicates a certain embarrassment at this admission. He calls the Jerusalem apostles "the men of repute", a phrase familiar in political rhetoric, where it was used both positively and negatively. The parenthesis of verse 6, with its noticeable change of tense - 'what they were (then) is (now) a matter of indifference to me; God shows no partiality' - is all aimed at curtailing the authority of the Jerusalem apostles in the current situation in Galatia and at reducing the significance of his earlier acceptance of that authority (D.M.Hay, "Paul's Indifference to Authority", JBL 88 (1969) 37-8; Betz, Galatians 94-95). Likewise when he says "those of repute added nothing to me" (2.6), there again the language indicates an acknowledgment on his part at that time of Jerusalem's 'right' to instruct or give directives to its daughter churches. So too, it can plausibly be argued that Paul's convoluted statement in verses 7-10 is a further attempt to obscure the degree to which Paul had been willing to accept Jerusalem's authority at that time as clearly expressed in the pillar apostles' recognition of Paul's and Barnabas' missionary success and their approval of a future division of labor (Bruce, Paul, 154, and Betz, Galatians, 96-103). All this points strongly to the conclusion that while Paul defended a position at Jerusalem, the three 'pillar' apostles delivered a verdict.

Moreover, there is a growing agreement on the view that when Paul went up to Jerusalem this second time it was not as an independent missionary or apostle, but as a delegate from the church at Antioch (so Acts 15:2; cf. 14:4, 14 - 'apostles', that is, of the church at Antioch, 13:2-3). The question discussed at the meeting in Jerusalem was not primarily whether Paul (and Barnabas) were apostles, but whether as apostles of Antioch their practice of not circumcising their converts should continue - that is, whether the church of Antioch's practice of according full acceptance to uncircumcised Gentile believers should continue without modification. The victory or rather concession won by the Antioch delegation did not call in question the authority of the Jerusalem apostles to make this concession. The point is that the church at Antioch could not make this decision by themselves, and readily referred it to Jerusalem. And when subsequently the delegation came from James, the majority of believers in Antioch just as readily accepted the authority of this further ruling regarding the practice of table-fellowship at Antioch. Paul would not and this is where the problem comes into play which would cause the quick meeting of the Acts 15 Church Council to settle the matter.

This nationalistic dimension to the Antioch incident becomes still more significant in the light of the second feature of the broader historical context to which we now turn.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #7

WHAT MOTIVATED THE MEN FROM JAMES TO REBUKE PETER, BARNABAS, AND PAUL OVER EATING WITH GENTILES?

During the period which concerns us, many Jews, no doubt a growing proportion within the Jewish territories, must have believed their distinctive religious and national prerogatives were under increasing threat. The long, drawn out crisis provoked by Caligula's insistence that a statue of himself be set up in the Jerusalem temple is well known (AD 40). And later, after the death of Agrippa in AD 44, the situation deteriorated rapidly under a succession of weak Roman procurators. Cuspius Fadus (AD 44-46) demanded that the vestments of the High Priest be returned to the Romans for safe-keeping (Josephus, Antiquities 20.1.1 §6) and had to act against the threatened rebellion led by the self-styled prophet Theudas (Antiquities 20.5.1 §§97-9). Tiberius Julius Alexander (AD 46-48) crucified James and Simon, the sons of Judas the Galilean, presumably because, like their father, they were engaged in fomenting unrest against Roman rule on account of its threat to their faith (Antiquities 20.5.2 §102). Under Cumanus (AD 48-52) things went from bad to worse, with a near riot in Jerusalem resulting in thousands of deaths (20,000 or 30,000 according to Josephus - Jewish War 2.12.1 §§223-7; Antiquities 20.5.3 §§105-12), and a succession of disorders involving zealot bands in Samaria and elsewhere (Jewish War 2.12.2-5 §§228-38; Antiquities 20.5.4-6 §§11-24). Josephus reports that "from that time the whole of Judea was infested with bands of brigands" (Antiquities 20.6.1 §124) - 'brigands' being Josephus' way of describing the Zealots."

INTENSIFIED NATIONALISM AND THE PUSH TO REMAIN SANCTIFIED KEPT THE JEWS APART FROM GENTILES

The followers of Yeshua within Palestine would not have been unaffected by these mounting pressures. The death of Stephen and the subsequent persecution (early or middle 30s) presumably had the effect of ensuring that those followers of the Nazarene who had been exempted from the persecution, or who had returned to Jerusalem thereafter, would take care to show themselves good Jews, loyal to their religious and national heritage. Agrippa's execution of James (brother of John) in or before AD 44 is presumably also to be explained against this background; Luke notes that 'it pleased the Jews' and encouraged Agrippa to move against Peter (Acts 12.1-3).

Furthermore, we should bear in mind that such pressures towards conformity with the mainstream of nationalistic Judaism were experienced as much within the infant Christian communities as from without. It is not simply a matter of coincidence that in the preceding episode involving Peter prior to his arrest, Peter had been criticized by the circumcision party for eating with an uncircumcised Gentile (Acts 11:2-3). We need to understand that nowhere in the Torah is the Jew commanded not to eat with the Gentile; however, several Commandments from the Laws of Moses and the Laws of Noah deal with the "requirements" for food and table fellowship. This is the issue here and not just simply eating with non-Jews. The subsequent controversy over the necessity of circumcision clearly indicates that many Jewish believers took it as axiomatic that Gentiles must be circumcised if they were to have a share in the Jewish heritage, and were prepared to exercise considerable advocacy and missionary endeavor to ensure that that heritage was neither diluted nor endangered.

EXAMPLES

In Acts 15:1 we have the statement that "certain men which came down from Judea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses ye cannot be saved".

In Acts 15: 5 we have the statement that "But there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying 'That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses'".

These are just two examples of the Jews trying to preserve and protect their faith from dilution which they expected would happen once the flood gates were open to the acceptance of the non-Jews on such a wide basis. This was an effort to keep their faith sanctified, although wrong in some ways. The Jews, the Messianic Jewish Community within Judaism, could not continue to require and put circumcision upon the non-Jew because God never commanded it in the Laws of Noah. But again we must be smart enough to understand that certain Laws in the Covenant of Noah are not negotiable and are required of all non-Jews who come to saving faith in God. It was some of these Laws which Paul has relaxed in his efforts to win the non-Jews to "his" gospel. So when the men from James came and rebuked the condition of table fellowship as they saw it Paul defends his indefensible position by stating:

Gal 2:4-5

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

Let us not forget that these "false brethren" were the authorities from the Jerusalem Church and they were not there to remove any liberty that the non-Jews had in God through the ministry of Yeshua, but only to make sure that obedience to the Commandments of God was being enforced within that relationship which came to them through the instruction of ministers of the Jesus' movement. Paul is sure right in one thing; he would give then no submission for his stance was etched in stone. You must understand that Paul's "truth" which he wanted to continue with his followers is not the "truth" the Jerusalem Church of Yeshua wanted to continue at all!

Paul would even stoop so low as to call these "pillars" in the Jerusalem "dogs" in Phil. 3:2 where he warns his readers that these ambassadors for Christ were in reality "evil workers" and "dogs". Remember with me that it is these Apostles and disciples of Yeshua in Jerusalem who not only opposed Paul and "his" gospel which in many ways opposed the true gospel of Yeshua and his church, but "dogged" him during his travels to "undo" the errors that he was teaching. It is these same "Jews" that followed Paul and were responsible at time for his "stripes", beatings, and persecutions which Paul mentions in his epistles. Think on that for a minute! These were those who knew Yeshua personally who were diligent to make sure that they could "undo" the problems created by Paul.

Let me say again that imposing such circumcision upon the non-Jew is totally out of step with the Covenant of Noah and the Laws of Noah. Racial hatred of the non-Jew was the reason why such stringent requirements were put upon the non-Jews by the Jews in hopes of keeping them at arm's length.

Here too, we may note the evidence of the Gospel of Matthew, which indicates the conservative direction the law and Israel took in preserving the nation and its faith:

Matt 5:17

17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.

Matt 23:3

3 All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

Matt 10:5-6

5 These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not:

6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

Matt 15:24

24 But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

Wholly consistent with all this, and not at all surprising in view of it, is Luke's account of Paul's last visit to Jerusalem (probably in AD 57), where James describes the church in Jerusalem (and Palestine) as consisting of 'many thousands . . . who are all zealous for the law' and who know of Paul only that he is a renegade and menace to their Jewish faith and inheritance (Acts 21:20-1).

The threat to Jewish prerogatives was, of course, not confined to Palestine, nor were Jewish exertions to defend them. Philo gives a clear account of the riots in Alexandria in AD 38, provoked by deliberate attacks on the religious and civic rights of the considerable Jewish population resident there (Flaccus particularly 41-54; also Embassy to Gaius 132-7). Delegations to the Emperor, the first led by Philo himself, resulted in a reassertion of these rights by Claudius in AD 41. In the same year, according to Dio Cassius, Claudius deprived the Jews resident in Rome of their right of assembly (Dio 60.6.6), and eight years later, according to Suetonius, he expelled the Jews altogether because they were 'constantly rioting at the instigation of Chrestus' (Suetonius, Claudius, 25.4; cf. Acts 18.2). Since all the other Jewish unrest of this period largely centered on Jewish response to what they perceived as threats to their unique racial and religious status, it may well be that the trouble in Rome was caused by similar Jewish reaction to the success of evangelism in the name of Yeshua, like that against Stephen and that against Paul (Acts 6:9-14; 21:27-36; cf. 13:50; 14:2-5, 19; 17:5-7, 13; 18:12-15).

Whatever the precise details of these various incidents the overall picture is clear enough. During the period in which the Antioch incident took place Jews had to be on their guard against what were seen to be repeated threats to their national and religious rights. Whenever such a threat was perceived their reaction was immediate and vigorous. In Palestine itself more and more were resorting to open violence and guerrilla warfare. The infant Christian sect was not exempt from this unrest. Indeed we may generalize a fairly firm conclusion from the above review of evidence: wherever this new Jewish sects belief or practice was perceived to be a threat to Jewish institutions and traditions its members would almost certainly come under pressure from their fellow Jews to remain loyal to their unique Jewish heritage.

The question which such a conclusion leaves us is obvious:

Answer for yourself: To what extent was the Antioch incident the result of such pressures operating upon the infant communities in Palestine and Syria, pressures from Jews loyal to their heritage both without and within the sect itself?

Against this background the hypothesis becomes rather compelling that the open table-fellowship practiced at Antioch was perceived by the Jerusalem church (and perhaps by other Jews) as such a threat. The mission of the men from James would then have been their reaction to that threat. And the danger of diluting or abandoning Israel's heritage with its converse and powerful appeal to national and religious loyalty would have weighed heavily with Peter, Barnabas and the rest.

One thing must not be overlooked here. Just before the Antioch incident Paul had returned from Jerusalem after 14 years having "won" the round concerning "circumcision" and the Messianic Community no longer would make it required for Gentile followers of HaShem. Yet Acts 15:1 links "circumcision" to the salvation of the non-Jew. This must be understood as the zealous reaction of fellow Jews from Jerusalem who were keenly aware of the threat the non-Jew presented to Judaism at present and there was a fraction within even the Messianic Movement which did not agree with James. But this issue between James and Paul had previously been worked out before Paul's return to Antioch. In fact in Acts 15:24 we have James' own admission that neither he nor his men gave any such commandment to fact that the non-Jew had to "be circumcised or keep the Law [understood as the Law of Moses as in full conversion] to be saved". Yet however dear one James never absolved the non-Jews from the Laws pertaining to them within the Covenant and Laws of Noah! It would be Paul who would do that!

Thus already a fair amount of light has been shed on the Antioch incident from the broader background. We may summarize these preliminary observations thus.

- At this stage of its growth, the new movement of Yeshua's followers would almost certainly still think of themselves as a development of and within the religion of the Jews (a form of eschatological, messianic Judaism) - not yet a distinct faith or separate religion.
- Within this Messianic Movement within Judaism, the primacy and authority of the Jerusalem apostles in matters of dispute, specifically over what requirements should be laid on Gentiles who wished to associate with the new movement, would be generally acknowledged, and in fact had already been acknowledged by the church at Antioch and by Paul, the delegate/apostle of the Antioch church.
- The increasing threat to Judaism, especially from the deteriorating political situation in Palestine, and the increasingly polemical response of the Jews themselves, would increase the pressures on those involved in the new movement to show themselves as faithful and loyal Jews. In short, the probability is strong that all the main participants in the Antioch incident would naturally think of themselves as first and foremost Jews (a probability confirmed by Gal. 2.15); as such they would naturally look to Jerusalem for direction when in doubt and not Paul; and as such they would inevitably feel themselves moved by the mounting groundswell of Jewish nationalistic and religious sentiment.

With the broader background thus clarified we can now dig more deeply into that which most concerns us - the table fellowship at Antioch.

Answer for yourself: What was at stake in the Antioch church's practice of table-fellowship?

Answer for yourself: Within the context of Palestinian and Diaspora Judaism in the middle of the first century AD, how would the table-fellowship at Antioch have appeared? - as something unexceptional, as something very unusual, as a breach of Jewish practice and covenantal loyalty which posed a threat, or what?

Answer for yourself: We are accustomed to seeing the issue through the eyes of Paul (Gal. 2.11-18). But how was it seen through the eyes of "the men from James"?

This brings us to the next stage of our analysis.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #8

WHAT WERE THE LIMITS OF TABLE-FELLOWSHIP IN THE JUDAISM OF THE LATE SECOND TEMPLE PERIOD?

The significance of table-fellowship in the east is well known. In Judaism particularly the religious significance of a shared meal was central. 'In Judaism', as Jeremias notes, "table-fellowship means fellowship before God, for the eating of a piece of broken bread by everyone who shares in the meal brings out the fact that they all have a share in the blessing which the master of the house has spoken over the unbroken bread" (J.Jeremias, New Testament Theology. Vol. I. "The Proclamation Of Jesus" (1971; ET London: SCM, 1971) 115. The added significance for the rabbis and their pupils is well characterized in a saying of R. Simeon (c. 100-160 or 170):

If three have eaten at one table and have not spoken over it words of the Law, it is as though they had eaten of the sacrifices of the dead (Ps. 106:28), for it is written, 'For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness without God' (Isa. 28:8 - 'place' taken as a designation for God). But if three have eaten at one table and have spoken over it words of the Law, it is as if they had eaten from the table of God, for it is written, 'And he said unto me, This is the table that is before the Lord' (Ezek. 41:22). (m. Abot 3.3)

No devout Jew could engage in an act of such religious significance casually, and the question of who was and who was not an acceptable table companion must have greatly exercised the minds of such Jews during the period which concerns us, as the Antioch incident itself demonstrates (cf. Acts 11:2-3; 1 Cor: 8-10).

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3 Saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

To put it another way, part of the pressure on a devout Jew in the 40s and 50s of the first century AD would have been the compulsion to observe the limits of acceptable table-fellowship. These limits would be determined partly by two things:

- The explicit laws in the Torah, particularly concerning unclean foods (Lev. 11:1-23; Deut. 14:321), and
- The multiplying halakoth of the oral tradition concerning tithes and ritual purity.

THE ANTIOCH CHURCH AND THEIR OBEDIENCE TO THE LAWS OF NOAH AND THE LAWS OF MOSES

Basically the issue we are facing is if under the teachings of Paul was the Antioch Church, containing both Jewish and non-Jewish believers, observing and keeping the respective Laws of their respective Covenants. You will come to see that both the Jew and the non-Jew were in violation of their respective Covenants and one must look to the teacher who failed to instruct properly; in this case we must confront Paul for what he was actually doing and teaching which was contrary to both the Jew's and non-Jew's respective Covenant stipulations. The New Testament, and especially epistles from Paul's perspective, give a certain "spin" to the story, but research in both Covenants and their respective requirements are very telling in the gathering of truth and exposing Paul's apostasy!

BACKGROUND...THE COVENANT AND LAWS OF NOAH FOR THE NON-JEW

Some basic background information into the Laws of Noah concerning abstaining from eating the limb of a living animal will be very helpful at this point in our study. There is some discussion as to whether or not the prohibition of eating the limb of a living animal was originally given to Adam, the first man. One opinion states that it was included in the original commandment forbidding the eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil (Babylonian Talmud, Sanhedrin 56 b). According to this opinion, Adam, who was clearly given vegetation for food, as it is written, "And God said, Behold I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of the whole earth, and every tree upon which there is fruit of a tree bearing seed, to you these shall be for food" (Gen. 1:29), was not forbidden to eat meat, but was merely forbidden to kill animals for food. If the animal had died of itself, it was permissible as food (Babylonian Talmud, Sanhedrin 56 b). What Noah was given, therefore, was permission to kill animals for food, but he was forbidden by God to eat the flesh of any animal while the animal was still alive (Gen. 9:4, Commentary on Rashi). According to the other opinion, Adam had received six of the Seven Universal Laws and had been forbidden to eat the flesh of an animal in any manner. Only after the Flood was the leniency of permitting animal flesh instituted (Mishneh Torah, Laws of Kings, chapter 9, law 1).

This commandment is explicit, as it is written, "Every moving thing that lives shall be for you for food; just as the green herbs, I have given you everything. But flesh with its living soul, its blood, you shall not eat" (Gen. 9:3-4). This means that an animal's soul is contained in its blood and it is this soul/blood that God was forbidding man to drink animal blood. The life is in the blood and it is this life that God has given as an atonement. One should realize that when "blood" is mentioned it is truly meaning something deeper; it means the soul atones. One's life, his soul, atones in his actions and repentance following his sin. There are studies on this on the net explaining how Christianity has misunderstood this concept and how the Jews have got it right all along! The vitalizing animal soul is contained within the blood, and this is what the commandment refers to, for when an animal dies, this vitalizing soul departs. So long as this vitalizing soul remains within the animal, its flesh is forbidden to man as food (Lev. 17:14, commentary of Rashi; Gen. 9:4, commentary of S. R. Hirsh).

At first glance, this commandment seems peculiarly out of place as one of the Seven Universal Laws. How can eating the limb of an animal take its place side by side with such monumental principles of human morality as those prohibiting idolatry or murder? Besides a few scattered sociological perversions in Africa and China, one is hard put to imagine who would even consider eating an animal's meat while the animal lives.

And yet this is precisely why this commandment may well epitomize the spirit of the Seven Universal Laws. Although mankind is enjoined to obey the Seven Laws of Noah along with their specific commandments as they appear, nevertheless the letter of the law serves only as a minimum, a starting point, which guarantees God's favor and ensures human morality. But, if man wishes to realize his spiritual greatness, he must tap into the infinite potential of the Seven Laws, using them to refine and elevate himself. We see here that eating the limb of a living animal serves as a hint to the potential refinement that man can attain through his eating habits and by practicing kindness to God's creatures. For what man ingests as food is absorbed in his bloodstream and in every cell of his body and thereby becomes part of his essential being. The person who eats snakes and monkeys will surely be different from the one who eats nuts and berries.

The Noahide may eat the flesh of an animal that dies by itself (Encyclopedia Talmudica, vol 3, chp. 21), but there is an opinion stating that only the flesh of an animal killed through slaughtering is permissible" (Asarah Ma'amarot, Chekur Din, sec. 3, chp. 21).

For the Noahide animals, birds, and fish may be killed for food in any way that man deems to be efficient and it should be done as humanely as possible. For the Noahide, the non-Jewish believer, slaughtering of animals or birds does not have to be in a ritual manner as with Jews. But this was a Commandment which had to be enforced and taken up by the non-Jews voluntarily if the Jew was to partake of the food at any table fellowship with non-Jews. Again this was voluntary and is a perfect example of "choosing those things that please God" as instructed of non-Jews in Isaiah 56. The non-Jews might not have been given such a commandment but if they were to share table fellowship with Jews then it was up to them to voluntarily take upon themselves those commandments requiring ritual slaughter if fellowship with their Jewish brethren was to ensure. Let us again be reminded that such table fellowship is the example and rehearsal of the Marriage Supper where both peoples of God; both Jew and non-Jew share in the "supper" of God!

Notice again that the issue of "circumcision" had been dealt with for the most part after Paul's 14 year absence and subsequent trip to Jerusalem, but not all Jews had yet "agreed" to this mandate by James. Yet circumcision remained a problem for many Jews, especially the non-Messianics. In Antioch "tensions" surfaced where the non-Jews were expected to respond in obedience to other commands if they were to maintain fellowship with their Jewish brethren. Notice these "other commands" were not required of these non-Jewish believers, but they "had to" keep them if they were intent on solidifying their fellowship with their Jewish brethren.

This is where we begin to encounter problems in the Antioch incident and why the men from James began to rebuke Paul for the manner of table fellowship which was being practiced in his congregation. The Jews had no options: either be excluded or compromise their Covenant and Commandments and sin! The men from James discerned that the table fare, which had come from the Gentile market-place had not been prepared, ritually slaughtered, drained of all blood, and most likely not tithed of, which was required by the Covenant and Laws of Moses. Even Peter and Barnabas and other Jews in the congregation had been misled by such practices as condoned under the auspices of being "in Christ" and "becoming all things to all men that they might win some". There were certain procedures involved in the killing of the animal which was commanded to be done in as merciful a manner as possible before the animal was considered "kosher" for consumption by the Jew. The practice of such relaxation of such commandments was not acceptable to the men from Jerusalem and nor it should be.

The men from James had not forgotten that one guilty of transgressing this commandment in the Laws of Noah or Laws of Moses, in any of its manifestations, is subject to punishment by the courts whether he eats the limb of a living animal or merely the flesh of a living animal or any internal organ, even the smallest amount, or even eating the smallest amount of an animal that has not been killed by Biblically sanctioned ritual slaughter. A Jew was subject to punishment by the courts for eating the limb or the flesh of either a living domestic or wild animal which had not been ritually slaughtered according to the Torah.

The Antioch congregation under the authority of Paul had somehow not bothered themselves with this commandment since "being in Christ" for them meant they were no longer under the Law according to Paul. But the men from James and the Jerusalem Church had something to say about that. The uproar would be heard all the way back in Jerusalem and the Acts 15 Council would be called and these principals reiterated to Paul and included in letters to all the churches of Asia Minor.

Answer for yourself: What does this have to say about such practices in Gentile Churches today?

Animals, together with their lives, were given into the hands of mankind. The higher spiritual rank of man dictates that he not eat the limb of a living animal. Even though human flesh and animal flesh are related, the one may be incorporated within the other through eating. But the soul of an animal may never be incorporated within the soul of man. The soul (in the blood) of an animal must first be separated from its physical being before the animal body may be absorbed within and become part of the human body (Gen. 9:4, commentary of S. R. Hirsch). This means that certain procedures are necessary to drain the blood, which contains the life and soul of the animal, from the animal before the flesh is fit for consumption. This is applicable to both Jew and non-Jew. Such procedures as commanded in the Laws of Noah and the Jewish Laws were not practiced in pagan markets of that day and time and such meat at table fellowship had no guarantee that such safeguards had been taken to ensure the blood was completely drained from the animal. Besides methods of slaughter as addressed above, now we have the problem of draining the blood completely before consumption. These violations would be grouped under the admonition of James in Acts 15 as "refraining from pollution of idols and blood"! Remember this "seemed good to the Holy Spirit":

Acts 15:28-29 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. (KJV)

Obedience to the law on unclean foods had been one of the make or break issues in the Maccabean rebellion. "Many in Israel stood firm and were resolved in their hearts not to eat unclean food. They chose to die rather than to be defiled by food or to profane the holy covenant; and they did die" (1 Macc. 1.62-3). No one who cherished the memory of the Maccabees would even dream of eating unclean food. The typical Jewish attitude at the time with which we are concerned is probably well caught by Luke's account of Peter's reaction to the vision given him in Joppa: "I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean" (Acts 10.14). This belief was later compromised in Peter and other Jew's lives because of Paul's teaching in Rom 10:4 that "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth" we may not possibly ever know. What we can be sure of is that we have a rather perplexing problem in the testimony of the New Testament concerning the "attitudes of Yeshua and of Paul as to the law.

Answer for yourself: Is Yeshua the Yeshua of Mark 7, who denies that anything outside a man is able to defile him and who thus defines all foods as clean (Mark 7:15, 18-19) or is Yeshua the Yeshua of Matt. 5, who declares the inviolability of jots and titles and the importance of even the least commandments (Matt. 5:18-19; 23:23)? All we can say is that the Pauline corpus of writings existed prior to the writing of the Gospels and to think that the Gospels and their writers were not influenced by Pauline theology would be rather naive.

Jewish devotion on this point was particularly expressed in their abhorrence of pigs and of pork. The height of Antiochus Epiphanes' abomination had been his sacrifice of swine on the altar(s) of the temple (Josephus, Antiquities 13.8.2 §§ 243). Continuing Jewish antipathy to the pig is illustrated by the Mishna's refusal to allow Jews to rear swine anywhere (in Israel) (m. Baba Qamma 7.7). And Jewish rejection of pork was well known and often commented on in Greek and Roman society. For example, Philo reports Caligula as interrupting his hearing of the Alexandrian delegations with the abrupt question, "Why do you refuse to eat pork?" (Embassy to Gaius 361), and Plutarch devotes one of his Quaestiones Convivales to discussion of why Jews abstain from pork (4.5). Clearly abstention from pork was thoroughly characteristic, we may even say universally characteristic, of Jewish conduct both in Palestine and in the Diaspora.

But notice if you will Paul's comment in Gal 2:4:

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

The Greek word for "spy" is Strong's Number #2684 (kataskopeo) which means to inspect, to view closely, in order to spy out and plot against. Understand that when they observed table fellowship something was "visible" that first grabbed their attention as to irregularities. The only thing "visible" was the type of food on the table to begin with and most likely this points to the fact that the diet of that day contained "unclean" and unkosher food". This only led to other deeper problems such as the lack of tithing, the lack of ritual slaughter, etc.

Equally abhorrent to the devout Jew was food tainted by the abomination of idolatry, although the extra-biblical documentation is thinner in this case. In addition to 1 Corinthians 8-10 and Acts 15.20, 29, we may mention Josephus' report of how in 64 C.E. he sought to aid certain priests of his acquaintance who had been taken prisoner in Rome and who "even in affliction had not forgotten the pious practices of religion, and supported themselves on figs and nuts" (Life 3 §§13-14), presumably in part at least to avoid meat left over from pagan sacrifices (4 Macc. 5.2). This will be dealt with in more detail in other articles.

Likewise with meat (of clean animals) from which the blood had not been drained, in accordance with the clear and repeated commandments of Moses (Lev: 3.17; 7:26-7; 17:10-14; Deut: 12.16, 23-4; 15.23; Acts 15:20, 29). What constituted a proper slaughtering of a clean animal for food is well defined in rabbinic Judaism by the time of the Mishna (tractate Hullin; also Keritot 5.1), but we can gain some idea of how far the halakoth had developed by the middle of the first century from Hullin 1.2, which reports the debate between the school of Shammai and the school of Hillel on what precisely was allowed by the (presumably) earlier ruling that slaughter with a handsickle was valid. If you recall the Noahide, let alone the Jew, was commanded not to eat any animal in which the "life/soul" remained in the animal. The higher spiritual rank of man dictates that he not eat the limb of a living animal. Even though human flesh and animal flesh are related, the one may be incorporated within the other through eating. But the soul of an animal may never be incorporated within the soul of man. The soul (in the blood) of an animal must first be separated from its physical being before the animal body may be absorbed within and become part of the human body (v. 27:30-32).

Equally abhorrent to the devout Jew was food that was consumed from which a "tithe" had not been given. To consume food without first tithing from it was considered robbery from God. A tenth part of agricultural produce or livestock which was "holy to the Lord". Animals, together with their lives, were given into the hands of mankind. The Bible specifies various percentages of the crop that the farmer must allocate in accordance with given criteria as a religious offering to particular individuals. The custom of tithing is of ancient origin, as Abraham gave a voluntary tithe to Melchizedek (Gen. 14:18-20; cf.28:22). As part of the commandments "dependent on the Land [of Israel]," these tithing regulations are only applicable to produce grown there (Kid. 1.9). Such laws applied to the first six years of the seven-year cycle during which crops were grown; no tithes were given in the seventh Sabbatical year (shemittah) during which the fields had to remain fallow.

God shares with us in the Commandments of the Tithe that if we fail to set apart a "tithe" for the "poor", the remainder we keep for ourselves is considered by God as if it is "stolen". If we fail to remember the poor then God considers that all we have which we consider as "ours" since we worked for it as if it were "stolen" and it is not released for our use. Thus, we rob God in a big way. The real problem is if the church where we attend is teaching the tithe correctly; don't bet on it until you have studied it out! You will be shocked if you do!

During two years of every seven year cycle (the third and the sixth years), a person was obligated to "set apart" from the fruit of his soil a tithe for the poor, the stranger, the orphan, and the widow; in addition to the Terumah (the heave offering) and Masser (first fruit offering) which he "set apart" for the Kohen (priest) and the Levite respectively. If one failed to formally "set apart" the tithe for the poor the entire basket was prohibited for use by the giver even if the Terumah and the Maaser Rishon (the first tithe which went to the Levite) had already been "set apart". The men from James ascertained that since the table fare had come from the market place in Antioch that the "dinner" had not been tithed of according to Scripture and that in reality those at table were robbing God. Thus again the rebuke of Paul, Peter, Barnabas, and the whole church.

Answer for yourself: Does your church give, as commanded in the Jewish Scriptures of Moses, to give all of the tithe every 3 years to the poor (equivalent to 1/3 of the church's budget every year)? Hardly! Has God said?

"For the poor will never cease from the midst of the land." "Take care" the Torah (the first 5 books of the Old Testament) therefore said to the Jew, "lest you forget the stranger, the orphan, the widow or the poor. When one eats of the bread of the land, he is to know that the land and its fullness belongs to the Lord alone. The food which He prepared for His creatures, He prepared for them all". If food for a poor person was not available in his home, it was considered to be available through "your" home. The food he needs, is his, not yours! And when you give the poor his Masser (heave offering), it is not charity which you give him. Rather are you returning what belongs to him. When you made the return, you did so graciously, as one does who returned an object temporarily entrusted to him for safekeeping.

The Kohen (priest) acquired his portion first. After him came the Levite. The poor, the stranger, the orphan and the widow came next. And you guessed it-the people of the land came last! What those at Antioch were not observing is this practice of tithing first before they consumed their food. If you have already "set apart" the required Terumah and Maaser offerings, you too may eat your "bread" in joy, for God has graciously acknowledged your deeds. Even if you have not yet actually given the offerings already "set apart," to their respective recipients, the remainder of your produce is already permitted to you by God. When you "set apart" your Terumah and Maaser offerings you thereby receive the right to enjoy the remnant of your product. In the act of "setting apart" you acknowledge God's ownership of the land, His being the source of your bounty, and the consequent claim of others to their rightful portion of your bounty. God then grants to you your portion and he says; "What remains...is for you. Let it be yours!" Whoever keep the portion of the poor in his possession, and fails to give it to them, is not withholding charity, but is rather in possession of stolen property (Mal. 3:8). And the people of God are not given to such malicious wrongdoing.

These matters are of paramount importance to our discussion of the incident at Antioch and Paul's breach of the Law for both Jews and non-Jews.

LOOKING FROM THE JEWISH PERSPECTIVE

Obedience to these commands so clearly set out in the Torah was obviously fundamental to devout Jews in our period; it belonged to the distinctiveness of their race and religion and marked them out as Yahweh's chosen people. Such fundamental laws were a limiting factor of considerable consequence for the devout Jew's practice of table-fellowship. These Laws and Commandments are not negotiable for the Jew. They did not, we should note, inhibit his own entertainment of others, where he was responsible for what was served up and for the manner of its preparation. But these Laws and Commandments would largely prevent him from accepting with an easy conscience invitations from others (Gentiles) who might ignore them in whole or in part, hence it is the case of an invitation to someone else's house which Paul discusses in 1 Corinthians 10:27-9.

But whereas Paul was addressing non-Jews who were called to table fellowship with other non-Jews in I Cor. 10:27-29, the Jew is held to a higher standard. The Jew were called to a higher level of holiness than non-Jews and unlike the non-Jews who need not ask about where the "dinner" came from, the Jew has to know. When Paul would go on to say in I Cor. 10:38 "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" we would be wrong to conclude that "everything" was fair game and was able to be consumed in any manner whatsoever because stipulations in preexisting Covenants state otherwise!

It was these laws which were being overlooked at table fellowship in Antioch. The men from James when they arrived "spied" out Paul's liberty as he stated, and found several things wrong. They called for immediate repentance and Peter and Barnabas and the rest of the Jewish part of the congregation removed themselves.

The rest is up to you..shalom.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #9

TITHING AND RITUAL PURITY

One of the most striking features about the Pharisees in Palestine prior to the Jewish revolt was their preoccupation with defining the limits of table-fellowship more scrupulously. J. Neusner has concluded from his meticulously detailed study of rabbinical traditions about the Pharisees that of the 341 individual rulings from our period "no fewer than 229 directly or indirectly pertain to table-fellowship, approximately 67% of the whole" (Neusner, Rabbinic Traditions 3.297, pp. 291-4). Within these the major concerns were quite clearly ritual purity and tithing.

As to ritual purity, the Pharisees quite simply sought to apply the purity laws governing the temple ritual to their everyday lives. Others might quite properly conclude that these laws referred only to the priests when performing their temple service and to themselves only when they went to the temple; outside the temple the laws of ritual purity need not be observed.

But the Pharisees held that even outside the temple, in one's own home, the laws of ritual purity were to be followed in the only circumstances in which they might apply, namely, at the table. Therefore, one must eat secular food (ordinary, everyday meals) in a state of ritual purity as if one were a temple priest.

The detail with which the schools' debates were already concerned, as to the precise circumstances in which foods and food containers would be rendered unclean, indicates clearly the importance of such matters for the Pharisees and their conscientiousness in trying to maintain their purity (cf. Matt. 23.25-6).

Matt 23:25-26 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. 26 Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. (KJV)

It is important to note that Jesus was not condemning the Pharisees for their ritual purity and their efforts in such regards, he was however, rebuking their religiosity at the expense of weightier matters of their faith; namely, the issues of the heart and their neglect of loving-kindness to the poor and downtrodden. The Kingdom of Heaven, of what Jesus spoke, was not just internal and personal, it was something that needed to be manifested in positive actions to those needing help. It was love in action, not just in theory. This is where some, but not all, of the religious Pharisees failed! Notice I said "some" for history shows that many would not be included in Jesus' rebuke for they understood and lived the life which Jesus modeled. But as you know, even today we have our "hypocrites."

Particularly important here was the cleansing of the hands which were always liable to uncleanness through an unintentional touching. A complete tractate of the Mishnah was to be devoted to the purity of hands (Yadayim), and the ramifications must already have been the subject of debate at our time, as our own Gospel traditions also testify (Mark 7.2-5; Matt. 15.2; Luke 11.38).

Mark 7:2-5 2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen, hands, they found fault. 3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders. 4 And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots, brassen vessels, and of tables. 5 Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands? (KJV)

THE IMPORTANCE OF TITHING TO RITUAL PURITY

Tithing was important according to the same logic, since only food which had been properly tithed was ritually acceptable. That is to say, tithing was as much concerned with table-fellowship as ritual washing. Tithing was considered a dietary Law (Neusner, Politics to Piety, 80, 83). Here too it is significant that a whole tractate of the Mishnah was to be devoted to rulings about produce not certainly tithed (Demai), that is to guidance for the devout Jew in his dealings with Jews whose devotion to the law could not be presumed (particularly the am ha-aretz). And again there can be little doubt that scrupulous tithing must have formed an important element in the Pharisaic halakoth of pre-AD 70 Palestine, as our own Gospel traditions again confirm (Matt. 23.23; Luke 18.12).

Matt 23:23 23 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. (KJV) Again we find Jesus not rebuking them for what they were doing in this regard, but failing to continue their actions to the more important aspects of their faith; namely, positive actions toward others. True Biblical faith does not just "believe," it "responds in concrete actions based on that faith."

Jesus' brother even said: But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead [James 2:20 20] (KJV)

We should not confine the influence of such Pharisaic rulings and practice to their own ranks (the haberim). For the well-attested Pharisaic criticisms of Yeshua's table-fellowship as an eating with 'tax collectors and sinners' (Mark 2.16; Matt. 11.19; Luke 7.34; Luke 15.2) and of his eating with unwashed hands (Mark 7.2-5; Matt. 15.2; Luke 11.38) were precisely criticisms of a devout Jew outside the Pharisaic circle for not observing the Pharisaic halakoth - "Why do your disciples not live according to the tradition of the elders . . .?" (Mark 7.5; Matt. 15.2). What is important for our understanding here is if this issue, as detailed in the New Testament, was in reality in effect and imposed upon non-Pharisees and non-Priests in the days of Jesus. There is evidence that such regulations, as imposed upon the general populace, was only later applied to the common people in the time of Rabbi Akiba. That means when reading the New Testament that such events most likely never happened as recorded, and was later inserted into the text to further separate Jesus and his faith in order to give authority for the new religion which would later be created by Rome.

TITHING...OUTSIDE THE LAND OF ISRAEL

Now let us look closer to how this applied to Paul and his Gentile followers. Nor can we assume that such influence was limited to Palestine. It is true that some halakic sources ruled that the law of tithes did not apply "outside the Land" (e.g. m. Halla 2.2; m. Qiddusin 1.9):

- But already in Tobit we read of tithes being scrupulously observed from a home in Nineveh (Tob. 1.6-8).
- Josephus mentions an edict issued by the pro-consul of Asia Minor to the people of Miletus in the days of Caesar permitting the Jews to "perform their native rites and manage their produce in accordance with their customs" (Antiquities, 14.10.21 §245), which presumably indicates that the practice of tithing was well established among the Jews of Asia Minor in the first century BC.

- And Philo tells us that tithing was observed by the Jewish community in Rome (Embassy to Gaius 156) and implies that the Alexandrian Jews did the same (Special Laws 1.153).

Answer for yourself: So what do we learn from the above statement? Namely, that the Laws of the Tithes, although officially not required outside the Land of Israel, was seen to be practiced as the usual "custom".

RITUAL PURITY

As to the purity ritual we may simply note that the practice of Jewish ritual cleansing outside Palestine is presumed by the Epistle of Aristeeas 305-6, and that such purifications are described as characteristic of Jews as a people by the Sibylline Oracles 3.592-3 and Josephus, Against Apion, 2.23, 24 §§198, 203. Philo also testifies to a more general concern in Diaspora Judaism for a punctilious observance of the law (Migration of Abraham, 89-93). Here too we should note Paul's own testimony, that though he came from the Diaspora, nevertheless he "advanced in Judaism beyond many of my own age among my people, so extremely zealous was I for the traditions of my fathers" (Gal. 1.14; cf. Phil. 3.6). It is this Pharisaic striving for a rectitude beyond what was written which is probably in view in the fierce condemnation of Matthew 23.15 - a proselytizing zeal on the part of the Pharisees is elsewhere unattested, but the Pharisees may indeed have been more than willing to "traverse sea and land" to ensure that those who became proselytes properly understood the full extent of their obligations under the law ("when he becomes a proselyte, you make him twice as much a child of hell as yourselves").

We may justifiably infer, then, that wherever Pharisaic influence was strong during the middle decades of the first century of our era, both within Palestine and among strong concentrations of Jews in the Diaspora, there would be pressure on those who thought of themselves as good Jews to observe the halakic clarifications of the laws on tithes and purity - that is to say, pressure on devout Jews (including proselytes) to observe strict limits in their practice of table fellowship.

BUT THERE WERE OTHER OPINIONS..THERE WAS NO UNIFORMITY

On the other hand we should not assume that this pressure would be constant and consistent. The Pharisees were not the only ones with views on these matters. For a start, the Sadducees denied that the laws of purity were applicable outside the temple. At the other end of the spectrum, the Essenes observed rules of ritual purity even stricter than those of the Pharisees (IQS 3.4-5, 8-9; 5.13; 6.16-17, 25; 7.3, 16; IQSa 2.3-9; CD 10.10-13; Josephus, Jewish War 2.8.5, 9-10 §§129, 149-50). And we know that within the ranks of the Pharisees there were many debates between the schools of Shammai and Hillel about particular details, where the concern in effect was to define the precise limits of table-fellowship. We also know that the Pharisees of our period already distinguished several degrees of purity.

Similarly with the Essenes: according to Josephus the novice had to pass through several stages of purification before participating in the common food (Jewish War, 2.8.7 §§137-9), and a senior member could be rendered impure by the touch of a junior member of the community (Jewish War, 2.8.10 §150). Once the concept of differing degrees of purity within the temple ritual was translated into rules governing everyday table-fellowship it inevitably meant that different degrees of association were possible - he who lived at a stricter level of purity could not eat with one who observed a less strict discipline. And I stress that Jewish records date this event in the time of Rabbi Akiba around 100 A.D.; long after the life-time of Jesus!

We may conclude that in the Palestine of our period there was a wide spectrum of teaching and practice on this precise issue - from the am-ha-aretz who knew not the law (cf. John 7.49) to the stricter Pharisees and 'the many' of the Essenes at the other, with varying degrees of scrupulousness and disagreement about particular details in between. Insofar as the new sect of followers of Yeshua was to any extent influenced by Pharisaic views, its members were bound to be caught up in these debates and cross-currents about the acceptable limits of table-fellowship. We need simply note here that it is precisely an issue of this sort, and the disagreements between Christians concerning it, which is reflected in the different emphases drawn by Mark and Matthew from Yeshua's words about true cleanliness (Mark 7.19; Matt. 15. 17, 20).

Mark 7:19 19 Because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats? (KJV)

Of particular interest for us is what all this would have meant for the devout Jew (including the devout Nazarene) in his social intercourse with Gentiles. It is to this subject we continue to investigate as this get us to the core of the problem at Antioch. Having surveyed the various beliefs about Table-fellowship with non-Jews let us now turn our attention to the Paul-Peter problem at Antioch.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #10

We have spent considerable time researching into the background of "table-fellowship" in Judaism in relationship to what is "accepted" and what is "not accepted" in the religion of Israel and the Jews. We must never forget that Yeshua is a Jew and that he had certain views in these areas as well, and such views, when ascertained, should be used to help us "non-Jewish believers" chart our way in such areas as well. Besides the Gospels we can look at normative Biblical Judaism to see what were the current views held by conservative Jews in these areas as well as they would apply to Yeshua in this time period. We must remember that the issue is more than just "table-fellowship" and goes to the very core of how we, non-Jewish believers in the God of Israel, through the ministry of Yeshua, are to be accepted and included in the Israel of God. This is the crux of the matter as these dogmas express the will of God for the non-Jew in these areas. These teachings by the followers of Yeshua, we must remember, are expressed "after the cross" of Yeshua and were intended to be enforced on all non-Jews who came to God through the ministry of Yeshua and his disciples. That means you and me! Just because our denominations teach something different today does not mean they are right and your relationship with God, as He intended, is being upheld in good standing by you. This issue cuts to the very core of the Torah and the Law and how much of it applies to the non-Jewish believer. You must understand if I can prove, as I will, that we are truly grafted into Israel and not the Baptist, Catholic, or the Methodist Church, then the covenant by which we are related to God and its covenant stipulations and commandments, as upheld by us, is the means by which we keep ourselves in good standing in the covenant and maintain a positive relationship with God. Let us never confuse our emotions and our love for God for how God looks at us and how He feels about us. We can only be certain of such areas by adherence to what God said and His representative which gave His will in the matter. It is to these men moved by the Holy Spirit as found in the early Jerusalem Church can be certain that our actions and conduct is pleasing and acceptable to God. This is why I provoke you to think about the historical accuracy of the accounts in the New Testament in order for your to see "if you really are in the faith or not". You must realize if you are "outside" of the Covenant God gave you, or believe you are under another one created by Gentile Christianity which God never gave, then in reality you are without a Covenant before God! Making one up, as Gentile Christianity has done concerning the supposed "New" Covenant is not valid and God knows it. It is those who have failed to study these issues in detail who will lose in the end. Now on with the study.

WE EITHER FOLLOW PAUL OR YESHUA...BUT WE CANNOT FOLLOW BOTH

In our previous studies we have found that there was no unanimous opinion regarding how to relate to the non-Jew in Judaism. We have found in the previous article that no one opinion on ritual purity held sway but that many different ideas were promoted. For our discussion purposes we are concerned as to how the Messianic Community of the First Century understood it and how they ruled accordingly. As followers of Yeshua the Messianic congregation of Jerusalem should have a major influence on our beliefs and conduct today as non-Jewish followers of Yeshua. We either walk in the footsteps of the early Messianic Jewish Jerusalem Church or we do not. We either follow Paul and his ideas or Yeshua's and his followers. Dear one they are not the same! The sad fact is that the vast multitude of Christian believers today follow Paul and think they are at the same time following the wishes of Yeshua and the Jerusalem Church. Nothing could be further from the truth as we shall see as we continue our examination of the issues involved at the incident at Antioch.

WHAT DOES ALL WE HAVE LEARNED SO FAR MEAN TO A NAZARENE BELIEVER IN HIS SOCIAL INTERCOURSE WITH GENTILE BELIEVERS IN THE FIRST CENTURY FOLLOWING YESHUA'S DEATH?

As a Gentile Christian you need to understand that the dominant tendency within Judaism in the century or so around the time of Yeshua seems to have been to avoid such intercourse with Gentiles as much as possible. This can be attributed in a large sense to the teachings of R. Shammai and his Rabbinic School. This might be shocking to you as well but there is not one story in the New Testament where Yeshua welcomes non-Jews! In fact his response to them ranges from calling the daughter of a non-Jew a "dog" to instructing his followers to not go to the Gentiles [THINK].

26 But he answered and said (speaking to the Gentile woman), It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs.

Matt 10:5-6

5 These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not:

6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

To think that Yeshua's primary intent was to "save" the Gentile is a severe misjudgment of his time and his religion. To the lost sheep of the House of Israel he was sent and they were being assimilated and had been, in the days of Yeshua, become part of the Gentile peoples of the world for over 800 years. Yeshua knew it was these people, formerly Jews who had a Covenant with HaShem, who were now being "lost" to their heritage and their faith and their privileges as well as their responsibilities before God. But a "pure" Gentile mission was not on his mind I assure you. He knew what the Gentile Church does not today; namely that the Gentiles were unclean. Yeshua knew that only by the non-Jew's submission to the God of Israel whereby the non-Jews took up the Covenant given to them by HaShem whereby they submitted to the commandments of God would they then find acceptance within the particular Covenant given them by God. Only by this would the non-Jew maintain their acceptance in the grace of God within the Covenant God had given them. But yet it was to these "lost" brethren from the Northern scattered tribes Yeshua was sent and not the "Eskimos" (if you get what I mean). Today it is hard to look backward and realize such since the Gentile Church is such a force in the world but that was not Yeshua's purpose.....to create a Gentile Church which would almost persecute his Jewish family to death over the centuries and completely do away with the Law which was the only means of maintaining good standing in the Covenant with God. Let us return to "table-fellowship" and acceptance of the non-Jews.

JEWISH RELATIONSHIP WITH GENTILES

The stories of Daniel, of Tobit and of Judith were all held forth as examples of the faithfulness and success of Jews who refused to eat "the food of Gentiles" (Dan. 1.8-16; Tob. 1.10-13; Jdt. 10.5; 12.1-20; see also 3 Macc. 3.4; Joseph and Asenath 7.1). The fear of idolatry and of impurity was a considerable limiting factor, since by definition a Gentile was an idolater and certainly ritual impurity had to be assumed rather than the reverse (Alton, Jews, 170-4; Schurer, History, 2.81-4).. This played heavy in the minds of the men from James as they came upon such a compromising situation in Antioch. Thus the Mishnaic tractate on idolatry is mainly concerned with defining the permissible relationships with Gentiles (Aboda Zara). And in several rabbinic sayings the uncleanness of the Gentile is well-known: Gentiles are simply "unclean persons" (Makhot. 2.3); 'the dwelling-places of Gentiles are unclean' (Oholot 18.7); A Gentile is in every respect like to a man who suffers a flux' (Eliyahu Rabba 10). Such sayings cannot be dismissed as the later utterances of rabbinic Judaism subsequent to our period. The prohibition on Gentiles entering the temple sanctuary was already well established by our time (cf., e.g., Antiquities, 12.3.4 §§1450), and must have been based on the belief that Gentiles were unclean. Already in Jubilees the same attitude is clearly expressed and the line firmly drawn:

Separate yourself from the nations, And eat not with them,..... For their works are unclean, And all their ways are a pollution and an abomination and an uncleanness ... (22.16)

According to the Epistle of Aristaeas, Moses fenced us (Jews) round with impregnable ramparts and walls of iron, that we might not mingle at all with any of the other nations, but remain pure in body and soul . . . he hedged us round on all sides by rules of purity, affecting alike what we eat, or drink, or touch, or hear, or see. (139, 142; cf. 106)

And Tacitus scornfully describes the Jewish hatred for the rest of the world: "they eat separately, they sleep separately .." (Histories, 5.5).

Dear ones this is the same attitude held by Yeshua!

If such views were consistently and rigorously applied, no devout Jew could even have considered participating in table-fellowship with a Gentile. But that is by no means the whole story.

BUT CERTAIN GENTILES WERE ACCEPTED INTO TABLE-FELLOWSHIP DESPITE THE ABOVE SAFEGARDS AND EXCLUSIONS

You must keep in mind the whole purpose of these articles is to again to show how certain non-Jews were "accepted" into table-fellowship with the Jews and were included in the "Israel of God". This means those "non-Jews" who were "unacceptable" somehow were "made acceptable". This is what confronts our study as Gentile believers in the God of Israel.

Answer for yourself: As a traditional Christian, how certain are you in light of facts presented that you have made yourself "acceptable" to Yeshua in these areas?

What we must look for is which of the above responsibilities mentioned by the Rabbis were also expected of the non-Jewish believers by the Messianic Church and James in order for them to be included in the Israel of God.

Make so mistake about it some items mentioned above were to be later rescinded by the Jerusalem Church (circumcision) and James BUT NOT ALL and many were yet required of non-Jewish believers to be incorporated into the Israel of God (the Laws of Noah). James would call many of these "necessary" and "good to the Holy Ghost" and they apply today whether you are aware of them or not! This is the deceptions which must be removed in order for the non-Jewish believer to make his calling and election certain.

CLASSIFICATIONS OF NON-JEWISH BELIEVERS

For there were two types of Gentiles towards whom even the rabbis could maintain a very positive and welcoming attitude:

- The Proselyte or Full Convert (Gentile converts to Judaism)
- Gentiles who showed themselves sympathetic to the religion of the Jews broken down into two classifications: The Resident Alien & the Godfearer

Answer for yourself: How were these non-Jewish believers in God, through the ministry of Yeshua's apostles, affected by the limits commanded by God and observed by the devout Jew in his table-fellowship?

What you the Christian must understand that there are some things commanded by God of the Jew that are eternal observances and are not negotiable and some of the "obligations" were mandated and put upon the non-Jew before or "acceptance into the Israel of God". Sadly over time some "obligations" were put upon the non-Jew which came not from God but from bigoted Jews who disliked non-Jews and wanted to keep them at arms-length from any type of politico-social intercourse. This is where our study must go if we are to discern the path for unity in the Israel of God. Because God seemed to always use the non-Jewish nations to punish the Jewish people for their transgressions you can understand the Jewish dislike for the non-Jew and their attempts to lay upon the non-Jews stipulations and obligations they knew would be so distasteful to them that few if any would accept them and want to be included in the Israel of God. Besides that Gentiles were generally thought to be "unclean." Now not all Jews felt this way but the trend leaned itself to this and this is exactly what we find happening in Yeshua's day especially under the influence of R. Shammai and his schools of Pharisees. Understand again that through the Messianic ministry of the followers of Yeshua not only the "lost sheep of the House of Israel" would be reached but the "non-Jew" as well, but again make no mistake about it, these "non-Jews" reached by the Jesus movement were obligated to certain commandments and responsibilities to be "accepted" as God's children which the Christian Church today does not teach. Again understand it was not only Yeshua's belief and will that these conditions for acceptance be met but his God and Father as well. It would do the Christian Church well to begin to serious study the first century to ascertain such things as this in order to no longer deceive and mislead their people. Surely at death we will receive a rude awakening when the Christian finds he has lived his whole life in ignorance concerning "THE" Covenant God gave him let alone the Covenant stipulations it requires. One will quickly find upon one's death that he is ill prepared for the judgment!

We must now look at the three classifications of the non-Jew and how each relates to his acceptance into the Israel of God.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #11

CLASSIFICATION OF THE NON-JEW AND HOW EACH RELATES TO HIS ACCEPTANCE INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD

Following the death and resurrection of Yeshua there were no Baptists, Methodists, and Catholics. No Gentile religious establishment had not yet made "dogmas" to replace the faith of the Bible. That would come later. There were not as yet any denominational ecclesiastical authorities to replace the faith of the Jerusalem Church with those of their own making. This would come later and my dear friend you are mired in it and don't know!

For your information discussion in this area usually works with a three-fold distinction - the proselyte, the resident alien and the God-fearer (sometimes misleadingly called the 'half-proselyte') [G.F. Moore, Judaism, 1.326-7, 339]. This Gentile scholar knows the truth and his two set of books are in invaluable resource to anyone's library and such facts as I share with you can be found in them if you will only look. Understand as we proceed that either the Apostles of Yeshua under the influence of the Holy Spirit either went out and "did it wrong" or else they "did it right" and it is we non-Jewish believers who today, in deviating from their instructions in the matter, "does it wrong" without knowing! It is our hope and prayer at Bet Emet once you see the whole of the facts in this issue will repent and "do it right".

THE PROSELYTE, OR FULL CONVERT

In the beginning the Israelite religion had always inculcated a positive attitude towards the non-Jewish stranger (ger) who lived within the borders of Israel (Exod. 20.10; 22.21; 23.9, 12; Deut. 1.16; 5.14; etc.). However, that was to change as shared above and by the first century C.E. these commands concerning the ger had been referred almost completely to the proselyte: already in the LXX (the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures) the regular translation of "ger" in rabbinic Judaism always means a Gentile won over to Judaism. A positive approach to proselytization is likewise indicated by such stories as those of Ruth finding shelter under Yahweh's wings (Ruth 2.12) and Achior in Judith 14.10, by Isaiah 56.1-8 addressed to 'the foreigners who join themselves to the Lord' and Matthew 23.15, by the accounts in Josephus of the forcible conversion of the Idumeans by Hyrcanus and of the Itureans by Aristobulus (Antiquities, 13.9.1 §§257-8; 13.11.3 §§31819), and by various other accounts and references in both Jewish and non-Jewish sources (e.g. Josephus, Life, 23 §§112-13; Antiquities, 18.3.5 §82; Horace, Satires, 1.4.142-3 - 'we, like the Jews, will compel you to make one of our throng'). If you wish to read into these subjects let me suggest K. Lake, The Beginnings of Christianity, Part I: The Acts of the Apostles (Vol. V; London: Macmillan 1933) 82-84 and B.J. Bamberger, Proselytism in the Talmudic Period (1939; New York: Ktav, 1968) 15-16, 267 ff.

As a "proselyte" the Gentile had undertaken to observe the law, including circumcision, and was more or less a full Israelite (see e.g. Exod. 12.49; Philo, Special Laws, 1.51-2; b. Yebamot 47b, Josephus, Antiquities, 20.2.4§39). Despite the stigma of being a proselyte (m. Qiddusin 4.1), and the suspicion harboured by some rabbis that he was always liable to fall back into his old ways (m. Niddah 7.3; b. Baba Mesia 59b), the proselyte (following his mikveh, circumcision, and sacrifice) once his initiation was complete came within the same limits of table-fellowship that applied to the native born Jew (G.F. Moore, Judaism, 1.341). Of particular interest to us, however, is the fact that there seems to have been some debate among the rabbis at our period over the degree of uncleanness attaching to the Gentile proselyte at his conversion and over the length of time it took before his uncleanness could be washed away by ritual purification (m. Pesahim 8.8; m. Edayyot 5.2). Most now agree that proselyte baptism (mikveh or "being born again") had already become an accepted practice by the middle of the first century C.E. Strange as it may seem to the "born again" Christian "born again" is a Jewish concept that related to the "non-Jew" at his mikveh/baptism whereby he became a convert to Judaism and not to a competing religion such as Christianity. Ironically "born-again" Christians are complete opposite to what the term meant in the first century and have no idea whatsoever what the term meant in the discussion between Yeshua and Nicodemus. The term means becoming a proselyte to Judaism and accepting the 613 Laws and the terrible irony of the whole mess is that Christians call themselves "born-again" and reject the very Laws that when obeyed provided security of acceptance into the Covenant. So sad.

THE RESIDENT ALIEN

Although it understood the biblical ger to refer to the proselyte, rabbinic Judaism also recognized a different category of Gentile, the "ger tosab", the resident alien. He too lived within the borders of Israel, but unlike the "full" proselyte who accepted the "whole of the Law" he accepted only some of the commandments of the Torah.

Just how much he had to accept before being recognized as a ger tosab was a subject of dispute among the rabbis. According to R. Meir (c. 150) a sufficient requirement was that the Gentile in question undertook in the presence of three haberim (holy ones) to renounce idolatry (G.F. Moore, Judaism, 1.325). In the first century before theology was worked out by the Gentiles that made Yeshua God this was not a problem for the non-Jew was taught that there is only ONE God. Today this is problematic considering the vast majority of Christians today are Trinitarians and believe Yeshua is God. The belief that Yeshua is God would disqualify them from this category. Others defined a "ger tosab" as a ger who eats of animals not ritually slaughtered, that is, he took upon himself to observe all the precepts mentioned in the Torah apart from the prohibition of (eating the flesh of) animals not ritually slaughtered' (b. Aboda Zara 64b). This will be one of the problems encountered at Antioch for the "meat" came from the market place where it had been sanctified to idols and not killed in a kosher manner thus not being ritually slaughtered. But remember that the Noahide (as the Ger Tosab) did not have to observe this commandments but "needed" to if table fellowship with non-Jews was to be observed. This exemption of the "ger tosab" from the prohibition against animals not ritually slaughtered was determined by Deuteronomy 14.21 - 'You shall not eat of anything that dies of itself; you may give it to the alien (ger) who is within your towns, that he may eat it . . .'- a law which could properly be held to exempt the ger tosab from at least some of the restrictions governing the eating of meat, and which thus provided sanction for slackening one of the limits of acceptable table-fellowship. But the halakah which gained greatest support and decided the matter was that a "ger tosab" was any Gentile who takes upon himself the seven Noachic laws -that is, he holds himself subject to the established courts of justice, and refrains from blasphemy, idolatry, adultery, bloodshed, robbery, and eating flesh cut from living animals (b. Aboda Zara 64b; cf. b. Sanhedrin 56a). I suggest reading Moore, Judaism, 1.339 to learn more about this requirement. It is this Covenant, the Covenant of Noah which was given to the non-Jew to be "acceptable with God".

Understand that this Noachic Covenant was NOT being promoted to the non-Jew in the first century C.E. by R. Shammai and others because it did not require circumcision of the male. It was the act of circumcision that was hoped by the bigoted rabbis to hold the Gentile at arms length and prevent his assimilation into the Israel of God. Acts 15 is pivotal here as the Messianic Jews and Apostles of Yeshua would repent and return to the Laws of Noah for the non-Jew thus increasing the changes of inclusion of non-Jews into the Israel of God. Circumcision would no longer be enforced upon the non-Jews for fellowship or inclusion into the Israel of God. Paul would win this round however other obligations within the Laws of Noah would be kept and this is where Paul would depart from the Jerusalem Church in heart and spirit.

Clearly, then, there was some debate among the rabbis in the period before the consensus view was established regarding the definition of a "ger toshab", a debate in effect as to the terms on which social intercourse with Gentiles living locally might be acceptable. This strongly suggests that there were already during the first century period diverse views among the rabbis regarding the limits of table-fellowship as they applied to the resident alien. Here we should note also that, despite such rabbinic characterizations of Gentile uncleanness as were cited above (m. Makkot 2.3; m. Oholot 18.7), the Mishnah contains at least two rulings which presuppose situations at the meal table where a Gentile (not a ger) was present (m. Berakot 7.1; m. Aboda Zara 5.5), and the Babylonian Talmud contains discussion of the conditions on which Jews might accept invitations to and participate in Gentile banquets (b. Aboda Zara 8a-b). We can only conclude that, in all probability, in the Palestine of our period there was also a diversity among devout Jews in their practice of table-fellowship so far as Gentiles were involved - a diversity similar in extent to or indeed continuous with the spectrum of permissible table-fellowship as determined by the various grades of purity among Jews themselves.

THE GODFEARER

A third group of more acceptable Gentiles were those usually called 'God-fearers' or 'pious Gentiles' - those who showed themselves sympathetic towards Judaism - though whether 'God-fearers' was a technical term for such may be doubted. However they should be designated, there were certainly many Gentiles (we are talking here particularly of the Diaspora) who were attracted to Judaism and who signified their interest by attaching themselves to Jewish practices in differing degrees. How diverse such attachments were is a question more easily posed than answered. We know from Acts that such Gentiles attended the synagogue or Jewish meetings for worship (Acts 13.16, 26, 50; 16.14; 17.4, 17). Cornelius most nearly approaches in a technical sense as described as 'a devout man who feared God, gave alms liberally to the people, and prayed constantly to God' (10.2). We should also recall that pious Gentiles were welcome to worship in the temple (John 12.20; Acts 8.27; also Josephus, Jewish War, 4.4.4 §275), within, of course, well-defined limits (namely, the court of the Gentiles). Let me say something now that few will understand, there was a "pattern" of worship in the Temple which both Jew and non-Jew participated in. It might surprise you that this "pattern of worship" survived well into the 4th century for the non-Jew until obliterated by Constantine and the Roman Church-State.

Answer for yourself: If God intended this pattern of worship be observed by Jew and non-Jew up to the fourth century, could it have been God intended it be followed eternally in spite of Constantine's actions? The answer is yes especially in the light of the existence today of over 2000 different Christian denominations which are filled with hundreds of conflicting doctrines, dogmas, and differing "Jesuses".

The central question for us, however, is the extent to which such God-fearing Gentiles were expected to keep the law (including the oral traditions) concerning tithing and ritual purity. Josephus' claims in Against Apion, confirm the attractiveness of Judaism for many Gentiles: many Greeks 'have agreed to adopt our laws' (2.10 §123); our laws 'have to an ever increasing extent excited the emulation of the world at large' (2.38 §280; cf. 2.28 §§209-10). Philo speaks in similar and similarly vague terms in Life of Moses 2.17-20. But Josephus becomes more helpfully explicit a little further on in Against Apion - "The masses have long since shown a keen desire to adopt our religious observances; and there is not one city, Greek or barbarian, not a single nation, to which our custom of abstaining from work on the sabbath day has not spread, and where the fasts and the lighting of lamps and many of our prohibitions in the matter of food are not observed" (Against Apion, 2.38 §282).

Equally interesting is the succession of notices which demonstrate how attractive the Jewish way of life was for many Gentiles in Rome itself and how alarmed the authorities were in consequence. Plutarch (in a passage which relates to the middle of the first century BC) speaks of a freedman named Caecilius 'who was accused of Jewish practices' (Life of Cicero, 7.6). Seneca mentions autobiographically that in his youth he began to abstain from animal food, but that he abandoned the practice because 'some foreign rites were at that time being inaugurated, and abstinence from certain kinds of animal food was set down as proof of interest in the strange cult' (Letters, 108.22).

He refers most probably to the persecution of Jewish and Egyptian rites under Tiberius in AD 19 (Tacitus, Annals, 2.85).⁷⁷ Perhaps significant here too is the report of Dio Cassius already cited, that in 41 Claudius forbade the Jews in Rome to hold meetings because they had increased so greatly in number (60.6.6). Better known is the persecution by Domitian of 'those who followed the Jewish way of life without formally professing Judaism' (Suetonius, Domitian, 12.2); Dio Cassius, also writing of the late first century AD, speaks of 'many who were drifting into Jewish ways' being condemned for atheism (67.14.1-3). And Juvenal confirms the attractiveness which Judaism obviously exercised for many at this period when he attacks contemporaries who 'revere and practice and revere the Jewish law' and who get themselves circumcised, under the influence of a Sabbath-reverencing, pork-abstaining father (Satires, 14.96-106). As evidence of Judaism's continuing influence at the other end of the second century AD we may simply note Tertullian's report that many Gentiles in his day observed Jewish feasts and ceremonies and Jewish practice in prayers (Ad Nariones, 1.13). It would not be unjust to deduce from all this that many God-fearers attracted by the Jewish law quite naturally would have observed the law in the way native born Jews did - that is, in the way that the developed customs and developing tradition dictated.

Still more interesting for us, not least because the incident described took place within a few years of the Antioch incident, is the well-known story of the conversion of Izates, king of Adiabene, recounted by Josephus (Antiquities, 20.2.4 §§38-48). Izates was initially told that he need not be circumcised - 'he could worship God, even without circumcision, if he had fully decided to emulate the hereditary customs of the Jews' (Antiquities, 20.2.4 §41). Since the sticking point was circumcision, we may take it that Izates was prepared to go the whole way apart from that, and 'zeal for hereditary customs' suggests that his devotion would have embraced much at least of the oral law as well as the written Torah (cf. 20.2.3,4 §§34, 38). This may well be confirmed by the fact that when Eleazar came upon the scene from Galilee, described by Josephus as a Jew 'who had a reputation for being extremely strict concerning the hereditary customs', the only further step he required of Izates was circumcision (Antiquities, 20.2.4 §§43-5).

Most interesting of all, however, is Josephus' description of the Jewish politeuma in Antioch in the period prior to the Jewish revolt: 'they grew in numbers . . . and were constantly attracting to their religious ceremonies multitudes of the Greeks, and these they had in some measure incorporated with themselves' (Jewish War, 7.3.3 §45). Whatever degree of devotion to the Torah, written and unwritten, on the part of the God-fearing Greeks is implied by this statement, it must denote a considerable measure of acceptance by the Antiochene Jews of these Greeks, and so also a considerable measure of social intercourse between circumcised Jew and uncircumcised Gentile.

We may conclude from all this that there was a broad range of attachments to Judaism and Jewish ways wherever Diaspora settlements had made any impact on the surrounding community -from occasional visits to the synagogue, to total commitment apart from circumcision, with such matters as the sabbath and dietary laws being observed in varying degrees in between. There would be a broad range of social intercourse between faithful Jew and God-fearing Gentile, with strict Jews avoiding table-fellowship as far as possible, and those less scrupulous in matters of tithing and purity willingly extending and accepting invitations to meals where such Gentiles would be present.

We can also see that the attitude and practice of openness to the Gentile would not have been static. It would depend upon the influence of particular rabbis and of particular rulings in matters of dispute. This is where the authority of the Jerusalem Church and the followers of Yeshua comes into the mix. We may compare, for example, the famous pericope contrasting the response of Shammai and that of Hillel to the Gentile who asked both to teach him the whole Torah while he stood on one foot (b. Sabbat 31a). It would depend on the mood of the surrounding populace and local authorities at the time -particularly in Rome, Alexandria and Antioch, where the Jews were strong in numbers and undue influence on their part could be construed as a threat to the state. And at the period which concerns us it would depend not least on the Jews' sense of the mounting threat to their religion and nation which we sketched out earlier (§2.2) and which must have expressed itself in an increasingly hostile attitude to the Gentiles. This last is illustrated by the sequence of events described in Acts 21, which depicts Jerusalem Jews in the late 50s giving ready credence to the rumor that Paul had taken a Gentile into the temple (Acts 21.27-36). Another instance is the report of Josephus that at the beginning of the revolt in 66 Eleazar 'persuaded those who officiated in the temple services to accept no gift or sacrifice from a foreigner' (Jewish War 2.17.2 §409). Here too we may mention again the episode of Izates' conversion, which among other things shows that the attitude of the Palestinian Jew was stricter than that of the Diaspora Jew on the question of how far a Gentile had to go to be acceptable (Josephus, Antiquities, 20.2.4 §§38-48), and which thus provides an interesting parallel to the Antioch incident.

Before moving on, it is worth noting once more, if it is not already clear, that the issues in all this would have been issues for the earliest Christians too, particularly as the circle of Yeshua's discipleship began to embrace more and more Gentiles. The extent to which the spectrum of attitude and practice mirrored that within the rest of Judaism is indicated by Paul's advice to the believers in Corinth (including Jews) at one end (1 Cor. 8-10), and at the other by the reaction of the Judean brothers to Peter's eating with a Gentile, even though he was a pious God-fearer and presumably already observed the dietary laws (Acts 11.2-3). At the latter end of the same spectrum we should note also the untypical saying of Yeshua preserved for us not surprisingly only by Matthew - 'if he (the brother at fault) refuses to listen even to the church, let him be to you as a Gentile and a tax-collector' (Matt. 18.17). The question for us, of course, is where the Antioch incident, not to mention Acts 15.20, 29, fits into this spectrum. It is to this question that we can now at last turn.

PAUL'S REBUKE OF PETER ...HAS THE NT MISREPRESENTED THE TRUTH BEHIND THE INCIDENT AT ANTIOCH? #12

THE ISSUE AT ANTIOCH...ONE FINAL LOOK

Against the background sketched out in the preceding articles, the exegetical alternatives in Galatians 2.11-18 become clearer.

The leading questions can be posed thus:

Answer for yourself: What did the table-fellowship at Antioch involve prior to the coming of the men from James?

Answer for yourself: And what would have been required of Gentile believers if the table-fellowship was to be resumed after the initial disruption caused by the withdrawal of Peter and the others?

Answer for yourself: To put it another way, what was it that the men from James objected to or found fault with in the table-fellowship at Antioch?

Answer for yourself: And how could that defect be remedied, if at all?

Answer for yourself: What in your practice of your faith would the Ambassadors of the Jerusalem Church find objectionable or find fault with and what bearing does this hold concerning your acceptance into the Church of Yeshua?

By now you should be able to answer many of these questions.

Understand again that there is a big difference being accepted in the Church of Yeshua as it existed in Jerusalem in the First Century C.E. and a Baptist, Catholic, or Methodist Church today. Think on these things.

ENTER PAUL AND HIS ANTI-JERUSALEM CHURCH THEOLOGY

The exegetical alternatives focus particularly on the key phrases of Paul's challenge, "'If you, a Jew live like a Gentile and not like a Jew, how can you compel the Gentiles to judaize?'" We are Jews by birth and not Gentile sinners ...' (Gal. 2. 14-15).⁸⁵

Answer for yourself: 'To live like a Gentile' must exclude any detailed observance of the law; but need it exclude a more limited observance, such as many Gentiles attracted by Judaism obviously maintained? In the previous article you saw for yourself the attractiveness of Judaism to the non-Jewish world and the non-Jewish believers. Gentile Christianity today surely will discount this.

In particular, since the Noahide Laws were thought by many Jews to apply to all mankind, we cannot exclude the possibility that the antithesis here is the antithesis between what we may call a Noahide life-style and a Sinaitic life-style, the one being characteristic of God-fearing Gentiles, the other of loyal Jews. At least this is the attitude of S. Schechter in his Aspects of Rabbinic Theology (1909; New York: Schocken, 1961) 206-207 as well as men like E.P. Sanders in his Paul, 210-211. Based upon my research I believe these men have hit the nail on the head in laying before their readers the very heart of the matter at hand.

The one instance from our other sources which might shed some light comes from Eusebius, where he describes Symmachus as an Ebionite, that is, as one who strongly maintained 'that the law ought to be kept in a more strictly Jewish fashion' (Ecclesiastical History, 6.17). What "a more strictly Jewish fashion" means is presumably indicated by Eusebius' earlier description of the Ebionites as those who "insisted on the complete observance of the law", and who "were zealous to insist on the literal observance of the law" (Ecclesiastical History, 3.27.2, 3). This simply serves to confirm that "to live in a Jewish fashion" was a relative term and did not imply a pattern of behavior precisely defined or widely agreed among Jews.

Answer for yourself: What was it that Paul accused Peter of requiring from the Gentile believers?

In the LXX of Esther we read that 'many of the Gentiles were circumcised and judaized for fear of the Jews' (8.17 LXX). So also Theodotus: Jacob would not give Dinah to the son of Hamor "until all the inhabitants of Shechem were circumcised and judaized)" (Eusebius, Praep. Evang. 9.22.5). In Josephus we read a similar characterization of one Metilius, the commander of the Roman garrison in Jerusalem, who "saved his life by entreaties and promises to judaize and even to be circumcised" (Jewish War, 2.17.10 §454). In each instance 'judaizing' is obviously not the same as being circumcised: it denotes rather the range of possible degrees of assimilation to Jewish customs (Jewish customs are only expressions of Biblical Commandments observed), with circumcision as the end-point of judaizing; but evidently one could 'judaize' without going the whole way (circumcision). It must therefore describe that range of conduct covered by the term God-fearer (or within Palestine also the term 'resident alien') and signify an embracing of much that characterized the Jewish way of life, enough at any rate for the judaizing individual to be acceptable to devout Jews.

Answer for yourself: You have to ask yourself if you as a Christian embrace enough of the Jewish way of life, as understood as a life-style of Biblical observed commandments, to be acceptable to devout Jews and be included in the Israel of God? If not, after all this evidence presented I would think I would seriously rethink my relationship with God and what Covenant I have along with its Covenant stipulations and requirements.

Still more interesting is the passage a little later in The Jewish War, not least because it describes the situation in Syria in the mid-60s - "The whole of Syria was a scene of frightful disorder; every city was divided into two camps, and the safety of one party lay in their anticipating the other ... For, though believing that they had rid themselves of the Jews, still each city had its Judaizers, who aroused suspicion; and while they shrank from killing offhand this equivocal element in their midst, they feared these neutrals much as pronounced aliens. (Jewish War, 2.18.2 §§462-3)

Here we have confirmation that a considerable number of Gentiles in Syrian cities (including of course Antioch) were attracted sufficiently to Judaism as to have identified or associated them-selves in some marked degree with it. Moreover, these Gentiles are further described as 'those who had become mixed up with the Jews', and which elsewhere in such a context denotes social intercourse including guest friendship, living with, and sexual intercourse. This strongly suggests a degree of affiliation to Judaism which made possible a high level of social intercourse between Jew and Gentile, including not least unrestricted table-fellowship. Moreover, when taken together with Josephus' testimony in Jewish War, 7.3.3 §45, it clearly implies that the Jewish community at Antioch in the 50s and early 60s had attracted large numbers of Gentiles and that many of these Gentiles were sufficiently ready to conform to Jewish practices as to make possible regular social intercourse including at least guest friendship and table-fellowship. But understand those which did not share such sentiments were problematic for the men from James and would literally cause the forthcoming Acts 15 Council to settle the problems.

THE SINNER

A sinner is determined as such precisely by his relation to the law. 'Sinner' was becoming more and more a technical term for someone who either broke the law or did not know the law - the two criticisms of course often amounting to the same thing.

Matt 7:21-23

21 Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

If we look up the word for "iniquity" in the Greek along with its root word you will be amazed:

The Strong's # for iniquity is #458 anomia:

1) the condition of without law

a) because ignorant of it

b) because of violating it

2) contempt and violation of law, iniquity, wickedness

I have spent considerable time trying to reach you with the truths long overlooked by Gentile Christianity. Yeshua definitely said that he will not "know" certain people (the term in Greek means sexual intercourse and applies to the Marriage Supper where Groom Messiah and Bride (believers) become one flesh). Besides this he said that the reason that these will be rejected as "foolish virgins" is that they practice "iniquity". I know you think that such a condition cannot refer to you let alone the typical Christian. But that is exactly to whom it refers; especially the Gentile Christian! Let me show you.

To those whom Yeshua tells to depart and to whom will not be allowed to become one flesh with Messiah are those who, by definition, are "without the law". In Antioch Paul had been leading a Church which had laid aside their personal requirements in many areas of the "Law". Many of Paul's followers were "ignorant" of such Laws in the Covenant of Noah because they had not been taught by their spiritual leaders. So what else is new today? Mainline Gentile Christianity is totally ignorant for the most part of the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah. Being ignorant of these Laws assures you that most likely you are not observing and obeying many of them; thus you are violating them and don't even know you are. I assure you that you will find out when you die. But even more so being a traditional Pauline Christian you have grown up in church with a "contempt" for the Law as Pauline theology had been taught to you more than the faith of Yeshua. I have taken great pains to show you that other like you had been deceived by Paul in Antioch and sternly rebuked by the men from James because of it. As if that was not enough such a condition of ignorance of the Laws of Noah by the Christian today is called "wickedness" and you surely understand this since these same Laws were once considered "necessary" and were said to have "seemed good to the Holy Spirit". They still do!

Answer for yourself: I wonder if the Holy Spirit considers Paul's contradictions to these Laws which God considers "good" and "necessary"?

Now the facts: The root word for "iniquity" in the Greek is Strong's # 459 anomos (an'-om-os); from 1 (as a negative particle) and 3551; lawless, i.e. (negatively) not subject to (the Jewish) law; (by implication, a Gentile), or (positively) wicked: KJV-- without law, lawless, transgressor, unlawful, wicked.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Yeshua's implication was for Gentiles especially; Gentiles who are ignorant and disobedient and violate and have contempt for Law; in this instance the Laws of Noah, which are the laws defining their Covenant (besides many of these are reiterated in the Laws of Moses)?

Answer for yourself: Dear one have you not seen that this was the problem with Paul at Antioch and that his theology has literally infected the hearts and minds of good non-Jews yet today who pride themselves not "being under the Law but under grace"?

SINNERS (GENTILES) ...ARE LAWLESS...TORAHLESS

Thus already in the LXX of the Psalms the link between 'sinner' and 'lawlessness' is well established (Ps. 27.3; 54.3; 91.7; 100.8; 124.3; 128.3 - LXX); the sinner is defined as one who forsakes the law, who does not seek God's statutes (Ps. 118.53, 155 - LXX). And in 1 Maccabees 'sinners' and 'lawless men' are parallel terms (1 Macc. 1.34; 2.44).

More striking is the way in which 'sinner' becomes synonymous with 'Gentile' - already in Psalm 9.17, and again in 1 Maccabees 2.48; also Psalms of Solomon 1.1; 2.1-2 (cf. Tob. 13.8; Jub. 23.23-4; 4 Ezra 4.23). It was evidently a well -established usage by the time of the first Christians: 'sinners' and 'Gentiles' stand as variant versions of the same Q saying (Luke 6.33- 'even sinners do the same'; Matt. 5.47 - 'even Gentiles do the same'); and the same equivalence is probably implied in the saying of Yeshua, 'the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners' (Mark 14.41//Matt.26.45; Luke 24.7), as the parallel with Mark 10.33 also suggests. Gentiles are 'sinners' by reason of the fact that they do not have the law and are disqualified by the law from covenant righteousness (cf. Clementine Homilies 11.16).

Having taken all that went before into consideration now let us hear clearly the implications from the ministry of Yeshua and its meaning for today's Christian

Still more striking for us is the evidence of how the word was used in relation to Yeshua's ministry, as a description of those within Israel whose way of life should have debarred them from the table -fellowship of the devout Jew. It applied not just to those who had abused the written Torah (Luke 7.37, 39 - a prostitute?; cf. Matt 21.32), but to tax collectors (Luke 19.7; cf. Matt. 5.46 with Luke 6.32), and it would seem also to other trades which put the practitioner beyond the pale of what was deemed acceptable (Mark 2.15-17; Matt. 11.19; Luke 7.34; Luke 15.1-2).

Here we are evidently once again back in an area where the limits of acceptability were being determined by the multiplying halakoth of the Pharisaic rabbis. That is to say, not just disobedience to the Torah but disregard for the rabbinic rulings on what obedience to the Torah entailed, that was what showed a person to be a sinner. This has become more explicit in the Mishnah: a sinner (rasha) is one who treats halakic rulings lightly (m. Edayyot 5.6; m. Abot 4.7; 5.14).

Given that so much of the Pharisaic teaching of our period was concerned with the limits of acceptable table fellowship, and given that the context of Galatians 2.15 is a dispute precisely about whether and under what circumstances a devout Jew could have table-fellowship with Gentiles, the presumption becomes compellingly strong that "sinners" in verse 15 belongs to the same range of usage.

That is, "sinners" was a word used of the Gentile believers by the men from James to express their disagreement or dismay at the table-fellowship being practiced by Peter and the other Jewish believers.

And it had the connotation of 'unclean' (= Gentile = sinner), one who by his very race was legally disqualified from participating in the table-fellowship of a faithful Jew: 'How could you Peter, a true-born Jew, have table-fellowship with a Gentile sinner?'

THE GOSPEL OF PAUL.....VS....THE GOSPEL OF YESHUATHE FINAL WORD!

The men from James came with the authority of the Jerusalem Church and found fault at table-fellowship with the non-Jews and Peter, Barnabas, and Paul because "necessary" Commandments were being violated under the authority of Paul at Antioch.

In reality the Acts 15 Council was called to do only two things:

- The Messianic Jews were to repent of forcing all non-Jews to be circumcised before coming to God
- They Messianic Church of Jerusalem, and James, corrected the teachings of Paul as he was teaching his own Gospel which led both Jews and non-Jews to break their Covenant and its Covenant stipulations.

Rom 2:16 16 In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel. (KJV)

Rom 16:25 25 Now to him that is of power to establish you according to my gospel..

Answer for yourself: Forgive me but was not Paul supposed to be teaching Jesus' Gospel?

Those who follow Pauline Christianity instead of the faith of Yeshua still are breaking many of their Covenant responsibilities and stipulations today in the Christian Church. We must no longer follow Pauline Christianity over the "Christianity of Yeshua". Dear one, the Gospel of Paul is not the Gospel of Yeshua. They clash and conflict. And table-fellowship is only where it starts as it can be shown that Paul's Gospel contradicts the teachings of Jesus and his religious belief system in numerous places; even in serious matters like atonement and redemption! You may have never noticed this in reading the New Testament, but your failure to discern this does not mean it does not exist! Truly, these two "Gospels" oppose each other in basic tenants. It is to these very issues and the need of repentance in these areas where we must now consider if we expect to be held in good standing within the "true" Church of Yeshua.

Shalom and blessings.

ACTS 15-THE FIRST CHURCH COUNCIL AND AFTERMATH-IS THIS YOUR CHISTIAN EXPERIENCE?

Matt 28:18-20 18 And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. 19 Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: 20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen. (KJV)*

This new "Jesus Movement" faced a problem of the highest magnitude within twenty years after the Cross of Christ: "What are we going to do with these Gentiles who claim to be followers of Yeshua Meshichenu (Yeshua, our Jewish Messiah)? The solution: "We should not make it difficult for the Gentiles who are turning to God." (Acts 15: 19-21). Yacov (James) and the head zakenim (elders) then proceeded to mention "4 abstentions" for these Gentiles who wished to be part of the Jesus Movement:

- Don't eat food polluted by idols;
- Don't engage in sexual immorality;
- Don't eat the meat of strangled animals;
- Don't eat blood.

To twentieth century Western people this list seems pretty simple--the only abstention those in our society have to worry about is #2--sexual immorality. So now it's clear sailing for all those Gentiles. Thanks a lot for reading this article.

But wait, that is not as simple as the English makes it seem, for Yeshua is Jewish, and without a proper understanding of the language of Hebrew, the Greek language from which the Hebrew was translated, the history, and the culture of the first century, you and I cannot be assured we have the correct understanding of this Acts 15 passage. Let us never forget that obedience is better than any sacrifice today as well as yesterday. Also, let us understand that Jesus' church deemed that these things discussed in Acts 15 were "NECESSARY" for those who wished to be included in Jesus' Movement and church.

Acts 15:28-29 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. (KJV)*

Answer for yourself: How certain that you have been taught, let alone follow, these "NECESSARY" things today? If you find out that you have not been taught, nor follow such things, are you a member in "good standing" in Jesus' church?

As you read this article, as well as others I have researched and prepared, you should have easily seen that reading the English often leads us astray from the mind of Christ. You may say "You mean it's not quite that easy and clear?" You may say "You mean to tell me there may be more to understanding what James is telling the Gentiles than meets the eye? "Do you mean more information is assumed as "given" in this situation than is normally understood by the normal Christian nowadays?" That is exactly what I am telling you as you will shortly understand. Let us investigate.

WHY SHOULD THE CHRISTIAN BE AWARE OF THE HISTORICAL SITUATION IN THE BOOK OF ACTS?

The historical situation in Acts 15 must be uncovered in order to understand the impact importance of these 4 abstentions for Gentile believers in the first century, so we as good Christians and followers of Jesus and "the Christ" can then apply that understanding of Biblical truth to today's circumstances. Add to this process the tragic observation that the vast majority of today's Gentile Christian congregations totally ignore these 4 simple instructions and it becomes clear that this decision from long ago has been blatantly misunderstood and or ignored for the past 19 centuries. Today's Christians who understand Yeshua's words "why do you say you love me and not obey ye" should be open to repentance when in-depth Bible study recovers long-lost truths which never changed that both challenge and correct their belief system and conduct. We must, with a good conscience, apply these truths to our lives today, regardless if they seem different from what you have heard or weren't previously aware of or not. If today's Christians want to uncover these truths and their significance for their lives, it will be a difficult but not an unfruitful task, but such is our test of the level of love we have for God. Let us continue in our search for truth for our love for God is manifested through obedience and not a mental faith which lacks righteous responses in obedience to "every word that proceeds from the mouth of God." This is of major importance if we truly love God, not to mention the rewards and treasure laid up in Heaven in our account that comes only in response to obedience. .

THE HISTORICAL SITUATION IN ACTS 15...INTRODUCING THE GOD-FEARERS

It is important as we begin to understand "who" these Gentile believers were that were being spoken of by James. The overwhelming majority, if not all, of these Gentiles wanted to be accepted as full participants in this Jewish faith in the Jewish Messiah. These non-Jews to whom James referred were in a special category of Gentiles called "Godfearers." Let's investigate these questions:

- 1) Who were Godfearers?
- 2) What was their belief and practice?
- 3) How did they fit into the theological and historical scheme of the time?
- 4) As Christians are we considered "Godfearing?"

WHO WERE THE GODFEARERS?

"Godfearers" in the technical sense of the word used by both Luke and Josephus. The terms "Sebomenoi" and or "Phoboumenoi" refer to that special group of Gentiles who worshipped in synagogues and adopted a Jewish belief system and a Jewish lifestyle for themselves, stopping just short of formal conversion (failed to be circumcised) and becoming proselytes.

The word Sebonenoi (with or without Theos) means "Godfearer" and is based on a parallel term for worshippers of pagan deities. Implicit in the term are the concepts that these people claim to worship the only true God, and that they worship Him with specific acts, not just with their "mental attitude." The Book of Acts mentions Pheboumenos five times, and mentions sebonenos six times with or without the addition word "Theos-god" to denote Gentile adherents to the Jewish faith who were NOT proselytes. In this context, Bauer states that these two terms are a "functional equivalent" of each other. Thus, these Godfearers were NOT merely well-intentioned Gentiles walking around worshipping the God of Israel in their own private non-structured way or in a way that leaned on their own understanding. Rather, there were certain requirements and Laws which must be adhered to and obeyed to be considered as a "Godfearer."

Emil Schurer quotes archeological inscriptions which point to "a defined category of Gentile Godfearers attached to the Jewish community." The Dictionary of the New Testament Theology adds that "Sebonenos" was the regular term for non-Jews who attached themselves the synagogue in this precise and specific way. The clear conclusion reached about both terms in Acts (i.e. phoboumenoi and sebomenoi) is that "with this concept...we are dealing with a technical term (to be distinguished from Theosebes (godliness) which specifically describes a defined category of Gentiles associated with the synagogue.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the first Gentile believers in Yeshua as "the Messiah" mentioned in the Book of Acts are from this special and technical realm of Godfearers, as the Greek terms clearly indicate, and are NOT Gentiles who only felt warmth and attraction to the God of Israel. The Godfearers ALREADY had received considerable Jewish training and had made a considerable Jewish commitment as I am attempting to demonstrate through the continued teachings of Bet Emet Ministry. The Theological Dictionary of the New Testament sums up the situation: "Thus the first conversion of a Gentile under Peter in Acts 10 is strictly the winning of a marginal member of the Jewish community (Cornelius was ALREADY a worshipper of the true God of the Bible before the message of the Messiah was brought to him) for the Christian community." According to Schurer, John 12:20 probably reflects this group in describing "Greeks who went up to worship (at the Temple) at the Festival (Passover) time"

What most misunderstand about the Acts 10 account regarding Cornelius is that he was recognized as ALREADY "having a relationship with God" by the Jews. The message of Messiah through the Great Commission was brought to him for the benefit of the Jews as well as himself, for the religious and political environment of that day precluded "Gentile-Godfearers" from fellowshiping with Jews. Peter's reaction in witnessing that Cornelius (a Gentile) received the same gift of the Spirit as they had previously at Pentecost was the deciding factor in reporting to Jerusalem that the "middle wall" of separation between the Jews and Gentiles was removed, and it was removed because of the ministry of Yeshua which continued long after his resurrection and ascension. See my other articles about Shammai and Hillel and existing prejudices concerning the Gentiles.

WHAT WERE THE RELIGIOUS BELIEFS AND PRACTICES OF THE GODFEARERS?

It is important to realize that these Gentile Godfearers were integral parts of synagogues within Israel and throughout the Diaspora (exile). And as noted above, they worshipped God with specific Jewish acts, not just mental assent. These acts included:

- 1). Adherence to the 7-part Noachide commandments
- 2). Adherence to the Sabbath commandment
- 3). Adherence to many but not all of the dietary laws

These Laws, as seen in Second Temple Judaism (Judaism during the era 100 B.C.E.--70 C.E.), is the bedrock of Jewish observance even today. Any other Jewish observances beyond these would have been a matter of personal choice (Isa 56). Isaiah chapter 56 informs us that one a Gentile becomes part of the Israel of God through faith and repentance with limited obedience to the Commandments (the Laws of Noah), then he has the "choice" to choose other Commandments over and above his "minimum" that can be incorporated into his life because do so "pleases God".

These Gentile Godfearers were encouraged by Jewish teachers within the synagogue structure to be circumcised, thus completing their "conversion" to Judaism; and according to G. F. Moore, "it was not uncommon for the next generation (their children) to be circumcised. This means the second generation of non-Jews usually made full conversion and were considered "born again" Jews. It is here we find the original and true meaning of this over-worked and sadly misinterpreted term as used in Gentile Christianity today.

CORNELIUS, THE GODFEARER

Cornelius, the Gentile Godfearer mentioned in Acts 10, was a centurion at Caesarea and serves as a good example of what a Godfearer did religiously. First, he and his household were devout (Eusebes) and Godfearing (Phoboumenos Ton Theon), a double adjective referring to him and his family which shows their exemplary lives characterized by Jewish norms and values. Please understand when I say "Jewish norms and values" I am not asserting conversion to Judaism, but let's face it, Jewish values and norms happened to be expressions of BIBLICAL VALUES AND NORMS! Luke also mentions that he prayed constantly to God and gave alms liberally to people in need (which the Rabbis call tzedekah). These two actions (prayer and alms giving) would be actions even beyond the call of "Jewish duty," even more than the minimum for Jews. Interestingly enough, one afternoon during his regular 3 o'clock prayer time ("ninth hour" was a prescribed Temple prayer time which survives in synagogue practice today and was the hour evening incense was offered in the Temple) an angel came to Cornelius in Caesarea (a totally Gentile-built and Gentile-run city), to tell him that his prayer that his alms "had come up for a memorial" before God. That means that they he been accepted by God in the same way that the incense at the Temple and the smoke of a burnt offering "went up" and were accepted by God. The same Greek word (snebenov) is used to translate in the Septuagint the Hebrew word for offering: "olah"-literally, "an ascending." Then the angel instructs Cornelius, to get in touch with Peter, who was in Jaffa, and the rest, as they say, is history. But note that what Cornelius did to deserve the commendation were Jewish religious acts and not his faith (not just any old good deeds would do) and that they (his righteous works) were accepted by the Jewish God using Jewish terminology and concepts, even though Cornelius was "technically" a Gentile.

Now for a real shocker, Cornelius was "accepted by God" and this condition existed long before Peter came to preach to him about Yeshua for Acts 10:35 states such. In fact, Peter is flabbergasted when this revelation (that Gentiles who turned from idols to serve the living God were equally acceptable to God as were Jews) become real to him for he realized that the stigma put upon the Gentile Godfearers by "pious" Jews headed by Shammai were totally false and such bigotry had prevented Israel from obeying God by not becoming a "light to the Gentiles" as was their calling. Once you understand that Shammai led Israel to believe that no Gentile was worthy of the world to come or of Eternal Life, then you can understand Peter's startled reaction. God was correcting the situation and news of this would quickly turn Jerusalem around.

Let us never forget that there were more than just this one man who was a Godfearer in Israel, in that there was a whole group of Godfearers at that time all around the Roman world who totally identified themselves with the Jewish community, except for circumcision which was the final step in commitment as a Jewish proselyte.

Many Gentiles, while not prepared to enter this Jewish community as full proselytes through circumcision, were attracted by the simple monotheism of Jewish synagogue worship and by the ethical standards of the Jewish way of life. We may indeed say that Cornelius had every qualification short of circumcision which could satisfy Jewish requirement for full inclusion into Israel with equal rights (own land, hold offices in synagogues). The middle-wall of inequality as not removed. It would be such Godfearers who would form the nucleus of the Christian community in one city after another. Sadly, the Godfearers would one day be replaced with "organized religion" in the form of anit-Semitic Constantinian theology.

HOW DID GODFEARERS FIT INTO THE HISTORICAL-THEOLOGICAL SCHEME OF THE WORLD AT THAT TIME?

Obviously, as we have seen, Godfearers were more than "pagans" or "foreigners" but less than proselytes. Let's examine now these differing communities of people and their status in the eyes of the Jewish community during Second Testament times.

CLASSES OF GENTILES: PROSELYTES, GODFEARERS, AND FOREIGNERS

Underlying the worldview of the Greco-Roman culture at the time is an unsympathetic attitude towards Jews. In Greek and Roman literature of the time the judgments about Jews are in general very derogatory. Seen in its most militant state, during Selucid rule, Greek culture felt that Judaism was extremely old-fashioned and too highly nationalistic to fit in with the concept of the modern Greek world. Roman culture, beginning in 70 B.C.E. in Israel under Pompey, tolerated Jewish belief as long as it allowed for Rome to have the final governmental power. Rome tended to want to keep peace in its provinces and allowed different groups under its rule to have their own religious and cultural differences. Jewishness to Rome was a "quaint," unattractive religion which served well to keep the Jewish nation "unified" and serving Roman interest.

Passages from writers of the time such as Josephus, Juvenal, and Tertullian give us the impression that the Greco-Roman culture saw Jewishness as quite ridiculous. Thus, becoming a Godfearing person was not a popular action designed to move a person to a more influential sphere, in fact, it would have quite the opposite effect.

Living within Israel itself at the time there were Godfearers, exemplified by Cornelius and presumably also the Centurion in Luke 7 and Matt. 10, but making proselytes in an active "missionary" way was not common within Israel. As a rule, proselytes (full converts) were welcomed by the Jews and regarded very highly, but there was in Palestine no active propaganda to further the cause of proselytism. Godfearers stood outside of this acceptance until they fully converted.

However, proselytism and Godfearers were very active in the Diaspora (the Jewish communities outside of Israel). According to Josephus in Antioch and Syria large numbers of Gentiles attended Jewish services. In Damascus almost the whole female part of the population was devoted to Judaism and it was quite often women of higher social standing who followed this trend. Evidently these Jewish communities encouraged and welcomed both Gentile proselytes and Godfearers.

Hellenistic Judaism developed an offensive against paganism. They were eager to show up the immorality and senselessness of idolatry and display the rationality and sublimity of Jewish monotheism. Hellenistic Judaism had an apologetic ideology as there were many Godfearers who accepted the one God of the Jews, but not all the Laws of the same God. Hellenistic Judaism had almost succeeded in making Judaism a world religion in the literal sense of the words. Early Christianity then won the victory over paganism using Jewish customs, traditions, and teachings.

This knowledge of history sheds much light on James' closing remarks to the zakenim (elders) and sh'likim (apostles) in Acts 15:21:

"For Moses (the Pentateuch) has been preached in every city (in the Diaspora) from the earliest times (since 722B.C.E., over 700 years) and is read in the synagogue on every Sabbath."

In other words, these Gentile Godfearers had ALREADY received Moses' instructions concerning how people are to live (as taught in the Noachide and Sinaitic covenants since when Moses [Pentateuch-first 5 books of the Bible] is taught, such teaching encompasses both the Laws of Noah and the Mosaic Covenant). Through attending synagogues in their own cities, Gentiles were ALREADY familiar with the basics of having a relationship with the one true God of Israel. James, the pastor of the Messianic Movement within Judaism, is REQUIRING these 4 further instructions for Gentiles who want to be Messianists and a part of Jesus' church. Although these are sometimes seen as 4 of the 7 Laws of Classification of the Laws of Noah deeper study reveals that they apply in this situation to how the Jews and non-Jews were to have table fellowship together. This fact is made plain by our study of the Antioch Problem which is available for your study.

Notice, that it seemed "good to them and the Holy Spirit" to REQUIRE these adherences of Gentiles. These things were called "NECESSARY."

Acts 15:28-29 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. (KJV)

This was done to make sure that there is no question as to what the "bottom line" of observance is by Godfearing Gentiles: the Noachide commandments, the Sabbath and dietary laws, and these 4 requirements. These were "NECESSARY" according to Acts 15:28-29.

Let us be truthful:

- 1). Now, do you practice and have working knowledge of what these "necessary" things are as taught by the early church and does your church teach the same things?
- 2). Although you are in "good standing" with you pastor or your church; are you in "good standing" with God as a non-Jewish believer if you don't adhere to these "NECESSARY" things?
- 3). Are you aware that the Sabbath is Saturday and not Sunday as Christianity practices?
- 4). Are you aware that one of these "necessary" things is adherence to "clean and unclean" food laws for the non-Jew? Understand that this is not required by the Laws of Noah but necessary voluntarily if a non-Jew is to have table fellowship with the Jews around the Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths.

This is only the tip of the iceberg for those who wish to identify with the Jesus Movement of the Bible.

EXACTLY WHAT WAS EXPECTED OF GENTILES BY THE JEWISH COMMUNITY AT THAT TIME AND WHAT WAS NOT EXPECTED?

The Jewish religious concepts of the Second Temple period understood that the other nations of the world who did not follow the one true God were Godless (goyim-at least without the true God) and or pagan. However, for purposes of God's judgment of other nations (including his right to judge them), the Sinaitic covenant did not apply to these "goyim," having been given exclusively to Israel. Don't get tripped up by failing to understand that WITHIN THE MOSAIC COVENANT AND LAWS IS CONTAINED ALL THE LAWS IN THE COVENANT OF NOAH. Conversely, there were many Laws contained in the Mosaic Covenant that were not included in the Covenant of Noah. Instead the rabbis felt, as seems clear from the passage in Gen. 9:1-18, there is a covenant for all the children of Noah (i.e. the whole world), including not only people but all living creatures (see v.10). Based on this section of Scripture, the rabbis found 7 major requirements incumbent for all nations: 1) no idolatry; 2) no incest/adultery; 3) no murder; 4) no blasphemy (profanation of the name of God); 5) no theft; 6) justice towards others (see Gen. 9:5...); 7) no eating flesh with blood in it and or cutting off flesh from a living animals.

To these generally agreed tenents some rabbis added others such as taking blood from a living animal. Several also mention prohibitions against witchcraft and other spiritual sorcery (such things as horoscopes, ouiji boards, palm readers, etc.) such as found in Dt. 18:10-11.

These then are the major categories by which God would judge all nations. To the rabbis it was clear that although God loved all His creatures and His creation, the goyim had turned away from Him and would not even follow the Noachide commandments. "Again if the children of Noah could not abide and observe the 7 commandments which were enjoined upon them, how much less could they have accepted and fulfilled all the commandments of the Sinaitic Law of Moses?"

The identifying terms used by the rabbis at this time for these goyim include: idolaters, the wicked, the enemies of Israel, the enemies of God, and the others. There was a different category, however, for those goyim who did abide by the Noachide covenant. They were called foreigners or aliens. Any Gentile who lived in the land of Israel and among Israelites was enjoined, at the very least, to keep the Noachide covenant. This was their "bottom line" and if they did not, they were to be expelled. If they did keep the Laws of Noah, they were no longer called goyim, but gerim. The Talmud delineates them further by the new term ger toshev. These (ger toshev) were foreigners living in the land of Israel who were keeping the 7 Noachide commandments. By the time of the Septuagint (about 200 B.C.E.) the translators used the term "fearers" for the righteous outside of natural Israel in contrast to the term proselytes, those righteous Gentiles who formally identified with Israel through conversion which included circumcision, sacrifice, and mikveh (immersion).

WHAT WAS THE NEXT STEP FOR THE GERIM WHO WANTED TO BECOME FULL JEWS?

The first "gerim" are mentioned in the Exodus narrative. Among the Jews who left Egypt there were Egyptians who also left their homes in Egypt and crossed the Red Sea, becoming part of the people of Israel (Ex. 12:38). Although they were known as "aliens-gerim" (simply meaning that they were not physical descendants of Jacob), they could be circumcised, thus formally converting to this very early form of Judaism, then partake of the Passover meal with the rest of Israel (at this point, Passover was the only Jewish festival). Note the differentiation between "foreigner" in Ex. 12:43 and the "alien who lives among you":

- The foreigner may NOT eat the Passover (he is not circumcised and therefore not Jewish-Ex. 12:48), but
- The alien who is circumcised along with his/her household (they converted to Judaism and had become proselytes) MAY EAT the Passover (they are considered Jewish).

Answer for yourself: But what of "native-born" Jews?

native-born Jews: "The same law applies to the native-born and alien." According to Ex. 12:19, the community of Israel is made up of aliens (believers/converts/proselytes who are circumcised) and native-born Jews. Consequently, these "gerim toshevim" who wanted to fully convert always could do so by becoming circumcised and then continuing to follow the Jewish way of life, which then adopted and followed the covenant at Mt. Sinai (Ex. 24) and the attending Laws. Note also that Sabbath observance was technically commanded BEFORE the acceptance of the Sinaitic code (Ex. 20:10 and 23:12). Then although they (Ger Toshevim) were recognized by outward appearances as "aliens," they were now "Jews" in that they had left behind their old country and family and now were subsequently circumcised in order to be "part of the Jewish community." Likewise they had been "adopted" by the native-born Jews as "their own." The rabbis' term for these Ger Toshevim who became circumcised ("proselytes") was ger hazedek (righteous foreigners). How many proselytes there were down through the centuries is impossible to determine, but the rabbis are clear about the proselyte's relationship to the rest of Israel: "A proselyte is like a newborn child." Do you see the comparison to being "born-again?" The proselyte is, however, required and expected to be as strictly observant as the native-born Jew, including paying the Temple tax. The book of Ruth, of course, portrays the most beautiful example of how God can highly honor a proselyte, by choosing her as the great-grandmother of David.

After the building of the Second Temple there was a recognized procedure for proselytes. For men, there was circumcision, followed by immersion (mikveh), then offering a sacrifice at the Temple. For women there was just the mikveh and Temple sacrifice. For Diaspora proselytes the Temple sacrifice was probably waived, or at least postponed, because of the great distance involved and its attendant difficulty to achieve..

As previously noted, the Godfearers' observance of the Law was located between the full proselyte (circumcised) and the gerim toshev (non circumcised). Circumcised Ger toshev were known as ger hashair (foreigners of the gate). To the Godfearer's observance of the Noachide covenant they added Sabbath and dietary Law observance. It seem that Godfearers stopped just short of circumcision which would mean total and formal conversion, thus no longer being considered a Godfearer but Ger hashair or proselyte in full conversion to Judaism (a good example is Cornelius who lacked circumcision). The reasons for their not formally joining Judaism are not clear to us twentieth century people. Some scholars, like Bruce, maintain that circumcision was both painful and shameful for men in that culture. Some also might have been fearful of anti-Semitism. At any rate, we do know that these Godfearers were every bit as Jewishly observant as their Jewish friends as they had been undergoing discipling and instruction in their local synagogues. These people (Godfearers) were not just well-intentioned "Gentiles," but Jewishly educated and committed to the Jewish way of life which was the pattern given to Israel by God at Sinai. It was "this pattern of obedience" which was spoken in 70 languages to the 70 nations at Sinai, for God called all men everywhere to repent and follow His will which was spoken to all the world at Sinai. Only Israel responded with a "yes" as seen in their memorial statement "we will do all that You say!" To this commitment God would in response call them a "holy people and a holy nation and a royal priesthood" which was to equip the nation of Israel to function as a mediator between God and mankind. Israel's function is still to bring the Gentiles to God for as Romans 9 states

Thus, Godfearing Gentiles, like our example of Cornelius, probably were more deeply devoted to Judaism than many native-born Jews.

In summary, let us tabulate our results from our search.

I. Goyim: idolators, wicked, pagans,

II. Foreigners (Ger toshev):

- Non Jews living in Israel
- Any Gentile who wanted to be righteous (i.e. "saved)
- Required to observe the 7 Noachide commandments

III. Godfearers (Ger hashair)

- Required to observe the 7 & Noachide commandments
- Required to observe the Sabbath (expect voluntarily)
- Required to observe certain dietary Laws plus others as they choose
- Expected to maintain synagogue discipleship where "Moses is preached" and not Paul
- Lack circumcision

IV. Jews: Native Born -plus- Proselyte

- Proselytes were given all the requirements listed above for the Godfearer
- Required circumcision for males plus mikveh
- Required mikveh for females

- Sacrifice in Temple (optional in Diaspora)
- Pay Temple tax yearly

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN FOR THE CHRISTIAN CONCERNING ACTS 15?

The vision related to Peter in Acts 10 and his subsequent experience with Cornelius and his household proved to Peter (also later to the zakenim (elders) and sh'likim (apostles) that is was NOT NECESSARY for these "gerim" to proceed with full conversion to Judaism in order to receive God's provision of atonement. They could come as they were..Godfearing Gentiles. There were only 4 further abstentions they needed to be clear about which actually delineated more clearly their already fully Jewish commitment.

First, they should not eat food sacrificed to idols which gave the appearance that they have not given up idolatrous practices. Notice Rav Shaul and Jochanan HaSchliach also objected to eating food sacrificed to idols in I Cor. 8:10-22; and Rev. 2 because of the outward meaning of the action to highly observant Jews and "weaker brothers" from pagan backgrounds. As this only refers to food, the underlying principle is that we should refrain from any conduct or behavior that gives the appearance that we have not given up idolatrous practices.

Second, they should not engage in sexual immorality as defined by Jewish standards which prohibit sex outside of marriage. Here again, the average "pagan Gentile" would see nothing wrong in visiting the prostitutes dedicated to serving and worshipping pagan Gods. Such conduct was not defined as immoral behavior outside of Israel. But it is a very grievous sin to be followers of the God of Israel (I Cor. 6:9-20), and should likewise be to those Godfearers who wish to follow Him.

Third, abstention from meat of strangled animals (animals killed with the blood still left in the body) and from eating blood in general are a stronger reiteration of the Noachide regulations already understood and practiced by Godfearers (Gen. 9:4). No I am fully aware that few of you kill an animal and eat from it as it slowly dies as do many different peoples in the Far East today, but what you are not aware of is within this categories of commandments is contained the admonition to refrain from eating "unclean" foods as was also given to the Jews. We fail to realize that this distinction in diet was originally given to Noah as he segregated the animals upon the Ark by categories of clean and unclean. Only later would this "oral law" be reiterated to Moses at Sinai when given the Laws of God on stone. James even concedes that these Godfearers probably already knew these abstentions.. "For Moses (the Pentateuch) has been preached in every city..." These tenets would be nothing new for Godfearers.

Fourth, Godfearers were to refrain from "blood." You might think this was a reiteration of the food laws, but it refers in Hebrew to violence and premeditated murder.

See my articles on the Law of Noah for more information.

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN TO ME...A CHRISTIAN?

The Gentile Godfearers in Acts who formed a large share of the core of the congregations founded by Rav Shaul were not practicing pagans converted overnight. They were of a special class of Gentiles who had PREVIOUSLY been taught and nurtured in their local synagogues first, worshipping the God of Israel through Jewish acts and deeds. The "bottom line" of observance for Gentiles in the Jewish world of Second Temple Judaism would have been the 7 Noachide commandments. Godfearing Gentiles, however, went even further, observing the Sabbath, keeping the dietary laws, plus other Jewish observances that they had been taught by their local Jewish leaders. Thus their lifestyle already identified them as Jews, even if the final ritual of formal conversion had not yet taken place. Acts 15 describes the full acceptance of these Godfearers by the leadership of Messianic Jews in Jerusalem. The leaders added only 4 additional guidelines which were based on what the Godfearers were already practicing. I am convinced that James' referral to these "4" additional guidelines included all the "7" as well. If they maintained their Torah based practices, they would have congregations and practices co-equal with that of their Jewish brothers and sisters. If they failed to maintain their Godfearing lifestyles and educational programs, they would fall into the traps of sin that were disrupting the Corinthian congregations.

Gentiles who maintain Torah practices like Biblical Godfearing Gentiles can be assured that they are in "good standing" in Yeshua's church, thus welcomed into full membership and leadership within the Spiritual Body of Messiah today. Those who fail to meet these qualifications should seriously consider if they "be in the faith." Dear brothers and sisters, heed the warning. Ask questions. Study to not be ashamed one day before the LORD. Many may say after studying Hebrew Roots that they wish to formally convert to Judaism, but it is not necessary for full acceptance for the Gentile believer and Godfearer into God's family is not dependent upon conversion within Judaism. That is what Acts 15 was all about, and it set the pattern and stage for Gentile evangelism throughout the world. As long as the Gentile believer (Godfearer) maintain their active Jewish lifestyle, they can rest assured that they are "in the faith once given to the saints."

CONTROVERSY AT JERUSALEM: LAW OR GRACE? YOU WILL BE SURPRISED!

AN EXAMINATION OF ACTS 15:1-30

*And some men came down from Judea and began teaching the brethren,
"Unless you are circumcised according to the custom of Moses, you cannot be saved."*

These words in Acts 15:1 introduce an issue which challenged the Christian church soon after its inception and would continue to be debated among the believers for years to come.

Answer for yourself: But where did this controversy originate? Was circumcision really required for non-Jews to be "saved" or was this ordinance imposed upon them by Jews who hated Gentiles so much that they knew that such an ordeal for an adult Gentile male assured that he most likely would not make any attempt to come to the God of the Hebrews?

Answer for yourself: Why was it such a crucial matter for the early church?

Answer for yourself: How did the apostles deal with this challenge and what were the repercussions of their decision?

This essay is an attempt to answer these and other questions surrounding this intriguing central episode in the book of Acts. First, the background and cause of the circumcision question will be considered; secondly, the nature and implications of the question itself; thirdly, the process of debate and decision followed by the Jerusalem council; and finally, the ramifications of the apostles' edict for the early church as a whole and what it means to a follower of Jesus today.

THE CAUSE

In order to trace this issue back to its roots, one must go back to the Old Testament and consider what it has to say about the relationship between Jew and Gentile. In the Garden of Eden and in the world of Noah's day, there was no separation between the two groups for everyone at that time were Gentiles. The Law of Moses given to Israel had not yet been given at Sinai, yet God's Laws existed in an oral form since the Garden of Eden when given to Adam. Certain admonitions and restrictions were given to Noah by God after the flood (Gen. 9:1-7), but these were few and general in nature. These were called the Laws of Noah within the Covenant of Noah given and intended for all mankind to observe, thus providing a way of fellowship and relationship with God. Not until God chose Abraham and his descendants to become his unique and special chosen people, Israel, and not until He raised up Moses to lead the Israelites out of bondage and to communicate to them His Law, did a clear distinction emerge between Jew and Gentile.

Once the distinction appeared, however, God made it clear that He wished the separation between His people and the pagan nations to be readily apparent at all times (Deut. 7:6). First, all Jews were to undergo circumcision as an indelible mark of their relationship to God (Gen. 17:10-13). Of course, Israel was not the only middle eastern nation to practice circumcision, but for the Jews the ritual had special significance. In addition to this distinguishing mark, God gave the Israelites a detailed and complex set of dietary, religious and social laws designed to remind them of their call to holiness and to prevent them from associating too closely with their Canaanite neighbors (Lev. 20:23-26).

Although Jewishness was largely a matter of ancestry - descent from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob -- it was nevertheless possible for a non-Jew to become part of the nation. If, however, a Gentile wished to leave his pagan gods for the worship of Yahweh and enter in to God's covenant with Israel, he must first be circumcised (Ex. 12:48-49) and then accept the Mosaic Law as binding on himself. One could not claim to be a worshipper of Yahweh and yet refuse to revere and keep the Law.

Over the thousands of years mankind chose not to obey God's ways and lost much of the truth of God, including the revelation of Noah. At Sinai within the Laws of Moses we find the Laws of Noah contained; basically they were reiterated and elaborated upon to Moses. These Noahide statutes (66 laws) were intended for Gentiles and these again plus others which totaled 613 Mitzvot were given to the Jews. At that time there was no other means of approach to God [for both Gentile and Jew] except through the Mosaic ritual and regulations for mankind had lost the revelation of God and the knowledge of the Covenant and Laws of Noah; all that is except the Jewish people. Thus God was required to reiterate them plus others at Sinai once again.

For centuries -- even millennia -- this pattern persisted. Then Yeshua came, bringing with him a Re-Newed Covenant. Prior to Yeshua's coming, Israel had an intense hatred for the Gentiles and such animosity prevented them from making it easier for Gentiles to come to God by being a light to them of the Noahide Covenant with their 66 Laws. One only has to read about Rabbi Shammai to understand the intense hatred of the Jews for the non-Jewish nations (captivities, wars). To make it harder for these non-Jews to know God, the Jews insisted on circumcision, knowing full-well that most pagans and Gentile men who worshipped their false gods through fornication and fertility rites would object to such a sever measure, especially when circumcision was administered to their "organ" of worship since most Gentile nations were into fertility worship and fornication religious rites.

Jesus and his followers were to change that. At first his exclusively Jewish disciples understood the message of the gospel as belonging to the nation of Israel alone (as it had previously been customary to exclude Gentiles except upon full conversion and circumcision), but the Holy Spirit soon directed otherwise (circumcision and full conversion were not required by God for relationship with Gentile believers), and this message spread through Philip to the half-Jewish Samaritans (Acts 8:5-8) and the non-Jewish proselytes to Judaism (Acts 8:26-36), through Peter to the uncircumcised "God-fearers" like the Roman centurion Cornelius (Acts 10:1-2), and finally through Cypriot and Cyrenian disciples to the pagan and idolatrous Gentiles (Acts 11:19-21). With the advent of the apostle Paul's ministry, great numbers of Gentiles began coming to the Lord (Acts 13:48-49) without the need of circumcision. The issue of how these non-Jewish believers were to be incorporated into the church body, therefore, became crucial and it is important to know that the whole of the Galatians letter which seems to be "against the Law" was only concerning the Law of Circumcision which was being imposed incorrectly upon the non-Jews.

Answer for yourself: Was "Messianic" Israel to continue to make it difficult for Gentiles to come to God (as other Jews had done) by requiring circumcision which was never within the Covenant of Noah (given to all the Gentile nations of the world), or would they, since Yeshua, heed his words and the words of his Pastor James and repent and no longer require of Gentiles such an excluding rite?

Answer for yourself: Would the message of Yeshua and his church carry more weight than the anti-Gentile doctrines espoused by the majority of Israel and other Rabbis at that time?

The earliest converts to Christianity had been the Jerusalem Jews who heard Peter's stirring sermon on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:14-36). They had been "pierced to the heart" by his call for repentance and a call to return to the Torah, and some three thousand of them had been baptized on that first day alone (Acts 2:37, 41). It was only natural, therefore, that these Jewish believers would feel anxious about seeing so many Gentiles entering the fellowship without undergoing the traditional conversion process (especially circumcision). After all, in the recent past no Gentile could be counted among God's people unless he was circumcised and submitted to ALL the Law (613 and not just 66): why should it be any different now?

So it was that while Paul was ministering in the Gentile territories of Asia, he encountered a number of Jewish Christians who had traveled up from the Jerusalem area to make sure that the Gentiles understood their legal obligations as imposed by the present Religious establishment in Jerusalem...circumcision was required by these Gentile hating Jews...but was never required by God according to the Covenant He made with the Gentile world.

THE CONTROVERSY

Paul's Pharisaic background (Phil. 3:5) certainly gave him a ready understanding of the Judaizers' position, but on the basis of his knowledge of the gospel of grace (circumcision was not required), he strongly opposed their teaching.

Let us understand the New Testament correctly; in order to do that often passages have to be read and understood both in a cultural and historical setting if one desires to derive the truth from the passage instead of reading into the passage what he wants it to say. Years later he would explain to the Galatians:

A man is not justified by the works of the Law (CIRCUMCISION) but through faith in Christ Jesus... by the works of the Law (CIRCUMCISION) shall no flesh be justified... if righteousness comes through the Law (CIRCUMCISION) , then Christ died needlessly. (Gal. 2:16,21)

Paul and Barnabas fought the Judaizers in Antioch for some time before it became clear that the debate must be resolved by official means (Acts 15:2). At last the church at Antioch decided to send a delegation, led by Paul and Barnabas, to Jerusalem to consult the apostles and elders there. Whatever was decided at the council would determine the practice of the Gentile believers throughout the Roman Empire and throughout subsequent history.

Arriving at Jerusalem, Paul and his company were welcomed by the apostles and gave a full report of their ministry among the Gentiles (vs. 4). However, when the specific reason for Paul's visit was discussed, some of the believers of Pharisaic background immediately declared their support for the Judaizers. Not only must the Gentile believers be circumcised, they said, but they must be made to observe the Law as proselytes to Judaism had done in the past. Otherwise they were not truly saved (vs. 1,5).

Answer for yourself: Was this really such an important issue?

Answer for yourself: Couldn't the Judaizers have been allowed to prevail to keep the peace, or, as a compromise, couldn't the issue have been left up to individual conscience?

The apostles and elders quickly saw the foolishness of any such superficial means of dealing with the situation. No, it must be discussed and debated thoroughly, and a firm decision made, even though large numbers of Jewish believers and potential believers might be alienated if the ruling were not in the Judaizers' favor. The issue was crucial because it struck at the very center of the Jewish faith -- obedience to the Law "because one is saved by grace" and not "obedience to the Law to be saved," and that no further works of men (CIRCUMCISION) could add to or complete the salvation given by grace from God and justification of those who trusted in God through the Messianic outreach. If it were deemed necessary for a Gentile believer to accept circumcision and follow the Law "to be saved" (convert to Judaism as previously taught as customary by Biblical Judaism), then this would ultimately lead to an understanding that faith in God was superfluous and that non-Jews were not to approach God except through full conversion. But again God never said that and the Covenant of Noah proves it.

The debate among the apostles and elders went on at length, possibly for several days. They were struggling to get over their bigotry. No doubt many scriptures were consulted, many arguments raised. Luke does not record all the deliberations and all the evidence, but he does supply for us the closing remarks which decided the issue. First Peter rose up to speak, followed by Barnabas and Paul, and the final pronouncement was made by James "the Just", the half-brother of Christ who had become prominent in the Jerusalem church.

THE CONCLUSION

Peter's attempt to persuade his brethren was based on his personal experience of how God had worked in the hearts and lives of the Gentiles who had believed through his ministry. He described how God had not only directed him to share the gospel with pagan people, but had showed His approval by bestowing the Holy Spirit on those who had believed (vs. 8). By giving the Spirit He had clearly shown that in His sight the Gentile believers (uncircumcised Cornelius) were no different from and no less privileged than the Jewish believers.

Answer for yourself: This being the case, what grounds were there for saying that the uncircumcised Gentiles were inferior in God's sight and needed to do more to complete their salvation?

Answer for yourself: Had God Himself made a mistake in giving the Spirit prematurely to people who were not truly saved?

Surely not, said Peter.

Answer for yourself: Why, therefore, were the Judaizers attempting to be more strict than God Himself in this matter?

The burden of keeping the Law was heavy, and no man had ever been able to fulfill it completely (vs. 10). Therefore the Law could never be the means by which salvation came. Salvation was through faith in God as a free gift, and this was just as true of the Gentiles as it was of the Jews (vs. 11).

Paul and Barnabas' subsequent address to the council is not recorded, though it is summarized by Luke in verse 12 of the chapter. Their approach was similar to Peter's, in that they argued their case by relating their personal experience of God's mighty work among the Gentiles. Perhaps they related the incident at Lystra where God used Paul to heal a lame Gentile who had believed (Acts 14: 8-10) or told how God had set his stamp of approval on Paul's witness to the Gentiles by reviving him after he was stoned by a mob in the same city (14: 19-20).

In the face of the mounting evidence the crowd was silent, considering carefully the things they were hearing. But the final word must belong to James.

James was known and respected, even among unbelieving Jews, as a pious and Law-abiding man. His testimony in the world was impeccable and his authority highly regarded in the church. Because his love for the Old Testament was so well known, it was likely that the Judaizers believed he would be on their side. They were in for a surprise. James opened his argument with a quotation from the Old Testament, but the verses he gave came not from the Law but from the Prophets. Using a prophecy recorded by Amos, James described how in the past God had revealed that the Gentiles would come in to God's kingdom and be called by His name. God would surely support and strengthen Israel (vs. 16), but not for her own sake: rather, she would be used to draw the rest of the nations to Himself (vs. 17).

In light of this prophecy, James explained, it would be wrong to hinder the Gentiles from receiving the gospel by putting extra requirements upon them (CIRCUMCISION). The Gentile nations as a whole had never been given the Law (613 which included CIRCUMCISION but only 66 which did not include CIRCUMCISION); the Law (613) had been given to Israel. In the past Gentiles who wished to follow God had joined the Israelite nation through full conversion with circumcision, but this was no longer the case: now they were joining themselves to God without the requirement of full conversion. In the past few Gentiles had believed; now great numbers were coming to faith. It was clear that the Jerusalem church had repented of their bigotry toward Gentiles due to the teachings of Yeshua and the demonstration of the Holy Spirit with the Cornelius incident. It was clear that something significant had changed in Israel's dealings with mankind, and this could not be ignored.

No, the Gentiles were not to be burdened with the observance of the ALL the Law (613 including CIRCUMCISION) to be accepted with Israel and with God any longer....the Messianic part of Biblical Judaism would return to teaching the Laws and Covenant of Noah for the non-Jews to be accepted with God

Rather they were to be encouraged and supported to accept God's gracious gift of Eternal Life which was being taken to them without the rigorous restrictions as before, and this was all done in the name of Yeshua, the one who is the ultimate goal and fulfillment of the Law (Rom. 10:4, Gal. 3:24-25).

Nevertheless, the issue of how to facilitate closer relations between Jewish and Gentile believers could not be ignored. There was no reason that Gentiles should give needless offense to the Jews by continuing in strongly pagan practices, and it was also necessary that Gentile believers should maintain some standard of godly conduct which might make them a testimony to their neighbors both Jewish and Gentile. Perhaps James also had in mind the basic commandments given to Noah prior to the Law, which Jews today still consider to be binding upon Gentiles.

James, Jesus' Pastor of the Jerusalem church ruled that although the Gentiles did not need any longer to be circumcised nor to accept the Mosaic Law (613) to be accepted by Israel or God (make full conversion), they are required by God to follow a few basic principles of morality and tablefellowship (called "necessary" in Acts).

I HATE TO TELL YOU THIS

Firstly, they should stay away from food which had been ritually offered to idols. Later, in his first epistle to the believers at Corinth, Paul would contradict James, pointing out that although such food was not evil in itself, and it was possible for a believer to eat it with a clear conscience, nevertheless Christians ought to refrain from such things if they caused others to stumble (1 Cor. 8:1-13, 10:19-20). In effect Paul was teaching that eating meat sacrificed to idols was permissible if a knowledgeable believer does not see you. This you need to know is a violation of the Covenant of Noah and Moses and constitutes idolatry. This was a second reason for the calling of the Acts 15 council in order to correct Paul in this matter. The Antioch incident will precipitate the convening of the Acts 15 council to deal not only with the Gentile question but the Pauline Problem.

Answer for yourself: Who are we to believe here...James, Jesus' hand-picked Pastor of the Jerusalem Church, or Paul? Remember the ruling of James and not Paul was called "necessary" and it was said that it, and not Paul's views, "sounded good to the Holy Spirit" according to Luke.

James's second ruling was that the Gentiles should stay away from blood (eating of blood in pagan worship) and sexual immorality, which was an extremely common practice among the pagans who regarded sexual activity with cult prostitutes as a form of worship. But this is only half the story; besides the admonition prohibiting the eating of the soul "blood" as seen in the Gentiles worship with their Eucharist we find that the word used for "fornication" in Acts refers metaphorically to the worship of idols; used of the defilement of idolatry, as incurred by eating the sacrifices offered to idols. Again we have the issue of tablefellowship as before.

Paul also reiterated this teaching to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 6:15-20). The third ruling was not repeated by Paul in his epistles: the Gentiles were to abstain from the meat of strangled animals and from the eating of blood. Again we have the issue of tablefellowship as before.

None of these commandments were unreasonable or unduly burdensome, and they served to give some moral direction to the Gentiles and to remind them to be considerate of their Jewish brethren, while at the same time rebuffing the Judaizers. The whole council, including Paul and Barnabas, seems to have agreed willingly with James. A letter was drafted to send to the Gentile churches in Syria and in Asia Minor to notify them of the council's official decision. This letter served five purposes: one, it established that Gentiles who turned from idols to serve the living God were required to follow and adhere to the Laws of Noah as "minimum" requirements of fellowship with both Israel and God; second it made clear that the Judaizers who had come from Jerusalem were not officially sent by the apostles and did not have their approval (vs. 24); third, it showed unconditional approval for Barnabas and gave Paul a second chance to adhere to the official doctrine of the Jerusalem church which was to be taught among the Gentiles (vs. 25-26); fourth it commended Judas and Silas to the work among the Gentiles (vs. 27); and fifth, it laid out in writing the simple requirements the Gentiles were to follow, so that no legalist might misrepresent or add to them (vs. 28-29) as had been done before.

History teaches us that soon Paul would make an official break with the Jerusalem church shortly after this council's decision and this will require him being called again to Jerusalem to answer charges in Acts 21.

THE CONSEQUENCES

When the meeting at Jerusalem concluded, Barnabas, Paul and their new companions Judas and Silas promptly carried the apostolic letter to the church at Antioch, where it was received with great rejoicing (vs. 30:31). Although the issue of whether or not circumcision and Law-keeping were necessary to salvation remained a hotly debated one in the Christian community for some time afterward, and Paul was soon forced to write a lengthy epistle to the church at Galatia to counteract the grievously effective work of the Judaizers among them (requiring Gentiles to be CIRCUMCISED as a condition of acceptance with Israel and God which God accepted Gentiles in the Noahide Covenant without CIRCUMCISION), there could no longer be a doubt as to the opinion of the leading apostles and elders on this question. The official statement had been made:

Gentiles were justified by faith in God alone, and along with this came the recognition of Yeshua's death and resurrection which was the very catalyst to energize the breaking away from Gentile-hating Judaism a remnant of Jews (the Messianic followers of Yeshua) who would go into all the world and love their neighbors as themselves!

Neither circumcision nor observance of the Mosaic Law was necessary to complete their justification. Jewish believers, too, could see in this ruling a new freedom: knowing that the Law was not necessary to salvation, but is to be obeyed and adhered to because they are already saved. Obedience to the Law is the zenith of our demonstration of our love for God.

They could enjoy the positive aspects of their Jewish heritage while not being burdened by it. Thus we see that the first and earliest followers of Jesus/Yeshua commanded in fulfillment of the Great Commission the teaching not of a "new" Covenant which replaced the prior Covenants of God but a return to the Covenant and Laws of Noah for the Gentiles to have a saving relationship with God

Answer for yourself: Now you must ask yourself: Is this what you are being taught by your Christian Church and if not why not? What changed in the years following Yeshua's death and subsequent ministry by his followers? Nothing! Nothing that is until Rome will come in the 4th century and destroy the faith of Jesus and create a false faith about him.

"GODFEARERS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: THE PATTERN FOR GENTILE PARTICIPATION IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD #1

The Holy Spirit recorded for us in the fifteenth chapter of the Book of Acts one of the most important events recorded in all of Scripture. That event is often overlooked by the majority of Christians who lack understanding of the dynamics of the New Testament as well as the attending history and culture of the first century. What you will see in this article, and the ones which follow, is that God gives us a "pattern" for Gentile engrafting into Israel, the people of God. Let me say it another way. The New Testament reveals to us a specific manner by which Gentiles could become part of the Israel of God. Thus we will explore the inclusion of Gentiles in the Yeshua Movement recorded for us in the New Testament. This of course was the Messianic Movement within Judaism which we find enumerated for us by James as well as Paul in the writings of the New Testament. Dear students and "truth seekers" this "pattern of inclusion of the non-Jew into Jewish worship" was followed well into the fourth and early 5th century before Roman paganism stamped it out. I must remind you that these instructions and commands from the Jerusalem synagogue/church, concerning how Gentiles were to be added and engrafted into believing Israel, all transpired AFTER THE CROSS which has dramatic importance for us as "Christians" today. The sad part about the whole matter is that few Christians today know the history of their faith and how the Jerusalem Apostles established rigid conditions for Gentiles to become part of believing Israel, the people of God. Today, lacking such information and knowledge, we as mainline Christianity accept what is done by our denominations as being the "standard," yet is it? And if not, don't you want to know before your die when it is too late to do anything about it? With this in mind, I have prepared a detailed examination that will not only challenge you and your religious belief system, but hopefully stimulate your repentance in areas of belief and conduct. May God bless your efforts in studying His Word to show yourself approved. Let us begin.

Answer for yourself: Was the Book of Acts written following the cross and therefore the truths found within the book must therefore apply to the Christian and the Christian Church today? Yes.

Answer for yourself: When we read that Yeshua commanded his disciples and Apostles to go into all the world and "teach them (Gentiles) to observe those things I have commanded you," can we say for certain that one of "those things" which was to be taught and obeyed by Gentiles was the truths contained within the decisions and teachings that came out of the first "church council" in 50 C.E. which laid the foundation for what was "necessary" for Gentiles to be "saved" (Acts 15:28) and also be "included in the Yeshua (Jesus) Messianic Movement and Yeshua's church"? Most assuredly we can and must!

Answer for yourself: As you read the following article, I ask you to be honest in asking yourself that if Gentiles like you and me are to be "taught to obey those things Yeshua commanded," then why is it that you have been in church your whole life and never were acquainted with nor taught to obey the things that you will discover in these articles? You must answer that for yourself.

Answer for yourself: Is it of the remotest possibility that you, after finishing these articles, will come to the inescapable conclusion that you have not been taught the truths concerning many of the foundations of what your faith in God should consist of as commanded by the Jerusalem Church which was not only held in 50 C.E. but which set the very foundations for taking the Gospel and the message of God to the Gentiles like you and me? Most assuredly!

So often many mistakenly believe that the "cross of Christ" altered "this or that" whereby they mistakenly lean on their own understanding or other's erroneous teachings in arriving at conclusions that often set the course of their beliefs, conduct and their behavior which CANNOT be supported by comparison with many Scriptures that "contradict" such conclusions. Therefore, our beliefs, faith, behavior and conduct cannot be RIGHT if contradicted by Scripture and accurate historical analysis and thus we cannot be sure that we are accepted by God if our lives and beliefs do not line up with these facts. Unknowingly, much of the traditional Christian's reasoning violates many Scriptures and such historical analysis and often such reasoning, when conceived in actions and well intentioned deeds, are defined by the Bible as sin and we don't seem to notice it. The root of such is false teaching or the lack of in-depth teaching by the vast majority of Christianity today which seems to focus on "milk" instead of "meat."

Let us begin our study with foundational truths from the Book of Hebrews chapter 5:

Hebr 5:12 (KJV) For <1063> when for <1223> the time <5550> ye ought <3784> (5723) to be <1511> (5750) teachers <1320>, ye have <2192> (5719) need <5532> that one teach <1321> (5721) you <5209> again <3825> which <5101> [be] the first <746> principles <4747> of the oracles <3051> of God <2316>; and <2532> are become such as <1096> (5754) have <2192> (5723) need <5532> of milk <1051>, and <2532> not <3756> of strong <4731> meat <5160>. 13 For <1063> every one <3956> that useth <3348> (5723) milk <1051> [is] unskillful <552> in the word <3056> of righteousness <1343>: for <1063> he is <2076> (5748) a babe <3516>. {is skillful: Gr. hath no experience} 14 But <1161> strong <4731> meat <5160> belongeth to them that are <2076> (5748) of full age <5046>, [even] those who by reason <1223> of use <1838> have <2192> (5723) their senses <145> exercised <1128> (5772) to <4314> discern <1253> both <5037> good <2570> and <2532> evil <2556>. {of full age: or, perfect} {use: or, an habit, or, perfection}

Let us examine the Greek word for "teachers":

Lexicon Greek 1320

1320 didaskalos {did-as'-kal-os} from 1321; TDNT - 2:148,161; n m AV - Master (Yeshua) 40, teacher 10, master 7, doctor 1; 58

- 1) a teacher
- 2) in the NT one who teaches concerning the things of God, and the duties of man
- 1a) one who is fitted to teach, or thinks himself so
- 1b) the teachers of the Jewish religion
- 1c) of those who by their great power as teachers draw crowds around them i.e. John the Baptist, Yeshua
- 1d) by preeminence used of Yeshua by himself, as one who showed men the way of salvation
- 1e) of the apostles, and of Paul
- 1f) of those who in the religious assemblies of the Christians, undertook the work of teaching, with the special assistance of the Holy Spirit
- 1g) of false teachers among Christians

Answer for yourself: Did the author of Hebrews tell us that only hired preachers are to teach the things of God to others? No.

Answer for yourself: Did the author of Hebrews tell us that we (all) are to teach the "duties" of man toward God to others? Yes. That means we all have to accept our individual personal responsibility to become mature in handling the Word of God; it is not just the responsibility of Pastors and Teachers but all of God's children.

Answer for yourself: Could it be possible that we as adult Christians could be mistaken about much of the Bible and many interpretations of various passages because of the lack of personal in-depth Bible study and by default have failed to teach others correctly because we were taught in error concerning many of the fundamental duties required of us toward God and to our fellowman? It sure is!

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that according to the definition of the Greek word, as found in Christian Lexicons and dictionaries, that the word used by the Holy Spirit for "teachers" relate that we are to "TEACH THE JEWISH RELIGION?" I hope so for this is very important and overlooked by the vast majority of Christians and pastors today. It is in coming to this understanding that we can recover our Jewish Roots of the Christian faith and recover the true "Pattern of Worship" once given by God to Israel to share with all mankind (Gentiles).

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that according to the definition of the Greek word used by the Holy Spirit that those in the religious assemblies of Christians were taught the JEWISH RELIGION? I hope so. This seems almost impossible to believe in light of our personal Christians experiences but yet not only do we find this in the Greek word used in our New Testament but historical analysis as well verifies that non-Jewish believers in God practiced "the Jewish faith"; that is until men like Ignatius, Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, and Constantine went to great lengths to change all of that.

Answer for yourself: In your Christian Church, be it Baptist, Catholic, Church of Christ, etc., are you being taught the Jewish Religion as James and the Apostles like Paul intended as seen from the original language in which we find the manuscripts of the New Testament? I would say no and you should as well.

Answer for yourself: If not, why not since this was the Apostle Paul's intention (that is if he is the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews)?

Answer for yourself: As a Christian, have you been taught the JEWISH RELIGION (understood as Messianic Judaism) in your churches or have you been taught a REPLACEMENT RELIGION that considers most everything "Jewish" as being outdated, replaced, or cursed? More than likely the latter.

Let us now examine the Greek word for "oracles":

Lexicon Greek 3051

3051 logion {log'-ee-on} from 3052; TDNT - 4:137,505; n n AV - oracle 4; 4

- 1) a brief utterance, a divine oracle (doubtless because oracles were generally brief)
- 1a) in the NT, the words or utterances of God
- 1b) of the contents of the Mosaic law

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that according to the Greek word used by the Holy Spirit in this New Testament Scripture that these believers in Yeshua (Jesus) in the Book of Hebrews were needing to be TAUGHT AGAIN the contents of the Mosaic law because they had not grasped the necessities within the Mosaic Law required for them to begin teaching others? I hope so.

WHO WERE THE RECIPIENTS OF THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS AND WHAT ARE THE IMPLICATIONS FOR THE NON-JEW?

The title "To the Hebrews" designates Jews in distinction from Gentiles. This title was not originally a part of the letter. It may have been added in the second century, when the letters of the New Testament were beginning to be assembled into a collection. It has been suggested that the title "To The Hebrews" was written on the outside of the script rolls to identify the document as the letter we know as the Letter to the Hebrews. Since there is no greeting at the outset of the letter which identifies the original recipients, who they were can only be inferred from the internal evidence within the letter itself. The entire letter indicates the original recipients were a group of Jewish Christians who had endured persecution and who were therefore considering giving up their Messianic beliefs in Yeshua. For them the Messiah had not come and history verifies that according to the Hebrew Scriptures.

Answer for yourself: But what should we see as regarding the non-Jew in this Epistle? We should take strong notice that after the death of Jesus the Laws of Moses were still being taught and the writer of the Epistle of Hebrews did not intend a replacement religion but rather the opposite.

Answer for yourself: Does you Pastor agree with Paul that Christian churches should teach the Mosaic Law (remember this all occurred after the cross and crucifixion and resurrection of Yeshua)?

Acts 15:19-21 19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them (the non-Jews), which from among the Gentiles are turned to God: 20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Were you aware previously that believers in Yeshua in the first century, both Jew and Gentile (remember this is written 30 years AFTER THE CROSS) were being taught the contents of the Mosaic Law not only in the synagogues of Palestine but Asia, Minor as well?

Most likely not. It was in the Jewish synagogues in Asia, Minor, and not only in Palestine, that non-Jews were setting under the instruction of the Rabbis and being instructed in their responsibilities regarding their Covenant with God and the Laws and Commandments that framed it. And let us not forget that such instruction came out of the Laws of Moses which we saw above in Hebrews 5. We need realize that it is in this teaching of the Laws of Moses after the time of Jesus' death according to the New Testament that non-Jews found their instruction concerning this "Pattern of Worship" intended for them as found in God's Sabbaths and Holy Days let alone in other forms of worship like prayer, "proper giving", etc.

This is startling and should arouse you from your spiritual slumber as we proceed to discover more truths for too long overlooked by the Gentile Church.

Answer for yourself: If the churches founded by Paul were being taught the Mosaic Law, then why aren't you?

Answer for yourself: Do we pattern ourselves as Christians today after the "Pattern of Worship" taught by James and the other Apostles of the first century? If we can see that these non-Jews kept the Biblical Holy Days and Sabbaths of God then why do we stand for substitutes today? Why do we quote "they continued in the Apostle's doctrine" when we don't?

Please share these papers with your Pastors and see how they will try to refute what the words given by God really say in the original languages in your Bible. It is so simple, for the most part most who will deny what I show you will do so only because they lack the necessary language skill in Greek and Hebrew, for if they had these skills they would have discovered what I and hundreds of other diligent Pastors and Teachers in the Body of Christ have discovered that altered the courses of our lives.

Let us examine the Greek word for "milk":

Lexicon Greek 1051

1051 gala {gal'-ah} of uncertain affinity; TDNT - 1:645,111; n n AV - milk 5; 5

1) milk

1. a metaphor. for the less difficult Christian truths

Answer for yourself: Do you see where we as believers are admonished by Paul to not be focused on or dwell on "less difficult Christian truths?" I hope so.

Let us examine the Greek word for "strong":

Lexicon Greek 4731

4731 stereos {ster-eh-os'} from 2476; TDNT - 7:609,1077; adj AV - strong 2, sure 1, steadfast 1; 4

- 1) strong, firm, immovable, solid, hard, rigid
- 1a) in a bad sense, cruel, stiff, stubborn, hard
- 1b) in a good sense, firm, steadfast

Answer for yourself: Do you see that by no longer dwelling on "less difficult Christian truths" and beginning to focus on the deeper truths contained in the Laws of Moses and the Laws of Noah contained within them [for instance that Gentiles are commanded to study and follow the Mosaic Law such as rejecting all forms of idolatry surrounding the "godman", celebrating and observing the Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths of the Lord and not pagan "Christianized" holidays which we have done, keeping the Sabbath instead of Sunday, righteously giving the Tithe to areas where God said it should be given and applied and not where your church often directs it, and voluntarily eating "kosher" which is a Biblical truth "hidden" in the English wording and translation of your Bibles] will cause our lives to be strong, steadfast, and we will not be tossed "to-and-fro" by every conflicting wind of doctrine, even Christian doctrine, much of which is in error because of the failure of the Pastors and Teachers to study deeply the truths in the Bible? I hope so.

Let us now examine the Greek word for "useth":

Lexicon Greek 3348

Let us now examine the Greek word for "have":

- 4) to hold one's self to a thing, to lay hold of a thing, to adhere or cling to

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God? He sure is as we see below.

Let us examine the Greek word for "unskillful":

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and will not learn to experience the deeper things of God? He sure is.

This is a monumental statement because I dare say that we have failed, due to lack of study to understand the real message in many Scriptures and passages (both Old and New Testaments), thus we have failed to grasp the truths that the first century church both knew and experienced and commanded be taken into all the world to the Gentiles in the Great Commission. All we have to do is look around and compare our experience to what we read in the Book of Acts and we can easily see that "something" is missing.

Let us now examine the Greek word for "word," as in Word of God:

Lexicon Greek 3056

 - 2e) relation, i.e. with whom as judge we stand in relation

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and will not learn to experience the deeper things of God concerning the "sayings of God, the moral precepts of God, the doctrines and teachings of God?" He sure is!

Answer for yourself: Does God desires His children to be "unskillful and ignorant" in His words that lead to our righteousness? No. Let us investigate.

Please, dear saints, pay close attention to the Greek word for "righteousness":

Lexicon Greek 1343

1343 dikaiosune {dik-ah-yos-oo'-nay} from 1342; TDNT - 2:192,168; n f AV - righteousness 92; 92

- 1) in a broad sense: state of him who is as he ought to be, righteousness, the condition acceptable to God
- 1a) the doctrine concerning the way in which man may attain a state approved of God (notice there is a way a man can attain approval of God by something he does!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!)....THE JEWS HAVE ALWAYS KNOWN THIS.....BUT NOT THE CHRISTIANS
- 1b) integrity, virtue, purity of life, rightness, correctness of thinking feeling, and acting
- 2) in a narrower sense, justice or the virtue which gives each his due

Answer for yourself: Does one's correctness of thinking, feeling, and acting, which are a direct result of what he believes, have a bearing upon him be acceptable to God? It sure does.

Answer for yourself: Can you see the importance of believing correctly, for if the truths we affix our actions upon are faulty or incorrect, then our conduct and behavior is less than pleasing to God?

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word (and in the context of Hebrews this meant failing to understand the Mosaic Laws which provide the foundations for one's beliefs and appropriate actions), that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and fail to achieve that position of acceptableness before God? He sure is.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that when Paul said "all Scripture is inspired by God and profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction" that NONE of the New Testament had been written yet and could only refer to the Old Testament (the Law, Prophets, and Writings)?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that it would take almost 400 years for the New Testament to be put together?

Please don't quit reading the article at this point, for let me remind you that I didn't choose these words or orchestrate Biblical history but the Holy Spirit did, and although we might not have heard of these concepts and doctrines preached from the pulpits of our churches, it does not change the fact that we will be judged by the Word of God and not by our denominational doctrines and what we have earnestly believed to be correct. We must learn today the truth as taken from analysis of the original words of the passages and Scriptures, Biblical history, Biblical culture, archeology, etc.

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and fail to understand and obey the doctrines concerning the way in which we MAY attain a state of approval before God? He sure is.

Answer for yourself: Do you see that besides the sacrifice of Messiah that we play a role in making ourselves acceptable to God as indicated by the Greek word for "righteousness"?

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and fail to obtain the CORRECT way of thinking and feeling that ultimately leads to our CORRECT behavior, obedience, and conduct; thus assuring our position of approval before God? He sure is.

Now please pay close attention to this next word!

Let us examine the Greek root word for "righteousness" which occurs so often in the New Testament:

Lexicon Greek 1342

1342 dikaios {dik'-ah-yos} from 1349; TDNT - 2:182,168; adj AV - righteous 41, just 33, right 5, meet 2; 81

- 1) righteous, observing divine laws
- 1a) in a wide sense, upright, righteous, virtuous, keeping the commands of God
- 1a1) of those who seem to themselves to be righteous, who pride themselves to be righteous, who pride themselves in their virtues, whether real or imagined
- 1a2) innocent, faultless, guiltless
- 1a3) used of him whose way of thinking, feeling, and acting is wholly conformed to the will of God, and who therefore needs no rectification in the heart or life

- 1a3a) only Christ truly
- 1a4) approved of or acceptable of God
- 1b) in a narrower sense, rendering to each his due and that in a judicial sense, passing just judgment on others, whether expressed in words or shown by the manner of dealing with them

Answer for yourself: Were you aware before you read this article that being "righteous" contains man's responsibility for observing divine laws and keeping the commands of God?

Answer for yourself: Do you see again the concept of "being approved or acceptable of God" tied to keeping the commands of God and His divine laws?

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and will fail to observe Divine laws and Commandments intended to make us acceptable to God?

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God, believing that these Divine Laws and Commandments have passed away, thereby assuring that we will fail to observe these Divine laws and Commandments, thereby hampering making ourselves acceptable to God? Most assuredly.

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and fail to realize that the commandments of God have NOT passed away, and much more, fail to obey them? He sure is.

Answer for yourself: Is the author of the Book of Hebrews telling us that if we hold to, cling to, possess in our minds, or find ourselves focusing on the elementary truths of our faith, to the neglect of the deeper truths of God's Word, that we will be unskillful in our understanding of the Word of God and fail to think, feel, and thus act in a manner pleasing to God, thus not assuring our "acceptance" before God? As hard as it may be for you to accept this concept, the original words of the Greek manuscripts from which we take a poor English translation say otherwise.

Let us examine the Greek word for "babe":

Lexicon Greek 3516

3516 nepios {nay'-pee-os} from an obsolete particle ne- (implying negation) and 2031; TDNT - 4:912,631; adj

AV - child 7, babe 6, childish 1; 14

- 1) an infant, little child
- 2) a minor, not of age
- 3) metaph. childish, untaught, unskilled

Answer for yourself: In other words, if we fail to study for ourselves, is there any way we can be assured that we are being taught Biblical truths by those we subject ourselves unto? No! The sad thing is that we spend our whole lives "hoping" our life-styles are pleasing to God, where if we would have studied, learned, and repented where necessary, we could have had confident assurance that we are both acceptable to God and a good witness of Him to others.

Answer for yourself: Has the failure on our part to study the Bible, the original languages of the Bible, Biblical history and culture "in-depth" robbed us of vital information so necessary to our proper love and obedience to God? Most definitely.

Answer for yourself: Is the first church council of Jerusalem, which was headed up by the Apostle James in 50 C.E. LOADED with hidden truths which, when known, should alter the course of the Christian's life? Most definitely! Let us continue our investigation as we dig out these truths for our lives.

As you can see, this momentous church council occurred in 50 C.E. in Jerusalem and speaks to the Christian today. Sadly, very few Christians have known the extent of what is taught in Acts 15, nor heard their Pastor or Teacher teach on the subject. The participants at this first church council are the zakenim (elders) and sh'liikim (apostles) which formed the foundation for this new Messianic movement within Biblical Judaism. Let us never forget that Yeshua's church is built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, and not the Baptists or the Catholics, yet the majority of Christians today know very little about "apostolic doctrine," and it was this "apostolic doctrine" which the church of Jesus Christ "steadfastly continued in!" This means that the "Apostle's Doctrine" is Jewish Doctrine! It is time we reinterpret "Jewish" not as "cursed" but "Biblical"!!!

Instead we know only our "denominational and non-denominational" doctrines, which more often than not, conflicts and opposes "Apostolic Doctrine" which Yeshua and the Apostles both believed, taught, and commanded taken to the Gentiles throughout the world in fulfillment of the Great Commission.

You may have never noticed, but the Great Commission of Matt. 28 DOES NOT SAY to take Yeshua or his "identity" to the world, or some later "hammered-out Christology" conceived over the next 3 centuries by Rome or their disguised "Sun Worship" be taken into all the world but rather it commands that the Commandments, the Torah and the Law of Moses is to taken unto the Gentiles throughout the whole world for it is within these Laws of Moses we find our Laws of Noah repeated and the ways by which we can make ourselves "acceptable to God" as had the Jews. This is so, so important to realize!

"Not so" you say, well lets investigate and I promise you that you will be amazed by what you will now learn.

Let us continue in the second article to lay the foundations that are necessary for us to correctly understand how Gentiles were to come to God and be accepted into Yeshua's church ("fitting" into Yeshua's church is called "engrafted" by Paul in Romans 9-11). Shalom

Now let us continue in the second article in this series.

"GODFEARERS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: THE PATTERN FOR GENTILE PARTICIPATION IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD #2

This new Messianic movement of the first century following the death, burial, and resurrection of Yeshua (Jesus) faced a problem of the highest magnitude within twenty years after the Cross of Christ: "What are we going to do with these Gentiles who claim to be followers of Yeshua Meshichenu (Yeshua, our Jewish Messiah)?" The solution: "We should not make it difficult for the Gentiles who are turning to God." (Acts 15: 19-21). Yacov (James) and the head zakenim (elders) then proceeded to mention "4 abstentions" for these Gentiles who wished to be part of the Yeshua Movement:

- 1) Don't eat food polluted by idols;
- 2) Don't engage in sexual immorality;
- 4) Don't eat blood.
- 5) Don't eat the meat of strangled animals;

To twentieth century Western people this list seems pretty simple--the only abstention those in our society have to worry about is #2--sexual immorality. So now it's clear sailing for all those Gentiles. Thanks a lot for reading this article. But wait, that is not as simple as the English makes it seem, for Yeshua is Jewish, and without a proper understanding of the language of Hebrew, the Greek language from which the Hebrew was translated, the history, and the culture of the first century, you and I cannot be assured we have the correct understanding of this Acts 15 passage. Since God is the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow, then let us never forget that obedience is better than any sacrifice today as well as yesterday (first century church).

As you read this article, as well as others I have researched and prepared, you should have easily seen that reading the English often leads us astray from the mind of Christ. You may say "You mean it's not quite that easy and clear?" You may say "You mean to tell me there may be more to understanding what James is telling the Gentiles than meets the eye? Do you mean more information is assumed as "given" in this situation than is normally understood by the normal Christian nowadays?" That is exactly what I am telling you as you will shortly understand. Let us investigate.

WHY SHOULD THE CHRISTIAN BE AWARE OF THE HISTORICAL SITUATION IN THE BOOK OF ACTS?

The historical situation in Acts 15 must be uncovered in order to understand the impact and importance of these 4 abstentions for Gentile believers in the first century, so we as good Christians and followers of "the Christ" can then apply that understanding of Biblical truth to today's circumstances. Add to this process the tragic observation that the vast majority of today's Gentile Christian congregations totally ignore these 4 simple instructions and it becomes clear that this decision by Yeshua's church from long ago which was intended for ALL GENTILE BELIEVERS has been blatantly misunderstood and or ignored for the past 19 centuries.

Today's Christians who understand Yeshua's words "why do you say you love me and not obey ye" should be open to repentance when in-depth Bible study recovers long-lost truth which never changed that both challenge and correct their religious belief system and conduct

We must, with a good conscience, apply these truths to our lives today, regardless if they seem different from what you have heard or weren't previously aware of or not. If today's Christians want to uncover these truths and their significance for their lives, it will be a difficult but not unfruitful task, but such is our test of the level of love we have for God and His son who died for us. Let us continue for our love for God is manifested through obedience and not mental faith which lacks righteous responses in obedience to "every word that proceeds from the mouth of God." This is of major importance if we truly love God, not to mention the rewards and treasure laid up in Heaven in our account that comes only in response to obedience.

THE HISTORICAL SITUATION IN ACTS 15

It is important as we begin to understand who these Gentile believers were that were being spoken of by James. The overwhelming majority, if not all, of these Gentiles wanted to be accepted as full participants in this Jewish faith through the ministry of Yeshua. They were in a special category of believing Gentiles called "Godfearers." Whether you are aware of it or not, we as Christians are called "Godfearers" in the New Testament. Let's investigate these questions:

- Who were Godfearers?
- What was their belief and practice?
- How did they fit into the theological and historical scheme of the time?
- As Christians are we considered "Godfearing?"

WHO WERE THE GODFEARERS?

"Godfearers" in the technical sense of the word used by both Luke and Josephus (Sebomenoi and or Phoboumenoi in Greek) and refer to that special group of Gentiles who worshipped in synagogues and adopted a Jewish belief system and a Jewish life-style for themselves, stopping just short of formal conversion (failed to be circumcised) and becoming proselytes.

Answer for yourself: As Christians, have you accepted the God of Israel and worship Him in your churches?

Answer for yourself: As Christians, do you follow the Old and New Testament to the best of your ability and worship the God who brought you these revelations?

Answer for yourself: As Christians, can you see that you fit the "pattern" of the New Testament "Godfearer" in that you have not made conversion to Judaism and not become a proselyte to the Jewish faith?

The word Sebomenoi (with or without Theos) means "Godfearer" and is based on a parallel term for worshippers of pagan deities. Implicit in the term are the concepts that these people claim to worship the only true God, and that they worship Him with specific acts, not just with their "mental attitude." The Book of Acts mentions "Phoboumenos" five times, and mentions "sebomenos" six times with or without the addition word "Theos-god" to denote Gentile adherents to the Jewish faith who were NOT proselytes. In this context, these two terms are a "functional equivalent" of each other. Thus, these Godfearers were NOT merely well-intentioned Gentiles walking around worshipping the God of Israel in their own private non-structured way or in a way that leaned on their own understanding. Rather, there were certain requirements and Laws which must be adhered to and obeyed to be considered as a "Godfearer."

Answer for yourself: Has your church or Pastor instructed you in these Laws and requirements to be part of Yeshua's church in the same way both James and Paul commanded?

Emil Schurer quotes archeological inscriptions which point to "a defined category of Gentile Godfearers attached to the Jewish community" (Grafted into Israel as Paul describes in Romans). The Dictionary of the New Testament Theology adds that "Sebonenos" was the regular term for non-Jews who attached (grafted into Israel) themselves the synagogue in this precise and specific way. The clear conclusion reached about both terms in Acts (i.e. phoboumenoi and sebomenoi) is that "with this concept...we are dealing with a technical term (to be distinguished from Theosebes (godliness) which specifically describes a defined category of Gentiles associated with the synagogue.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the first Gentile believers in Yeshua as Messiah mentioned in the Book of Acts are from this special and technical realm of Godfearers, as the Greek terms clearly indicate, and are NOT Gentiles who only felt warmth and attraction to the God of Israel. The Godfearers ALREADY had received considerable Jewish (understood as Biblical) training and had made a considerable Jewish (understood as Biblical) commitment as I am attempting to demonstrate through the continued teachings of Bet Emet Ministry. The Theological Dictionary of the New Testament sums up the situation: "Thus the first conversion of a Gentile under Peter in Acts 10 is strictly the winning of a marginal member of the Jewish community (Cornelius was ALREADY a worshipper of the true God of the Bible before the message of Yeshua was brought to him) for the Christian community." According to Schurer, John 12:20 probably reflects this group in describing "Greeks (Godfearers) who went up to worship (at the Temple) at the Festival (Passover) time". Again we see Greeks (Gentile Godfearers) keeping the Biblical Festivals such as Passover.

WHAT WERE THE BELIEFS AND PRACTICES OF THE GODFEARERS?

It is important to realize that these Gentile Godfearers were integral parts of synagogues within Israel and throughout the Diaspora (exile). And as noted above, Gentile Godfearers worshipped God with specific Jewish (understood as Biblical) acts after the cross of Christ, and not just with mental assent to a set of beliefs or doctrines. These specific acts required of Gentiles which are called "necessary things" in Acts 15:28 PRIOR to being admitted to Yeshua's Church following the Jerusalem Council of 50 C.E. (which was headed by James and which wrote letters given to Paul to be given to all of his Gentile churches in Asia Minor) included:

- 1). Adherence to the 7-part Noachide commandments
- 2). Adherence to the Sabbath commandment
- 3). Adherence to the dietary laws

Answer for yourself: If this was required of Gentiles to be part of Yeshua's church, can we be a part of the church Yeshua is building (for I will build MY church) without obedience to these "necessary things" or are we members in good standing in man's church (the word "church" is understood as an "assembly"?)

These Laws, as seen in Second Temple Judaism (Judaism during the era 100 B.C.E.--70 C.E.), is the bedrock of Jewish observance even today. Gentiles desiring to "imitate Yeshua" will do these things or else they as Christians are but a "poor shadow" of the real Yeshua.

Dear Christians please understand that ANY other Jewish observances beyond these "necessary things" (understood as the Laws of Noah) would have been a matter of personal choice (Isa 56). These Gentile Godfearers were encouraged by Jewish teachers within the synagogue structure to be circumcised, thus completing their "conversion" to Judaism; and according to G. F. Moore, "it was not uncommon for the next generation (their children) to be circumcised." But understood for "Godfearers" circumcision is optional and never commanded of them by God as was required of the Jew.

CORNELIUS, THE GODFEARER

Cornelius, the Gentile Godfearer mentioned in Acts 10, was a centurion at Caesarea and serves as a good example of what a Godfearer did religiously. First, he and his household were devout (the Greek word is Eusebes) and Godfearing (Phoboumenos Ton Theon), which is a double adjective referring to him and his family which shows their exemplary lives characterized by Jewish norms and values.

Please understand when I say "Jewish norms and values" I am not asserting conversion to Judaism, but lets face it, Jewish values and norms happened to be expressions of BIBLICAL VALUES AND NORMS! Luke also mentions that Cornelius prayed constantly to God and gave alms liberally to people in need (which the Rabbis call tzedekah). These two actions (prayer and alms giving) would be actions even beyond the call of "Jewish duty," even more than the minimum for Jews. Interestingly enough, one afternoon during his regular 3 o'clock prayer time ("ninth hour" was a prescribed Temple prayer time which survives in synagogue practice today and was the hour evening incense was offered in the Temple) an angel came to Cornelius in Caesarea (a totally Gentile-built and Gentile-run city), to tell him that his prayer that his alms "had come up for a memorial" before God. That means that Cornelius' (an uncircumcised Gentile believer in God who followed the Laws of Noah and whom at that time knew nothing about Yeshua as the Messiah) prayers and alms had been accepted by God in the same way that the incense at the Temple and the smoke of a burnt offering "went up" and were accepted by God on behalf of the Jews. The same Greek word (snebenov) is used to translate in the Septuagint (Greek translation of the Hebrew Old Testament) the Hebrew word for offering: "olah"-literally, "an ascending" (understood as smoke ascending to God in an acceptable sacrifice).

Answer for yourself: Was a Godfearer who prayed continuously and gave alms acceptable to God prior to his understanding about Yeshua? This may be hard for you to admit considering what you have heard your whole life in the Christian Church, but the text I just showed you, as well as Jewish history of their faith say otherwise.

Then the angel instructs Cornelius, to get in touch with Peter, who was in Jaffa, and the rest, as they say, is history. But note that what Cornelius did to deserve the commendation were Jewish religious acts and not his faith (not just any old good deeds would do) and that they (his righteous works) were accepted by the Jewish God using Jewish terminology and concepts, even though Cornelius was "technically" a Gentile. Let us never forget that there were more than just this one man who was a Godfearer in that there was a whole groups of Godfearers all around the Roman world who totally identified themselves with the Jewish community, except for circumcision which was the final step in commitment as a Jewish proselyte in the process of conversion.

Many Gentiles, while not prepared to enter this Jewish community as full proselytes through circumcision, were attracted by the simple monotheism of Jewish synagogue worship and by the ethical standards of the Jewish way of life. We may indeed say that Cornelius had every qualification short of circumcision which could satisfy Jewish requirement for full inclusion into Israel (grafted into Israel) with equal rights (could own land, hold offices in synagogues, etc.). It would be such Gentile Godfearers who would form the nucleus of the Christian communities in one city after another throughout the nations of the world in the first century follow the cross of Christ.

HOW DID GODFEARERS FIT INTO THE HISTORICAL - THEOLOGICAL SCHEME OF THE WORLD AT THAT TIME?

Obviously, as we have seen, Godfearers were more than "pagans" or "foreigners" but less than proselytes. Let's examine now these differing communities of people and their status in the eyes of the Jewish community during Second Testament times.

CLASSES OF NON-JEWISH BELIEVERS: PROSELYTES, GODFEARERS, AND FOREIGNER

Underlying the worldview of the Greco-Roman culture at the time is an unsympathetic attitude towards Jews. In Greek and Roman literature of the time the judgments about Jews are in general very derogatory. Seen in its most militant state, during Seleucid rule, Greek culture felt that Judaism was extremely old-fashioned and too highly nationalistic to fit in with the concept of the modern Greek world. Roman culture, beginning in 70 B.C.E. in Israel under Pompey, tolerated Jewish belief as long as it allowed for Rome to have the final governmental power. Rome tended to want to keep peace in its provinces and allowed different groups under its rule to have their own religious and cultural differences. Jewishness to Rome was a "quaint," unattractive religion which served well to keep the Jewish nation "unified" and serving Roman interest.

Passages from writers of the time such as Josephus, Juvenal, and Tertullian give us the impression that the Greco-Roman culture saw Jewishness as quite ridiculous. Thus, becoming a Godfearing person was not a popular action designed to move a person to a more influential sphere, in fact, it would have quite the opposite effect.

Living within Israel itself at the time there were Godfearers, exemplified by Cornelius and presumably also the Centurion in Luke 7 and Matt. 10, but "making proselytes" in an active "missionary" way was not common within Israel. As a rule, proselytes and Godfearers were welcomed by the Jews and regarded very highly, but there was in Palestine no active propaganda to further the cause of proselytism.

However, proselytism and Godfearers were very active in the Diaspora (the Jewish communities outside of Israel). According to Josephus in Antioch and Syria large numbers of Gentiles attended Jewish services. In Damascus almost the whole female part of the population was devoted to Judaism and it was quite often women of higher social standing who followed this trend. Evidently these Jewish communities encouraged and welcomed both Gentile proselytes and Godfearers.

Hellenistic Judaism developed an offensive against paganism. They were eager to show up the immorality and senselessness of idolatry and display the rationality and sublimity of Jewish monotheism. Hellenistic Judaism had an apologetic ideology as there were many Godfearers who accepted the one God of the Jews, but not all the Laws of the same God. Hellenistic Judaism had almost succeeded in making Judaism a world religion in the literal sense of the words. Early Christianity then won the victory over paganism using Jewish customs, traditions, and teachings.

This knowledge of history sheds much light on James' closing remarks to the zakenim (elders) and sh'likim (apostles) in Acts 15:21: "For Moses (the Pentateuch) has been preached in every city (in the Diaspora) from the earliest times (since 722B.C.E., over 700 years) and is read in the synagogue on every Sabbath." In other words, these Gentile Godfearers who want to become full-fledged believers in God through the ministry of Yeshua have ALREADY received Moses' instructions concerning how people are to live (as taught in the Noachide and Sinatic covenants since when Moses (Pentateuch-first 5 books of the Bible) is taught, such teaching encompasses both the Laws of Noah and the Mosaic Covenant).

Through attending synagogues in their own cities where the Torah (Mosaic writings were taught), Gentiles were ALREADY familiar with the basics of having a relationship with the one true God of Israel.

Now please pay close attention to what comes next.

James, the pastor of Yeshua's Church called the Messianic Movement within Judaism, is REQUIRING these 4 further instructions for Gentiles who want to be Messianists and a part of Yeshua's church.

Notice Acts 15:28 states , that it seemed "good to them and the Holy Spirit" to REQUIRE these adherences of Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: Since God is the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow, and since it seemed good to the Holy Spirit (20 years after the death of Jesus) to require as "necessary" of Gentiles to be adherent to the Laws of Noah, to be adherent to the Sabbath requirements, and to be adherent to "clean/unclean" food laws to BE INCLUDED WITHIN JESUS' CHURCH, then does these "required things" apply to us today as well?

Answer for yourself? If these "necessary things" [adherence to Laws of Noah, adherence to Sabbath requirement, adherence to kosher] were required before Gentiles could be part of Yeshua's Church as commanded by James, the Lord's brother and head of the first Christian Church, then are we part of Yeshua's church if we neglect or are ignorant of them in our lives?

This Apostolic decision was made to make sure that there is no question as to what the "bottom line" of observance is by Godfearing Gentiles: the Noachide commandments, the Sabbath and dietary laws.

EXACTLY WHAT WAS EXPECTED OF GENTILES BY THE JEWISH COMMUNITY AT THAT TIME AND WHAT WAS NOT EXPECTED?

The Jewish religious concepts of the Second Temple period understood that the other nations of the world who did not follow the one true God were Godless (goyim-at least without the true God) and or pagan. However, for purposes of God's judgment of other nations (including his right to judge them), the Sinaitic covenant did not apply to these "goyim," having been given exclusively to Israel (Israel must be understood as a mixed multitude of Jews and Gentiles as well who accepted God's Covenant as Sinai). Don't get tripped up by failing to understand that WITHIN THE MOSAIC COVENANT AND LAWS IS CONTAINED ALL THE LAWS IN THE COVENANT OF NOAH. Conversely, there were many Laws contained in the Mosaic Covenant that were not included in the Covenant of Noah (Gentiles were not given all of the Mosaic Laws). Instead the rabbis felt, as seems clear from the passage in Gen. 9:1-18, there is a covenant for all the children of Noah (i.e. the whole world), including not only people but all living creatures (see v.10). Based on this section of Scripture, the rabbis found 7 major requirements incumbent for all nations:

- 1) no idolatry;
- 2) no incest/adultery;
- 3) no murder;
- 4) no blasphemy (profanation of the name of God);
- 5) no theft;
- 6) justice towards others (see Gen. 9:5...);
- 7) no eating flesh with blood in it and or cutting off flesh from a living animals.

To these generally agreed tenants some rabbis added others such as taking blood from a living animal. Several also mention prohibitions against witchcraft and other spiritual sorcery such as found in Dt. 18:10-11.

These then are the major categories by which God would judge all nations. To the rabbis it was clear that although God loved all His creatures and His creation, the goyim (Gentiles) had turned away from Him and would not even follow the Noachide commandments. Again if the children of Noah could not abide and observe the 7 commandments which were enjoined upon them, how much less could they have accepted and fulfilled all the commandments of the Sinaitic Law of Moses?

The identifying terms used by the rabbis at this time for these goyim (Gentiles who are not Godfearers and who do not practice the Laws of Noah, kosher, and Sabbath) include: idolaters, the wicked, the enemies of Israel, the enemies of God, and the others. There was a different category, however, for those goyim who did abide by the Noachide covenant. They were called foreigners or aliens. Any Gentile who lived in the land of Israel and among Israelites was enjoined, at the very least, to keep the Noachide covenant. Keeping the Noachide Laws was their "bottom line" and if they did not, they were to be expelled. If they did keep the Laws of Noah, they were no longer called goyim, but gerim. The Talmud delineates them further by the new term ger toshev. These (ger toshev) were foreigners living in the land of Israel who were keeping the 7 Noachide commandments. By the time of the Septuagint (about 200 B.C.E.) the translators used the term "fearers" for the righteous Gentiles outside of natural Israel in contrast to the term proselytes, those righteous Gentiles who formally identified with Israel through conversion which included circumcision, sacrifice, and mikveh (baptism).

WHAT WAS THE NEXT STEP FOR THE NON-JEWISH BELIEVER? CONVERSION TO JUDASIM...THE PROSELYTE

The first "gerim" are mentioned in the Exodus narrative. Among the Jews who left Egypt there were Egyptians who also left their homes in Egypt and crossed the Red Sea, becoming part of the people of Israel [grafted into Israel] (Ex. 12:38). Although they were known as "aliens-gerim" (simply meaning that they were not physical descendants of Jacob), they could be circumcised, thus formally converting to this very early form of Judaism, then partake of the Passover meal with the rest of Israel (at this point, Passover was the only Jewish festival). Note the differentiation between "foreigner" in Ex. 12:43 and the "alien who lives among you." The foreigner may NOT eat the Passover (he is not circumcised and therefore not Jewish-Ex. 12:48), but the alien who is circumcised along with his/her household (converted to Judaism and had become proselytes) MAY EAT the Passover (they are considered Jewish). Verse 49 indicates that the proselyte was to have the same rights and privileges as the native-born Jews: "The same law applies to the native-born and alien." According to Ex. 12:19, the community of Israel is made up of aliens (believers/converts/proselytes who are circumcised) and native-born Jews. Consequently, these "gerim toshevim" who wanted to fully convert always could do so by becoming circumcised and then continuing to follow the Jewish (Biblical) way of life, which then adopted and followed the covenant at Mt. Sinai (Ex. 24) and the attending Laws. Note also that Sabbath observance was technically commanded BEFORE the acceptance of the Sinaitic code (Ex. 20:10 and 23:12). Then although they (Ger Toshevim") were recognized by outward appearances as "aliens," they were now "Jews" in that they had left behind their old country and family and now were subsequently circumcised in order to be "part of the Jewish community." Likewise they had been "adopted" by the native-born Jews as "their own." The rabbis' term for these Ger Toshevim who became circumcised ("proselytes") was ger hazedek (righteous foreigners). How many proselytes there were down through the centuries is impossible to determine, but the rabbis are clear about the proselyte's relationship to the rest of Israel: "A proselyte is like a newborn child."

Answer for yourself: Does the above "newborn child" remind you of the term "born again" and historically could this term mean the conversion of the non-Jew to Judaism? This brings a whole new meaning to John 4 and Jesus and Nicodemus. More on that later in the website.

Let us examine being "born again" as understood as becoming a "new creature":

The Apostle Paul instructs Gentiles in Corinth that is they accept God through Yeshua, thus being in Christ, then God will consider these pagan Gentiles as "new creatures" whereby their old sinful life-styles pass away in repentance as they come to knowledge and obedience of God's will for their lives.

2 Cor 5:17

17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

The Greek word for "creature" is Strong's # 2937 ktisis which is understood in Greek as: the act of founding, establishing, building, etc.

- a) the act of creating, creation
- b) creation, that is, a thing created; used of individual things, beings, a creature, a creation
- 1) anything created
- 2) after a rabbinical usage (by which a man converted from idolatry to Judaism was called)
- 3) the sum or aggregate of things created
- c) an institution, an ordinance

Answer for yourself: Do you see for yourself that when the Apostle Paul instructs Gentiles in Corinth to come to God through Yeshua he intends them to become "new creatures" by leaving their idolatry and convert to Judaism and not Catholic or Protestant Christianity as we know it today?

Answer for yourself: As a Christian you consider yourself a "new creature," and although you or others call yourself a "new creature" are you really a "new creature" as defined by the words of your Bible, and as understood by the Apostle Paul if you neglect or are ignorant of the Laws of Noah, kosher, Sabbath, and Biblical Festivals such as Passover (Pesach), First Fruits (Bikkurim), Unleavened Bread (Hag HaMatzah), Pentecost (Shavuot), Rosh HaShannah, Feast of Trumpets (Yom Teruah), Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), Tabernacles (Sukkoth), etc?

Answer for yourself: What will you do having been a Christian your whole life, having done precious study on your own and relied on preaching for Biblical truths (and there are over 22,000 different denominations and varieties of disunity and preaching to choose from), and one day die and find out that you were never a "new creature" in the Biblical sense of the inspired word as understood by Paul, James, the Apostles, and the Yeshua's church which followed Yeshua's command to take this information to Gentiles worldwide?

Answer for yourself: Do you now see a much deeper meaning than believing in Yeshua as a condition for being considered by Paul and Yeshua as a "new creature"? I surely hope so!

The proselyte is, however, required and expected to be as strictly observant as the native-born Jew, including paying the Temple tax (this is he funds demanded of God to build buildings of worship and not as is done today with the misappropriation of the Tithe). The book of Ruth, of course, portrays the most beautiful example of how God can highly honor a proselyte, by choosing her as the great-grandmother of David.

After the building of the Second Temple there was a recognized procedure for proselytes. For men, there was circumcision, followed by immersion (mikveh/baptism), then offering a sacrifice at the Temple. For women there was just the mikveh and Temple sacrifice. For Diaspora proselytes (outside the land of Israel) the Temple sacrifice was probably waived, or at least postponed, because of the great distance involved and its attendant difficulty to achieve..

As previously noted, the Godfearers' observance of the Law was located between the full proselyte (circumcised) and the gerim toshev (non circumcised).

Answer for yourself: Can you better understand now that this is where the Christian should stand today in faith and obedience since the matter was legislated by Yeshua's hand picked Pastor as well as the Apostle Paul who were in agreement on the matter?

Circumcised Ger toshev were known as ger hashair (foreigners of the gate). To the Godfearer's observance of the Noachide covenant they added Sabbath and dietary Law observance. It seem that Godfearers stopped just short of circumcision which would mean total and formal conversion, thus no longer being considered a Godfearer but Ger hashair or proselyte in full conversion to Judaism (a good example is Cornelius who lacked circumcision). Today in America with male babies being circumcised as a matter of routine without any religious significance by all but the Jewish people, then circumcision would not apply and would not mean that Christians who study, understand, and accept the Laws of Noah, kosher, and Sabbaths would be considered as if they had made full conversion to Judaism which they have not, and rightfully so since as Gentiles we need to be an accurate expression of Gentiles who worship God in Spirit and in Truth. If every Christian Gentile converted to Judaism, or if every Jew converted to Christianity then there would not be in the earth the witness of "two olive branches" or the "two candlesticks" whom are to have the same witness of God to non believers. The reasons for Godfearers in the first century not formally joining Judaism are not clear to us twentieth century people. Some scholars, like Bruce, maintain that circumcision was both painful and shameful for men in that culture (since Gentile pagans had practiced a form of sexual immorality as a form of false religion, let alone risky considering health factors, where 8 day of babies have a double immunity (grown men do not) against infection for 6 months of their early lives and can better withstand the dangers of circumcision. Some also might have been fearful of anti-Semitism. At any rate, we do know that these Gentile believers in God through Yeshua, called Godfearers in the New Testament, were every bit as Jewishly observant as their Jewish friends as they had been undergoing discipling and instruction in their local synagogues. These people (Godfearers) were not just well-intentioned "Gentiles," but Jewishly educated and committed to the Jewish way of life which was the pattern given to Israel (consisting of a mixed multitude of Gentiles and Jews at Sinai). It was "this pattern of obedience" which was spoken orally by God in 70 languages to the 70 nations of the world at Sinai, for God called all men everywhere to repent and follow His will which was spoken orally and surrounded the whole world at the giving of the Torah (teaching, instruction, Law in Hebrew) at Sinai. Only Israel, a mixture of Jews and Gentiles at Sinai, responded with a "yes" as seen in their memorial statement "we will do all that You say!" To this commitment God would in response call them (a mixture of Jews and Gentiles) a "holy people and a holy nation and a royal priesthood" which was to equip the nation of Israel to function as a mediator between God and rest of mankind. Israel's (Judaism as well as Messianic Judaism as seen in a distorted fashion in most of Christianity today) function is still to bring the Gentiles to God for as Romans 9 states.

Thus, Godfearing Gentiles, like our example of Cornelius, probably were more deeply devoted to Judaism than many native-born Jews.

In summary, let us tabulate our results from our search so far:

- I. Goyim: idolators, wicked, pagans,
- II. Foreigners (Ger toshev):
 - 1. Non Jews living in Israel
 - 2. Any Gentile who wanted to be righteous (i.e. "saved)
 - 3. Required to observe the 7 Noachide commandments
- III. Godfearers (Ger hashair)
 - 1. Required to observe the & Noachide commandments
 - 2. Required to observe the Sabbath
 - 3. Required to observe the dietary Laws plus others as they choose (Isa. 56)
 - 4. Expected to maintain synagogue discipleship where "Moses is preached" and not Paul
 - 5. Lack circumcision
- IV. Jews: Native Born -plus- Proselyte

- 1. Proselytes were given all the requirements listed above for the Godfearer
- 2. Required circumcision for males
- 3. Required mikveh for females
- 4. Sacrifice in Temple (optional in Diaspora)
- 5. Pay Temple tax yearly

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN FOR THE CHRISTIAN CONCERNING ACTS 15?

The vision related to Peter in Acts 10 and his subsequent experience with Cornelius and his household proved to Peter [also later to the zakenim (elders) and sh'likim (apostles)] that it was NOT NECESSARY for these "gerim" to proceed with full conversion to Judaism in order to receive God's provision of atonement through the faith of Yeshua. They could come as they were.....Godfearing Gentiles. There were only 4 further abstentions they needed to be clear about which actually delineated more clearly their already fully Jewish commitment.

- First, they should not eat food sacrificed to idols which gave the appearance that they have not given up idolatrous practices. Notice Rav Shaul and Jochanan HaSchliach also objected to eating food sacrificed to idols in I Cor. 8:10-22; and Rev. 2 because of the outward meaning of the action to highly observant Jews and "weaker brothers" from pagan backgrounds.
- Second, they should not engage in "blood" which is understood in the Laws of Noah as violence and premeditated murder for such destroys the very image of God within His creation.
- Third, they should not engage in sexual immorality as defined by Jewish standards which prohibit sex outside of marriage. Here again, the average "pagan Gentile" would see nothing wrong in visiting the prostitutes dedicated to serving and worshipping pagan Gods. Such conduct was not defined as immoral behavior outside of Israel but was so by God. But it is a very grievous sin to the followers of the God of Israel (I Cor. 6:9-20), and should likewise be to those Godfearers who wish to follow Him.
- Lastly, abstention from meat of strangled animals (animals killed with the blood still left in the body) and from eating blood in general are a stronger reiteration of the Noachide regulations already understood and practiced by Godfearers (Gen. 9:4). James even concedes that they probably already knew these abstentions.. "For Moses (the Pentateuch) has been preached in every city..." These tenets would be nothing new for Godfearers.

WAS CIRCUMCISION AND FORMAL ENTRY INTO JUDAISM MANDATORY FOR GODFEARERS WHO BELIEVED IN MESSIAH?

No. These former Gentile pagans who were now known as Godfearers were already practicing the Torah in their household, where as most Christians today do not or at least are unknowledgeable about Torah. These Godfearers were accepted within Messianic Judaism WITHOUT CIRCUMCISION [which was unheard of in Yeshua's day] as being a branch among "Messianic Judaism" once they accepted Israel's Messiah (or should I say that only that part of Judaism influenced by the death, burial, and resurrection of Yeshua which had repented of their hatred toward Gentiles [such hatred seen in forced circumcision for acceptance of Gentiles among Jews] and accepted these Gentile believes in as equals in God WITHOUT CIRCUMCISION when normative Judaism would not. Understand that the Great Commission only emanated from the Messianic branch of Judaism and not Judaism proper in the first century. It was understood that these Gentile Godfearers would continue to study in the local synagogue and follow God Jewishly (understood as Biblical). By this time this included also following the 4 abstentions from Acts 15 (read the chapter for yourself for these Laws of Noah are mentioned twice in this chapter and are called "necessary things which seemed good to the Apostles and the Holy Spirit as well). But as we have seen, these abstentions were based on guidelines they were already following anyway.

A good example of a congregation that failed even in these basic instructions is Corinth. It is noteworthy that Rav Shaul (the Apostle Paul) has to deal with several areas in which the Corinthian Gentile believers have failed to uphold the Acts 15 stipulations for inclusion into the Messianic Community: e.g. sexual immorality (one man sleeping with his father's wife, some congregates sleeping with prostitutes), and eating meat sacrificed to idols, etc.

Answer for yourself: Why all these problems with these new Gentile believers in Corinth?

These Gentile believers in the Church of Corinth are so uninformed of their Jewish roots that they use the occasion of the 4 Passover cups at the "Lord's Supper" to get drunk! The Godfearing guidelines for the congregation have already been lost and the people are in disarray.

Answer for yourself: Does your Christian Church or your Pastor teach and adhere to these "necessary things" which seemed good to the Holy Spirit and required by Yeshua's church and its leadership for Gentile believers to be considered a part of Yeshua's Church?

Dear brothers and sisters in the Lord, I have studied diligently for years and discovered these little known, and mostly forgotten FACTS which should serve as a clear warning to those Gentile congregations who are unknowledgeable of or openly flout the Acts 15 requirements which Yeshua through the Holy Spirit intended all Gentiles of the world to know, understand, adhere to, and observe.

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN TO ME...A CHRISTIAN?

The Gentile Godfearers in Acts who formed a large share of the core of the congregations founded by Rav Shaul (the Apostle Paul) were not practicing pagans who were converted overnight. They were of a special class of Gentiles who had PREVIOUSLY been taught and nurtured in their local synagogues first, worshipping the God of Israel in Spirit and in Truth through specific Jewish acts and deeds as "new creatures" who turned from idolatry to Judaism. The "bottom line" of observance for Gentiles in the Jewish world of Second Temple Judaism and which were commanded to be taken in letters to strengthen Gentile churches throughout the world following the Acts 15 council would have been the 7 Noachide commandments (of which only 4 are mentioned in Acts 15).

Godfearing Gentiles, however, went even further "by choosing those things that please the Father" (Isa 56), observing the Sabbath, keeping the dietary laws, plus other Jewish observances that they had been taught by their local Jewish church leaders. Thus their life-style already identified them as Jews, even if the final ritual of formal conversion had not yet taken place. Acts 15 describes the full acceptance of these Godfearers by the leadership of Messianic Judaism in Jerusalem. The leaders of Yeshua's church reemphasized 4 of the 7 guidelines contained in the Laws of Noah, which is a Covenant with Noah for all Gentiles of the world prior to progressive revelations and Covenants with the Jewish people which we discover were already what the Godfearers were already practicing. If they maintained their Torah based practices, they would have congregations and practices co-equal with that of their Jewish brothers and sisters. If they failed to maintain their Godfearing life-styles and educational programs, they would fall into the traps of sin that were disrupting as seen in the Corinthian congregation.

It should be very plain by now that Christian Gentiles are intended to maintain Torah practices like those seen in the Biblical Godfearing Gentiles of Yeshua's Church in Acts 15 and Paul's Churches throughout the Book of Acts and following. Such obedient Gentile Christians to the Gospel of Christ and Apostolic Doctrines, instead of adherence to "other Gospels" from denominational and non-denominational creeds and doctrines, which either contradict or neglect such Apostolic teachings, are to be desired by the Christian today who is honest with himself and his God.

"GODFEARERS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: THE PATTERN FOR GENTILE PARTICIPATION IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD #3

Recorded for us in the fifteenth chapter of the Book of Acts one of the most important events recorded in all of Scripture. That event is often overlooked by the majority of Christians who lack understanding of the dynamics of the New Testament as well as the attending history and culture of the first century. What we will see in this article is that "the pattern" for Gentile inclusion into the Yeshua Messianic Movement within Judaism is given by the Holy Spirit and enumerated by the Yeshua's hand-picked pastor Yacov (James) as well as the other Apostles and elders of the first century church. I must remind you that these instructions and commands that came from "Yeshua's (Jesus') church was AFTER THE CROSS which has dramatic importance for us as "Christians" today.

Let us begin with a more detailed account of the history surrounding the events that precipitated the Apostolic Council of 50 C.E.

On reaching Antioch in Syria, from which place they had been sent forth on their mission, Paul and Barnabas took advantage of an early opportunity to assemble the believers and rehearse "all that God had done with them, and how He had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles." Acts 14:27. The church at Antioch was a large and growing one. A center of missionary activity, it was one of the most important of the groups of Christian believers. Its membership was made up of many classes of people from among both Jews and Gentiles.

While the apostles united with the ministers and lay members at Antioch in an earnest effort to reach the Gentiles with the Gospel of Christ, certain Jewish believers from Judea "of the sect of the Pharisees" [some but not all believed this heresy] succeeded in introducing a question that soon led to wide-spread controversy in the church and brought consternation to the believing Gentiles. With great assurance these Judaizing teachers asserted that in order for Gentiles to be saved and accepted within believing Israel, the believing Gentile must be circumcised and must keep the entire Law of Moses just the way the Jew has to [613 mitzvot which included circumcision].

Answer for yourself: Having read the previous two articles, do you remember that Gentiles were not REQUIRED BY GOD to be circumcised to be Godfearers and "accepted by Him" as was Cornelius [circumcision was not part of the Noachide Laws], but only circumcised if they wanted to be fully converted to Judaism and be considered as if they were themselves "Jews"?

Answer for yourself: Are you beginning to see the mercy of God which was expressed through Yeshua's death and resurrection which catalyzed a movement within Judaism to take Eternal Life through the Torah to Gentiles throughout the world which did not require the rite of circumcision which was objectionable to the majority of Gentile men and which caused many of them, as well as their families to reject monotheism of Judaism and die eternally lost?

Paul and Barnabas, aware of the Laws of Noah and the Noachide Covenant, and no longer bigoted in keeping such a simple salvation message from multitudes of Gentiles (like Jonah had previously), met this false doctrine [requiring circumcision and obedience to 613 Laws for Gentiles to be accepted within the Jewish community and become "saved"] with promptness and opposed the continued enforcement by Judaizing Jews of such measures upon the Gentiles which God never gave them in the first place for acceptance with Him (remember Cornelius?).

On the other hand, many of the believing Jews of Antioch favored the position of these "circumcising and Judaizing" brethren which had recently come from Judea. for after all up until this time the only way Gentiles had full acceptance with Jews and Judaism was through circumcision, thereby making full conversion (proselyte) to Judaism which then made these Gentile converts subject to all the Law like the Jews (613 Commandments).

From the result of the efforts and labors of Paul and Barnabas among the Gentiles it was evident that their "converts" to Messianic Judaism (whereby believing Gentiles were accepted within Judaism through adherence to the Laws of Noah, kosher, and Sabbaths [including Feasts and Festivals] without circumcision) would far exceed the Jewish converts in number [requiring circumcision]. The Judaizing Jews feared that if all the Law (613 Mitzvoth which included circumcision) and commandments were not made obligatory upon the Gentiles as a condition of synagogue and church fellowship, the national peculiarities of the Jews, which had hitherto kept them distinct from all other people, would finally disappear from among those who received the gospel message.

The Jews had always prided themselves upon their divinely appointed services, and many of those who had been accepted Yeshua as Messiah understood that God had once clearly outlined the Hebrew manner of worship, and that it was improbable that He would ever authorize a change in any of its specifications. They made one fatal flaw because of their racial prejudices...they imposed upon the Gentiles as conditions of acceptance measures which God never commanded of them; namely circumcision and adherence to all the 613 Commandments in the Law of Moses (as a Noachide believer God gave 7 Commandments or Categories with 66 subsets or manifestations, not 613). These bigoted Judaizing Jews insisted that circumcision and adherence to all 613 of the Mosaic Laws should be incorporated into the rites of Messianic Judaism as far as the Gentiles were concerned (we call Messianic Judaism today Messianic Christianity).

In the church at Antioch the consideration of the question of circumcision resulted in much discussion and contention. Finally, the members of the church, fearing that a division among them would be the outcome of continued discussion, decided to send Paul and Barnabas, with some responsible men from the Antioch Assembly, to Jerusalem to lay the matter before the apostles and elders. There they were to meet delegates from the different churches and those who had come to Jerusalem to attend the approaching festivals. Meanwhile all controversy was to cease until a final decision should be given in general council by the leadership of Yeshua's church which were, in this case, hand-picked by Yeshua himself to lead the movement in its infancy. This decision on the matter was then to be universally accepted by the different churches throughout the world as letters recounting the final decision were to be circulated among the Gentile churches worldwide.

On the way to Jerusalem the apostles visited the believers in the cities through which they passed, and encouraged them by relating their experience in the work of God and the conversion of the Gentiles.

At Jerusalem the delegates from Antioch met the brethren of the various churches, who had gathered for a general meeting, and to them they related the success that had attended their ministry among the Gentiles. They then gave a clear outline of the confusion that had resulted because "certain" converted Pharisees (who had accepted Yeshua as Messiah) had gone to Antioch declaring that, in order for the Gentiles who repented and believed in God through Yeshua to be saved, these Gentile converts must be circumcised and keep the law of Moses. Again we must understand that although the Bible records this statement, it does not instruct us that this statement is true, but to the contrary it instructs us that this view held by these Judaizing Jews who believed in Yeshua was incorrect and not of God.

This question was warmly discussed in the assembly. Intimately connected with the question of circumcision were several others demanding careful study. One was the problem as to what attitude should be taken toward the use of meats offered to idols. Many of the Gentile converts were living among ignorant and superstitious people who made frequent sacrifices and offerings to idols. The priests of this heathen worship carried on an extensive merchandise with the offerings brought to them, and the Jews feared that the Gentile converts would bring Christianity into disrepute by purchasing that which had been offered to idols, thereby sanctioning, in some measure, idolatrous customs.

Again, the Gentiles were accustomed to eat the flesh of animals that has been strangled, while the Jews had been divinely instructed that when beasts were killed for food, particular care was to be taken that the blood should flow from the body; otherwise the meat would not be regarded as wholesome. God had given these injunctions to the Jews for the purpose of preserving their health. The Jews regarded it as sinful to use blood as an article of diet. They held that the blood was the life, and that the shedding of blood was in consequence of sin.

The Gentiles, on the contrary, practiced catching the blood that flowed from the sacrificial victim and using it in the preparation of food. The Jews could not believe that they ought to change the customs they had adopted under the special direction of God. Therefore, as things then stood, if Jew and Gentile should attempt to eat at the same table, the former would be shocked and outraged by the latter.

The Gentiles, and especially the Greeks, were extremely licentious, and there was danger that some, unconverted in heart, would make a profession of faith without repenting of their evil practices. The Jewish Christians could not tolerate the immorality that was not even regarded as criminal by the heathen. With this understanding you can see why some of the Jewish Messianic believers considered it as highly proper that circumcision and the observance of the Jewish Law should be enjoined on the Gentile converts as a test of their sincerity and devotion. This, they believed, would prevent the addition to the church of those who, adopting the faith without true conversion of heart, might afterward bring reproach upon the cause by immorality and excess.

The various points involved in the settlement of the main question at issue seemed to present before the council insurmountable difficulties. But the Holy Spirit had, in reality, already settled this question, upon the decision of which seemed to depend the prosperity, if not the very existence and influence, of the Christian church.

"When there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." He reasoned that the Holy Spirit had decided the matter under dispute by descending with equal power upon the uncircumcised Gentiles and the circumcised Jews. He recounted his vision, in which God had presented before him a sheet filled with all manner of four-footed beasts and had bidden him kill and eat. When he refused, affirming that he had never eaten that which was common or unclean, the answer had been, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." Acts 10:15.

Peter related the plain interpretation of these words, which was given him almost immediately in his summons to go to the centurion and instruct him in the faith of Yeshua. This message showed that God was no respecter of persons but rather accepted and acknowledged all men everywhere who feared Him (regardless if circumcised [Jews] or uncircumcised [Gentiles]). Peter told of his astonishment when, in speaking the words of truth to those assembled at the home of Cornelius, he witnessed the Holy Spirit taking possession of his hearers, Gentiles as well as Jews. The same light and glory that was reflected upon the circumcised Jews shone also upon the faces of the uncircumcised Gentiles. This was God's warning that Peter was not to regard one as inferior to the other, for through faith, repentance, and obedience all of God's children are accepted with Him.

Once before, Peter had reasoned with his brethren concerning the conversion of Cornelius and his friends, and his fellowship with them. As he on that occasion related how the Holy Spirit fell on the Gentiles he declared, "Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as He did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God?" Acts 11:17. Now, with equal fervor and force, he said: "God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them (uncircumcised Gentiles who had not made full conversion to Judaism) the Holy Ghost, even as He did unto us (circumcised Jews); and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith. Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?"

Answer for yourself: What was this yoke that these Judaizing believing Jews tried to put on Gentile believers in God through Yeshua?

You see, God never promised salvation to the Jewish people by obedience to the Law, but by faith only. Obedience was expected by God for His precious gift of forgiveness of sins.

This "yoke" which was being Placed upon believing uncircumcised Gentiles was "obedience for salvation" [in particular circumcision and obeying all the 613 Laws]. These Judaizing believing Jews had forgotten that God never put on them circumcision and obedience to all the 613 Laws "FOR SALVATION," and to do so in regard to these Gentiles who are coming to God without circumcision was not of God.

Peter's address brought the assembly to a point where they could listen with patience to Paul and Barnabas, who related their experience in working for the Gentiles. "All the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them."

James, the Pastor of the Jerusalem Church also bore his testimony with decision, declaring that it was God's purpose to bestow upon the Gentiles the same privileges and blessings that had been granted to the Jews.

The Holy Spirit saw good not to impose the law of circumcision, as well as all the 613 Laws of Moses on the Gentile converts, and the mind of the apostles regarding this matter was as the mind of the Spirit of God.

James presided at the council, and his final decision was, "Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them (by imposing mandatory circumcision and adherence to 613 Laws of Moses upon these Gentiles who are only by God the Laws of Noah), which from among the Gentiles are turned to God." If the Gentiles wanted to acquire commandments that would be their free choice whereby they could choose to obey those things which pleased God (Isa. 56).

In this instance James seems to have been chosen as the one to announce the decision arrived at by the council. It was his sentence that the entire Mosaic Law, which had previously been required by Jews for acceptance of Gentiles, and especially the ordinance of circumcision, should not be urged upon the Gentiles, or even recommended to them any longer.

Compelled by the love of Christ, the Apostles repented of their racial bigotry and returned to what God had originally given all Gentiles (the Covenant and Laws of Noah), which when accepted and applied in their lives, brought acceptance with Him (remember Cornelius' prayers and alms was accepted with God before he was instructed by the Apostle Peter and had faith in Yeshua.

James, the Pastor of Yeshua's Church, sought to impress upon the minds of his brethren the fact that, in turning to God and accepting the tenants of Biblical Judaism (becoming new creatures as 2 Cor. 5:17 showed in the last article), the Gentiles had made a great change in their lives and that much caution should be used not to trouble them with perplexing and doubtful questions of minor importance, lest they be discouraged in following God.

The Gentile converts, however, were to give up the customs that were inconsistent with the principles contained in the Law of Moses. The apostles and elders therefore agreed to instruct the Gentiles in the Gentile nations of the world by letter to abstain from meats offered to idols, from fornication, from things strangled, and from blood (4 of the 7 Laws of Noah). These proto-Christians (Godfearers) were to be urged to keep the commandments which applied to them and which God had given them and to lead holy lives. They were not required by God or the Messianic Community (Yeshua's Church" to adhere to or observe Laws and Commandments which men laid upon them! Also, they were free to choose others commandments and incorporate them within their lives as such pleases God, but this was a matter for their further education, and such choices were to be manifestations of their love for God and their fellow man. They were also to be assured that the men who had declared circumcision to be binding were not authorized to do so by the apostles, because James distinctly tells us that he, nor any others under his authority gave such a command (Acts 15:24).

Paul and Barnabas were recommended to them as men who had hazarded their lives for the Lord. Judas and Silas were sent with these apostles to declare to the Gentiles worldwide by word of mouth the decision of the council: "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well." The four servants of God were sent to Antioch with the epistle and message of the First Church Council that was to put an end to all controversy; for it was the voice of the highest authority upon the earth; namely the continued ministry of Yeshua through the Holy Spirit!

Answer for yourself: As a Christian today, have you been made aware of the Noachide Laws and that they are considered as "necessary things" by the Holy Spirit and Yeshua for you to be part of His Church?

Answer for yourself: If these "necessary things" concerning the Laws of Noah were required to be a member in Yeshua's Church, then if you are not as Godfearers and believing Gentiles like Cornelius adhering to such things as kosher laws which are contained within the Laws of the Covenant of Noah, then, according to Yeshua's Church and the decision rendered which seemed good to James and the Apostles as well as the Holy Spirit, are you SPIRITUALLY and OBEDIENTLY actually part of Christ's Church or man's church (even though you attend a gathering somewhere)?

Answer for yourself: Since you were most likely not aware of the gravity of the situation, what do you think would have happened to you once you died and only then came to the truth?

Answer for yourself: Now, having come to the truth, do you remember that Yeshua said: "why do you say you love me and not obey me?" Well it is quite evident that Yeshua has commanded certain things be done by Gentile believers (Godfearers), and the omission of those in the light of Scriptural knowledge can only be understood as rebellion which is as bad a sin as witchcraft!

Answer for yourself: I understand that if asked you will say you love Yeshua, but how strong is that love for him if you fail to take to heart the message presented in this article and repent of false belief systems you inherited in Gentile anti-Semitic churches your whole life because your traditional Gentile Pastors have failed to study out such truths?

The council which decided this case was composed of apostles and teachers who had been prominent in raising up the Jewish and Gentile Christian churches, with chosen delegates from various places. Elders from Jerusalem and deputies from Antioch were present, and the most influential churches were represented. The council moved in accordance with the dictates of enlightened judgment, and with the dignity of a church established by the divine will. As a result of their deliberations they all saw that God Himself had answered the question at issue by bestowing upon the Gentiles the Holy Ghost; and they realized that it was their part to follow the guidance of the Spirit by re-affirming the Laws of Noah upon all Gentile believers as "necessary" for their inclusion and right fellowship in the Israel of God..

The entire body of Christians was not called to vote upon the question. The "apostles and elders," men of influence and judgment, framed and issued the decree, which was thereupon generally accepted by the Christian churches. Not all, however, were pleased with the decision; not will be with these articles. But the truth is the truth! There was a faction of ambitious and self-confident brethren who disagreed with it, and will with what I have exposed in this article. But dear child of God, Biblical history as well as the original languages of the Bible does not lie and is the final authority in all issues of disagreement! Those who disagree with what is written in these articles by murmuring and faultfinding, and proposing new plans and seeking to pull down the work of the men whom God had ordained to teach the gospel message to a world full of Gentiles (no less James, John, Peter, Paul) will get their full reward for being false teachers! From the first the church has had such obstacles to meet and ever will have till the close of time.

The broad and far-reaching decisions of the general council brought confidence into the ranks of the Gentile believers, and the cause of God prospered. In Antioch the church was favored with the presence of Judas and Silas, the special messengers who had returned with the apostles from the meeting in Jerusalem. "Being prophets also themselves," Judas and Silas, "exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them" by sharing the decision of the Jerusalem Council and James. These godly men tarried in Antioch for a time. "Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also."

The history of this momentous event in the spread of the Gospel to the Gentiles like you and me stands as a solemn warning to men in positions of trust in the cause of God, that they may not fail in integrity, but firmly adhere to principle. The greater the responsibilities placed upon the human agent, and the larger his opportunities to dictate and control, the more harm he is sure to do if he does not carefully follow the way of the Lord and labor in harmony with the decisions arrived at by the general body of believers in united council.

In his ministry, Paul was often compelled to stand alone. He was specially taught of God and dared make no concessions that would involve principle. At times the burden was heavy, but Paul stood firm for the right. He realized that the church must never be brought under the control of human power. The traditions and maxims of men must not take the place of revealed truth. The advance of the gospel message must not be hindered by the prejudices and preferences of men, whatever might be their position in the church. It is such a spirit that Bet Emet Ministries continues to illuminate the way of obedience and holiness which is a measure of our love for God.

Answer for yourself: Was the Book of Acts written following the cross? Yes.

Answer for yourself: If we discover major teachings from Yeshua's church issued AFTER THE CROSS which were directed to ALL the Gentiles of the known world, then should this teaching and practice intended for Gentiles (like you and me-remember that it came AFTER THE CROSS OF THE MESSIAH), also apply to us today? Most assuredly!

Answer for yourself: When Yeshua commanded his disciples and Apostles to go into all the world and "teach them (Gentiles) to observe those things I have commanded you," can we say for certain that some of "those things" which were to be taught and obeyed by ALL the Gentiles was the decision and teachings that would later come from the first "church council" in 50 C.E. since such teaching is said to "seem right to the Holy Spirit?" Most assuredly!

Answer for yourself: Do you see that the momentous decisions reached at the first church council literally laid the foundation for what was "necessary" for Gentiles to be "saved" and included in the Yeshua (Jesus) Messianic Movement and church? Most assuredly we can and must since it not only "seemed right to the Holy Spirit" but was understood as being taught by Yeshua to the disciples previously (yet unrecorded for us)? Yes.

Answer for yourself: As you read the following articles, I ask you to be honest in asking yourself that if Gentiles like you and me are to be "taught to obey those things Yeshua commanded them," then why is it that you have been attending Christian Churches your whole life and never were acquainted with nor taught to obey the things that you discovered in these articles? You must answer that for yourself.

Answer for yourself: Is it of the remotest possibility that you, after finishing this article, will come to the inescapable conclusion that you have definitely failed to be taught many fundament truths concerning the foundations of what your faith in Yeshua should consist of and commanded by the first church of Yeshua? Most assuredly!

So often many mistakenly believe that the "cross of Christ" altered "this or that" whereby many mistakenly lean on their own understanding or other's erroneous teachings in arriving at conclusions that often set the course of their beliefs, conduct and behavior which, unfortunately, CANNOT be supported and affirmed when compared with many Scriptures that "correct" such conclusions. Thus, our faith and conduct cannot be RIGHT, and thus accepted by God if it does not line up with EVERY SCRIPTURE. Unknowingly, much of the traditional Christian's reasoning violates Scripture and often such reasoning, when conceived in acts and deed, is defined by the Bible as "sin." The root of such "sin" and error is "false teachings" which often is caused by the lack of in-depth teaching by the vast majority of Christianity today which seems to focus on "milk" instead of the "meat" of the Word of God. Without knowledge of the Bible as it was taught and understood when written and received by the "hearers," we cannot be sure that our understanding is right because, as you have seen, and continue to see, the English language does great injustice to both the Greek and Hebrew language, thus distorting and completely changing the original meanings of Scripture in numerous instances.

The sad thing is that we spend our whole lives "thinking" our life-style is pleasing to God, where if we would have studied, learned, and repented where necessary, we could have spotted hidden sins from our lack of understanding of the Bible, therefore having confident assurance we both are acceptable to God and a good witness to others.

Answer for yourself: Has the failure on your part to study in-depth robbed you of vital information so necessary to your obedience to God? Most definitely.

Answer for yourself: Is the church council of 50 C.E. LOADED with hidden truths which, when known, should alter the course of the Christian's life? Most definitely!

As you can see, this momentous church council occurred in 50 C.E. in Jerusalem and speaks to the Christian today. Sadly, very few Christians have known the extent of what is taught in Acts 15, nor heard their pastor teach on the subject. The participants at this first church council are the zakenim (elders) and sh'liikim (apostles) which formed the foundation for this new Messianic movement which was headed by Yeshua, the chief cornerstone. Let us never forget that Yeshua's church is built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, and not the Baptists or the Catholics, yet the majority of Christians today know very little about the "apostolic doctrine" taught by the early church of the first century.

Ephesians chapter two draws out attention now.

Eph 2:19 Now <3767> therefore <686> ye are <2075> (5748) no more <3765> strangers <3581> and <2532> foreigners <3941>, but <235> fellowcitizens <4847> with the saints <40>, and <2532> of the household <3609> of God <2316>;

20 And are built <2026> (5685) upon <1909> the foundation <2310> of the apostles <652> and <2532> prophets

<4396>, Jesus <2424> Christ <5547> himself <846> being <5607> (5752) the chief corner <204> [stone]

Lexicon Greek 2310

2310 themelios {them-el'-ee-os} or themelion {them-el'-ee-on} from a derivative of 5087; TDNT - 3:63,322; adj AV - foundation 16; 16

- 1) laid down as a foundation, the foundation (of a building, wall, city)
- 2) metaph. the foundations, beginnings, first principals
- 2a) of institution or system of truth

Notice that in verse 19 the subject of the verse are Gentiles who are coming to God through Yeshua. It is these Gentiles, like you and I, who are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, and NOT DENOMINATIONAL AND NON-DENOMINATIONAL doctrines and teachings which can be shown to violate and contradict Scripture. The Bible clearly and distinctly tells we are to be built upon the foundation of the Apostle's Doctrine (the Apostle's system of truth).

Answer for yourself: Are you confident that what you have heard preached in your church your whole life is the Apostle's system of truth? How can you be sure?

You are mistaken if you said yes, for the vast majority of contemporary Christian churches today teach and preach an anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic doctrine, either knowingly or unknowingly. Either way, this doctrine is incorrect and leads to major violations of obedience that the Bible terms "sin." The tragic part is that the vast majority of good Christians are not aware of such "sin" that is robed in religious doctrines.

Instead, the average Christian knows only their "denominational and denominational" doctrines, which more often than not, conflicts and opposes "Apostolic Doctrine" which Yeshua and the Apostles both believed, taught, and took to the Gentiles in fulfillment of the Great Commission. You may have never noticed, but the Great Commission of Matt. 28 DOES NOT SAY to take Yeshua to the world, but the Torah and the Law of Moses in the form of obedience to Commandments. Maybe you should read it for yourself slowly and think what it is really saying and not rely on what you have heard others say it says!

"Not so you say," well lets investigate the Great Commission in the next article and I promise you that you will be amazed by what you will now learn. Shalom!

"GODFEARERS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: THE PATTERN FOR GENTILE PARTICIPATION IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD #4

We concluded the previous article with anticipation as we were to see just "what" was to be taken to the Gentiles of the world in fulfillment of Yeshua's Great Commission given not only to his disciples and apostles, but to you and me as well as believers in God through Yeshua.

Let me fore warn you that a study of the Greek words will not only challenge what you have been told and heard from preachers who stopped with the English translation, but what is more startling, understanding of the original meanings of the Greek and Hebrew words will CORRECT what you have been incorrectly informed by well-meaning pastors and teachers who lack these necessary language skills!

Answer for yourself: When Yeshua commanded his disciples and Apostles to go into all the world in an effort to teach and disciple all men everywhere (the Gentiles) to observe those things he had previously commanded them (the Torah), do you think he was aware that he would have to wait a thousand years for the English language to be developed in order for the real meaning of what he intended could be conveyed to the hearers? Or do you think Yeshua understood perfectly what was to be conveyed to his disciples and did perfectly convey to the Apostles such message, and they, correctly understanding the message set out in obedience to his commands and accomplished the task (ie. The Jerusalem Council and how Gentiles become part of believing Israel and the Church) ?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible we lost much of the truths God intended we receive when Yeshua's message was translated from Hebrew Gospels into the Greek language and lost even more when this Greek translation of Hebrew thoughts and words was finally translated into English?

Answer for yourself: Do you know that linguists tell us words change meaning every 70 years, and that being so how much have we failed to understand of God's revelation and Yeshua, as well as the Apostles' words which undeniably have changed in meaning since the original context in which they were spoken or written almost 2000 years ago?

Luke 1:2

Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he (Yeshua) through the Holy Spirit had given commandments to the Apostles whom he had chosen...

Answer for yourself: Do you see that Yeshua continued to direct the Apostles (Jerusalem Church and the Acts Council) through the ministry of the Holy Spirit ("it seemed good to us and the Holy Spirit...that Gentiles adhere to these 4 'necessary things' to be part of the Yeshua Movement and Yeshua's Church")?

Answer for yourself: Since I have shown you through examination of the original language as well as the Biblical history surrounding the events concerning the inclusion of believing Gentiles in Israel and Messianic Judaism (Yeshua's Church) following the cross of Christ (without the necessity of circumcision as had been previously required by bigoted Jews) and since we have seen as well that Yeshua continued to direct and spiritually lead the Apostles up and through the Jerusalem Council through the Holy Spirit, then if you have a faith or belief system that ignores, neglects, or says that such things as kosher is just for the Jews, that the Sabbaths of the Lord are just for the Jews, or that you are a New Covenant believer without understanding that Yeshua commanded adherence to the Covenant of Noah AFTER his last supper, then can you not see that you have been deceived and have not been given the correct message Yeshua intended all Gentiles like you and me receive?

As you can see the above scenario illustrates an important point; namely that in any translation of languages (for example from Hebrew to Greek, and then from Greek to English) the concepts and meanings carried by the "original word" or words from the original language MUST be faithfully carried over to the second language or third language if the intent of the speaker (ie. Yeshua/ Apostles/Paul) is to be retained uncorrupted.

Answer for yourself: Since Yeshua is a Jew and spoke Hebrew, do we as Gentile believers today, when reading the English language of our Bibles (which is a translation of a Greek translation that is a translation of the original Hebrew) receive the original thoughts intended by Yeshua when commanding his followers to go into all the world with his message in the Great Commission? Before you answer "yes" to this question I suggest you read a book entitled Understanding the Difficult Words of Jesus by Roy Blizzard and David Bivin and you will get the shock of your life.

Such "disclosure of truth" from the original language is good because we are finally getting to the REAL WORDS OF YESHUA, and only that way, can we truly understand his message both then and NOW. To do otherwise, by trusting translations in English without personal evaluation on the believer's part, often leads us into sins of conduct and behavior of which we are not aware because the English words fail to convey to us the original intended meaning of the Word of God and their corresponding actions which are required by God.

THE GREAT COMMISSION-A CLOSE EXAMINATION:

Let us examine the Great Commission from Matthew 28 and its implication for Gentile evangelism and the impact on the Godfearing Gentiles as seen in the Book of Acts.

Matt 28:18 (KJS) And <2532> Jesus <2424> came <4334> (5631) and spake <2980> (5656) unto them <846>, saying <3004> (5723), All <3956> power <1849> is given <1325> (5681) unto me <3427> in <1722> heaven <3772> and <2532> in <1909> earth <1093>. 19 Go ye <4198> (5679) therefore <3767>, and teach <3100> (5657) all <3956> nations <1484>, baptizing <907> (5723) them <846> in <1519> the name <3686> of the Father <3962>, and <2532> of the Son <5207>, and <2532> of the Holy <40> Ghost <4151>: {teach...: or, make disciples of all nations} 20 Teaching <1321> (5723) them <846> to observe <5083> (5721) all things <3956> whatsoever <3745> I have commanded <1781> (5662) you <5213>: and <2532>, lo <2400> (5628), I <1473> am <1510> (5748) with <3326> you <5216> always <3956> <2250>, [even] unto <2193> the end <4930> of the world <165>. Amen <281>.

Let us continue this very important study by looking at the word "go":

Lexicon Greek 4198

4198 poreuomai {por-yoo'-om-ahee} middle voice from a derivative of the same as 3984; TDNT - 6:566,915; v AV - go 117, depart 11, walk 9, go (one's) way 8, misc 9; 154

- 1) to lead over, carry over, transfer
- 1a) to pursue the journey on which one has entered, to continue on one's journey
- 1b) to depart from life
- 1c) to follow one, that is: become his adherent
- 1c1) to lead or order one's life

Let us now examine the tenses for the word "go":

Lexicon Greek 5679

5679 Tense - Aorist See 5777 Voice - Passive Deponent See 5789 Mood - Participle See 5796

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the word "go" in the Greek IS NOT A VERB, BUT A PARTICIPLE and is used by the Holy Spirit in the "passive voice" ?

A proper interpretation would be as follows: "as you go through life and as you order your life in its daily course, journey, and routine, without any big fan-fare or big productions (like renting football stadiums or coliseums and holding massive evangelist crusades), order your life in such a way that you let your light of your correct beliefs and obedience shine and be for a witness and a teaching tool to those you influence and have contact, thereby bringing them into the knowledge of the God of Israel and what He requires and deems "necessary" to be part of Yeshua's Church (being a Godfearer...who adheres to the decision of the Jerusalem Council concerning Gentiles who are to accept the Covenant of Noah and who can afterward choose those things that please God 'as Moses is read' as shown in Isa. 56... such as the Sabbaths [Feasts, Festivals, and Weekly Sabbaths])."

Answer for yourself: What amazes me is that most Christian churches gear up for big productions and events in hoping to win some to Christ, not realizing that the best evangelism is person-to-person, not person-to-crowd evangelism that has little or no follow-up with little or no accountability and discipleship. Notice again that "go" is in the passive voice, meaning don't make a special attempt or don't go out of your way to evangelize or plan for such large promotions that detract from the personal approach which is best done by the example of your life (one-on-one).

Answer for yourself: Can you now better understand that the failure of the Christian Church to "win the world" over the last 1900 years is not for lack of "effort" in hold big meetings, big crusades, and building big monstrous churches that can house a lot of strangers," rather we have failed because we have put on the "few who we hire as representative ministers" OUR PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY found in the Great Commission that requires that all believers let their lives be a "model" that would attract those to whom we have influence and contact to God? I hope so.

Let us look at the Greek word used by the Holy Spirit for "teach."

Lexicon Greek 3100

3100 matheteuo {math-ayt-yoo'-o} from 3101; TDNT - 4:461,552; v AV - teach 2, instruct 1, be disciple 1; 4

- 1) to be a disciple of one
- 1a) to follow his precepts and instructions
- 2) to make a disciple
- 2a) to teach, instruct

The "root" word in the Greek for "teach" is as follows:

Lexicon Greek 3101 3101 mathetes {math-ay-tes'} from 3129; TDNT - 4:415,552; n m AV - disciple 268, vr disciple 1; 269

1) a learner, pupil, disciple

Let us now examine the voice and mood:

Lexicon Greek 5657 5657 Tense - Aorist See 5777 Voice - Active See 5784

Mood - Imperative See 5794 Count - 376

Answer for yourself: What does the imperative tense mean?

Lexicon Greek 5794 5794 Mood - Imperative

The imperative mood corresponds to the English imperative, and expresses a command to the hearer to perform a certain action by the order and authority of the one commanding. Thus, Yeshua's phrase, "Repent ye, and believe the gospel" (Mk.1:15) is not at all an "invitation," but an absolute command requiring full obedience on the part of all hearers.

Answer for yourself: Do you see that the Holy Spirit used the imperative mood of the word "teach" to instruct us that we HAVE BEEN COMMANDED by orders of the one commanding (Yeshua), to teach the doctrines and precepts of Yeshua, and which was verified to the Jerusalem Council by the Holy Spirit to ALL Gentiles, thus helping all Gentiles of all nations become disciples of Yeshua and his faith? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Did you see that we have been given an absolute command requiring our absolute obedience to teach ONLY THOSE THINGS WHICH HE COMMANDED and not the traditions and doctrines of men which make what he commanded and the Commandments of God of none effect? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware from these previous studies that in many instances the Christian Church has done just the opposite of what Yeshua commanded, and stands guilty of "Sin" for having replaced many of the teachings of Yeshua, as well as many which were given to his Apostles which seemed good to the Holy Spirit, with those of their own creation which have anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic motives? I hope so.

Notice that Yeshua's disciples and Apostles were to teach all Gentiles in all nations to observe the things both believed and taught by Yeshua.

One small look at Gentile Christian Doctrine, as compared with Biblical Judaism, and one notices right away the wide gulf that exists between what Jews believe and what Christians believe.

Answer for yourself: If Yeshua believed things which you do not, should you not repent and accept the mind of Christ and his beliefs and cast down beliefs you hold when shown to be incorrect?

Answer for yourself: If we as Christians have a belief system that can be shown to be contradicted by the teachings of Yeshua, his Apostles, the original languages of the Bible, or the Holy Spirit as revealed in Scripture, should we not cast down, no matter what the source, our vain imaginations that exalt themselves against the truth and knowledge of God contained in the Bible when correctly understood?

Answer for yourself: Yeshua in Jn. 7:16 states "My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me." Knowing this, can Yeshua teach or preach something other than the doctrines of God that existed then and which can be traced to Sinai and the giving of the commandments of God? No.

Answer for yourself: Yeshua in Jn. 14:23 states (KJS): "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. 24 He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me." If we don't keep Yeshua's words, which are the Father's Words spoken to the Apostles through the Holy Spirit, can we say we really love him since he says our failure to keep his words is anything but an expression of love?

WE HAVE ALREADY SEEN IN THIS SITE HOW YESHUA AND PAUL DISAGREE ON SALVATION AND AT OTHER OF OUR SITES WE EXAMINE INDIVIDUAL RELIGIOUS DOCTRINES WHERE PAUL ABSOLUTELY CORRECTS AND CHANGES THE TEACHINGS OF YESHUA.

No, our failure to obey him is evidence of a lack of love for him.

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua say that our failure to obey his words is an indication we don't love him, and are his words found in the Acts 15 Church Council's decision? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua say that his word was not his, but his Father's word? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Can we be certain...absolutely certain... that Yeshua NEVER changed his Father's words, and those things he commanded his disciples to take to the Gentiles was his Father's Words ("teach them [Gentiles] to observe the commandments") as well as the words spoken by the Holy Spirit in Acts 15 which affirm the Laws of Noah for all Gentiles as necessary to be part of Yeshua movement and his church? Absolutely.

Answer for yourself: Since Yeshua did not have the authority or desire to change his Father's Laws, then what give us as Christians the right to change the Father's Words (Acts 15 for an example since our traditional Christian experience contradicts what is recorded and commanded by the church of Yeshua in Acts 15).....or even more, to violate his words by substituting our denomination's faith and message, their visions, plans, desires and programs, and even worse, doing so in his name?.

Let us examine the word for "nations" as found in the Great Commission:

Lexicon Greek 1484 1484 ethnos {eth'-nos} probably from 1486; TDNT - 2:364,201; n n AV - Gentiles 93, nation 64, heathen 5, people 2; 164

- 1) a multitude (whether of men or of beasts) associated or living together
- 1a) a company, troop, swarm
- 2) a multitude of individuals of the same nature or genus
- 2a) the human race
- 3) a race, nation, people group
- 4) foreign nations not worshipping the true God, pagans, Gentiles
- 5) Paul uses the term for Gentile Christians**

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that in the Great Commission only Gentiles, and not Jews were to be taught? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Do you see that Yeshua intended the Jews, who according to Romans 9:4 ("Who are Israelites (Jews) to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the Law, and the service of God, and the promises) had these Godly truths and manifestations of their religion, were to share with the Gentiles their religion (Second Temple Conservative Pharisaical Judaism) along with the fulfillment of the first coming of Messiah?

Answer for yourself: Why did the Gentiles need adoption, glory, covenants, Law, service of God and the promises?

Simply because the Gentiles of the world had false religion and their worship of God was in vain!

Answer for yourself: How could the Apostle Paul, after the cross of Christ, use the term "Gentiles" [which according to our definition inferred false religion and worship] for "Christian Gentiles" after they had come to the knowledge of God (Monotheism) and Messiah? That's easy. The Apostle Paul understood, like you should, that just because you come to the faith and knowledge of God as the ONLY God, along with the understanding of the Messiah's death for your sins, your "converted" Gentile Christian religious belief system and lives are yet filled with memories of "what you used to do in a religious setting "before you learn from the Jew about God's adoption, glory, covenants, Law, service of God, and the promises of God.

It would be so much easier today if we did not have to unlearn much of what we have accepted in religious teachings believing what we were told was God's truth. But much of what has been passed off as truths from God are in reality manifestations of Replacement Religion begun long ago by the early Gentile Christian Church of the Dark Ages, who being very anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic, changed and substituted "their understandings" for what Yeshua commanded the Jew to teach them. Scholarship reveals the tragic events of such a deception which you and I have accepted wholeheartedly without questioning and study to verify if what we were told is the truth as it existed in Yeshua's day and thereafter before changed by Constantine in the fourth century and others like him because of hatred toward the Jews.

Answer for yourself: Is it possible to go to Christian Churches who do not teach the Hebrew Roots of the Church and be completely devoid in your religious belief system of truths concerning adoption, glory, covenants [NOTICE it is in the "plural" meaning more than one yet Christian Churches only tell you about one...ie. "new"), Law, service of God [Hebrew for worship], and the promises of God? Let me answer that for you. I was! Even after Baptist Seminary I was to a large extent for I was taught from a Gentile "perspective" all the while forgetting that Yeshua said "salvation is of the Jews"....not "was of the Jews"!

As the disciples and Apostles of Yeshua "went" in fulfillment of the Great Commission they were to be teaching the Gentiles to observe those things commanded by Yeshua.

Let us focus on the Greek term for "teaching" as found in the Great Commission:

Lexicon Greek 1321 1321 didasko {did-as'-ko} a prolonged (causative) form of a primary verb dao (to learn);

TDNT - 2:135,161; v AV - teach 93, taught + 2258 4; 97

- 1) to teach
- 1a) to hold discourse with others in order to instruct them, deliver didactic discourses
- 1b) to be a teacher
- 1c) to discharge the office of a teacher, conduct one's self as a teacher
- 2) to teach one
- 2a) to impart instruction
- 2b) instill doctrine into one
- 2c) the thing taught or enjoined
- 2d) to explain or expound a thing

- 2f) to teach one something

Answer for yourself: Was Yeshua intending the Gentiles of the world to learn "Apostolic doctrines" as it existed then and which the early church "steadfastly continued in according to Acts 2:42" or was he referring to Greek Catholic doctrines, Reformation doctrines, or Protestant doctrines which would be created much later? That should not be hard for you to understand.

Answer for yourself: Do you see that Yeshua intended his Apostles and Paul, as well as others, to share with Gentiles, to instruct them, teach them, impart instruction, instill doctrine into them, and explain and expound the things he taught? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Can you instruct others in doctrines which have not been created yet?

Answer for yourself: Having heard repeatedly in churches that we are to take Yeshua (Jesus) to the nations and for them to accept him and believe IN HIM, does not the Great Commission actually say JUST THE OPPOSITE; that we are to TEACH GENTILES TO OBSERVE what Yeshua COMMANDED and not replace such an absolute commandment from Yeshua which was given to his Apostles and disciples about "what doctrines to teach which existed in that day" with the doctrine of getting the Gentiles to believe in his "identity" for salvation? It sure does.

Let us examine the Greek word for "observe."

Lexicon Greek 5083 5083 tereo {tay-reh'-o} from teros (a watch, perhaps akin to 2334); TDNT - 8:140,1174; v

AV - keep 57, reserve 8, observe 4, watch 2, preserve 2, keeper 1, hold fast 1; 75

- 1) to attend to carefully, take care of
- 1a) to guard
- 1b) metaph. to keep, one in the state in which he is
- 1c) to observe
- 1d) to reserve: to undergo something

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua command his followers to teach other Gentiles in all the world to KEEP, OBSERVE, WATCH OVER, AND PRESERVE those things he had taught and carefully take this teaching and commandments to the Gentiles? He sure did.

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua command his followers to teach other Gentiles in all the world to attend to carefully to his commandments and to observe those thing he had commanded? He sure did.

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua command his followers to teach the Gentiles in all the world to "hold fast" and carefully observe "all those things which he had previously commanded the Jews?" He sure did.

Answer for yourself: As a Gentile Christian, and according to the words used by the Holy Spirit, have you been taught, let alone observe, things commanded of the Jews? Sadly, most likely not!

Answer for yourself: Since it can be clearly shown, upon study, that Gentiles kept the Biblical Feasts and Saturday Sabbath well after the cross of Yeshua until the fourth century before changed by Roman paganism, do you carefully observe all those things Yeshua had previously commanded the Jews such as the Feasts and Sabbaths?

Answer for Yourself: Why not if this is the true message of the Great Commission?

Answer for yourself: Can you preserve those things both taught and commanded by Yeshua if you ascribe to REPLACEMENT THEOLOGY which says that the Law and the Biblical Feasts have passed away and that we are no longer under the Law (remember the Apostle Paul commended the Law to the Romans church in Romans 9:4)? No way.

Answer for yourself: Can you preserve and obey those things both taught and commanded by Yeshua if you believe that the writings and letters of Paul (New Testament) have replaced the writings of Moses (Old Testament) [understand it was 400 years after the cross before there was a New Testament]? No.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Yeshua never read one thing Paul wrote, and would be appalled today to know that the New Testament has replaced the Old Testament in his churches? I bet you didn't, but it is a sobering thought once you see the scope of what is being said.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that almost all of Paul's letters are for "correction of Gentile beliefs and actions" and none are for doctrine, reproof, correction and instruction of Jews except for a small number of Judaizers who themselves believed in Messiah?

"Let us now investigate the Greek word for "command" as Yeshua taught his followers to teach all Gentiles to observe all those things which he had previously commanded to be done.

Lexicon Greek 1781

1781 entellomai {en-tel'-lom-ahee} from 1722 and the base of 5056; TDNT - 2:544,234; v AV - command 10, give commandment 3, give charge 2, enjoin 1, charge 1; 17

1) to order, command to be done, enjoin

Having looked extensively at the Great Commission, we now know for sure that Yeshua never intended for the Gentiles in the various nations of the world to be taught anything OTHER THAN the COMMANDMENTS AND HOW TO CORRECTLY OBSERVE THEM!

I'm sure that now you see the importance of such a commandment issued to all Gentiles as they were shortly to be included in the Yeshua Messianic Movement without having to make complete and formal conversion to Judaism as was previously expected and required. Not only that but their previous beliefs and religious pagan ceremonies were to be repented of and a new "service of God" instituted whereby they would worship the Father in Spirit and Truth instead of darkness as previously done.

This new Messianic movement within Judaism of the Second Temple Period, having obeyed the Great Commission, would now face a problem of the highest magnitude within twenty years after the Cross of Christ: "What are we going to do with these Gentiles who claim to be followers of Yeshua? The solution came in the form of a declaration by the Apostle James, both the Lord's brother and head of Yeshua's church: "We should not make it difficult for the Gentiles who are turning to God." (Acts 15: 19-21).

"GODFEARERS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: THE PATTERN FOR GENTILE PARTICIPATION IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD #5

Having looked extensively at the Great Commission, we now know for sure that Yeshua never intended for the Gentiles in the various nations of the world to be taught anything OTHER THAN the COMMANDMENTS AND HOW TO CORRECTLY OBSERVE THEM! I'm sure that now you see the importance of such a commandment issued to all Gentiles as they were shortly to be included in the Yeshua Messianic Movement without having to make complete and formal conversion to Judaism as was previously expected and required. Not only that but their previous beliefs and religious pagan ceremonies were to be repented of and a new worship and "service of God" instituted whereby they would worship the Father in Spirit and Truth instead of darkness as previously done.

This new Messianic movement within Judaism of the Second Temple Period, having obeyed the Great Commission, would now face a problem of the highest magnitude within twenty years after the Cross of Christ: "What are we going to do with these Gentiles who claim to be followers of Yeshua, and who are turning to Biblical Judaism and Biblical Faith? The solution came in the form of a declaration by the Apostle James, both the Lord's brother and head of Yeshua's church: "We should not make it difficult for the Gentiles who are turning to God." (Acts 15: 19-21).

Not only in the Old Testament, but also the New Testament delineates the various REQUIREMENTS given to every Gentile who will name himself by the name of Yeshua, thereby allowing the Gentile believer in God, through Yeshua, to become grafted into the Israel of God without the need for full-conversion which required circumcision which the Jews had previously mandated for all Gentiles previously.

As you read this article, as well as others I have researched and prepared, you should have easily seen that reading the English often leads us astray from the mind of Christ. You may say " You mean it's not quite that easy and clear?" You may say "You mean to tell me there may be more to the understanding what James is telling the Gentiles than meets the eye? Do you mean more information is assumed as "given" in this situation than is normally understood by the normal Christian nowadays?" That is exactly what I am telling you as you will shortly understand.

"THE" FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS ...NOT FAITHS!

The conviction that Messianic Biblical Judaism, and not the current manifestation of Rabbinic Judaism as we now see, is the one true religion given by God for all men and that it is destined to become the universal religion for all mankind has been the conclusion which not only I, but others who study the Bible in its original languages, along with its culture and history in which it was written. This concept was not only a peculiarity of the Jews, but Yeshua as well as he commanded its tenants, precepts, ordinances, and commandments be taken unto all the Gentile world in the Great Commission of Matt. 28. No other religion in the world and time made any such pretensions or cherished such aspirations. It was an exclusiveness the rest of mankind did not understand and therefore doubly resented. It is today as well. Such a belief in the future universality of the "true religion," the coming of an age when "the Lord shall be King over all the earth," when "the Lord shall be one and His name One," led to efforts to convert the Gentiles to the worship of the one true God and to adherence to both faith and obedience according to the revelation God had given. Thus Judaism became the first great missionary religion of the Mediterranean world. Let me also say as well, that Christianity, when stripped of its anti-Semitism, anti-Judaism, its false sabbaths and replacement doctrines which originated from false religion and pagan sources, and when immersed in Biblical truths which restore the Lord's Sabbath, Feasts and Festivals, Apostolic doctrines, and correct use of the Biblical Tithe becomes acceptable to those who today, like God, see it for what it truly is. God warns us that His people perish for lack of knowledge, and when confronted with it, reject it. I pray that is not you.

THE VEHICLE FOR INSTRUCTION:

Judaism's religious influence was exerted chiefly through the synagogues, which the Jews set up for themselves, but which were open to all whom interest or curiosity drew to their services. To Gentiles, these services consisted essentially of readings from the Scriptures and a discourse, along with prayers and hymns of praise. Such was inviting to the Gentiles. In that time period in the Hellenistic world (Greek influenced), polytheism (belief in many gods) and idolatry was so decisively prevalent, that the souls of men cried out for something more. Such was the difference between the Gentile and the Jew. As a Gentile came to renounce heathenism and adopt Judaism along with observations such as the Sabbath, Festivals, and conformity to the rules of clean and unclean foods which were necessary conditions of social intercourse, it was seen to be a respectable degree of commitment and conversion on behalf of the Gentile that he be accepted alongside the Jew as God's people. Let us understand that this was before faith in Christ which only solidified such a commitment. The rejection of idolatry by the Gentile was an acknowledgment of the whole law, since one who renounces idolatry is called in Scripture a "Jew."

CONVERTS & VARIETIES:

Such converts were called religious persons who "worship, or revere God," although in a strict sense outside of the mainstream of Judaism. Yet, they were expected to share with "Jews by birth" the favor of the God they had adopted, and were encouraged in this hope by their Jewish teachers. It was not uncommon for the next generation to seek incorporation in the Jewish people by circumcision, thus becoming a full-fledged "convert to Judaism." These Gentiles were seen as the ones "clinging to the skirt (prayer shawl) of the Jew" (Zech. 8:23).

23 Thus saith <559> (8804) the LORD <3068> of hosts <6635>; In those days <3117> [it shall come to pass], that ten <6235> men <582> shall take hold <2388> (8686) out of all languages <3956> of the nations <1471>, even shall take hold <2388> (8689) of the skirt <3671> of him that is a Jew <376> <3064>, saying <559> (8800), We will go <3212> (8799) with you: for we have heard <8085> (8804) [that] God <430> [is] with you.

Answer for yourself: In this prophetic passage, do you see that ten (Biblical number for completeness-referring to all Gentiles from all nations) will take hold of the skirt (prayer shawl) of the Jew and will go with them up to Zion for God is "with the Jew?" I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Did you know that the nations will be coming up to God with Jews and not Christians? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Can you see that this passage is very problematic for those who ascribe to REPLACEMENT THEOLOGY, falsely believing that the church has taken the place of the Jew and Israel? I hope so.

Oh, by the way, let me remind you once again that this passage is prophetic and is yet to occur.

Answer for yourself: How is it that Gentiles will follow the Jews to Zion to learn of God if we Protestants and Catholics have all truth as we have been led to believe? Think on that for a while.

CUTTING THROUGH THE MAZE:

Much confusion has arisen from the habit of describing such Gentile adherents of the synagogue as a class of proselytes or semi-proselytes, and trying to find a category for them in Jewish law. Jewish law knows no such semi-proselytes, nor any other kind of proselytes than such as have, by conversion and baptism, not only become members of the Jewish church but has been naturalized in the Jewish nation. One should NOT make a distinction where none existed.

PHILO'S DEFINITION OF A PROSELYTE:

"Proselytes are such as have resolved to change over to the true religion, and are called proselytes because they have become naturalized in a new and godly commonwealth, renouncing the mythical fictions and adhering to the unadulterated truth." Under the Laws of Noah (7 commandments containing some but not all the Laws of Moses unless fully converted), proselytes enjoy equal rights in all respects with the native born Jews, as is only just, inasmuch as they have left country, friends, and kinfolk for the sake of virtue and holiness. There can be no question that Philo means by "proselyte" one who has deserted his false gods and his people to cast in his lot with the Jews.

OTHER VIEWS ON THE PROSELYTE:

Tacitus (a roman historian) speaks of proselytes as such as "practice circumcision like the Jews." A proselyte is not one who had merely embraced the monotheistic theology of Judaism, but has addicted himself to the Jewish ordinances and customs, and in doing so severed himself from his people, friends, and kinsmen; for which reason he is to be treated with peculiar benevolence. He has become a naturalized citizen of a new religious commonwealth in which he has a full quality of rights and duties with born Jews. NOTICE a proselyte was considered as part of Israel!

Answer for yourself: Does a "proselyte" (former Gentile) adhere to the same Jewish ordinances and customs as other Jews? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Is the "proselyte" (former Gentile) required to be circumcised? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does the "proselyte" (former Gentile) become a naturalized citizen of a new religious commonwealth called Israel in which he has a full quality of rights and duties with natural-born Jews? Yes.

THE "GER" - HEBREW FOR PROSELYTE:

In the Greek Bible, "proselyte" is the usual translation of the Hebrew "ger." The older associations of this word were both civil and social. The "ger" was an alien immigrant, or the descendant of such an immigrant, resident in Israelite territory by permission, without any civil rights. This is the position of the "ger" in the older Hebrew legislation and in Deuteronomy. They are distinguished from foreigners (nokrim), who may be casually and temporarily in the country, and from the descendants of the ancient Canaanites. Israelites are commanded not to oppress these aliens, who had no legal protection; and they are frequently presented as objects of charity.

Later, in the Persian period, the word "ger" comes to be applied to foreigners (men of other than Jewish descent) who joint themselves to Jehovah, or to Israel as the worshippers of Jehovah. Thus in Isaiah 14:1, in the restoration, when God reestablished Israel in its own land, "the 'ger' (converts the Jews have made in the exile) will join themselves to them and attach themselves to the house of Jacob." Such converts are described in Isa. 56:6ff.

"The aliens who join themselves to Jehovah to minister unto him, and to love the name of Jehovah, to be his servants, every one that keeps the Sabbath from profaning it, and hold firmly to my covenant (laws), I will bring them to my holy mountain and make them rejoice in my house of prayer; their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be acceptable upon my altar, for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah who gathers the dispersed of Israel, yet will gather others unto him (Israel), besides those that are gathered of (Israel) himself."

The laws for the "ger" (Gentile proselyte) or "gerim" (Gentile proselytes) in Lev. 17-25 put them, so far as religious duties and privileges go, in all respects on the same footing with Israelites by birth: they are subject to all the obligations of the Law, precisely as the "gerim" (proselytes) in the rabbinical law are. This is true, not only of religious commandments and prohibitions but also civil law: "You shall have one civil law; the proselyte (ger) shall be treated like the native born, for I am the Lord your God." For living as a resident alien ("ger," in the original civil sense) in the land of Israel the verb is "gur," as in sojourn; for conversion to Judaism and adoption into the people as well as their religion a new form was needed and created, the "ger in a religious sense" understood as "becoming a proselyte."

THE "GER" RESTS BENEATH THE WINGS OF THE ALMIGHTY:

A favorite figure in the Psalms for the confident security of the religious man is having a refuge, or shelter, beneath the wings of God, or beneath the shade of his wings, as the young of birds do under their mother's wings for safety from danger. The same figure is frequently employed of conversion. The proselyte came beneath the wings of the Shekinah; one who converts a Gentile brings him under the wings of the Shekinah. The origin of this use is doubtless Ruth 2:12, where Boaz speaks for the Moabitish convert the reward for her goodness to Naomi from "the God of Israel, beneath whose wings thou are come to take refuge."

The legislation in the middle books of the Pentateuch (first 5 books of the Bible) thus puts the "gerim" on the same footing with native Israelites, not only before the civil law, but in religious duties and privileges, and Philo repeatedly emphasizes this parity of the naturalized and the native Jew as one of the notable features of the Mosaic Law.

DISTINCTIONS DO EXIST HOWEVER:

The Passover was the most distinctively national of all the festivals, but the law admits the proselyte to it, though no foreigner, no settler, no hired servant may eat of it. For such participation it is necessary that one be circumcised, "for no uncircumcised man shall eat of it" (Ex. 12:48). In Num. 9:14 it is assumed that the proselyte is circumcised, and the only requirement is that he shall conform strictly to the ritual of the Passover: "Whether proselyte or native, you shall have the same ordinance." This Scripture puts the proselyte on the same footing as the native in all the commandments contained in the Law. "As the native born Jew takes upon himself to obey all the words of the Law," so the proselyte takes upon him all the words of the Law. The authorities said, "if a proselyte takes upon himself to obey all the words of the Law except one single commandment, he is not to be received." Thus Paul would say in Gal. 5:2 to the Galatians: "I solemnly warn every man that gets himself circumcised (Paul was referring to Gentile conversion to Judaism) that he (the newly circumcised Gentile) is under obligation to fulfill the whole law (613 commandments).

Answer for yourself: Why? Circumcision was the final ordinance to be adopted by the Gentile believer before he makes complete conversion to Judaism.

Since Paul was reared as a Pharisee, he made reference to both the Written Law and the Oral Law in this passage.

Answer for yourself: Are Gentiles who become circumcised, thus making full conversion to Judaism, allowed to partake of the Passover lamb? Yes, circumcision was required.

Answer for yourself: Are Gentiles who become circumcised, thus making full conversion to Judaism, required to take upon themselves the full yoke of the Torah which is responsibility for 613 commandments instead of the 66 from the Laws of Noah? Yes.

REQUIREMENTS FOR CONVERSION:

The initiatory rite by which a man was made a proselyte comprised three parts:

- circumcision,
- immersion in water (baptism) and
- the presentation of an offering in the Temple.

In the case of a woman there was no circumcision, and after the destruction of the Temple no offering could be made. Circumcision alone is prescribed in the Written Law. The offering of a sacrifice is, thus, not one of the conditions of becoming a proselyte, but only a condition precedent to the exercise of one of the rights which belong to him as a sacrificial meal. As soon as he was circumcised and baptized, he was in full standing in the religious community, having all the legal rights and powers and being subject to all the obligations of the Jew by birth. He had "entered the covenant." It is interesting to note that this baptism of conversion was different from other baptisms of purification in that the presence of official witnesses was required for conversion. Two scholars would stand by him and rehearse to him orally some of the lighter and some of the weightier commandments. When he had been immersed and had come up from the water (following circumcision if a male), one is like an Israelite in all that he does. In the case of the woman proselyte, women made her sit in the water up to her neck, while two scholars recited the same commandments, both positive and negative and it was assumed that the initiant assumed "the yoke of the commandments." As the Israelite came into the covenant only by three things, circumcision, baptism, and sacrifice, precisely so the Gentile proselyte comes into the covenant by the same three things. (Israel was circumcised before leaving Egypt, they were baptized in the Sinai desert, and after they pledged themselves to keep all God's commandments they were sprinkled with the blood of the covenant sacrifice).

Answer for yourself: Was the Gentile convert to Judaism required to fulfill the same three requirement for conversion as was the Jew when he was BarMitzvahed? Yes.

PROSELYTES WERE BORN AGAIN:

Now listen well, the status of a proselyte who embraces Judaism is at the moment of his reception like that of a "new born child" or as if "born again." (Being "born again" is not a Christian concept by and of itself. More on that at a later).

Answer for yourself: Does the concept of "being born again" refers only to Christians and not Gentile converts to Judaism? No, because the typical Christian is unaware that "being born again" is a Hebrew term for repentance associated with immersion, which was one of the 3 requirements for Gentile proselytes in their conversion to Judaism and being grafted into the Israel of God.

THE LAWS OF NOAH-FOUNDATIONAL FOR A GENTILE PROSELYTE:

Before a proselyte converted to Judaism, it was customary that before his initiation that he adhere to the seven Laws of Noah which were given to all heathen to observe if they lived within the land of Israel. The laws of Noah were the foundation from which one pursued righteousness.

TERMINOLOGY: WE MUST SEE THE PICTURE CLEARLY

I am fully aware that today we call those who believe in God through Yeshua "Christians." Yet, in quoting Roy Blizzard "I believe we should call Biblical things by Biblical names". In doing so we discover nuances of meanings from terms which should influence what we should believe and how we should respond in faith. In the spirit of truth, the follow is presented to you, and some is of a technical nature, but try to follow the truth along.

Answer for yourself: In others words correct understanding of terms will lead us to perfect obedience and what higher manifestation of our love for God could there be?

The sincere and genuine proselyte (fully converted through circumcision, immersion, and having brought a sacrifice) is called "ger zedek," or "righteous proselyte" (Psalm 118:20). They are such as embrace the Jewish religion from religious motives, "for the sake of God," and therefore live in conformity to His will revealed in the Oral and Written Laws as they pledged themselves at their reception. Another name for such converts is the "get emet," or "true proselyte." To the "righteous proselytes" are sometimes applied texts in the Old Testament which speak of the righteous, or of such as fear God, the "truly righteous." In the daily prayers in the Temple petitions for God's blessings upon the righteous proselyte are invoked.

The word "ger" by itself having come to mean proselyte or convert to Judaism who has received circumcision and baptism not only into the religion of Judaism but into the Jewish people (Israel), occasioned the necessity to find a distinctive term for the resident alien.

Answer for yourself: Has the word "ger" come to mean a proselyte and convert to Judaism? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Has the "ger" received immersion and circumcision as well as bring an offering to the Temple? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Is the "ger tzedek" another name for the full convert to Judaism as is the word "ger?" Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does the term "righteous proselyte" refer to a full-convert to Judaism? Yes.

THE GER TOSHAV AND THE GER SHA'AR

The "ger toshav" was an alien, resident in Jewish lands by permission but on the condition that while he resides that he not engage in the worship of other gods or in idolatrous practices, and do not blaspheme the name of God (adhere to the Covenant and Laws of Noah). He had to pledge himself in the presence of 3 observant persons to abstain from idolatry. They also had to be subject to the jurisdiction of Jewish courts and keep free of flagrant crimes, homicide, robbery, theft, adultery and fornication. He also had to abstain from eating flesh with the blood or "life" in it (part of the Laws of Noah). Along with this came the seven commandments that God gave to Adam and Noah and were consequently binding upon all mankind. He was not required to join in the worship of Israel nor to take upon himself any further obligations to observe the commandments of God to Israel (Mosaic Law), thought he enjoyed the exemption from labor on the Sabbath which gives rest on that day to slaves and hirelings of every race, as well as animals. He was not required to be circumcised. Upon his circumcision he would become fully Israel.

There "ger toshav" is not a proselyte or a "semi-proselyte" and was not considered a convert to Judaism at all. The "ger toshav," as uncircumcised, also was called the "ger arel," and is not to be confused with the circumcised proselyte "ger ben berit" who has come into the covenant of God with Israel (ger mahul). The "ger toshav" was a heathen and was allowed to eat "carion" or the flesh of animals not correctly slaughtered which no Israelite or proselyte could partake. The "ger" to whom an Israelite may give it in Deut. 14:21 is the "ger toshav"....Also, it was permissible to take usury from a "ger toshav" as with any heathen, but forbidden to take usury from an Israelite or "true proselyte;" the "ger zedek."

Answer for yourself: Was resident alien-heathen in the land of Israel required to be circumcised? No.

Answer for yourself: Was the resident alien-heathen in the land of Israel required to live by the Laws of Noah? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Was the resident alien-heathen called the Ger Toshav? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Was the resident alien-heathen allowed to eat foods that were not killed in a kosher manner? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Was the resident alien-heathen required to observe the 7 Laws of Noah? Yes.

Since the 18th century another category of proselytes emerged, the "proselyte of the gate" which is distinct from the "ger tzedek," or full proselyte or God-fearing Gentile. The "ger sha'ar" or "proselyte of the gate" suggests converts who lingered at the door of the synagogue as derived from passages in the Bible which speak of the "ger (alien) who is in thy gates" or residents in Israelite towns and cities (Ex. 20:10, Deut. 5:14).

In the 4th century a question arose as to whom the 4th Commandment concerning the Sabbath applied to, the "ger sedek" or "ger sha'ar" and the former opinion prevailed. In other words the full-convert is required to observe and keep the Sabbath, having become as one born in the land, while the ger toshav was not, yet he still could choose those things that pleased God if he so desired (Isa. 56). Often such "strangers" are listed with names in Deut. along with the widows, orphans, and the landless Levites. Here we find the proselyte of the gate who was likewise often the object of charity.

ATTITUDES TOWARD PROSELYTES:

The attitude of the religious leaders of Judaism toward proselytes differed in different circumstances, and individual teachers had their own beliefs. Rabbi Shammai would have nothing to do with one who was not prepared to give implicit assent, before knowing its contents to the unwritten Law as well as the written Law. Many had bad opinions of all proselytes, fearing that with persecution that they would fall back into their old ways because they were naturally bad people. It is for this reason the Scriptures had so often admonished Israelites not to give them offense by word or deed. The School of Hillel, unlike the School of Shammai, welcomed converts, and admitted them even though their knowledge was imperfect and the observance of Judaism faulty. Hillel, to whom Yeshua agreed, coined a motto: "Be one of the disciples of Aaron, a lover of peace, following after peace, loving mankind, and drawing them to the Law (religion)." A tradition illustrating the different temper of the two masters states that a foreigner came to Shammai saying, "Make a proselyte of me, on condition that you teach me the whole of the Law while I stand on one foot." Shammai drove him off, beating him with a measuring stick, whereupon he gave Hillel the same proposition. Hillel received him as a proselyte and taught him: "What you do not like to have done to you, do not do to your fellow man. This is the whole of the Law; the rest is explanation of it. Go, learn it."

NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE JEW AND THE GENTILE PROSELYTE:

Proselytes are dear to God, for you will find that the same things are said about them as about Israel: the Israelites are servants (Lev. 25:23) and proselytes are called servants, as it is said, "To love the name of the Lord and to be servants to him" (Isa. 56:60); the Israelites are called ministers, as it is said, "And ye shall be called the priests of the Lord, ministers to our God shall be said of you" (Isa. 61:1), and the proselytes are called ministers, as it is said, "The foreigners who attach themselves to the Lord to minister unto him (Isa. 56:6); the Israelites are called friends, as it is said, "The offspring of Abraham, my friend" (Isa. 41:8) and the proselytes are called friends, as it is said (of God), "Friend of the proselyte (Deut. 10:18). The word "covenant" is used of the Israelites in Gen. 17:13 and so it is used of proselytes "Who hold fast my covenant" (Isa. 56:6).

IN CONCLUSION:

The preaching of Yeshua's Apostles made converts among Gentiles to Biblical Judaism. According to Acts 2 those "Jews" from seventy nations from all over the world who had made pilgrimage to Jerusalem to observe the Feast of Shavuot (Pentecost), were previously Gentiles who had converted to Judaism by turning from idols to serve the living God. According to Biblical Law (Jewish Law), God required these Gentiles who had repented and come to faith in Him to be present at His appointed times three times a year.

The account in Acts 2 describes Gentile proselytes to Judaism who came over from all over the Gentile world to observe the special Sabbaths of God. Much later, in times of persecution, Gentile "Christians" sometimes joined the Jews to evade the test applied by the Roman officials to adore the emperor, to which Jews were not subject. Later, Christian emperors would make conversion of Gentiles to Judaism a crime in itself with severe penalties both for the Gentile convert and the Jew who converted him. Against all such attempts of pagan or Christian rulers to shut up Judaism in itself and prevent its spread in the first three centuries the Jews persisted in their missionary efforts to make the religion God had revealed to their fathers at Sinai the religion of all mankind. It is with this understanding that we will continue in the next newsletter our study of Gentile conversion as traced through the Bible.

So in closing I leave you with these thoughts:

As a Gentile Christian you find the example of what is required of you as:

1. Adhering to the Laws of Noah as well as...

1. Choosing those things that please God since we have accepted Christ (grafted into Israel) and have today a better covenant. See Isa 56 for details. More later.

"GODFEARERS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: THE PATTERN FOR GENTILE PARTICIPATION IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD #6

In the previous articles I have gone into detail to relay to you specific information concerning the Biblical language, religious history, and the Biblical culture which surrounds the events concerning believing Gentiles and their relationship to God through the New Testament. We have seen, contrary to what we have been told by Gentile Christianity, that the Bible has a very different picture of what a Gentile believer is to believe and do to be considered a part of Yeshua's church. We saw that God has given very specific commandments for your inclusion into His Son's Church. We saw in short summary that it was required of Gentiles to:

- Adhering to the Laws of Noah (66 commandments) as well as.
- Choosing those things that please God since we have accepted Christ (become grafted into Israel) and have today a better covenant (Isa 56).

Having reviewed all of the information presented I know some of you are prone to say or think "as a Christian I am under the "New Covenant" and that information does not apply to me. Many may feel that the information previously presented does not apply to them for some reason and claim New Testament exclusion. Let me remind you that these events chronicled and explained in the previous articles ARE New Testament events that occurred after the cross of Christ and in fulfillment of the Great Commission.

In order to deal with the "New Covenant" and "New Testament" defense which some will appeal to, I believe it to be very rewarding if we ruthlessly look at this New Covenant we hear so much about. But let me warn you, what you will discover will be very disconcerting to you because at present most of you hold a religious belief system based upon untruths in many areas and when presented with "the truth" you will tend to want to reject it and defend long held and cherished beliefs held most of your life.

Answer for yourself: Do you want the truth or a lie?

Answer for yourself: Before dealing with the "new" or "renewed" covenant, do you remember that all the events that transpired in the Book of Acts happened after the cross and were "New Testament" events? Having agreed with this statement then let us proceed.

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that you have gone to church your whole life and called yourself a "New Testament" believer and never fully understood what covenant you are under in the first place?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that you don't know God's intended meaning for the word "new" as used in "New Covenant" as seen in the New Testament? Not so you say, well hang on for the shock of you life!

Answer for yourself: Could you, as a Gentile Godfearer, who calls yourself a "Christian," be a literal descendant of Abraham through Isaac and Jacob?

Perhaps the idea strikes you as too incredible to take seriously, too far fetched to be true--much like a dream which is so good that you are sure it could never happen in reality. The possibility of your own physical descent from Abraham (he was a Gentile and not a Jew) is such an overwhelming notion that it is easy for your rational mind to dismiss the thought as literally "too good to be true."

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that a careful reading of the Torah and the Prophets reveals that Abraham's seed, particularly the descendants of the Northern Ten Tribes, who were taken captive into all the Gentile nations of the world, are still in exile among the world's nations, and will soon be brought back to the LORD (YHVH) their God and to the Land of their ancestors?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that if you are experiencing an inner pull toward the God of Israel, and to His Torah, and the Hebrew Roots of the Christian faith, then the probability is high that in these last days preceding the coming of Messiah, that you, as a Gentile Godfearer, could possibly be a descendant of one of the Ten Northern Tribes which were assimilated into all the Gentile nations of the world? How so? Read on.

While the Divine scenario of the Northern House of Israel being taken captive by Assyria, scattered among the nations, and regathered to the LORD (YHVH) in the latter days is most specifically laid out in the Book of Hosea, chapters 1 and 2; one could argue that it is most passionately enunciated in Jeremiah, chapter 31. However, be cautious in your reading of Jeremiah 31, since this vitally important chapter has often been misunderstood by both Christians and Jews, when they have failed to pay close attention to Jeremiah's carefully chosen language. It is intriguing that the prophet himself tells us, "In the latter days (today) you will understand this" (30:24b).

In hopes that this prophecy will be fulfilled in your life I continue with this article.

Answer for yourself: To whom is the prophet Jeremiah giving the prophecy of this "New Covenant" in Jeremiah 31?

Before you hastily answer "the Christian Church" as it now stands, you better examine what I have to show you.

You will note that the prophecy recorded in Jeremiah 31 is directed to both the House of Israel, which consists of the Northern Ten Tribes of Israel, and the House of Judah. This point is forcefully made in chapter 30 verse 4 where this particular prophetic sequence of events is initiated with the statement, "Now these are the words which the LORD (YHVH) spoke concerning Israel and concerning Judah...."

Answer for yourself: Was the Lord talking through Jeremiah the Prophet to Baptists, Methodists, Catholics today, or was God speaking through Jeremiah to the House of Judah (Jews of the Tribe of Judah and Benjamin) and the House of Israel (consisting of the Ten other Tribes of Jacob)?

If you answer this question incorrectly then there is no hope for you to understand what Jeremiah is really saying in these verses, let alone Yeshua who said he came ONLY "for the lost sheep of the House of Israel." Instead of "reading into the passage" a meaning you desire it to say, I challenge you to let the Bible teach you what it says!

Then follows the now familiar pattern of the need for punishment upon both Houses of Israel by military defeat and scattering in exile, but resulting in the complete accomplishment of the Holy One's purposes by their eventual regathering as being seen today in both Jewish and Christian circles. You will understand fully later about what I just said. Please read on.

Answer for yourself: Can you see the complete futility of trying to make this prophecy refer the Christian Church because in no time in its history was the Christian Church punished by scattering, exile, and captivity as was the Tribes of Israel?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible you have your whole life misunderstood what God, Jeremiah, and Yeshua meant when speaking of the "New" Covenant? I can assure you that most have.

Both the scattering and the regathering of Judah and Ephraim (Ephraim is a synonym for the Ten Northern Tribes) are in the Wisdom and Providence of God. Jeremiah's language is chilling in 30:24: "The fierce anger of the LORD (YHVH) will not turn back, until He has performed, and until He has accomplished the intent of His heart; in the latter days you will understand this."

Answer for yourself: Are we living in the latter days, and if so, is it time to fully understand this passage?

These words bring to mind a parallel passage in the Book of Isaiah, chapter 27 verses 8 and 9, "By measure, by exile, thou didst contend with them; He removed her by His rough blast in the day of the east wind (both exiles and captivity were by foreign invaders from the East). By this (exile and captivity) therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be atoned; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin...." It is worth noting that Isaiah here indicates that the exile would serve as an atonement for the sins of the people. Such an idea of atonement for sins might come as a surprise to those used to thinking in Christian terms, but is only because we have failed to understand Yom Kippur and all the facets of Biblical Atonement (if interested please request our articles on Yom Kippur).

Fortunately, the Almighty's plan does not end with punishment and abandonment of His people, Israel. Jeremiah 31 starts out with the hopeful declaration of the LORD (YHVH), Himself, "At that time (that is, "in the latter days," see previous verse)...I will be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be My people." God promises the descendants of Israel (who, through captivity, exile, and intermarriage with Gentiles became assimilated and inculturated Gentiles today) that they will find "grace in the wilderness" (verse 2), followed by the most moving promise of all, "I have loved you with an everlasting love" (verse 3). It would be a grave mistake, at this point, to assume that these incredible promises are made only to the House of Judah, the Jewish people; on the contrary, read closely verses 5, 6, and 9b:

Again you shall plant vineyards

On the hills of Samaria;

For there shall be a day when watchmen

On the hills of Ephraim shall call out,

"Arise and let us go up to Zion,

To the LORD (YHVH) our God."

For I am a father to Israel,

And Ephraim is my firstborn.

These clear statements, made by the LORD (YHVH), identify the primary audience. It was the Northern Ten Tribes who occupied Samaria/the hill country of Ephraim anciently, and who are prophesied to do so again.

These Ten Northern Tribes, who are frequently referred to in Scripture collectively as Ephraim, are called the LORD'S (YHVH's) "first-born" (possibly an allusion to Genesis 48:14-20 and I Chronicles 5:1).

The sure word of God to the descendants of Ephraim, the Northern Ten Tribes, is, "Behold, I am bringing them from the north country (Assyria), and I will gather them from the remote parts of the earth...." (verse 8a). And again, stated even more emphatically in verse 10, "Hear the word of the LORD (YHVH) O nations, and declare in the coastlands afar off, and say, 'He who scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd keeps his flock.'" Notice the interesting wording here. This declaration is to be made in the "coastlands afar off," and the descendants of Israel are to be gathered from "the remote parts of the earth." These locations certainly lend evidence to current efforts to identify the descendants of the Ten Tribes with the Northwest European peoples and their colonies (America).

Proceeding to the next major section of Jeremiah 31, we encounter the heart-rending passage, "A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping. Rachel is weeping for her children; she refuses to be comforted for her children, because they are no more" (verse 15). This passage was applied in the New Testament to Matthew's report that Herod slaughtered infant Jewish children at the birth of Yeshua. Most historians would agree that this cannot be its intended original meaning. Jewish interpreters have most often understood it as a reference to the Holocaust, or to Jewish suffering throughout the ages. Yet even this reading, which is certainly more to the mark, because it is too general and does not do justice to the highly specific language of Jeremiah. Remember, according to the historical books of the Bible, the Jewish people are primarily composed of descendants of the Tribes of Judah and Levi, and to a lesser extent Benjamin. Judah and Levi are the children of Leah, not of Rachel (Gen. 29:32-35). And while Benjamin was Rachel's son, she never got the chance to know him, as she died during his birth (Gen. 35:16-19).

But Rachel did give Jacob a son, whom Jacob loved very dearly, Joseph (Gen. 37:3).

Answer for yourself: Is it not this son Joseph and his children [Joseph remember had two sons....Manessah and Ephraim] whose descendants were taken in the Assyrian captivity and never returned to their land or their faith that Rachel is weeping over in Jeremiah 31:15? Indeed, it must be!

The Holy One instructs Rachel to stop weeping, promising her that her children will "return from the land of the enemy."

Answer for yourself: And, what children are these?

Look closely at verses 18 and 20, where the LORD (YHVH) says, "I have surely heard Ephraim grieving, 'Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised like an untrained calf; bring me back that I may be restored, for Thou art the LORD (YHVH) my God.'" The LORD'S (YHVH's) reply is passionate:

"Is Ephraim my dear son?

Is he a delightful child?

Indeed, as often as I have spoken against him,

I remember him;

Therefore My heart years for him;

I will surely have mercy on him," declares the LORD (YHVH).

Again, it is clear that it is The House of Israel/Ephraim/the Northern Ten Tribes which through intermarriage is melted into the Gentile gene pool of the world which is being referred to here, not the House of Judah/the Jews. If anyone is tempted to think that the term Ephraim is being employed here in a generic way to address all Israel, just glance down to verses 23, 24, and 27, where Judah is treated as distinct from Ephraim/the House of Israel.

Next follows the passage that is at once the most awesome and the most misinterpreted of all the promises recorded in the prophets--the one concerning the "new covenant."

Answer for yourself: Understanding that although most Christians have applied this amazing prophecy of Jeremiah, which is often quoted in the New Testament to the Gentile new covenant Church and its mission to the Gentile nations; is it possible that this understanding could be in error? It sure is!

Anyone who will carefully read what Jeremiah says, and whom he addresses in this prophecy, if kept in context, will quickly see that such an application does serious injustice to the text. Unfortunately, the unconscious motivation Christians have in trying to claim this passage as to their own is the advancement of a "replacement" religion which began long ago, in which the Jews were no longer the heirs to the promises of God, but rather the Gentile Christian Church. One can only say, in the face of such claims--read the text!

Answer for yourself: What does Jeremiah actually say?

It can be clearly seen from the context (verses 27-28) that at a time when the House of Israel (the Northern Ten Tribes) and the House of Judah (Judah, Levi, and Benjamin) have been restored to the Land promised to their ancestors, and are multiplying and prospering, the LORD (YHVH) will THEN AND ONLY THEN "make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah...." (verse 31).

Answer for yourself: Is this "New Covenant" made with the Christian Gentile Church or with descendants of the Tribes of Jacob of the House of Judah and Ephraim (comprising the Ten Northern Tribes of Jacob)?

Answer for yourself: Is it proper for Christians setting in the churches of this country, or any country for that matter, to call themselves the Tribe of Ephraim or its descendants? How can we be certain?

Answer for yourself: Just because we say that this "new covenant" spoken of by Jeremiah the Prophet refers to us and our church, does that make it so?

Answer for yourself: Let say that you, as the Christian, are Ephraim and this prophecy applies to the Christian Church, then according to the timing of when God will make this "new covenant", can you say that this New Covenant is already made and existing because the Christians have been restored to the land of Israel and their ancestor's faith, or do most of Christianity today lay outside the land of Israel and have a belief system quite opposite to the Jewish Church of Jerusalem?

Answer for yourself: Can you see that this is another example where the Gentile Christian Church has stolen the "blessings intended for the Jews" and erroneously applied them to itself while leaving all the curses for the Jews? Church history is replete with such examples of Replacement Theology, and I bet you didn't think you had or accepted any anti-Semitic doctrines in your belief system! This is just one of many.

Please note that this new covenant is not made with the Gentiles; neither is it made solely with the house of Judah, the Jews. Rather, it is an incredible future promise that is guaranteed to the Jews and to their brothers, the descendants of Joseph/Ephraim (Yeshua called these the "lost sheep of the Hours of Israel [Ephraim]), after they have been reunited and are prospering in the Land of Israel.

You well know the magnitude of the promise:

I will put My law within them (this should sound strange to Gentile Christians today who reject the Law), and on their hearts I will write it;

and I will be their God, and they shall be My people.

And they shall not teach again, each man his neighbor and each man his brother, saying,

"Know the LORD (YHVH),"

For they shall all know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them,"

declares the LORD (YHVH),

"for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin I will remember no more." (verses 33-34).

Answer for yourself: Now, how sure are these promises? Can God lie?

Answer for yourself: Could these promises be taken away from the physical descendants of Jacob/Israel and given instead to a group of Gentiles calling themselves "Christians" who reject the Laws of God let alone His appointed times such as Biblical Festivals and Sabbaths? I would not count on it if I were you!

The scriptural text addresses that possibility most plainly, when it says, "Thus says the LORD (YHVH), who gives the sun for light by day, and the fixed order of the moon and the stars for light by night..., 'If this fixed order departs from before me, ...then the offspring of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me forever'" (verses 35-36). And, as if that wording were not strong enough, the passage continues, "Thus says the LORD (YHVH), 'If the heavens above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out below, then I will also cast off all the offspring of Israel for all that they have done'" (verse 7).

Answer for yourself: What further comment is needed?

Now, dear Christian, let me ask you a very important question:

Answer for yourself: Are you grafted into Israel as Paul stated in Romans, or are you grated into a Gentile organization built upon Replacement Theology given to you by the early Gentile Catholic Church?"

Answer for yourself: Do you observe the Festivals and Sabbaths of the Lord and of Israel, or do you observe pagan holidays that have had "Yeshua's" name affixed to them and have taken the place of what is commanded in Scripture?

Answer for yourself: Have you substituted the "day of the sun" (Sunday) for the Sabbath?

Answer for yourself: Have you replaced one of the most fundamental tenants of the Jewish faith...giving of tzedakah (charity) which comes from your tithe with the financing of buildings, mortar, brick, utilities, fancy lunches, Pastor car rentals, etc., with the tithe instead of what Yahweh commands it be used for?

Answer for yourself: Are you, as Gentile Godfearers grafted into Israel, in fact part of Israel and the people of God or have you apostatized from truth and practice a mixture of truth and error in Christianity as it stands today?

Answer for yourself: Are you the "remnant" among the Gentile nations who will be gathered as the "elect" and be presented at the Marriage Supper along with Judah-Benjamin, thus making up the Bride of Messiah, or will you be delegated to be the "servant-foolish bride" and be cast out of the Wedding Supper because Yeshua, a Jew, in his own Torah, is commanded by his Father to not marry Gentiles! The only Gentile who will become a bride to Messiah is one, like Ruth, who said "your people will be my people and your God my God."

Answer for yourself: How can you dear Christian continue to believe, practice, observe, and finance neo-paganism masquerading as righteousness after having come to truths as shown in these articles?

Since you have been deprived by so many essential truths God desired you have, much of what you believe and consequently do is out of ignorance and lack of knowledge.

I suppose that there is no greater spiritual darkness than what surround the false teachings today concerning the "New Covenant." It is to this we turn now our attention.

Answer for yourself: Is the "New Covenant" really NEW at all?

Before we go in depth in this matter a little background information is necessary. Shavuot (Pentecost or the Feast of Weeks) is the festival of the giving of the Torah. The Torah, which is commonly known as the Pentateuch, consists of the first five books of the Bible: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. This may surprise you, but the Torah is an integral part of the "New" (RENEWED) Covenant found in the New Testament. You may find this likewise shocking, but the "New Covenant" you heard spoken of continually will NOT become effective until a Shavuot Festival, some time in the future. Many Christians talk about the "New" Covenant, or Testament constantly without knowing of what they really speak. You may find it surprising, but the Greek word for "testament" is "diatheke" meaning "mutual undertaking between two parties or more, each binding himself to fulfill obligations." In the New Testament, the use of "diatheke" means:

- 1). a promise or undertaking, human or divine,
- 2). a promise or undertaking on the part of God, and
- 3). an agreement, a mutual undertaking, between God and Israel (notice it does NOT say the church).

Answer for yourself: Does the actual words in the Greek Scriptures teach us that a "testament" is made between God and Israel and not the Church? It sure does.

Hebrews 8:10 says: "For THIS the covenant," quoting from Jer. 31:31, renders "this" in the Greek language as "SAME." In other words, "this---same" covenant, as was spoken by Jeremiah (that was originally instituted with an earthly Priesthood) has now been RENEWED NOT REPLACED!

Answer for yourself: In referencing "New Covenant" in the Greek New Testament, is the reference ALWAYS to the covenant spoken of by Jeremiah the Prophet which was made with Judah and Ephraim? It sure is.

Answer for yourself: How do Gentiles, who once were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, who had no hope, and were without God in the world according to Eph. 2:12 become part of this "New Covenant" of Jeremiah spoken about in the New Testament....by being grafted into Israel and the faith of Israel which practices Sabbaths and Festivals, or by becoming members of various denominations and non-denominations which reject God's Biblical Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths?

Hopefully this makes you think if you be in "the faith" or just have "a" faith about something which God never gave mankind.

In other words, the "New" covenant of the "New Testament" is the "same covenant" (WHICH IS NOW

RENEWED...NOT REPLACED...THE SAME COVENANT WITH ITS LAWS AND COMMANDMENTS WHICH ARE ITS COVENANT STIPULATIONS... WHICH PAUL TAUGHT THE WHOLE OF THE GENTILE WORLD DOES NOT ANY LONGER APPLY TO THEM!...THINK!

Now pay attention.

Answer for yourself: Jeremiah 31 states that the day will come when this "RENEWED" covenant will be made with "whom".....Israel and Judah or with Judah and the church which rejects the faith of Judah?

The answer to that question is "Israel and Judah", Israel being understood as Ephraim who today are dispersed Gentiles worldwide who take the form of Christians to whom can be traced Jewish Roots all the way back to the Assyrian Captivity and whom reject paganism and paganized religious practices (the very reason Ephraim was taken captive in the first place).

Answer for yourself: Where is Israel to be found today?

Answer for yourself: The Tribe and descendants of Judah is in the land of Israel since 1948, but where are the ten tribes of Israel today? More on that later!

Secondarily this "New" testament is often used to refer to a collection of books written by the Apostles. While we all talk "about" this new covenant, most folks do not know the terms that make up this "New" covenant. Since most folks consider the "New" covenant as an important part of their religion and relationship with God , it becomes clear that we "ought" to know the terms of this "New" (renewed) covenant. Since this is a legal document and has an impact on our lives, we certainly should be intimately familiar what the terms of this covenant. First let me tell you what the "New" covenant is not. It is not the collection of books commonly known as the New Testament which has unfortunately replaced the Bible Yeshua used and which the early church took to the Gentiles for almost 400 years before the Catholic Church created a document to establish their validity for doctrines which they taught that were often contradicted by the Torah and Tanach (the Bible Yeshua used and which was taken to Gentiles in the Great Commission).

Answer for yourself: How do we know this?

We know this because a covenant, or testament, is a contract between two parties. Webster's unabridged dictionary defines "testament" this way: "In law, a writing, under seal, containing the terms of agreement or contract between parties..." Since the collection of books merely quotes the terms, and since most of the writings of the New Testament do not contain the terms of this covenant, it would be poor scholarship to refer to this collection of Apostolic Writings as the "New Testament."

The ceremony commonly known as "communion," which is mistakenly practiced by most Christian churches as a substitute for the Festival of Passover, is not the new covenant because this ceremony does not mention the words that make up this agreement. While this ceremony mentions the seal of the new covenant (the cup of wine which represents Messiah's blood), it does not mention the actual words that make up this agreement.

Answer for yourself: What exactly are the words, or terms, of this "New" covenant?

The words, curiously, are found in the collection of books sometimes referred to as the "Old" covenant. The prophet Jeremiah wrote down the words of this agreement in Jeremiah 31:31-34: "The time is coming," declares the LORD (Yahweh), "when I will make a new (renewed) covenant with the house of Israel (we must never forget that Israel had been dispersed, assimilated, and intermarried into Gentile nations for over 200 years when Jeremiah spoke this prophecy) and with the house of Judah.

In other words, you cannot find the Tribes or descendants of Israel when Jeremiah spoke this prophecy, as these ten tribes were literally becoming "Gentiles-heathen" since their captivity and were no longer "God's people." Israel as a Torah practicing people was no more! Rather, the descendants of Abraham, once monotheists, were now polytheists like their captives, and began to adopt a new religious belief system of man's invention instead of God's revelation. They were losing their Biblical Roots, they were losing their Hebrew Roots.

Answer for yourself: Has this same sickness infected the Body of Christ in the Gentile Churches of today? You better believe it has (just request our articles on Sabbath and Festivals to understand the depth of darkness that exists today in Gentile Christianity).

Let me explain. Since Ephraim's captivity, the people of Israel were becoming inter-married with pagans, being influenced and yielding to paganism, accepting and replacing, or at least mixing pagan religious beliefs with those given to them by God at Sinai, thus no longer following the "faith once given to the saints".

Please read slowly and carefully:

This "same covenant," seen in Hebrew 8, "will not be like the covenant I made with their forefathers when I took them by the hand to lead them out of Egypt, because they broke my covenant, though I was a husband to them," declares the LORD. "This is the covenant I will make with the house of Israel after that time, declares the LORD. I will put my law (Torah) in their minds and write it on their hearts. I will be their God, and they will be my people. No longer will a man teach his neighbor, or a man his brother, saying, 'Know the LORD,' because they will all know me, from the least of them to the greatest, declares the LORD. For I will forgive their wickedness and will remember their sins no more."

Answer for yourself: As stated before, how does God intend His laws to be written on our hearts (let alone a Christian's heart when he denies the Law and believes it has passed away?)

Let us never forget that faith comes by hearing and hearing by the Word of God. When those former Israelites (now inter-married and assimilated into Gentile nations where they were forgetting the faith of their fathers... Sabbaths and Festivals like Christianity today) would once again be instructed concerning the covenants and laws of God, then the product of their hearing the Laws of God would indelibilize the words in their "minds" which would then become engrafted into their hearts. See Nehemiah, chapter 8, for a perfect example of former Jews, who when returned from captivity where they did not hear the Word of God and were influenced by pagan cultures, and had forgotten the Word of God; yet when taught by Ezra for the first time, cried, repented, and returned to God with broken hearts as this "renewed" Word was "written on their hearts" as they heard with their ears and understood with their minds.

Answer for yourself: Is it any wonder why you do not at this time have the same belief system as taught by the Old and New Testament (same covenant remember?), but instead have a belief system which, when exposed to the truths I have shown you, seem foreign to you?

It is so simple. You have not had good teachers to teach you the truths which have for so long remained hidden until these last days. And those you have are blinded by prejudices and anti-Semitic doctrines inherited from both the Catholic and Reformation churches.

I would again like to call your attention to the names of the parties that "WILL" made this covenant in the future. The first party is called "the house of Israel" (currently the House of Israel are dispersed and assimilated Gentiles when this prophecy was spoken by Jeremiah) and "Judah" (Judah was still in the land of Israel when Jeremiah prophesied, but would shortly be taken into Babylonian captivity). The other party to this "RENEWED" covenant is God. God is referring to Himself as Yahweh.

So, if you (believing Christians) are not of the house of Israel or Judah, then this "new" or RENEWED covenant has no effect on you!

In other words, the Christian Church finds her validity as she is grafted into Israel, not the converse, where Israel is being grafted into the Gentile church.

Answer for yourself: Take a minute and ponder which I just said, then ask yourself this question: am I grafted into Israel through faith in Yeshua, or is Israel grafted in my corner church?

On the other hand, if you are convinced that the "New" covenant applies to you, then somehow you must be a part of the House of Israel in order for its benefits to be applied to you. This covenant, between the house of Israel and God, is quoted, verbatim, in Hebrews 8:8-12. This is the only other place where the words, or terms, of the new covenant are spelled out so expressly in the New Testament. If you carefully read this contract, or if you were to take this contract to your lawyer, you will learn that this contract of the New Covenant has not yet taken effect!

This contract cannot take effect until the Gentile Christian understands, believes, and practices the faith of Yeshua. This contract cannot take effect until the Gentile Christian comes to the understanding of the truths presented in these articles and truly believes that he is grafted into Israel, thereby rightfully entering into the "renewed covenant" of Jer. 31.

Ye who have ears to hear, hear what the Spirit says to the church! Also, this contract-covenant can only become effective when everyone knows the Lord (that's what it said). "Until everyone knows the Lord" means knowing and understanding His ways which are revealed in the covenant contract, the Torah (the first five books of the Bible which have not passed away in lieu of grace). The tragedy is that most Christian churches teach that the LAW (our covenant contract) has passed away. Not only do we have to be content with looking forward to the time when this contract is put into effect, but we must unlearn lies taught as truth by well intentioned spiritual leaders who are sincere, but sincerely wrong.

We must understand that the Law is still in effect, only the Priesthood and the sacrifices which accompany the Priesthood have changed. We must understand and cherish our "marriage certificate with God," His Torah, His Law, and take our rightful place as Gentile believers as "part" of Israel, and no longer allow ourselves to be tossed by every wind of doctrine by ascribing to replacement theology whereby we falsely believe the Christian Church has a covenant of its own to the exclusion of the covenants of Israel.

The actual terms of this renewed covenant, to which the Christian Church finds its identity, appear to be the same terms of the covenant that God made with the house of Israel at Sinai! We can deduce this by noticing that the "Torah" will be written on our hearts instead of stone. This refers to God's command when He gave the Torah. Deuteronomy 32:46 records for us: Take to heart all the words I have solemnly declared to you this day, so that you may command your children to obey carefully all the words of this law (Torah). We should also notice what is being written on the hearts. It is God's Law, His Torah. It is God's instructions or laws.

The implications of this are staggering!

This means, that when this is done, we will no longer disobey God. We will desire to obey the Law that most Christians are taught today to hate because they have been told that it brings bondage.

This erroneous teaching is due to errors in manuscript transmissions as well as cleverly placed words and additions to your Bibles (Greek New Testament) that are meant to lead you to the pre-formed theological opinions of those who printed your Bible (these redactors are influence by anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic sentiments inherited from prior erroneous education). It just so happens that this "anti-Law" belief, which has been cleverly written into the pages of our Bibles and the corners of copies of Greek manuscripts which were later incorporated into the very text itself which were not there in the earlier Greek manuscripts from which the English translation is derived, is in total conflict with the words of Yeshua as well as Paul in the Bible (see articles on misunderstanding Paul and the Law and misunderstanding Galatians).

SCRIPTURAL FACTS AND NOT LIES:

Let us take a minutes and look at Ephesians chapter 2. We must understand that as Gentiles, Eph. 2:11-12 applies to us: "Wherefore REMEMBER, that you in times past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision (symbol for Gentiles) by that which is called the Circumcision (Jews) in the flesh made by hands; that at that time you were without Messiah, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and WITHOUT GOD in the world." Sounds pretty bleak...we were destined to Gehenna (KJV calls it Hell). It goes on to tell us in vv. 13-16 that "now in Messiah Yeshua you who once were far off are made nigh by the blood of Messiah (technically his soul as an offering for sin-see Isaiah). For he (Messiah) is our peace (for both Jew and Gentile), who hath made both one (Jew and Gentile), and hath broken down the middle wall of partition (separation)." Let me interject that "between us" is added (italicized) in the KJV for better understanding, and these words never appear in the Greek manuscripts from which your Bible was translated. Normally, these "minor" additions are quite harmless because they help the text to flow better for purposes or reading and understanding, BUT SOMETIMES THESE WORDS WERE ADDED TO CREATE THEOLOGIES THAT TAKE US AWAY FROM THE TRUTH OF SCRIPTURE, LET ALONE THE RELIGION OF JESUS. Let us keep examining the text.

Ephesians 2:15 is possibly one of the worst translations in the whole Bible, and is primarily responsible for teaching you the lies and heresies you have been taught in traditional Christian churches that teach that the "LAW" has passed away. Let me quote this verse correctly from the KJV, omitting the words added that have brain-washed the majority of Christians I know: "Having abolished in his flesh (Yeshua and the cross) the ENMITY." Stop!

If you look this word up in any Greek dictionary, Vines wordbook, etc., you will find the word means "hatred toward, opposition toward...something." So, first of all, the death of Yeshua abolished hatred by "SOMEONE OR SOME GROUP" TOWARD SOMETHING!

Now, notice carefully, "EVEN" is in italics (added and not in the Greek manuscripts) in your Bibles if you have a KJV. My whole life I read my Bible as if these "italicized" words were given by God in my Bible. If we were to read Eph. 2:15 and include "even" in the verse, then we find (incorrectly I might add) that the sacrifice of Yeshua on the cross abolished through his flesh, "even" the commandments and ordinances. If "even" is added and read with the verse, it is easy to see that Yeshua destroyed the hatred for the Law by destroying the Law. By doing away with the Law (which violated his saying that we were never to think that he had come to destroy the Law..Matt. 5:17), he destroys the Law. THERE IS ONLY ONE MAJOR PROBLEM: "EVEN" IS NOT IN THE GREEK MANUSCRIPT!

Correctly understanding the GREEK from which our English is derived, the verse states emphatically that Yeshua's death DESTROYED THE HATRED AND OPPOSITION TOWARD (SOMETHING), EVEN THE COMMANDMENTS. Notice also, that the next word is in italics as well, being added and not in the Greek manuscripts from which we translated our Bibles. It would seem if we read these italicized words in the text, that Yeshua abolished on the cross not only mankind's "hatred and opposition" to the Law, but THE ACTUAL LAW AND ORDINANCES THEMSELVES! But, these words do not exist as given by the Holy Spirit, only as given by man!

But "even" and "contained" are added, and the Holy Spirit never put these words in the inspired revelation. Now, let us read this beautiful verse as God intended you read it: "having abolished in the flesh (through sacrifice of Yeshua on the cross) the ENMITY (hostility toward, opposition toward).....what? THE LAW! Please notice that Yeshua abolished the hatred and opposition toward the Law of God.

Answer for yourself: Having better understood the original language of the passage, can you see that Yeshua abolished only the hatred and opposition toward the Law of Moses and not the Law itself?

Answer for yourself: Has your church taught you that the Law was done away with by Yeshua or did you know before today that the Law has never passed away?

Answer for yourself: Dear Christian, have you been told to hate the Law?

Answer for yourself: Do you hate the Law?

You see, the Law kills only when you violate it, not when you obey it. When you obey, God rewards you and blesses you, as your obedience to the Law of God is your expression of the will of God for your life.

Now you have to ask yourself a big question and think for yourself.

Answer for yourself: Who was opposed to the Law of God...the Jew or the Gentile?

Acts 21:20 informs us that James, the head of the church of Yeshua (Jesus) in the first century, would state (approximately 60 A.D.-notice it was about thirty years since his brother's death on the cross): "Thou seest, brother (Paul), how many thousands and thousands of Jews there are which believe (in Yeshua the Messiah of Israel); AND THEY ARE ALL ZEALOUS FOR THE LAW."

That's right, the LAW HAD NOT PASSED AWAY FOR THE CHURCH BEARING JESUS' NAME IN THE FIRST CENTURY as it sadly has for most Christians today which are part of Pauline Christianity instead of Jewish Christianity.

Answer for yourself: DID YOU HEAR THAT?

Ephesians, chapter 2, informs us that it was not the Jew who had opposition and hatred for the Law, for Paul would state that the Law was "holy, just, and good," and David states repeatedly in the Old Testament that he "delights in the Law and meditates in it day and night."

Answer for yourself: So, who were those who were opposed and had a hatred for the Law in this verse?

The answer is simple. The Gentiles, as stated before, were "without Messiah (until evangelized and taken the mandate to 'observe those things that I (Yeshua) have commanded..." These Gentiles were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenants of promise (notice not covenants of bondage), had no hope, and were without God in the world. Romans 9:2 strengthens the point as it states it was to Israel, and not the Gentiles, to whom God gave the adoption, the giving of the Law, the service (worship) of God, and the promises (covenants). It was the Gentile who had lived his whole life in debauchery, idolatry, sexual immorality, thievery, murder, fornication, etc. When presented with the Torah (Law); and understanding that before Yeshua's sacrifice, the Gentile had few options but to submit to "circumcision" if he wished to convert to the religion of Israel, many obstacles stood in the way of Gentiles accepting God's Law.

Thus, for an adult Gentile, the prospect of circumcision was definitely a commandment of the Law that a (Gentile) would have "hatred toward, opposition toward." Besides circumcision, the Gentile was confronted, for the first time in his life with a Living Authority (a living God) that required of him "do's" and "don'ts." You can easily see the scope of taking upon oneself the whole of the Law was less than agreeable, thus we have a hindrance in taking faith in the One God of the world to the Gentile nations.

But, now in Messiah, the hatred and opposition toward the Law was removed for the Gentile, because no longer (following the cross) are Gentiles required to convert to Judaism to become children of God. Circumcision is no longer required of Gentiles to be in covenant with God. With the lessening of requirements, the Gentiles found a more attractive Judaism (Monotheism) as he was not to be held responsible for 613 mitzvot, but only the Laws (Mitzvot) Of Noah. Thus, the Jew and Gentile could become one through Messiah, thus making peace between Jew and Gentiles who had not previously accepted the Torah-Law. The failure of the Gentile to adopt and accept the Torah's commandments, had previously separated the Jew and Gentile. Now, as a modified life-style that came because of the sacrifice of Yeshua, the Gentiles began to accept and follow a life-style from which they were previously alien toward.

If you want more confirmation, Eph. 2:16 re-states for the second time that God "might reconcile both (Jew and Gentile) unto God in one body (Body of Messiah) by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby (notice it does NOT SAY the cross slew the Law). Notice, that again reference is made to the ENMITY, the hatred and opposition toward something. This verse is not as specific as before, but nowhere does it refer to a Jew's hatred toward the Law, rather, the hatred that Jew and Gentile had toward each other, mainly because of the erroneous perceptions that the Gentile had toward the Law which caused him to refuse accepting the Law as his absolute authority for life, thus separating the Gentile from the Jew, even in the face of Gentile revelation and faith. This separation of the Gentile from the Jew and Israel was usually manifested in anti-Semitism! God desired that the Gentile become "one" with the Jew, "one" with Israel.

ARE YOU READY TO BE SET FREE OF LIES?

For our final proof text, we turn to Colossians, chapter 2, verse 14: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross."

Answer for yourself: Forgetting for a moment what I just showed you, let me ask you again...did Yeshua nail the Law to the cross or just those parts of the Law that are against us (the death penalty for sin) and is the Law passed away for Christians today?

For years I heard preachers tell me repeatedly that Yeshua took the Law which was contrary to me and nailed the Law to the cross, thus the Law is passed-away, we are under grace! We are under both!

Let us remember what we have learned up to now, that Paul said in Romans 7:12: "Wherefore, the Law is holy, and the commandment holy, just, and good." Paul would also say in Rom. 2:13: "For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the Law shall be justified." With this understanding we will examine Colossians 2:14. As stated before, Yeshua abolished in his body the Gentile's hostility toward the Law of God, by allowing Gentiles entrance into the Kingdom Of God without becoming circumcised and adopting all the Laws of Israel. Our Bibles state that he also "blotted out the handwriting of ordinances which were against us in the Law, and nailed those ordinances "which were against us" to the cross as he had previously done with the "hatred toward the Law." Let us ask ourselves some revealing questions.

Answer for yourself: Which, if any, commandments given by God are contrary to us?

To answer this question in a manner whereby all can understand, let us continue.

If you are parents, your loving intention for your children should be for them to not to be harmed by the hurts so prevalent in this dangerous world. In order to safeguard them, you give them instructions and teachings (called Torah, law) that you set down to guide their conduct, whereby, if they obey, they will be assured of safety and they will prosper. However, you also find it necessary to limit their conduct at times by training their minds through restrictive teachings, designed to limit the expression of their behavior. Thus, as parents, we give our children both positive and negative instruction, commandments, mitzvoth, and laws. One thing is in common with all which we tell our children, that it is in their best interest that they obey their parental authorities as they lovingly set down for them the "law", as it will be best for them if they do.

Likewise, when God commanded us not to commit adultery, I can hear Him say: "Oh, please don't do that, you might get a terrible disease and die for just a moment of fun." Likewise, when God commanded us not to kill, I can hear Him say: "please don't kill another who is created in My likeness, for if you do, then you will have to die also for your transgression." Easily, we can see that God, as did the parents in the example above, desire our best, and gave us commandments, both positive and negative commandments, both "thou shalt do" as well as "thou shalt not do". The goal of such loving protection and caring instruction in the giving of mankind His law was to assure for us standards, which if followed, would not only bless us, but others as well.

Understanding these examples, you can easily see that the commandments of God for His people were not, according to Colossians 2:14, "handwriting of ordinances that was against or contrary to us."

Answer for yourself: Then, what was contrary to us in this handwriting of ordinances (Law) that was taken out of the way, and "nailed to the cross?"

Answer for yourself: If these "holy, just, and good" laws, properly understood, were for our good and not for our harm, then what part of the Law was contrary toward us that was taken out of the way and nailed to the cross? That's easy.

The only part of the Law that was contrary to us is the "DEATH PENALTY" which came to us when we broke the Law for the first time, and subsequently reinforced by our further rebellion to God's Law. Yeshua, became our sacrifice, but much more, he paid my debt. Our "death penalties" were carried by him, taken out of the way, and was nailed with him onto that cross. Yeshua took the judgment of the Heavenly Court upon himself for our sin. Yeshua took our penalty (the soul that sinneth, it shall die); nailed the death sentence found within the Law to the cross, and left the blessing (the Laws such as "thou shalt not commit adultery, thou shall not kill, thou shall not steal, etc.). Yeshua, by taking those things contrary to us out of our way in that we shall never have to face spiritual death and eternal alienation from God, nailed the death penalty upon himself for our violations of the Law. It is easy to see then, that all that remained within the Law was for our blessing then, and not for our cursing ("blessed are you if you"....).

We must again stop and think...what part of the Law is contrary to us? Today, nothing remains that is contrary to us!

Back to the covenant of Jeremiah, chapter 31. Jeremiah teaches us that in the economy of this RENEWED COVENANT mankind will no longer sin! There is one further implication that can not be ignored.

Answer for yourself: Since this is what God created in Eden, and this is what God will do in the kingdom of Heaven, what ought we to be doing now?

Obviously, we ought to be obeying God by writing His Torah on our hearts and thereby obey it!

God's obvious desire is for us to be obedient to His instructions now! Many folks believe that God's Torah was abolished. They believe that it was replaced with something better. The writer to the Hebrews anticipated this when he commented on this new (renewed) covenant. If we look carefully, we will find out that the problem with the old covenant was with the people, not with God's law.

Hebrews 8:1-13 makes the point quite clear: We do have such a high priest, who sat down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in heaven, and who serves in the sanctuary, the true tabernacle set up by the Lord, not by man. Every high priest is appointed to offer both gifts and sacrifices, and so it was necessary for this one also to have something to offer. If he were on earth, he would not be a priest, for there are already men who offer the gifts prescribed by the law. These men serve at a sanctuary that is a copy and shadow of what is in heaven. This is why Moses was warned when he was about to build the tabernacle: "See to it that you make everything according to the pattern shown you on the mountain." "For if there had been nothing wrong with that first covenant, no place would have been sought for another. But God found fault with the people (NOTICE HE DID NOT FIND FAULT WITH THE COVENANT OR LAW, BUT WITH THE PEOPLE OF THE COVENANT)" and said: "The time is coming, declares the Lord, when I will make a new (RENEWED) covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. It will not be like the covenant I made with their forefathers when I took them by the hand to lead them out of Egypt, because they did not remain faithful to my covenant, and I turned away from them, declares the Lord. This is the covenant I will make with the house of Israel after that time (remember they are dispersed, literally now Gentiles due to inter-marriage; many today setting in Christian Churches unaware of their heritage), declares the Lord. I will put my laws in their minds and write them on their hearts. I will be their God, and they will be my people. No longer will a man teach his neighbor, or a man his brother, saying, 'Know the Lord,' because they will all know me, from the least of them to the greatest. For I will forgive their wickedness and will remember their sins no more."

By calling this covenant "New," he has made the first one obsolete; and what is obsolete and aging will soon disappear. The Greek of this verse, states that the first covenant, containing a Levitical Priesthood, was "slowly passing away," and it was in the days when Hebrews was written, that the Levitical Priesthood was slowly passing away, because the Temple would be destroyed in only a short time. The only Priesthood remaining would be the Priesthood of the order of Melchizedek, filled by Yeshua.

So, if there is nothing wrong with God's Torah, or law, then there is nothing to fix in His Torah. Therefore, God will fix that which is broken: His people. After He fixes us, He will again give us His Torah (Law, teaching, instruction) on a new heart. Shavuot, therefore, is the festival of the giving of the Torah. Thirty-three hundred years ago, God gave us His Torah written on stone, on the Festival of Shavuot. Two thousand years ago, God gave us the Living Torah, Yeshua, who taught us great insights into the written Torah. On a future Shavuot, God will write His Torah on our hearts in a new and dynamic way which will prepare us for eternity. We have the down payment of the Holy Spirit that guarantees it. Let's celebrate this Shavuot (Festival of Pentecost) by renewing our commitment to obey God and His Torah.

WHAT ALL OF THIS SHOULD MEAN TO THE GENTILE CHRISTIAN?

We at Bet Emet would have you understand, for starters, that since the Law has not passed away, and we have demonstrated that repeatedly as seen here as well as before, then as Christians we are under Law, under Grace, under the responsibilities to obey God's Commandments such as: keeping the Sabbath on Saturday, keeping and observing the Festivals of the Lord and not the pagan holiday which have been substituted for the truth, and practicing the Tithe correctly whereby we no longer rob God as you unknowingly do everything you give you 10% to traditional Christian churches. I know of no Christian Church in America that obeys the Tithe correctly as stated in Scripture. If you know of one, please inform us.

Answer for yourself: Where is the place that obedience should play in response to faith?

If we are to obey, as a greater measure of love for God than anything else, then understand the Law (teachings, instructions) is the picture God gave us to know of His will for us and is intended by Him for us to obey.

If you would like to learn more about the Jewish Yeshua, and the Jewish Messianic Church, which was the pattern God gave for Gentiles to follow, contact Bet Emet Ministries and we will be glad to help you be conformed into the image of Yeshua, and not a reflection of him that has been blurred by traditions of men, deception, and selfishness for more than 1700 years. Shalom

It is our prayer for you at Bet Emet Ministries that Yahweh Bless your UNDERSTANDING of the Apostle Paul's teachings, which are sometimes 'hard to be understood' - but which do NOT 'do away with' any of The Perfect Laws of Yahweh, in any way.

Bet Emet Ministries exists to blow a trumpet and sound an alarm, for the sure judgment of God will fall on the "condemned city" where both the guilty and innocent in thought are both judged and found guilty.

Many of you have already written us here at Bet Emet, so we know that this message of returning to Torah-faith being put out to the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel (scattered Gentiles) and to descendants of assimilated portions of the Tribe of Judah is stirring your hearts. Those of you who have not yet shared your feelings with us, please do. We derive great strength and encouragement for the work we are doing through your communication, prayers, and support. Please stay in contact. Shalom.

GOD'S TRUE SALVATION AS SEEN IN HIS SABBATHS, HOLY DAYS, AND BIBLICAL FESTIVALS

It has always been God's intention to break down the middle wall of partition separating Jew and Gentile, thus uniting both Jew and Gentile as one with Him. It is God who is to be the Savior of the Gentiles (Isaiah 11:10, 42:6; Acts 2:39; Ephesians 2:11-18).

Isa. 11:10 And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious. {glorious: Heb. glory}

Isa. 42:6 I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles:

Acts 2: 39 For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, [even] as many as the Lord our God shall call.

Eph 2:11 (KJV) Wherefore remember, that ye [being] in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: 13 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. 14 For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition [between us]; 15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, [even] the law of commandments [contained] in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, [so] making peace; 16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby: {thereby: or, in himself} 17 And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh. 18 For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.

In the Old Testament (Hebrew Scriptures) God provided a written record of the Messiah to enable the Jewish people to recognize Him when He appeared. Yeshua of Nazareth is thought by many to be this this Messiah. The answer to that question is not as easy as it seems. We have on another site detailed factual information and presentation of this difficult issue which Jews and non-Jewish believers cannot seem to agree on. I suggest you look into the matter if you desire but this is not the issue of this article. Yet, even though many Jews of the Second Temple ear in the first century C.E. hoped and believed that Yeshua was to be manifested as the Messiah and fulfill the Jewish Scriptures, the powerful Jewish Temple leadership (Sadducees) rejected Yeshua as Israel's Messiah not only for themselves but officially for the people of Israel.

Ironically, the Gentiles of the world, through the ministry of the followers of Yeshua would embraced him as Israel's Messiah. As the apostle John wrote, "He came to his own and his own did not receive him. But as many received him, to them he gave the right to become children of God, to those who believe in his name." (John 1:11-12).

These Gentile followers of Yeshua experienced a spiritual new birth and became part of a company of people called "Israel." The Apostle Paul teaches us that Gentiles, who turn from idols to serve the living God, are grafted into Israel by faith; thereby becoming "fellow-citizens" with the saints.

THE GREAT SEPARATION BETWEEN JEW AND NON-JEW

Following the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E., the assembly of Gentile Messianic Believers (Church) became more "Gentilized" under the influence of Rome and lost much if not all of the "Jewish Roots". Thus Jews and Christians began to go their separate ways. It wasn't long before Yeshua's Church was flooded with Gentile unbelievers who embraced the "Messianic-Christian faith" but never had a background in the Jewish faith. It is these Gentile "converts" who lacked the foundations of Torah and who would not accept the Jewish customs. These Gentile "converts" would forget one important thing: Jewish often meant BIBLICAL! Because of this lack of understanding of the Jewish faith, and distrusting things that are often different, these Gentile "converts" brought their hatred and bigotry against the Jews with them into this new Jewish faith. About the same time, some of the genuine Gentile Christian leaders developed a faulty theology that created an anti-Semitic mentality in the Gentile Church that further divided the Christian world from the Jews. These early anti-Jewish declarations laid the foundation for the tragic future of Jewish Christian relations that would see the Gentile Church lose sight of its Jewish roots and persecute the Jews down through the centuries.

GOD IS DOING A NEW THING IN OUR DAY....SHALL WE NOT SEE IT?

But in these last days, God is doing a marvelous thing. He is breaking down the walls of hate and misunderstanding that have divided the Jews and Gentile believers. He is sovereignty pouring out His Spirit on thousands of Jews to prepare them for the coming of the Messiah. At the same time, God is stirring in the hearts of Christians a holy love for the Jewish people and awakening them to the Jewish roots of their Christian faith.

Many Christians are realizing that the origin of our faith is Jerusalem, not Athens, Rome, Geneva, Wittenberg, Aldersgate, Azusa Street, Springfield, Nashville, Tulsa, etc.

As a result, Christian Churches around the world are reaching out to the Jewish people in their communities, singing songs from the Old Testament, rediscovering their Jewish roots and celebrating the Jewish Feasts. It is clearly God's appointed time to reconcile Jew and Gentile, binding us together by His Spirit.

THE CELEBRATION OF THE BIBLICAL FESTIVALS BY THE NON-JEWISH BELIEVER

Because of the prophetic season in which we are living, many Christian Churches are realizing that it is proper, good and pleasing to the Lord to celebrate the Jewish Feasts of Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles (Romans 14:5-6). Not only that but when we study the original languages of the Bible, both Greek and Hebrew, we find that these Festivals are not merely suggested for the Gentiles to observe, but expected and commanded! [see Have We Misunderstood Paul and The Law].

THERE A NUMEROUS BENEFITS THAT ARE BEING EXPERIENCE BY CHURCHES WHO KEEP THE FESTIVALS

Some of these are:

- 1. Better understanding of the Bible
- 2. Rediscovery of the Jewish roots of Christianity
- 3. Fuller comprehension of God's plan of redemption
- 4. Deeper revelation of Yeshua
- 5. Greater insights into God's prophetic seasons
- 6. Clearer and more powerful teachings through visual aids
- 7. Discovery of the Biblical Church calendar.

Answer for yourself: What Church that desires more of God would not want these benefits!

You can realize them in your own congregation by celebrating the Feasts.

GETTING STARTED WITH THE PASSOVER

Historically, Passover marks the national liberation of the Hebrews from Egyptian slavery. Pesach, the Hebrew name of the feast literally means "the lamb". God instructed each family to take an unblemished year-old male lamb to their home on the tenth day of the first month, Nisan. This corresponds to the months of March and April. They were to examine the lamb for four days to see that it was perfect. On the fourth day at twilight (the beginning of the fifth day), they were to kill the lamb and take some of the lamb's blood and place it on the two doorposts and the lintel of their house. On the first Passover, the avenging angel of God killed every first born male throughout the land, from Pharaoh, to slave, to camel. The angel would "Passover" those homes that protected themselves by placing the blood of a lamb on their doorposts and lintels.

Today the Feast of Passover is celebrated by Jewish people and many Christian churches around the world with a Passover Seder which commemorates the liberation from Egyptian slavery which is a picture of God's salvation. This is a picture of the salvation provided by God to those who believe His Word and respond to it in faith and works. The Passover Seder is a meal with special foods, practices and Scripture readings. The Passover Seder commemorates the liberation from Egyptian slavery, in accordance with God's instructions (Lev. 23:1,4, Exodus 12:14,24-27).

Lev. 23:1 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

Lev. 23:4 These [are] the feasts of the LORD, [even] holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their seasons.

Exod. 12:14 And this day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD throughout your generations; ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever.

Exod. 12:24 (KJV) And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever. 25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service. 26 And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service? 27 That ye shall say, It [is] the sacrifice of the LORD'S Passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head and worshipped.

One needs to understand that the Passover was the demonstration of their "faith" in God. We come to God in Faith and Obedience without which we have no relationship and cannot expect "life" from God. The mixed multitude responded toward God and His Word to them through Moses with "faith" and "works" and "obedience" which ultimately led them to their salvation from estrangement from the true God. So behind all the Passover instruction and story is one of "faith" unto God that exhibited itself in "obedience." This is the core of what the Passover demonstrated and teaches us today.

Heb 11:6 6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. (KJV)

UNLEAVENED BREAD

Hag ha-Matsot, the Festival of Unleavened Bread (Ex. 12: 15). This stems from the commandment to eat unleavened bread (MATSAH) and the prohibition against eating HAMETS or leavened food, in commemoration of the Israelites' hasty exodus from Egypt when they had time to prepare only unleavened bread. While the prohibition against hametz applies to the entire festival, the commandment to eat matsah applies, strictly speaking, to the first night only. One needs to understand that after one receives the gift of salvation from HaShem which is by grace only, then he is obligated to "cast out the leaven" from his life. Leaven is used as a metaphor for "sin" in the Bible and it is understandable that after one comes to God then he needs to clean his life up in response to God's gracious gift of salvation. Thus "unleavened bread" in the next step for the Bible believer after his salvation experience.

THE FEAST OF PENTECOST

The Feast of Pentecost is celebrated on the sixth day of the Hebrew month of Sivan. This corresponds to the months of May and June on the Gentile calendar.

Historically, the main activity on the Feast of Pentecost was the presentation of a wave offering to the Lord, two loaves of baked bread with leaven (Lev. 23:15-21). The wave offering expressed the Hebrews' dependence on God for the harvest and their daily bread. This was a thanksgiving offering. Not only that but it is a picture of the people of God; two loaves representing the Jew and the non-Jew as the peoples of God.

Later when the Jews were dispersed among the nations, the Feast of Pentecost lost its primary significance as a harvest festival and was celebrated as a memorial to the time when God gave the law at Sinai. It is this "Law" which is given to both the Jew and the non-Jew through the various Covenant's of God. This is because the Jews have traditionally believed that God gave the law to Moses on the Day of Pentecost (Ex. 19:1,11).

Exod. 19:1 In the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they [into] the wilderness of Sinai.

Exod 19:11 And be ready against the third day: for the third day the LORD will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai.

The Day of Pentecost did not originate with Christianity, but it is the day when the Jews would be in Jerusalem to celebrate the Feast and the giving of the law (understood at their Covenant responsibilities).

From Luke's account in Acts 2 we see the marvelous timing of God. Thousands of Jews had journeyed to Jerusalem to celebrate the Feast of Pentecost. It was then that the followers of Yeshua waiting in the upper room were filled with the Holy Spirit. They then began to worship God in foreign languages that were spoken and understood by the Jewish pilgrims. There was such a loud noise accompanying this experience, that it attracted the attention of the Jewish visitors who went to see what the commotion was all about. Peter then stood up and preached a bold sermon to this Jewish crowd.

This outpouring of the Holy Spirit was taking place on the very day when the Jews were offering the two wave loaves to God and celebrating the law symbolizing their dependence on God. One wave loaf symbolized the Jews and the other the Gentiles who would also receive the Holy Spirit in like manner as recorded in Acts 10.

It is this Spirit of the L-rd which is given to empower the child of God, now saved, and "cleaned up from his sin through repentance and obedience to the commands of God," to live the victorious life over sin. It is this "anointing" which empowers the child of God to live the mitzvot and the commands of God. Even Yeshua said his yoke was easy. God made it so easy for us if we will lean upon Him and His power in us that enables us to live a Torah obedience and love filled life. The result of such obedience and sanctification in one's life is that he become a vessel in which God can abide. So in these "former rain" Feasts we find faith and obedience, sanctification and repentance from sin which transforms us into holy vessels in which God can abide and use for His glory.

1 Cor 6:19 19 What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? (KJV)

God makes His salvation available through faith as pictured in the physical salvation of Israel from Egypt. Words accompany such belief for if the Israelites had not responded accurately to their faith and failed to apply the blood to their door then they would likewise have died. Once we are saved at Passover one comes to Unleavened Bread as it is time to get the "leaven" (picture of sin in the Bible) or sin out of our lives. This is a sanctification whereby we make ourselves through repentance and obedience to the Word of God acceptable vessels for God's Spirit to inhabit. God's Spirit comes to such a one in the fulfillment of Pentecost.

Now in Israel we encounter the dry season separating the former Feasts and the Latter feasts. We then leave the first harvest season during the year and encounter the dry period as symbolized by the life of mankind. Once we are saved, cleansed, and filled with God's Spirit, we are equipped to live out our lives where we must deal with the good and the bad as we encounter them in life. Sometimes life is hard as seen in the dry season following Pentecost; yet we have the Spirit of HaShem to comfort and sustain us. This is symbolic of the difficult and arduous years of life where we live out our relationship with God. It is through these years of struggle and testing where we reveal before God and man our relationship with Him. This is where the rubber really meets the road so to speak. This is our life time where we live by faith and not by sight in proving to ourselves and God our commitment to Him. At the end of our journey we wait for our death and our ultimate reconciliation with God.

THE FESTIVAL OF ROSH HASHANNAH

Rosh HaShanah is the Jewish New Year, a one-day festival in ancient times, now observed for two days (in Israel as well as in the Diaspora) on the 1st and 2nd of Tishri. It marks the commencement of the annual ten days of penitence, which reach their climax on Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

The Rabbis gave the festival two other names: Yom ha-Din, the Day of Judgement, and Yom ha-Zikkaron, "the Day of Remembrance," when God remembers His creatures. The concept of "Judgment Day" is rabbinic, deriving largely from statements made in tractate Rosh HaShannah. The Mishnah speaks of all mankind passing before God on the New Year like a flock of sheep (RH 1.2). This idea is expanded in the Talmud, which lays emphasis on the New Year as an occasion for self-examination in the light of Judaism's highest ideals. From the awesome picture of each man or woman standing before the throne of God, judgment on his or her fate for the coming year being entered on Rosh ha-Shannah and the verdict sealed on the Day of Atonement (RH 16a), the rabbis went on to visualize "three ledgers opened in heaven: one for the completely righteous, who are immediately inscribed and sealed in the Book of Life; another for the thoroughly wicked, who are recorded in the Book of Death; and a third for the intermediate, ordinary type of person, whose fate hangs in the balance and is suspended until the Day of Atonement" (RH 16b). Hence the designation of Rosh ha-Shannah and Yom Kippur as Yamim Nora'im ("Days of Awe"). These themes dominate both home observance and synagogue liturgy on Rosh ha-Shannah. Festive white marks the appearance of the synagogue and its worshipers. It also symbolizes closeness to God and the ideal of man's cleansing from sin.

Understanding the above then it is proper to look at Rosh HaShannah as a symbol of our death and judgment at the end of our life. It is appointed for man to once die and then the judgment which is also a second part of Rosh HaShannah. After the resurrection at Rosh HaShannah and the judgment and reward for believers as well as non-believers, then one awaits final atonement at Yom Kippur. The Scriptures teach that at the blowing of the Trumpets on Rosh HaShannah will be the resurrection of the dead. Having lived our lives in faith and obedience we die only to be ushered into God's presence for the judgment.

1 Cor 15:52 52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. (KJV)

THE FESTIVAL OF YOM KIPPUR

Following our resurrection unto reward or judgment at Rosh HaShannah we enter the Holy Day of Yom Kippur otherwise know as the Day of Atonement. The importance of this day and the authority for its mode of observance rest upon specific biblical commandments "to make atonement before the Lord" and "afflict your soul" (Lev. 16: 29-31, 23:27-32; Num. 29:7). Afflicting one's soul was interpreted by the sages to mean abstaining from food and drink; atoning was understood to mean three related acts that would relieve one from the burden of SIN - - acknowledging the transgressions, declaring repentance through a process of confession, and then making atonement before God in order to obtain His forgiveness. It is during our lives that we had the opportunity to repent of our sins, confess them, and make atonement for our sin. Rosh HaShannah had brought us before God for our judgement and our status declared at Yom Kippur. Our final Atonement is accomplished in our lives following our judgment and our status before God settled for all Eternity. We live before God for Eternity in His Presence which the Festival of Tabernacles reveals to us in its symbolic understanding.

THE FEAST OF TABERNACLES (SUKKOT)

The last major feast on the Jewish calendar is Tabernacles. It is celebrated in the Fall in the Jewish month of Tishri, which corresponds to the month of September/October on the Gentile calendar.

The Feast of Tabernacles came at the final ingathering of the harvest season. The fruit of the land had been reaped so the people could rest from their labors. It was a time of great rejoicing and was celebrated from the fifteenth to the twenty-first. Then on the twenty-second (the eighth day), there was a special Sabbath which was a day of rest characterized by further rejoicing (Lev. 23:33-41).

Levi 23:33 (KJV) And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, The fifteenth day of this seventh month [shall be] the feast of tabernacles [for] seven days unto the LORD. 35 On the first day [shall be] an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work [therein]. 36 Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it [is] a solemn assembly; [and] ye shall do no servile work [therein]. {solemn...: Heb. day of restraint} 37 These [are] the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim [to be] holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, and a meat offering, a sacrifice, and drink offerings, every thing upon his day: 38 Beside the sabbaths of the LORD, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your freewill offerings, which ye give unto the LORD. 39 Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: on the first day [shall be] a Sabbath, and on the eighth day [shall be] a Sabbath. 40 And ye shall take you on the first day the boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; and ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God seven days. {boughs of goodly trees: Heb. fruit of, etc} 41 And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year. [It shall be] a statute for ever in your generations: ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

The primary activity during this feast is the building of booths or shelters (Sukkah). God commanded the Hebrews to build shelters to live in during the Feast as a reminder of how He cared for them during their wilderness wanderings and the fact that they were pilgrims passing through this life (Lev. 23:42-44).

Levi 23:42 (KJV) Ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths: 43 That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I [am] the LORD your God. 44 And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

The shelters were loosely constructed and decorated and the roof covered with branches. This allowed the Hebrews to see through the roof into heaven and be reminded of an even greater rest and rejoicing when Messiah would rule on the earth. Thus, the Feast of Tabernacles symbolizes the Messianic age.

The Feast of Tabernacles has such universal significance in God's redemptive program, that He requires all nations to go to Jerusalem to celebrate this feast in the world to come (Zech. 14:16).

Zech. 14:16 And it shall come to pass, [that] every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles.

This agricultural "ingathering of the harvest" is symbolic for the ingathering of souls unto God following our death following our judgment. One of the prophetic readings for the festival is chapter 14 of Zechariah, where it is said that all the nations will someday go up to Jerusalem" to keep the feast of Tabernacles" (verses 16-19). A total of 70 bullocks were sacrificed in the Temple on the seven days of the festival (Num. 29:12ff.) and the rabbis suggest that this number corresponded to the 70 nations of the world. Thus both Jew and non-Jew are reconciled with God. The only thing lacking is the eternal dwelling of the Spirit of God with mankind at the Festival of Tabernacles. This is the eternal Sabbath where God and man are one for Eternity.

This is only a summary to say the least of what the Biblical Festivals reveal...the Plan of Salvation of God.

BUT WHERE IS JESUS?

And if you noticed, this plan is very understandable to the Jew and non-Jew without trying to "force" Yeshua to fulfill passages that yet remain unfulfilled. It is these Biblical Festivals, correctly understood as given above, which will further enable the Jew and the non-Jew to become one in expectation of the coming of the Messiah.

I, as well as the untold multitudes in the various Messianic Ministries of the world, rejoice to see the many thousands of Gentile believers which are returning to the Biblical Roots of their faith in this day and time as a sign of the prophetic season in which we are living.

WHAT SHOULD THE BIBLICAL FESTIVALS MEAN TO THE CHRISTIAN?

I am aware that many teach that the Festivals were fulfilled in the life and ministry of Yeshua. Much of that understanding is taken from the Gospel of John and other passages in the New Testament. It is not my intent here to discuss such a matter, but when one undergoes a serious and intensive study of the New Testament as compared with the Old Testament for accuracy one is saddened by the gross misapplication of Old Testament passages, mistranslation of Old Testament passages, and the hundreds of Old Testament passages taken out of context in the New Testament which are purposefully manipulated such to prove "false proofs" that Yeshua fulfilled the Old Testament prophetic passages and the Biblical Feasts. I used to believe that as well from reading the New Testament, but after years of serious study, where I compared line upon line of Old Testament Masoretic text from the Jewish Scriptures and not the "altered" Christian Old Testaments with New Testament text, I see the error of my previous religious belief system. I had put my faith in the wrong document. The bottom line for now is that we cannot be certain that Yeshua was the Messiah or will be the Messiah when he comes. I have my personal reasons to believe that when Messiah appears he probably will be Yeshua, but to twist the Old Testament and do great injustice to God's Holy Word in order to "force" an interpretation or to make it look as if Yeshua fulfilled the Old Testament when this message was presented to non-Jews of the first century who knew no better, is no longer an option for me. Time will tell if Yeshua will ultimately fulfill the prophecies of Moses and the Prophets and be the legitimate Messiah of Israel. If you find it hard to believe what I just said, then I suggest you purchase only one book and be awakened to the serious flaws in the Christian Bible and the New Testament which has so severely been "added to and taken from" by the Roman Church over the centuries: Antisemitism In The New Testament by Lillian Freudmann. Read it and you will never be sorry and then you will not be able to question what I say or write.

IN SUMMARY....GOD'S TRUE PLAN OF SALVATION

Having said that, then let me explain God's true plan of salvation as seen in the Biblical Festivals as taught in the Bible Yeshua used...the Holy Tanakh:

- God makes His salvation available through faith as pictured in the physical salvation of Israel from Egypt at the Passover where God passed over those who responded to Him in faith and obedience. Works accompany such belief for if the Israelites had not responded accurately to their faith and failed to apply the blood to their door then they would likewise have died.
- Once we are saved at Passover one comes to Unleavened Bread as it is time to get the "leaven" (picture of sin in the Bible) or sin out of our lives. This is a sanctification whereby we make ourselves through repentance and obedience to the Word of God acceptable vessels for God's Spirit to inhabit. God's Spirit comes to such a one in the fulfillment of Pentecost.
- We then leave the first harvest season during the year and encounter the dry period as symbolized by the whole of life of mankind. Once we are saved, cleansed, and filled with God's Spirit, we are equipped to live out our lives where we must deal with the good and the bad as we encounter them in life. Sometimes life is hard as seen in the dry season following Pentecost; yet we have the Spirit of HaShem to comfort and sustain us.
- The next Festival is Rosh HaShannah which symbolizes our death at the end of our life. It is appointed for man to once die and then the judgment which is also a second part of Rosh HaShannah.
- After the resurrection at Rosh HaShannah and the judgment and reward for believers as well as non-believers, then one awaits final atonement at Yom Kippur.
- The only thing lacking is the eternal dwelling of the Spirit of God with mankind at the Festival of Tabernacles. This is the eternal Sabbath where God and man are one.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that not only did the above plan of YHVH'S salvation make sense, but Yeshua's name was not mentioned once?

This is only a summary to say the least of what the Biblical Festivals reveal...the Plan of Salvation of God. And if you noticed, this plan is very understandable to the Jew and non-Jew without trying to "force" Yeshua to fulfill passages that yet remain unfulfilled. Sadly the Christian Church has not heard this message and yet it is the very core of the whole of the Bible Yeshua used! So sad!

It is these Biblical Festivals, correctly understood as given above, which will further enable the Jew and the non-Jew to become one in expectation of the coming of the Messiah.

THE BIBLICAL FEAST DAYS WERE ORDAINED AT THE CREATION OF THE WORLD AND INTENDED FOR BOTH JEW AND NON-JEW TO OBSERVE

The very first reference in the Scriptures to the solemn Festivals of Yahweh was made on the fourth day of creation (Gen. 1:14). Here is that verse in several translations.

Good News Bible "Then God commanded, 'Let lights appear in the sky to separate day from night and to show the time when days, years and religious festivals begin.'"

Jerusalem Bible "Let there be lights in the vault of heaven to decide day from night and let them indicate festivals, days and years."

New English Bible "Let there be lights in the vault of heaven to separate day from night and let them serve as signs both for festivals and for seasons and years."

Moffat Bible "Let there be lights in the vault of heaven to separate day from night, to mark the sacred seasons, the days and the years."

We can see plainly from these translations that Yahweh's sacred seasons, His solemn festivals were an integral part of His plan at the creation of the world. The Plan of Salvation and the Sabbath Laws which form a part of it was, therefore, not a divine after-thought hurriedly formulated by the Almighty when Adam sinned, but a carefully arranged program in which each major event was scheduled to occur at a divinely appointed time; a rescue program held in readiness in the event of mankind sinning.

Yahweh's solemn festivals, in other words, are part of the Plan of Salvation; for they not only prefigure the seven major events in His plan, but they specifically identify the appointed times when those mighty events are scheduled to take place.

Genesis 1:14 "Let lights appear in the sky ... to show the time when days, years and religious festivals begin."

THE FEAST DAY COMMANDMENTS AND THEIR ETERNAL NATURE

Many sincere believers suppose that the Feast Days mentioned in the Bible were a temporary feature instituted by the Eternal only till the time of the Jesus' and since then they were 'done away with,' 'nailed to the cross' and are therefore of little importance to Christians under their "supposed" new covenant. Nothing is further from the truth; and to prove this we will examine Yahweh's commandments concerning His Feasts to see if they were in fact temporary or eternal.

The commandments concerning the Feasts of Yahweh are found in the following passages: Exodus 12:14-24, Exodus 13:5-16, Leviticus 23 - the whole chapter but note carefully verses 14, 21, 31 and 41. Space does not allow us to quote all these verses, but let us look at one festival verse in six Bible translations in order to appreciate the kind of language Yahweh used when giving His Feast Day commandments. The verse we have selected is Exodus 12:14 but all the others are just as meaningful and use identical terms.

King James Bible "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations, ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance forever."

Moffat Bible "And this day shall be a memorial day for you, to be kept as a festival for the Eternal age after age, you must keep this as a standing festival."

Amplified Bible "And this day shall be to you for a memorial, you shall keep it as a feast to the Lord throughout your generations, keep it as an ordinance forever."

Jerusalem Bible "This day is to be a day of remembrance for you, and you must celebrate it as a feast in Yahweh's honor, for all generations you are to declare it a day of festival for ever."

Good News Bible "You must celebrate this day as a religious festival to remind you of what I, the Lord have done. Celebrate it for all time to come."

Knox Bible "You are to observe this day as a memorial of the past, a day when you keep holiday in the Lord's honor, generation after generation, a rite never to be abrogated."

Can you see what we mean? Yahweh's festivals were appointed by Him to be celebrated from generation to generation, age after age, for all time. They were never to be abrogated. The word "abrogate" means to cancel, to nullify, to repeal, to do away with, to abolish.

According to this Scripture, the Almighty's feasts are "never to be abrogated".

Answer for yourself: Does that sound as if He would a few years later do away with them? Certainly not. The very suggestion is insulting the intelligence of the Almighty and casting doubt on His ability to say what He means and mean what He says. Also remember that there are other Bible verses - every bit as powerful as the one given above - which in exactly the same way define the eternal nature of Yahweh's festivals. Turn to them in Leviticus 23 verses 14, 21, 31 and 41. There, over and over again, you will see how the Holy One of Israel commands His people in everlasting tones to celebrate His festivals for all time.

So do not let anyone confuse you by saying that the Feast Days of the Almighty God of Israel have been done away with: because they haven't. All who make such wild and totally irresponsible claims - and you will hear them - are insulting Yahweh's ability to even formulate His own laws; and it is unthinkable that He who knows the end from the beginning would have used such language if all along His plan was to do away with the Feasts at Calvary. The very idea borders on blasphemy and is only being given this coverage because of the untold damage that false doctrine is causing in the ranks of the Christian church.

The plain truth is this: That as the supreme Judge and Advocate in the law court of Heaven, Yahweh knew perfectly well what He was saying when He commanded that His solemn festivals were to be celebrated for ever, from age to age, for ALL TIME.

Further confirmation of this fact will be given later where you will see that in the coming millennial age, and in the age after that (on the new earth) the redeemed host of mankind will celebrate the Feast Days of the Almighty with great gladness and respect.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH HAS FOLLOWED IN THE SIN OF JEROBOAM

After the death of King Solomon the nation of Israel split into two kingdoms. The tribes of Judah and Benjamin (and some Levites) stayed loyal to Solomon's son Rehoboam and formed the "Kingdom of Judah." The other tribes broke away under a man called Jeroboam the son of Nebat. They retained the title "the Kingdom of Israel." The city of Jerusalem was in Judah and its crowning glory was the Temple which Solomon had built. Three times a year all Israelite males were commanded by God to go up to Jerusalem: at the Passover, at Pentecost and at the Feast of Tabernacles. (Exodus 23:17, Deut. 16:16). Israel's new king Jeroboam feared that his rebellion against Rehoboam would collapse if his people went up year by year to Judah for the festivals where they would hear the truth as opposed to Jeroboam's "gospel." He was extremely worried. At all costs he must prevent the men of Israel from going to Jerusalem for the Festivals of Yahweh. And this is the record of what he said.

1 "If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this Kings people turn again to their Lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to 12:27- Rehoboam king of Judah. Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto 33 them, it is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold, thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the Land of Egypt.

And he set the one in Bethel, and the other put he in Dan. And this thing became a sin: for the people went to worship before the one unto Dan.

And he made a house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not the sons of Levi.

And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah, and he offered upon the altar. So did he in Bethel, sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Bethel the priests of the high places which he has made.

So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Bethel the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, the burnt incense."

Believe it or not that seemingly insignificant act of worshipping two metal idols on unsanctified festivals was the most catastrophic blunder ancient Israel made. It is a sin so grievous that over and over again the wickedness of succeeding kings was measured against it. Repeatedly these words appear:

1 Kings 15:34,
16:2&26, 2 Kings
3:3

"And he did evil in the sight of the Lord and walked in the way of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin"

Answer for yourself: Why was Jeroboam's sin so grievous?

Because by it with one master-stroke he severed the nation's main spiritual link with Yahweh's appointed Sabbaths as well as with YHWH'S "pattern" and form of worship. The sacred festivals were times for spiritual instruction and revival, when the men - and families - of Israel gathered in Jerusalem to learn of the Almighty and His requirements. (Exodus 34:23) Jeroboam's bogus festival and substitute form of worship at Bethel broke that spiritual link and like a rudderless ship the nation of Israel began to drift away from the Creator.

The results were appalling, for very soon millions of Israelites completely lost their spiritual bearings and adopted the basest forms of paganism as well as the pagan's holy days. Many were the calls to repentance, but the sin of Jeroboam son of Nebat (the sin of using substitute forms of worship on unsanctified festivals) was not given up. As a result the Almighty carried out His predicted threats given through the His servants the prophets and handed Israel over to their enemies. After a series of devastating defeats they were deported from the Promised Land and sold like cattle in the markets of the Middle East.

2 "And the Lord rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of Kings spoilers, until He had cast them out of His sight. For He rent Israel from the house of David; and they 17:20- *made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drove Israel from following the Lord, and
23 made them sin in a great sin. For the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he* did: they departed not from them. Until the Lord removed Israel out of His sight, as He had said by all His servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day."

The action of Jeroboam, apparently trivial as it may seem, was obviously a most grievous sin. It was spiritual adultery at its worst; the act of mixing and diluting truth with error. In fact it was idolatry! In essence it consisted of merging the laws of the Almighty with human tradition and trying to worship Him on bogus festivals which were unauthorized imitations of Yahweh's appointed feasts.

Hundreds of years earlier the prophet Moses had foretold Israel's scattering or deportation if they forsook the commandments of God and here it was happening exactly as foretold.

Deuteronomy "And Yahweh shall scatter thee among all people from one end of the earth unto the other; and 28:64 there thou shalt serve other Gods which neither thou nor thy fathers have known."

Strange as it may seem, that selfsame sin of adulterating truth with error, of introducing bogus religious festivals into true worship has been repeated on a world scale by the Christian Church.

Yes it is true, the mighty congregations of Christendom have done - and are still doing - what ancient Israel did under King Jeroboam. Over the centuries truth has been diluted with error and the introduction and acceptance of unsanctified festivals as days of worship is now so widespread that comparatively few believers are even aware of the deception. This may sound like a shocking statement, but it is true; and if the reader is not afraid of truth he/she must read on, for proof of this fact will follow shortly.

At this very moment the whole of Christendom is steadily - yet almost imperceptibly - splitting into two distinct camps:

1. Those who respect the laws of Yahweh and add to their faith OBEDIENCE, especially that form of obedience which manifests in keeping Yahweh's Sabbath commandment.
2. And those who look upon obedience almost as though it were a competitor of faith. This persuasion, surprisingly, sees little amiss in clinging to the popular but unsanctified festivals of Christendom and the bogus Sabbath of Sunday. And like Israel of old these believers are in the mass refusing to keep the Almighty's festivals.

Sooner or later all those who classify themselves as believers in the Creator will move into one or other of these two camps.

HOW WE AS NON-JEWS LOST "THE FAITH" OF JESUS...THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS

Scholars, historians, and sincere clerics agree that during the first 200 years following the deaths of the Apostles, drastic, un-scriptural changes came about within the early Assembly that would flourish down to our day. It was prophesied in the Bible. But the Bible also speaks of a "remnant" who will be adhering to the original, scriptural truths in these last days. Understand what happened, ...

and the urgent need today to return to the "faith which was once delivered to the saints" (Jude3)

"As the apostolic age comes to a close, the Church seems to pass through a dark tunnel. When it comes out at the other side, the original bond of unity, the clear Standards, and the love of [Yahweh] seem to have been replaced by an unsettling, institutionalized spirit of domination and by beliefs which are more Gnostic than Christian. What happened? We are now confronted with the possibility that the original identity and true definition of Christianity have become lost." --The Apostasy Of The Lost Century.

Answer for yourself: Has Gentile Christianity since the first century twisted much of the Bible's truth, thereby making itself guilty of teaching another gospel, another doctrine?

Answer for yourself: Can you explain why a movement identifying itself so closely with Jesus, a Jew, today teaches often doctrines opposite of what he taught?

Answer for yourself: Are you even aware that Gentile Christianity is guilty of changing the gospel of Yeshua?

THE PREACHING OF ANOTHER GOSPEL

Through much Bible and historical study, I as well as multitudes of others, have drawn conclusions that differed from what is routinely taught in nominal Christianity throughout our land.

Answer for yourself: Should we need a priest or minister to interpret for us what the Bible says?

Surely the Creator of this universe would not leave an instruction Book for man that humble, sincere, truth-seeking people could not properly understand! But one thing is different today. Living in the Western Hemisphere make rendering and interpreting a Hebrew book quite difficult without adequate preparation on our parts.

Answer for yourself: Is truth that leads to salvation so complicated that it can be grasped only by those with seminary degrees in Bible interpretation, and how do we explain the multitudes of diversity in doctrines that exist in more than 2 thousand different and competing Christian denominations?

THE TRANSLATORS OF OUR CHRISTIAN ENGLISH BIBLES HAVE BEEN LESS THAN TRUTHFUL DUE TO THEIR RELIGIOUS BIASES

With the help of today's concordances, lexicons, dictionaries, and other Bible study helps, we can come to a better understanding of many archaic words and renditions found in the King James Bible.

As we move closer to the end of the age, knowledge of the Bible's true message shall be increased, Daniel 12:4. At the same time there will be a restoring of original truth neglected through the centuries, Acts 3:21. We see this last-days movement to restore Biblical truth spear-headed in the restoration of the Hebraic Roots to the Gentile Christian church today.

Most of us with a little study can easily find a number of incongruities and even serious errors perpetuated by churchianity.

For example, the name "Jesus" appears in Acts 7:45 in the King James, which obviously refers to Joshua the son of Nun, the great Israelite general. Hebrews 4:8 is another place where Joshua-or more correctly Yeshua should appear in the King James Bible. The newer Bible versions recognize this error and have since changed the name to the Latinized "Joshua" in both Acts and Hebrews. These are definitive examples revealing that the name Yeshua (later altered to Joshua) was changed wholesale to "Jesus" by translators!

The average churchgoer has no idea what the word "Christ" means or where it came from. Bible dictionaries show that "Christ" derives from the Greek christos (Strong's Concordance Greek Dictionary No. 5547, from "chrio" meaning to anoint or rub with oil). It means anointed, as does the Hebrew meshiach.

Answer for yourself: Why would a Jewish rabbi, speaking Hebrew, be given the Greek title "Christ?"

Yeshua himself said our salvation is of the Jews (not Greeks, John 4:22). Acts 1:6-7 indicates that the Kingdom will be restored to Israel and not Rome or Athens. Yet English Bibles contain the Greek title "Christ."

Answer for yourself: Why was it not properly translated "Anointed"?

One would be more correct to refer to Yeshua by the Hebrew title "Messiah" rather than identifying him by a title that is "Greek" to most people today.

It does seem rather strange that the Greek title "Christos" is transliterated (that is, brought over into English with the same sound), yet the name of Yahweh and Yeshua are both translated by the English "Lord" in our New Testament. Too often in the King James Version the word "Lord" leaves us in doubt who is meant), Yahweh the Father or Yeshua (see Acts 2:34, Heb. 10:30 and many others). This contributes to the blurring of such major distinctions and created a "theology" that guarantees such a one who follows and believes these things are idolators!

STRANGE CUSTOMS AND PRACTICES

There is a grass roots religious or spiritual movement afoot around the world to free mankind from the shackles of pagan customs and beliefs. Bet Emet Ministries is one such ministry. This is true not only in the United States, but also in Europe and the Middle East. This spiritual revival seeks the old paths of truth by restoring the Hebrew Roots of Christianity.

The problem with mankind is simply one of human nature and sin. Yahweh clearly defines sin for us:

"Whosoever commits sin transgresses also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." (1 John 3:4)

We cannot do things as we alone see fit, but are obligated to follow His instructions, living His way. He is the final Judge. When our lives are over and we are in the grave, Almighty Yahweh will be the One who matters. So we must please Him now, while we can.

As we near the end of the age it appears that Yahweh is moving to clear from the minds of sincere truth seekers the accumulated rubbish of pagan influence that has overwhelmed and saturated the faith once delivered unto the saints.

Religious error is evident everywhere, yet the majority attending weekly church services are ignorant of the subtle and pervasive influence of pagan customs. Christianity perpetuates the error instead of rejecting paganism and retracing its steps back to truth

ITS HARD TO TEACH OLD DOGS NEW TRICKS

It is no secret that the first Israelite Bishops and overseers were replaced at death by converts from paganism. Brumback's History Of The Church states on page 53,

"The Roman emperor, by the office of Pontifex Maximus, directed all religious affairs. When Christianity became the state religion, Constantine [ruling 306-337] assumed all of the authority in the church, which he had exercised as supreme director of paganism."

As more pagans were supposedly converted to faith "in" Yeshua the more difficult it was to resist the strong influence of pagan practices and customs they brought along with their new faith. Halley's Bible Handbook includes a section on church history entitled "Paganization of the Church," which aptly details what happened since the time of Constantine who was the first Christian emperor.

While Constantine did not make Christianity the state religion, he favored Christians in official appointments and positions. After his death, other Roman emperors favored Christianity above all else. Note Halley's comments:

"Emperor Theodosius, 378-395 CE, made Christianity the state Religion of the Roman Empire, and made Church Membership Compulsory. This was the Worst Calamity that has ever befallen the Church. The forced conversion filled the Churches with unregenerate people..."

"But now the military spirit of Imperial Rome had entered the Church. The Church had conquered the Roman empire, but in reality the Roman Empire had conquered the Church, by making the Church into the image of the Roman Empire..."

"The Imperial Church of the 4th and 5th centuries had become an entirely different institution from the persecuted Church of the first three centuries. In its ambition to Rule it lost and forgot the spirit of [Messiah].

"Worship, at first very simple, was developed into elaborate, stately, imposing ceremonies having all the outward splendor that had belonged to heathen temples..."

There were mass conversion of the Barbarians. There is only one problem. There was little repentance and instruction, and they amounted to false conversions. The Gothes, Vandals and Huns who overthrew the Roman Empire accepted Christianity; but to a large extent their conversion was nominal; and this further filled the Church with pagan practices..." p. 867, Halley's Bible Handbook.

THE TRANSFORMATION OF JEWISH CHRISTIANITY INTO A GENTILE ABERRATION OF BIBLICAL TRUTH

Historians attest to the change that came over the early fledgling assemblies following the death of the Apostles, all of whom had been Jews. It is as if a curtain had come down upon their activities, and when it is raised a hundred years or so later, an entirely different situation is seen. Syncretism-the merging of pagan practices with Bible truth-is obvious everywhere. The heathens continued keeping their former pagan ways, but under a new name and with a slightly different meaning.

Man's desire to do things his way, rebelling against the commands of Yahweh, started back in the Garden with Adam and Eve. Rebellion continued, forcing Yahweh to intervene through the flood, the tower of Babel, and even while the Israelites were being fed manna and having Moses lead them to the Promised Land. Isaiah's opening chapter is a condemnation of His chosen people. Rebellion against Yahweh's law continues and is becoming even more evident today.

The point of Isaiah's rebuke and that of Yeshua reveals that the syncretism has continued throughout history. Carnal man has continued to inject his own thoughts and concepts in his worship and thus early on contaminated the True Worship of our pure and holy Creator Yahweh.

WE HAVE FAILED TO LEARN THE LESSONS OF HISTORY

Having come out of Egypt, and recalling that pagans worshipped a golden calf, Israel decided they would have a visible object that they could see, handle and touch to represent the invisible Yahweh, Exodus 32:4. The clear warning in Exodus 20:1-5 was that under no circumstances were they to follow the idolatrous practices of the pagans in the land they were to possess.

Israel's covenant was to follow the teachings of Moses and so be a light to the Gentile nations around them. The Gentile pagan nations were not to be a light to Israel. Israel's mission was to be a model nation and to lead others in the pure worship of Yahweh. This is clear from Isaiah 27:6: "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit."

Psalms 80:8-11 clearly shows that what Yahweh sought from Israel, His vineyard, did not become a fruit of righteousness. His people were soon removed from their favored and unique position among all peoples and sent into exile.

Answer for yourself: What happened?

Israel had become ensnared in the worship practices of the pagans about them. Instead of holding Yahweh's way of life-with its many blessings and security-as an example to the world, Israel took up pagan ways, turning their backs on pure worship given in the Bible.

When Israel finally went into the Promised Land, it was a new generation, a people that had seen the miracle of the daily manna being provided for them, and the presence of Yahweh in the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night.

This new generation of Israelites should have gotten the paganism of Egypt out of their system. They had among them Moses and the tabernacle with a functioning priesthood to keep them mindful of the goodness and bounty of Yahweh's providence. All of this to no avail.

After the death of Moses, Israel, instead of driving out the inhabitants to a man, tolerated the pagans, married them, absorbing their heathen worship and practices.

The pagan nations were still in the land at the time of David and Solomon and were a snare to them.

Eventually, the false religions of the world so corrupted the Chosen People that Yahweh divorced them spiritually

Answer for yourself: Is God the same yesterday, today, and forever?

Now pay attention to the next question.

Answer for yourself: If God who is the same yesterday, today, and forever, divorced His people and "cut them off" from Himself and commanded His people to divorce their Gentile wives because of the pagan worship practices that they brought into Israel, can God do any less with us who practice and observe pagan holidays in the Church and substitute pagan "sabbaths" for the Sabbaths of God? You better think deeply before you give a quick answer.

One only has to read Matt. 7: 18-21 to find that many will come to Yeshua thinking that they have done many wonderful works in "his name" only to hear "depart from me I never knew you..because you work and practice iniquity." What we fail to understand is that the Greek word for "iniquity" means those who are not submitted to or ignorant of the Laws of Moses, especially Gentiles. If we were not ignorant of such Laws we would see specifically that God has commanded how He is to be worshipped, and no where in these Laws and Commandments can we find the holidays observed in the Christian Church today, instead, we find the opposite....a complete calendar of Jewish Holy Days which by in large is neglected.

IF WE DO NOT LEARN FROM HISTORY IT REPEATS ITSELF

History repeated itself centuries later after Yeshua's death. The first disciples were all Israelites, as were the first bishops. Within the first hundred years, however, the "called-out ones" no longer were of the characteristic Hebrew flavor. Paganism had moved in and taken over.

Yeshua came to call us to repent and return to the pure religion of Yahweh, teaching us to follow His ways instead of carnal, human understanding. Historically we see that Christianity, when it departed from its Jewish Roots rejected the Hebrew religion, which led to a despising of the Mosaic Law given by Yahweh Himself to man (Rev. 22:14). Instead, Gentile Christianity tolerated and absorbed prior pagan customs and teachings in flagrant violation of Scripture.

The Oxford Illustrated History of Christianity, commenting on the widespread infusion of pagan influence, on page 84 states:

"The 'opaque' areas of experience, of institutions and daily living, if they had not disappeared by [Pope] Gregory's time had become absorbed into a Christian universe as translucent parts. In principle, there was nothing that could not be absorbed into the radically Christian world."

The religion of modern churchianity has absorbed many foreign doctrines that have no basis in the Bible, but are rooted in Mystery Pagan Religions.

Answer for yourself: Could many today in the church be likened to the rebellious Israelites who took up whatever new worldly fad or liberal trend came upon the scene? You better believe it! Yahweh is completely out of their thoughts.

And even as they did not like to retain Yahweh in their knowledge, Yahweh gave them up to a reprobate mind [unfit to pass judgment], to do those things which are not convenient: being filled with all unrighteousness...who knowing the judgment of Yahweh, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them," Romans 1:28-29,

BAPTIZED WITHOUT REPENTANCE

Historians attest to the change that came over the early fledgling assemblies following the death of the Apostles. With the exception of Luke and Paul, all the New Testament apostles were Jews. They had grown up following Israelite customs, keeping the Saturday Sabbath, the annual Feast Days and hearing the Torah (Law) read to them each Sabbath. Yet, there are those who contend that these Jews were dyed-in-the-wool Christians and wrote the books of the New Testament in Greek no less! Current scholarship since the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls has proved this 1700 year Catholic tradition totally bogus.

Syncretism (the merging of paganism with Biblical truth) is obvious everywhere within the New Testament to those with such prior knowledge of both Judaism and pagan Gentile religions. The pagans continued keeping their pagan ways, but under a new name and with a slightly different meaning and much of this was written within the pages of our New Testaments and without prior knowledge one falls prey to such deception.

The Oxford History of Christianity, on page 85 states,

"Baptism turned a pagan into a Christian...What constituted a 'pagan' was a matter of definition by clerical authority; in practice it meant what evaded the bishop's control. Gregory the Great's decision that English converts to Christianity might continue to use their traditional places of worship provided they were sprinkled with holy water was a revolutionary extension of clerical tolerance, with momentous implications for later missionary activity."

All of this is to say the pagans were baptized, but returned to their former houses of idolatry and continued to worship as before. Only the name had been changed to gain larger numbers of converts to Christianity.

THE FACTS OF THE MATTER ARE QUITE DISTURBING

The following is taken from the book, The Jewish Christians of the Early Centuries of Christianity According to a New Source, written by Shlomo Pines. The Islamic historian reveals much about growing dissension between Jews and Christians shortly after Yeshua's time and the blending of pagan beliefs brought into Christianity by the growing number of gentile converts.

Pines makes revealing comments from his vantage point of an outside spectator, namely, as an observer of the history of the two distinct groups which emerged from Judaism-Christianity and Islam.

- First, there were Jewish Christians who adhered to the teachings of Moses. Beginning with the Apostles, the first converts to an understanding that Yeshua was the expected Messiah were from Judaism, especially from the synagogues where the Apostles went to preach.
- Later came the torrent of Gentile converts who are referred to simply as "Christians." While the Jewish Christians continued keeping of the law and the ways taught by Yeshua, those converts coming from non-Israelite nations became known as Gentile Christians (whom author Pines refers to only as "Christians"). These retained their many heathen doctrines, blending them into "Christianity."

Shlomo Pines writes of the early centuries of Christianity and states, "The original Gospel was regarded as written in Hebrew." He goes on to point out what history has verified, that the Gentile converts to the true Biblical Jewish Faith no longer used the Hebrew texts to bring about the conversion of many other nations. Because of the infusion of foreign doctrines by Christianity, the Gentile bishops and teachers avoided the Hebrew Scriptures, relying mostly on the Greek texts. Pines tells us why in this eye-opening statement:

"In their view, this was a deliberate policy on the part of the Christian leaders, who did not want to have their doctrines demolished by the scholars grounded in the Scriptures who were numerous among the Jews."

It is noteworthy that this Islamic writer is acutely aware of the many un-scriptural doctrines of early Gentile Christianity. Gentile Christians had abandoned the Commandments of the Old Testament (Torah) and substituted alien laws and heathen customs and practices.

Rather than evangelize the nations around them through the authentic Hebrew Scriptures, the Christian leaders from Gentile backgrounds avoided the Hebrew texts because so many of their "Christian" doctrines were nowhere found in the Bible.

Thus, they avoided any clash with those knowledgeable of the Hebrew Scriptures which condemned taking on any aspect of worship foreign to the Word of Yahweh. Author Pines contends that Emperor Constantine turned against the pagan philosophers and adds, "The philosophers' books were burnt and monks were lodged in their temples, which were transformed into churches (or monasteries)" p. 30.

UN-SCRIPTURAL TEACHINGS REPLACE GOD'S TRUTH

That pagan temples were turned into churches or monasteries explains the heathen derivation of the word "church" used in the King James and other Bibles. The Greek word "ekklesia" literally means "the called out ones," which carries the same meaning as the Hebrew "kahal." Ekklesia refers to a body of people, not a building. The word "church" is a poor translation of ekklesia. Church refers to the building coming to us through the Anglo-Saxon "circe." Circe was the Greek goddess who turned men into swine. In Scottish the word is "kirk," relating to the Hebrew "kikkar," meaning a circuit or disc-the sun! The ancient link to sun-worship (on Sun-day) is undeniable.

The following excerpts are taken from Pine's work:

- "The Romans and the Greeks had a feast called the Nativity of Time, which celebrated the return of the sun in January. They introduced into it various modifications and called it 'The Nativity of [Messiah]' or the Nativity. This feast was unknown at the time of [Yeshua] and of His companions.
- "The Jewish Christians...are not vegetarians and they do not reject certain portions of the Old Testament. Like the Jewish Christians of our texts, they are, as far as the observance of commandments is concerned, orthodox Jews...They thus carried on the old tradition of the first Christian community of Jerusalem..."

A footnote on page 39 reveals,

"Strecker points out that the Jewish Christian doctrine started out by being the Christian church doctrine and became a heresy only in the wars of historical evolution."

In other words, paganism and worldly doctrines infiltrated the early body of believers and corrupted it. As more pagan converts became "Christians," they flooded the church with their traditional practices that soon were "baptized" by the Christian clergy and absorbed as doctrine. This is how Sunday, New Year's, Xmas, Easter, Lent, Halloween, Valentine's Day, and much more crept into and became "holy-days" (holidays) of churchianity.

THE PARTING OF THE 2 WAYS

The early movement saw one group of Christians as rooted in the teachings of Jesus which still clung to Israelite laws. These converted Jews known as "Jewish-Christians" continued to meet in the synagogues of the Jews as did Paul, Acts 13:14; 15; 42; 14:1.

The other group, composed mostly of Gentile converts, took on Grecian culture and Hellenistic customs and were simply called "Christians." According to Pines, this latter group [Gentile converts] brought about "the abandonment and portrayal of what is regarded as true Christianity and its replacement by Greek notions and ways. It is the relation of a historic failure; victory rests with the agents of corruption," page 14.

In other words, the flood of pagan converts to Christianity soon overwhelmed the pristine truth as taught by Yeshua and the Apostles, and Christianity became tainted.

Christians today, many unknowingly, observe more pagan carry-overs than days plainly commanded in the Bible.

These popular days include Sunday (a day historically set aside in honor of the sun), Easter (the day honoring Astarte, alias Ishtar and Ostra, Chaldean Queen of Heaven) Xmas (midwinter solar-fertility celebration), Lent (40-day fast for Ostra), New Year's (near the midwinter solstice instead of the Biblical spring), Valentine's Day (Roman fertility celebration), Halloween (demonic observance), and many others.

There is no teaching or foundation for any of these "Christian holidays" anywhere in the Bible. They are the concepts and doctrines of men, firmly embedded in Christianity through centuries of tradition and practice.

Pines continues: "After Him [Yeshua] his disciples were with the Jews and the Children of Israel in the latter's synagogues and observed the prayers and the feasts of (the Jews) in the same place as the latter'" (page 41).

The early believers (referred to by Pines as "Jewish-Christians") continued on with the worship of Israel by observing the weekly Sabbath, the annual Holy Days, and heard the preaching of the Old Testament along with the prayers of the Jews. They continued meeting in the Jewish synagogues just as did Jesus and the Apostles.

A decided difference soon arose between the "Jewish Christians" and "Christianity" itself.

The true believers continued with the "Jewish" worship based on Yahweh's immutable law, while Christianity had amalgamated into its doctrines almost every foreign belief and practice necessary to accommodate the new convert. Accepting Christianity for the pagan was made easy. For him his old ways remained the same, only the name had been changed.

TRUE WORSHIPERS ALARMED BY SUCH CHANGES

The Jewish Christians were deeply concerned about the events that had corrupted many converts to the faith of Jesus through the Roman Caesars and the "Rominization" of Christianity," according to Pines.

"...Jewish Christian authors of our texts and presumably other members of their sect may have been the only people in the world-at the relatively late period (perhaps the fifth or sixth century) at which these texts were composed-who still deplored the split of Judaism and Christianity, two religions which should have remained one. They also deplored the fact that the Christians (or perhaps only most of them) no longer read the Gospels in Hebrew, the language of [Yeshua], and all the prophets. Quite clearly, these Jewish Christians believed that they preserved and continued (perhaps clandestinely) the traditions of the first not yet corrupted Christian community of Jerusalem founded by the immediate disciples of [Yeshua] who professed His religion, i.e...observed the Mosaic Commandments," p. 65.

Author Shlomo Pines summarizes the accounts of other historians who maintained that the early believers in Yeshua as the expected Messiah still observed the Sabbaths and the Annual Holy Days.

Paganism proceeded apace and soon overwhelmed Bible truth, replacing Scriptural customs and celebrations with paganized additions and substitutes.

HISTORY DOES NOT LIE...WELL NOT ALWAYS...UNLESS YOU ARE THE WINNERS OF HISTORY...LIKE ROME

While the comments of historian Pines are revealing, they are by no means unique. Many astute historians who are aware of the vast changes that took place from the time of the Yeshua until now corroborate what we have read.

Luther H. Martin's book Hellenistic Religions reads on pages 118-119,

"One of the first issues to be debated by Christians was whether they were a new religion... These early Jewish Christians understood Christianity in terms of its Jewish past and they continued their observance of Jewish ritual practices exemplified by dietary requirements and circumcision." Tracing the history of paganism, Martin writes, "...and by the second century, Christianity had assumed many of the forms and practices of the mystery cults" p. 162.

Brumback's History of the Church, referring to the beginning of the true Assembly at Pentecost in 31 C.E., reveals,

"In it practices that are common in the religious world today were not found," p. 19.

Author Brumback explains that the early church did not celebrate many of the holidays observed by most of churchianity today, which we have mentioned.

Then follows an explanation of the pagan source of Lent. "The word 'Lent' is derived from the old English word 'Lencten' which means spring. It was connected with a pagan feast that was celebrated in honor of the goddess 'Ostra,' the goddess of the east. The sacrifices to this deity were offered just about the time of the Passover and in this way it became associated with the believed resurrection of Jesus which followed the Jewish Passover.

"Not until the Council of Nice (325 C.E.) decreed that Easter should be kept on Sunday next after the full moon on or after the vernal equinox, was there a definite day for the observance of Easter. Here is the evidence that it has a human origin, as it was not known until after the fourth century just when Easter would be," p. 20.

Easter is not a Bible celebration. It is found in only one place in the King James, at Acts 12:4, a woeful mistranslation of the Greek Pascha, or the Passover.

Author Brumback goes on to explain in fuller detail a bit of Easter's history, adding,

"Certainly no such day is authorized by the teaching of the Apostles."

"What brought these changes about? Why did disciples submit to having these days set apart as special days for the church? The answer is found in the failure of those who were the people of [Yahweh] to know what [Elohim's] Word taught. Lack of this knowledge made it possible to introduce new doctrines and new practices into the teaching of the church. The apostasy of the church and the corruption of the [evangel] resulted from neglect of the church to study [Yahweh's] Word" p. 21.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF BIBLICAL TRUTH WAS LOST BY NEGLECT

Brumback continues on page 31,

"In the beginning the church was pure. The divine plan of the church as revealed in the New Testament was followed. Now the apostasy of which the apostles warned, began to develop."

"Ultimately Christianity overcame paganism and thousands of those who had once opposed the church now became identified with it, without understanding that such a step called for the reformation of life, separation from the world, and devotion to the cause of [Messiah]. Christianity in its purity was thus destroyed by paganism," p. 54.

Widespread neglect of the Old Testament meant that converts were not schooled in the Old Testament and were ignorant of Israelite background and the books of Moses. They simply accepted the Greek Septuagint as their source of Old Testament teaching, nor did they know anything about it's purposeful corruptions to pattern paganism, and knew little and understood even less of the Feasts and the deep meaning of the sacrificial laws. By and large the Gentile Christians detested the Jews and would have none of their teaching or understanding of the Torah.

The New Testament is built upon precepts and teachings of the Old. Paul was inspired to write that salvation is found in the Old Testament:

"And that from a child you have known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ" (2 Timothy 3:15).

The early Apostles based their teachings on the Old Testament to prove that Yeshua was the promised Messiah of Israel. Yeshua even mentioned that himself in Luke 24:44: "...that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me"...sadly we yet await the fulfillment of the true Messianic Prophecies so the identity of the Messiah yet remains unknown...that is until the true Messianic Prophecies are fulfilled!

In Luke 4:4 Yeshua said that man shall live by every word of Yahweh. He constantly referred to the Scriptures, the Old Testament, when answering matters concerning the law, divorce, and personal conduct (the New Testament was not yet in existence at this time! See Luke 24:27).

The last warning of the Bible is that man is not to add to the Bible or to take anything away, on pain of losing salvation, Revelation 22:18. "Scripture cannot be broken," John 10:35. Yeshua said, "Search the Scriptures," John 5:39.

Gentiles did not always comprehend the deep meaning of the Sabbaths and knew little of the Feast Days found in Leviticus 23. (The Bible calls them "Yahweh's Feasts," not "Jewish" Feasts. They detested the Jews and would have nothing to do with their practices, nor did they try to understand or study Hebrew. As a consequence of arrogantly ignoring the Old Testament basis of truth, Christianity generally still does not understand the foundation of Scripture.

"Now therefore you are...fellowcitizens with the saints...and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets [Old Testament], Yeshua Himself the chief cornerstone," Ephesians 2:19-20

IS THE BIBLE GREEK TO YOU

The influence of paganism is easily found in many historical sources. Charlton Larid's book, The Miracle of Language, reveals:

"The Church furthered Greek as well as Latin, the early Fathers of the church wrote Greek, and even as early as the seventh century Greek was being studied in England. Thus Greek words entered the English directly; they became Latin words which were borrowed directly; and they became Latin words which became French words which were borrowed directly" p. 90.

This custom of admitting Greek and Latin names wholesale into English Bibles resulted in replacing and disguising Hebrew names. These names supplanted the true, original names, making them surrogate hybrids with a Grecianized flavor.

Today the claim is made that the entire New Testament was written in Greek, which is disputed by reputable scholars who find an unmistakable Hebrew original underlying the Greek text.

Because early Christian translators were woefully ignorant of Hebrew, Greco-Latin names soon replaced the inspired Hebrew names. Even today the King James uses Esaias for Isaiah, Judas for Judah, Elias for Eliyah (Elijah), Urias for Uriah, Ozias for Uzziah, Josias for Josiah, Ezekias for Hezekiah, Idumea for Edom, Paul for Shaul, James for Ya'akov, Peter for Kefa, John for Yochanan, and many others.

The most holy of all words in the Bible, the sacred Name Yahweh, was replaced with kyrios and theos, which the King James renders Lord or God-outright substitutes.

Further enlightenment is given on page 118 of The Miracle of Language: "The Anglo-Saxon word for a general director was stigward, the sty-ward, the man who looked after the pigpen, for an Anglo-Saxon capitalist was likely to have his stocks and bonds mostly in the form of razorbacks. We have reduced the word to steward. The boss himself was a hlafward, a loafward, the man who looked after the bread. We cut that word to lord..."

Thus, we can see how the English Bible has reduced the sacred Name of our Creator Yahweh to "keeper of the loaf," or Lord! His holy Name Yahweh is now replaced with an inferior title.

In his History of the Church, Brumback answers the question how pagan ways and pagan days infiltrated the early church. He points out:

"The answer is found in the failure of those who were the people of [Yahweh] to know what [His] word taught. Lack of this knowledge made it possible to introduce new doctrines and new practices into the teaching and worship of the church. The apostasy of the church and the corruption of the gospel resulted from neglect of the church to study [Yahweh's] word."

"Pagans were accustomed to observe a feast to Proserpine with the burning of candles. To make the transition from pagan worship to Christian worship easy, the church in apostasy instituted on the same day a feast to the virgin Mary and burned tapers in her honor. Lactatius, a historian of the church, spoke of this practice as superstition, ridiculing those who lighted candles for [Yahweh], as if He lived in the dark.

"Here were changes that appeared in the teaching and worship of the church as it developed into an apostate institution. Holy water, the burning of incense, the observance of Lent and Easter...were connected with paganism. When the church dropped the guidance of [Yahweh's] word pagan ceremonies found their way into the church and they are today a part of that system of worship which grew out of the apostasy," page 21-22.

THE SUPREME SOURCE OF ERROR

The extent to which non-Biblical doctrines and error have become unquestionably accepted as fundamental truths directly from the Bible has alarmed sincere Bible students.

The Bible as originally given is indeed the pure Word of Yahweh. Man has translated the Scriptures into other languages while viewing the Bible through the eyeglass of human error. Such errors are accepted as the true teachings of God without further inquiry. Some are outright substitutions with no basis in the truth of the Scriptures.

The anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic Gentile Christian Church of the early centuries after Yeshua has twisted the minds of some who perhaps unknowingly have accepted error as truth and call truth error. Thus, the masses are led astray (Revelation 12:9). And this began a long time ago. To this sad situation I am glad to say that Yahweh also has His people who are standing fast in His truth and studying the Scriptures to prove whether these things be so.

The purpose of this study is to help us better comprehend the source of error so that we can separate truth from falsity. History shows that all pagan religion has its source in Nimrod's Babylon. The teachings of Babylon have dominated Egyptian as well as Greek and Roman religion.

Teachings right out of Babylon can be found in almost all religions of the world. These abominable doctrines have even undermined the true religion Yahweh gave mankind through Israel. With corrupted doctrines and error, ministers have continued to twist the Bible so that "truth" is no longer Bible truth.

SYNCRETISM: A DEADLY MIXTURE

The Bible when first given to mankind was inspired by Yahweh's Spirit. It was pure, holy and undefiled. Problems began when translations were made from one language to another. Our English Bible, for example, is taken primarily from the Latin. Which was translated from the Greek. Which was translated from the Hebrew, with much being lost along the way. It is like taking change from one pocket to place in another and losing some in the process. This is why it is our goal to return as closely as possible to the original languages.

Through what is known as syncretism, pagan doctrines are merged with Bible teachings and blindly accepted as if from Scripture. Thus, the pristine Truth of the Bible has been adulterated with paganism and unknowingly accepted.

On page 109, The Oxford Illustrated History of Christianity quotes Patrick Wormald on adaptations of Christianity,

"Christianity had been successfully assimilated by a warrior nobility, a nobility which had no intention of abandoning its culture or seriously changing its way of life, but which was willing to throw its traditions, customs, tastes, and loyalties into the articulation of the new faith."

While the expressed purpose of the church was to convert pagans and bring them into the fold of Christianity, in reality it was paganism that triumphed over churchianity. It was the church that absorbed and retained the pagan rituals, symbols, holidays, and precepts, but gave them a new name with a new meaning and a "Christian" understanding.

Meyers' Medieval And Modern History states on page 42, "Many of our religious ideas, festivals and ceremonies, as witness Easter, and Christmas may be traced back to an origin in the practice and belief of our heathen ancestors."

Thus, pagan converts felt right at home as they retained their worship of the sun on Sunday, observed the re-birth of the sun in December, and called it not "Sol Invictus," but "Christmas." It made for a painless conversion to "Christianity." So the unregenerate pagan was baptized and became a "Christian-but was still a pagan at heart.

Had Israel and churchianity not done what they respectively have done in corrupting of Truth and establishment of falsehood, anti-Biblical sentiment would not be what it is. The conflict between light and darkness is no new conflict. It has carried on ever since sin first entered the Garden of Eden.

Churchianity reads the Bible and sees no parallel between Israel's past dismal history and its own deplorable record.

Bible teaching rests upon learning from the examples of others (1Cor. 10). But what if man contends that he needs no examples? With our high-tech society and our sophistication and knowledge, along with our scientific thinking, modern man feels competent to find his way if only given money enough and sufficient time to follow whatever light is given. Man is convinced that he is quite sufficient unto himself, and given time will eventually work things out.

Israel was overwhelmed by the visible power of Yahweh at Sinai (Exodus 19 and 20). The thunderous voice and trumpet, the lightning, the smoking, the rumbling and quaking of the Mount itself was evidence enough. The vaunted ability of man was tested. Israel vowed they would be perfect in everything and be obedient. Yet, when they tried they obeyed in nothing. Israel was pardoned again and again, and each time they continued to transgress.

The Tabernacle (and later the Temple) was right in their midst with the visible priesthood actively carrying out Yahweh's instructions day by day. Instruction, warning, chastisement, and the evident presence of Yahweh in the pillar of cloud by day and pillar of fire by night were of no avail.

THE HOLY SPIRIT GIVEN TO MANKIND TO HELP HIM BECOME OBEDIENT

By himself, man lacks the ability and moral fiber to be holy. This is the primary lesson we are to learn here on earth, namely, that man's way is not Yahweh's way. We are to change our mind, the way we think, by having Yahweh's Spirit dominate our very being. "The carnal mind is enmity against Elohim: for it is not subject to the law of Elohim, neither indeed can be," Romans 8:7.

It is only through the workings of Yahweh's omnipotent Holy Spirit power, which now is available to us, that we can rise above this mundane world. This means obediently following the way of life given us throughout the Bible, for it is through obedience that we are given the Holy Spirit: "And we are his witnesses of these things; and [so is] also the Holy Spirit, whom Elohim has given to them that obey Him." (Acts 5:32)

By professing to be His worshipers, ancient Israel assumed they could obligate Yahweh to tolerate whatever whim their degenerate minds could devise. They mentioned His Name, but their hearts were far from obedience.

"Yea, you took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your deity Remphan, figures which you made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen."* (Acts 7:43-44)

DOCTRINE AND THE COMMANDMENTS OF MEN

Giving only lip-service is not acceptable to a holy, just, and righteous Yahweh. It never was and never will be. Genuine obedience comes from a contrite heart. Yeshua himself said, "They worship Me (referring to YHVH) in vain; their teachings are but rules made by men," Mark 7:7, NIV. This is a direct quotation of Isaiah 29:13, condemning the city of David, Jerusalem, for their idolatry and wickedness.

Yeshua then castigates the Pharisees and teachers of the law with those same words when the Pharisees heap criticism upon His disciples who apparently paid too little attention to the tradition of the Pharisees and Jewish elders.

The point of Isaiah's rebuke and that of Yeshua reveals that the syncretism (mixing pagan concepts and customs with Bible teaching) has continued throughout history. Unconverted man injects his own thoughts and notions into his worship and continues to contaminate the pure worship of a holy Yahweh.

While we hear much of the error that has crept into the worship of our Creator, many have not studied deeply into the truth of the Bible and are oblivious and unschooled in what is actually taught as Bible doctrine. A growing movement of sincere Commandment keepers with faith in the Savior is prophesied to arise at the end of the age as we see in Revelation:

"Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of Yahweh, and the faith of Yeshua,"* Revelation 14:12.

LET US LOOK AT SOME EXAMPLES OF TRADITIONS OF MEN WHICH HAVE REPLACED THE WORD OF GOD

Few are aware of the many teachings abounding in nominal religion that are contrary to the Bible. I choose not to go in-depth in pointing out these errors, however here are a few simple examples, in which one or two verses of correction follow the erroneous teaching which sadly is accepted as if true today by the majority of Christians:

The Father, Son and Holy Spirit are three persons in one, and are equal.

"My Father is greater than I,"* John 14:28. Yeshua Himself acknowledged that the Father was greater. Paul said, "The head of Messiah is Yahweh," I Corinthians 11:3.

The Holy Spirit is the power, the force of Yahweh shared by the Son and is not a person--Ruach ha Kodesh.

We keep Sunday because that is the day the Son was resurrected, and that changed the Sabbath.

"There remains therefore a rest [Sabbatismos, Sabbath] for the people of Yahweh," Hebrews 4:9 (reference to verse 4). There is no Bible justification for changing the day of worship. Sunday-keeping stems from pagan sun worship. Yeshua did not rise Sunday morning, but at the end of the Sabbath, and said nothing about any change whatsoever in the weekly day of worship. Besides that, if you are aware of Hebraic reckoning of time you can easily see that Yeshua was resurrected on Saturday evening, before the dawning of a new day at 6 PM which would be Sunday. He was raised BEFORE Sunday on the Sabbath, a perfect picture of the eternal Sabbath given to mankind in the world to come.

The Son by His resurrection changed Sabbath to Sunday.

"And it shall come to pass, from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, says Yahweh," Isaiah 66:23. This speaks of the future kingdom. The Saturday Sabbath has never been changed but is in effect now and will be observed in the Millennium.

The Son was put to death on Friday and arose Sunday morning.

"...in the midst of the week He shall cause the oblation and sacrifice to cease," Daniel 9:27. He was impaled on Wednesday (Wednesday in German is Mittwoch, midweek) and was in the grave three days and three nights. He rose from the grave before sunset on Saturday (Mat. 28:1- "end" is the Greek opse meaning "late on").

"For as Jonas [Jonah] was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth," Matthew 12:40. There is no way one can get three nights from Friday until Sunday morning.

The Son came to do away with His Father's law by nailing it to the cross.

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill," Matthew 5:17. He brought the law to its fullest intent and meaning; He did not destroy it, but lived it as an example for us, John 14:31. Besides the only "handwriting and ordinances" that were "against us" are those which we incur when we disobey, not obey; for the Torah (Law) was given to us as a patten for Godly life, that when obeyed brings God's blessings and not his curses. The death penalty for disobedience is the only thing in the Law which is against us is the only part of the Law that was against us and that only when we disobeyed. Repentance restored relationship then as well as now.

The Son cleansed all foods and now all animal flesh like pork and shellfish is good for food.

"They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens behind one tree in the midst, eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, says Yahweh," Isaiah 66:17. This is speaking of the end of the age and those eating swine's flesh will be consumed. Clean food laws are still in effect.

Man is born with an immortal soul

"[Yahweh] Who ONLY has immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man has seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting," 1Timothy 6:16. We do not yet have immortality but are seeking it, "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life," Romans 2:7. Why are we to seek for immortality if we already have it? Why a resurrection if we are already immortal and can't die? (1Thes. 4:16)

Not a Dead Soul Alive

The most blatant of all erroneous teachings fostered by churchianity is that man has an immortal soul, a teaching found in most pagan religions. That the soul upon death leaves the body and immediately goes to heaven or hell is not found in Scripture.

Many such errors are accepted as the true teachings of the Yeshua without any inquiry. Some are outright substitutions to the Bible and have no basis but lead to a corruption of the truth of the Word.

False teachers certainly have twisted the minds of some who perhaps unknowingly have accepted error as truth and call truth error. Thus, the flesh of man, in opposition to God (called Satan in Hebrew as the Yetzer HaRa..the evil inclination in man) "leads the whole world astray," Revelation 12:9.

The purpose of this study is to help us better comprehend the source of erroneous teaching so that we can sift out the truth. Scripture and history show that all pagan religion has its source in Nimrod's Babylon where religious lies have complete sway. The ways of Babylon have dominated Egyptian as well as Greek and Roman religion. Babylonian teaching can be found in almost all religions of the world. These abominable doctrines have even undermined the true religion Yahweh gave mankind through Israel. Yahweh calls Babylon the Mother of Harlots, who has corrupted the earth, Revelation 17-18.

MODERN BLIND GUIDES LEADING THE BLIND

Bible readers today follow the history of Israel and shake their heads in disbelief over the fickleness of the people of Yahweh who are led astray by heathen practices. They read of Israel's falling into pagan idolatry and marvel that Yahweh, full of mercy, always was ready to take Israel back when they repented.

But these same people today (Christians) do not see that they are doing the very same thing and following the same pattern of lawlessness. Today it is not the pagan worship and temples about us that lead people astray. Instead it is those of Gentile churchianity who are supposedly upholding and teaching Yahweh's Word who lead men away from Yahweh, 2 Peter 2.

They preach from the pulpit that Yahweh's law no longer applies to us. Law was only for ancient Israel; we are under grace, and not under the law, say those teaching a modern and up-to-date gospel of love, grace and forgiveness. Being obedient to the law of Yahweh is said to be bondage, and we are not under the bondage of the law, we are told.

According to them supposedly when the Messiah came to die for the sins of the world, he did away with the law. Now all we need is faith. "Faith alone!" was the rallying cry of the Reformation. But the Bible says that faith alone is meaningless! "Faith without works is dead," James 2:26. You see dear brother and sister, God is concerned how we worship, what days we set aside and make holy, and how we build His kingdom by giving our tithes and offerings. Any old way won't do. Just as Nadab and Abihu learned when they were smote dead by YHVH. Let us learn from their example lest we follow in the ways and be rejected by God when we die.

By twisting the Scriptures and choosing to emphasize certain portions over others, today's preachers strain hard to do away with the law. They especially despise two of the Ten Commandments.

The first tells them that the Sabbath is on Saturday, the seventh day. The second tells us to handle His Name with respect and reverence. Known as the Third and Fourth Commandments, these two "test" commandments show our complete obedience to Yahweh. They are among the first to be rejected by many people. Some ministers seem willing to move heaven and earth to get these two Commandments buried under faith, love, and grace!

Your Bible says that if you break one commandment you have broken them all. That is, unless you keep all Ten, you have fallen short of perfection. Yahweh expects His people to keep His Commandments, for all His Commandments are righteousness, Psalm 119:172.

We read in 1 John 5:3 that the love of Yahweh is the keeping of His Commandments.

He loves us in return when we keep His law, John 14:21.

Because many have been told from countless sermons that the Savior came essentially to bring a new religion, many simply repeat what they've heard without thoroughly checking their Bibles.

YAHWEH'S LAW WILL NEVER PASS AWAY

"We are a New Testament Church and emphasize the teachings of the Savior Who nailed the law to the cross," they say. Such a belief is absolute foolishness! Yeshua never said or even intimated that he came to do away with his Father's laws! He said just the opposite.

"My doctrine is not mine but His that sent Me," he said, John 7:16

"Think not I came to destroy the law and the prophets. I came not to destroy but to fulfill," Matthew 5:17

Some attempt to get around this verse by telling us that Yeshua did away with his Father's laws, fulfilling them completely-filled them up-and now has set them aside.

Actually, what he has done is fulfilled them with a greater depth of meaning than before. He shows us the fuller spiritual intent of Yahweh's laws. "Fulfill" is the Greek plerosai and means to conform to or accomplish. Notice how the Savior elaborated on one of the Ten Commandments:

"You have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: But I say unto you, That whosoever looks on a woman to lust after her has committed adultery with her already in his heart." (Matt. 5:27-28).

Clearly, Yeshua was emphasizing that the keeping of the Commandments begins with proper and right attitudes, thoughts, desires, and goals. To entertain a wrong thought could well lead to committing the act-sin.

Furthermore, we read in the last book of the Bible that true believers will be keeping the Commandments of Yahweh when Yeshua returns to rule.

"And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the Commandments of Yahweh, and have the testimony of Yeshua," Rev. 12:17

Sadly, there is but a "remnant" of the seed of the true Israel. There is no large multitude following the way of the Bible today, but a "little flock," Luke 12:32. They are also known as the "saints." Don't look for a large group of people to make up the "Bride" at the end of the age. Consider the parable of the five wise and five foolish virgins. Only half of them went in to the marriage supper. The other half was locked out.

RESTORING THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS

Being fully aware that often those encountering the worship services of Bet Emet Ministries are confused at the differences they experience when contrasting with their own churches, I felt it was time to express the truths gathered from my many years of study where I discovered the "pattern of service (worship)" given by Yahweh to David as detailed in I Chron. chapter 28. If you were to undertake a comprehensive study of the "pattern" you would be surprised to know that Yahweh's Pattern Of Worship survived until the fourth century A.D. where it was finally crushed by anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism by the emerging "organized" Gentile Christian church headed by the Emperor Constantine. Efforts to destroy the pattern actually began as early as the second century and ultimately succeed.

Let us not forget that it was said of Jesus' church:

Acts 2:42 42 And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. (KJV)

It is up to us if we desire to be true followers of Jesus to make sure that we know and adhere to the same doctrines taught by Jesus' church and disciples and be aware if possible for the changes to these doctrines which would later be made by Rome due to its anti-semitism in the 4th century. Only in this way can we return to the "faith once given to the saints."

Only by diligent research and scholarship have I been able to "rediscover" the faith once given to the saints. Before we go on let me ask you some important questions if I may:

1. Since the "pattern" for worship was can be shown to be handed down from David to Solomon and finally to the men of the Great Assembly as headed by Ezra the Scribe, and subsequently handed down to the men of the days of Jesus when he walked this earth; then if Jesus is to be our example, why don't we follow Jesus' method of worship since it can be likewise shown that he adhered to this "pattern?"
2. Since this "pattern" of worship can be demonstrated to have been handed down to the Jewish converts of the Jesus Messianic Movement within 2nd Temple Judaism as well as to the Gentile converts that came from the fruit of the Great Commission, then why have we not been taught about its necessary components let alone been taught to practice it in our Christian Churches?
3. Having learned that the New Testament is full of references to this "Jewish pattern of worship" in the early church which is composed of both Jews and Gentile believers in Jesus, then what prevents us from repenting and returning to the worship of God as found in the early church before Roman paganism was mixed with it and such blended worship became in large part unacceptable to Yahweh?

4. If it can be demonstrated that much of what Paul taught the Gentiles to whom he took the Gospel was adherence to "the" pattern of Jewish worship as found in the Holy Scriptures, then what prevents you from reevaluating your current experience in light of God's revelation concerning His will for you in proper worship?
5. If it can be shown through study of the original languages of Scripture that there is often a different message being conveyed than what is understood in reading the "English," then, understanding that Jesus is a Jew, and his followers that took his message to the nations (Gentiles) were also Jewish, do you not think that what was conveyed in Hebrew or Greek is more correct in understanding when rightly understood in the original language than what we often understand in the "English?"
6. If it can be demonstrated that pagan Gentiles influenced the change and abolition of this "pattern" of worship, should you not want to return to the worship of God that was given "in spirit and in truth" before it was corrupted?

The aim of this study is to present the Jewish liturgy in its "original freshness," so that all, both Jews and Christians, may realize "how greatly Jesus and the original Christian community were indebted" to it. No renewal can come about except through a rediscovery of roots and of the historical, spiritual, and cultural soil in which these roots gave life to the New Testament experience. The church was born of Judaism and lived its life within Judaism for several decades, and only in the light of Judaism can it perceive and recover its vital identity which is so needful in today's world. By "rethinking theology" can man only discover one thing: the rediscovery of the Hebrew and Jewish categories within which Christian experience first appeared and which this experience used in order to communicate its truths to the world originally. We are hearing more and more today such statements as this one of L. Swidler:

"Jesus was a 'Rabbi' and not a 'Father,' a 'teacher,' and not a 'reverend'; he was a Jew and not a Christian; he attended the synagogue and not a church; he celebrated the Sabbath on Saturday and not Sunday; he prayed in Aramaic and Hebrew and not in Greek or Latin; he read the Hebrew Scriptures (Old Testament) and not the New; he recited the psalms and not the rosary; he celebrated pesach (the Jewish Passover), shavu'ot (the Jewish Pentecost), and sukkot (huts) and not Christmas or Lent."

NOW COMES THE HARD PART

Answer for yourself: Do you have the theological courage to draw the proper theological conclusions from such statements of fact?

For me and many others who have studied to know the differences, the assertion of the Jewishness of Jesus must mean an assertion of the inescapable centrality of adherence to Jewish religion in the followers of Jesus and an acceptance of the need of returning to them and measuring ourselves by them in every effort we make to understand the Christian experience.

You may ask yourself: "Why should we return to Jewish religion? Why go back in heart and mind to distant Jewish religious teachings that are so alien to the modern scientific and technological mentality as seen in the Gentile Christian church of today? The answer is simple. Those distant symbolic and literal teachings of Jewish religion contain concealed words and expressions of their meaning that if received, heard, and understood, have the power to enrich and give joy to human life as nothing else can. We need to rediscover Hebrew and Jewish truths so that we may once again hear in its original purity the logos and meaning that took flesh in them for the first time. We must rethink theology with the aid of Hebrew and Jewish perspectives not only because Jesus is Jewish, but to assure ourselves that we practice a faith unaffected by compromises with false worship masquerading itself as "holiness." Love for our origins is in fact a love for the present which is marked by high standards of quality. The rediscovery of one's origins is not a love for events that took place in a distant time; rather they are as it were the foundations that support the present. The rediscovery of origins does not mean a distancing from the present but a recovery of the roots and truths that must sustain the present.

For the sake of understanding, what are the "origins" from which our Christian churches spring and on which today are built:

The Churches of Christ acknowledge that in God's plan of salvation the beginning of her faith and election is to be found in the patriarch, Moses, and the prophets. She professes that all Christ's faithful, who as men of faith are sons of Abraham (Gal. 3:7), are included in the same patriarch's call and that the salvation of the church is mysteriously prefigured in the exodus of God's chosen people from the land of bondage. On this account the church cannot forget that she received the revelation of the Old Testament by way of that people with whom God in his mercy established the ancient covenant of Abraham in which all nations (Gentiles) were to be blessed with the blessings of temporal as well as eternal blessings. Nor can she forget that she draws nourishment from that good olive tree onto which the wild olive branches of the Gentiles have been grafted (Rom. 11:17-24). The church believes that Christ who is our peace has through his cross reconciled Jews and Gentiles and made them one in himself (Eph. 2:14-16). This is the goal. Sadly today it is yet unachieved.

Without a doubt Christianity is grounded and sustained by the Hebrew and Jewish origins of its faith, election, call, exodus, people, bondage, Old Testament, covenant, root, peace, and reconciliation.

Judaism does not have a theology in the strict sense, that is, a systematically organized reflection on God; for the same reason, it gives priority to practical action. This explains the importance of the liturgy. It is this Jewish Liturgy, patterned after the commandments in the Oral and Written Torah, which provides a place for both symbolic and direct encounters with God. Such a place is where one does not speak about God, but speak to God, where one does not think about God but think in the presence of God, and where God is not an object of thought but a subject who calls and challenges His people. This space is made up of words, gestures, music, movements, listening, story telling, silence, rites and ceremonies that have been taught and handed down by God to man since the beginning of time.

For the Church, then, a return to its origins must mean a return to this space in which Israel experienced itself as the people of God. It must mean entering into these rituals of words and gestures, music and movements, and silence and ceremonies that is also ours as Christians. Let the Christian never forget the spiritual ties that link him through the Re-newed Covenant with the stock of Abraham. Such ties between the Church and Israel unite the two and they become one in fulfillment of Scripture. Such a bond is not accidental but essential in light of the revelation of Eph. 4 where there is only "one faith" and not two! The Church's identity is connected with Judaism as it shares the same space and vitality. This co-existent heritage is best expressed by the people of the "Re-newed" Covenant with the stock of Abraham through adherence to the pattern of liturgy "once given to the saints."

For too long the majority of Christian scholars have never taken seriously the fact that Christian experience and, above all, the Christian liturgy are bound up with Jewish religious ceremonies. For them Jesus Christ is presented as the originator of the Christian liturgy; either an absolute originator in regard to both content and form, or content and not form. This second party understands that the forms of worship practiced by Jesus were not new but only borrowed from the Jewish tradition. These parties, once split in their opinion have conceded their opinions to the wealth of Biblical scholarship that exists today. Nowadays no informed scholar thinks of looking outside the Biblical and Jewish tradition for the origin of the Christian sacraments and liturgy. But in reading these scholars one develops the sense that the "place of origin" is looked upon as unimportant and concessions are implicitly made that allows for Christianity's divergence from the "pattern" with its resultant inclusion of many facts of paganism that go unnoticed to the unlearned. Such should not be! Besides this, often negative judgments are made and passed upon Jewish worship. On reflection, this is of course a perfectly logical step, since once Jewish worship has been reduced to a lifeless skeleton, what is left but to decide that it is useless and a thing of the past? Such is due to the sinister working of anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism that has infected many doctrinal positions of the contemporary Christian Church, primarily due to dispensational theology which is replete with replacement theology which does such damage to the truths of God's revelation in Holy Scripture.

JESUS AND JEWISH LITURGY:

I am certainly not denying the originality of Jesus in relation to the Judaism of his time. Something in him sets him apart from his contemporaries and constitutes his moral grandeur. Yet we need not declare Judaism beneath our notice, much less demean it to assert the true stature of Jesus. Such an uncalled for approach does injustice not only to Judaism but to Jesus himself, since we abided within the "pattern" and reinforced it daily throughout his life by his actions and teachings. Upon years of scholarship and intense study, I am supremely confident that our need is to reverse the procedure of the scholars I have been describing and begin to assert the greatness and originality of Jesus not outside of Judaism in being in opposition to Judaism thus creating a new replacement religion, but to envision Jesus along with and within Judaism, brining the finer parts of his faith to life in his own life as he modeled God's truths as demonstrated in his recorded conduct and behavior.

Jesus himself, his mother Mary, the apostles, the early communities, and the first Christians (both Jewish and Gentile) were all nourished by the "pattern" of worship given by God to David which had been faithfully protected and handed down to their generation. Such prayers, psalms, rites, and ceremonies brought them life because they were God breathed.

In the following articles it is not my purpose to compare Jewish liturgy with the Christian, but rather to present you with truthful information so you can better understand how greatly Jesus and the original Christian community were indebted to the Jewish liturgy, and above all, how much a part the liturgy plays in "linking" us today with the stock of Abraham and the Churches of Christ that exist today. Shalom.

IS PAUL TELLING THE COLOSSIAN GENTILE CHURCH TO KEEP THE JEWISH FEASTS? AND WHAT ABOUT US?

Col 2:16

16 Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days:

In order for us to interpret and understand this verse correctly we must examine the original language (Greek) in which these thoughts were written. Below is a representation of the verse showing the Strong's numbers from the Greek language:

16 Let <2919> <0> no <3361> man <5100> therefore <3767> judge <2919> (5720) you <5209> in <1722> meat <1035>, or <2228> in <1722> drink <4213>, or <2228> in <1722> respect <3313> of an holyday <1859>, or <2228> of the new moon <3561>, or <2228> of the sabbath <4521> [days]: 17 Which <3739> are <2076> (5748) a shadow <4639> of things to come <3195> (5723); but <1161> the body <4983> [is] of Christ <5547>.

I have heard repeatedly when I grew up in the Christian Church that this passage was teaching that Gentile believers were not required or expected to keep the Jewish Festival days.

Answer for yourself: Is this the truth of the matter? Let us investigate.

Since the Apostle Paul was instructing these Gentile believers to let no one condemn them in regards to "holy days" and "sabbaths" we need to understand to which he is referring in order to understand this verse correctly, for our worship and obedience to God hinges on correctly understanding and interpreting this verse.

Let us examine the Greek word for "holyday"...Strong's number 1859:1859 heorte- a feast day, a festival

Let us also examine Thayer's Greek Lexicon for added meaning: 1859 heorte (heh-or-tay'); of uncertain affinity; a festival: KJV-- feast, holyday.

Now please notice all the references in the New Testament to "heorte ...Strong's # 1859":1859 (KJV)

The following is EVERY REFERENCE in the New Testament referring to "holyday" (Strong's #1859) as used by the Apostle Paul when he admonished the Gentile believers in Colossiae to not let anyone condemn them for observing these "holydays." Notice that is the same word used for the same "holydays" observed by the Jews and Jesus.

Answer for yourself: See if you can determine what they ALL HAVE IN COMMON?

- Matt 26:5 5 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people. (KJV)
- Matt 27:15 15 Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would. (KJV)
 - Mark 14:2 2 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar of the people. (KJV)

 - Luke 22:1 1 Now the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover. (KJV)
 - John 2:23 23 Now when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did. (KJV)
 - John 4:45 45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galilaeans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast. (KJV)
 - John 4:45 45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galilaeans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast. (KJV)
 - John 5:1 1 After this there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. (KJV)
 - John 6:4 4 And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh. (KJV)
 - John 7:2 2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand. (KJV)
 - John 7:8 8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come. (KJV)
 - John 7:8 8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come. (KJV)
 - John 7:10 10 But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret. (KJV)
 - John 7:11 11 Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he? (KJV)
 - John 7:14 14 Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple, and taught. (KJV)
 - John 7:37 37 In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. (KJV)
 - John 11:56 56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that in EVERY REFERENCE for "heorte" (Holyday") in the New Testament is a reference to the JEWISH FEASTS AND THE FESTIVALS OF THE LORD?

Answer for yourself: Can you now see that Paul was instructing Gentile believers to not allow others to condemn, or judge them for observing, celebrating, or commemorating the JEWISH FESTIVALS?

Answer for yourself: Does your church and Pastor teach the observance of the Festivals of the Lord or are you more acquainted with the paganized Roman holidays that are masqueraded for the truth in your church. More on that later.

Before we continue I must introduce you to the Greek word used by the Apostle Paul for "sabbath" as used in this verse (Strong's number 4521): 4521 sabbaton (sab'-bat-on); of Hebrew origin [7676]; the Sabbath (i.e. Shabbath), or day of weekly repose from secular avocations (also the observance or institution itself); by extension, the interval between two Sabbaths; likewise the plural in all the above applications: KJV--sabbath (day), week.

Let us examine what Thayer's Greek Lexicon can add to our understanding: 4521 sabbaton-

- 1) the seventh day of each week which was a sacred festival on which the Israelites were required to abstain from all work

- a) the institution of the sabbath, the law for keeping holy every seventh day of the week
- b) a single sabbath, sabbath day
- 2) seven days, a week

Answer for yourself: Does the Apostle Paul teach Gentile believers to not let others condemn them for observing Jewish new moons, Jewish Festivals and holy days, and Jewish sabbaths (understood as Biblical Feasts and Festivals)?

Answer for yourself: Is the Apostle Paul writing to Gentiles to come to Christ after the cross of Christ and all the while observe these Jewish Feast days as well? Yes he is.

Answer for yourself: What has changed then for us today if he instructed Gentile believers after the cross to observe and not desist from observing the Jewish Festivals and Sabbaths? Nothing should have but sadly it has since Rome changed everything in the 4th century!

Answer for yourself: Since the Apostle Paul founded many of the churches which he would later correspond and write to, then as their Pastor we see him instructing Gentile believers to not let others judge or condemn them in their observance of Jewish Feasts and Sabbaths. Then is your Pastor preaching the same Gospel to you or perhaps have you been listening to another Gospel and were not aware?

Answer for yourself: Does your church and your Pastor instruct you in how to observe the Seven Festivals of the LORD? If not, why not? If not, then is it about time you sought out a Pastor who has studied the Bible well enough to teach the truth which is often hidden in the original languages of Greek and Hebrew, and often overlooked when only reading the English?

Bet Emet Ministries is one such ministry who has paid the price to learn these hidden truths and revelations from God for we have devoted ourselves to over 15 years of diligent Bible study comprising the original languages in which the Bible was written in order to fully understand the difficult words of the Bible, the cultures in which the documents were originally written to ensure correct understanding, and the history that surrounds each document which again guarantees we arrive at the correct understanding which God intended for all to comprehend, understand, and implement in their lives. Back to the article at hand.

EXAMINING THE SABBATH AND HOLY DAYS MORE CLOSELY

1. sabbaton ^{^4521^} or sabbata: the latter, the plural form, was transliterated from the Aramaic word, which was mistaken for a plural; hence the singular, sabbaton, was formed from it. The root means "to cease, desist" (Heb., shabath; cf. Arab., sabata, "to intercept, interrupt"); the doubled has an intensive force, implying a complete cessation or a making to cease, probably the former. The idea is not that of relaxation or refreshment, but cessation from activity.

The observation of the seventh day of the week, enjoined upon Israel (both Jews and Gentile believers engrafted by faith into the Olive Tree of Israel), was a sign between God and His earthly people, based upon the fact that after the six days of creative operations He rested, <Exod. 31:16,17>, with <20:8-11>.

In the Epistles the only direct mentions are in <Col. 2:16>, "a sabbath day," RV (which rightly has the singular, where it is listed among things that were "a shadow of the things to come" (i. e., of the age introduced at Pentecost), and in <Heb. 4:4-11>, where the perpetual sabbatismos is appointed for believers; inferential references are in <Rom. 14:5> and <Gal. 4:9-11>. For the first three centuries of the Christian era the first day of the week was never confounded with the "sabbath"; the confusion of the Jewish and Christian institutions was due to apostasy from apostolic teaching.

Answer for yourself: Does the Apostle Paul teach Gentile believers to not let others condemn them for observing new moons, holy days, and sabbaths (understood as Biblical Feasts and Festivals)?

Now let us first examine the Greek word for "judge" as used in this verse:

As taken from the Strong's Concordance: 2919 krino (kree'-no); properly, to distinguish, i.e. decide (mentally or judicially); by implication, to try, condemn, punish: KJV-- avenge, conclude, condemn, damn, decree, determine, esteem, judge, go to (sue at the) law, ordain, call in question, sentence to, think.

Let us now look at the same Greek word from Thayer's Greek lexicon:

2919 krino-

- 1) to separate, to put asunder, to pick out, to select, to choose
- 2) to approve, to esteem, to prefer
- 3) to be of an opinion, to deem, to think
- 4) to determine, to resolve, to decree
- 5) to judge
 - a) to pronounce an opinion concerning right and wrong to be judged, that is, summoned to trial that one's case may be examined and judgment passed upon it
 - b) to pronounce judgment, to subject to censure, used of those who act the part of judges or arbiters in matters of common life, or pass judgment on the deeds and words of others
- 6) to rule, to govern, to preside over with the power of giving judicial decisions, because it was the prerogative of kings and rulers to pass judgment
- 7) to contend together, of warriors and combatants
 - a) to dispute
 - b) in a forensic sense; to go to law, to have suit at law

Answer for yourself: Does the Apostle Paul instruct Gentile believers like you and me to not allow others to pass judgment on the deeds (celebration of the Feasts) based upon their opinions, or give even their opposing opinions as to whether your keeping and observing the Festivals and Sabbaths of God is right or wrong since they mean well, but are unknowledgeable about the Bible in these instances? He sure does!

Answer for yourself: Do you want someone's opinion on how to please God and worship Him in Spirit and Truth, or do you want "The Truth" as shown in detailed study such as the one you hold in your hand?

Let us now examine the Greek word used in this verse for "respect":

As taken from the Strong's Concordance:

3313 meros-

- 1) a part
- a) a part due or assigned to one
- b) lot, destiny
- 2) one of the constituent parts of a whole
- a) in part, partly, in a measure, to some degree, as respects a part, severally, individually
- b) any particular, in regard to this, in this respect

Answer for yourself: Do you see that the Apostle Paul instructed the Gentile believers that they had a lot and destiny to observe the Biblical Sabbaths and Festivals?

Answer for yourself: Do you see that God assigned to each one of us a part to fulfill in the observance and commemoration of Biblical Feasts and Sabbaths?

Let us now turn our attention to the New Moon Festival as we research the Greek word for "new moon":

As taken from the Strong's Concordance:

5730 neomenia (ne-o-mayn'-ee-ah); from 3501 and 3376; found only in Col. 2:16: first of the month, a new moon festival.

 This Greek word was not included in the original Strong's Dictionary but is found in other Greek lexicons. Alphabetically it belongs between Strong's number 3500 and 3501.

3376 men-

1) a month

- the time of the new moon, new moon (the first day of each month, when the new moon appeared was a festival among the Hebrews)

Answer for yourself: Do you see that the Apostle Paul was instructing the Gentile believers in Asia Minor to let no one condemn them or keep them from observing the Jewish New Moon festival which is called in Hebrew "the born again" festival? He sure was!

Answer for yourself: Do you notice that the Apostle Paul was instructing Gentile believers to not allow others who mean well, but who offer only opinions instead of rightly interpreting the Word of God, prevent them from observing, or cause them to desist from observing Jewish Feasts, Festivals, as well as the Sabbath day which is the 7th days of the week?

Answer for yourself: Does your church and your Pastor instruct you like the Apostle Paul instructed his disciples to keep the Sabbath of the 7th day or has he led you to keep Sunday, the first day of the week, as your Sabbath, thus breaking the Fourth Commandment?

Answer for yourself: Does your church and your Pastor instruct you like the Apostle Paul instructed his disciples long after the cross of Christ to continue observing Jewish and Biblical Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths even in the face of "do-gooders" who mean well but who definitely do not have the mind of Christ on the matter?

Like the Apostle Paul, we at Bet Emet Ministries are jealous over you with godly jealousy, for we desire to see the consummation of your betrothal unto God, that you might be presented one day without spot or blemish as a chaste virgin to Christ. But, because of our diligent efforts over the last 15 years to discover deeper truths long hidden in the Bible, we understand, as did Paul, that you have been beguiled as Eve and your minds have been defiled and corrupted from the truth of God's Word.

2 Cor 11:1-4

- 1 Would to God ye could bear with me a little in my folly: and indeed bear with me.
- 2 For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.
- 3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.
- 4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him.

Answer for yourself: Having seen Colossians 2:17-18 for yourself, maybe for the first time in your lives, can you now see that if you attend churches that do not teach the Biblical Feasts or Festivals, as well as the Saturday

Sabbath that you have been beguiled, deceived, and have accepted another Jesus and another Gospel?

Answer for yourself: Can you also see how this acceptance of another Gospel, in this instance the nullification of the Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbath in the Christian Church will have an effect on the Marriage Supper and your possible presentation to Messiah one day?

The Greek word for "bear" is as follows as seen from the Strong's Concordance:

430 anechomai (an-ekh'-om-ahee); middle voice from 303 and 2192; to hold oneself up against, i.e. (figuratively) put up with: KJV-- bear with, endure, forbear, suffer.

Let us examine Thayer's Greek Concordance for further meaning:

430 anechomai-

- 1) to hold up
- 2) to hold oneself erect and firm
- 3) to sustain, to bear, to endure

Answer for yourself: Are you guilty of enduring the teaching of another gospel in you life and your church by your Pastor by him not instructing you to continue observing Biblical Feasts and Festivals, as well as the Jewish Sabbath?

Paul has a stern warning for Gentile believers in his day as well as for us today!

Gal 1:8-12

- 8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.
- 9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.
- 10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.
- 11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.
- 12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. (KJV)

Bet Emet Ministries has, just in this article alone, shown you ample evidence that you have accepted another Gospel without even being aware you have. The good news is that you are now coming to the truth which, when acted upon in repentance and faith, will ensure your wedding to Messiah one day where you will be presented to him as a chaste virgin. But be not mistaken, if you accept and follow, and die in your sins, then you best not plan on being the Bride in the world to come, but only the guests at the wedding of Messiah (see Matt. 22 and Matt. 25 for details) .

Paul warns and commands that when one is found to be preaching another Gospel, you as a part of the Body of Christ have a moral responsibility, which will seem hard for you to do today since we have an over emphasis of the grace message preached without a balance of the justice of God. Such a one who preaches another Gospel (and remember in this case we have shown him to be one who fails to instruct, or instructs opposite of what the Apostle Paul teaches, that Gentile believers are to observe, keep, commemorate, and celebrate the Biblical Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths, no matter who he is (Priest, Pope, Cardinal, Pastor, Minister, Evangelist, Apostle, Prophet, etc.) are to be "accursed."

Let us examine what it truly means for such a one who preaches heresy to be "accursed."

The Strong's # is 331 anathema (an-ath'-em-ah); from 394; a (religious) ban or (concretely) excommunicated (thing or person): KJV-- accused, anathema, curse, X great.

Let us examine Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

331 anathema-

- 1) a thing set up or laid by in order to be kept specifically, an offering resulting from a vow, which after being consecrated to a god was hung upon the walls or columns of the temple, or put in some other conspicuous place
- 2) a thing devoted to God without hope of being redeemed, and if an animal, to be slain; therefore, a person or thing doomed to destruction
- a) a curse
- b) a man accursed, devoted to the direst of woes

Answer for yourself: Please understand that I did not make up the definitions of these inspired words in your Bibles, but understand they often bring us face to face with concepts we have never heard, or find so disturbing that we don't want to even consider them.

Does the Apostle Paul teach that one who preaches another Gospel, and in this instance one who is devoted to God (like a Pastor) who instructs and teaches against, or condemns the Gentile observance of Biblical Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths is without hope of being redeemed and is doomed to destruction and only has facing him the direst of woes?

Answer for yourself: Can you now understand the double reward or judgment upon teachers of the Word of God? Their responsibility to not represent God to His people is tremendous!

God made sure we would not miss His message to all mankind by giving all men "rehearsals" [appointed times with Him as Feasts and Festivals] whereby the annual celebration and observance of the Biblical Feasts and Festivals, as well as the weekly Sabbaths, and High Sabbaths, would reinforce His truths throughout our lives. But many of us have been deprived of them, and continue to be so by our churches today who are either unaware of, or who have rejected outright anything Jewish as being "bad." What a shame! Even more, it has eternal consequences!

Col 2:17

17 Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ. (KJV)

The Apostle Paul teaches us that the Biblical Feasts and Festivals, Sabbaths, New Moons, and Holy Days are but shadows of things yet to come through the ministry of Jesus the Messiah. In other words some are fulfilled, and the others are prophetic!

The Biblical Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths are "shadows" of things to come. Let us examine the Strong's # 4639 skia: shadow:

- a) shade caused by the interception of light
- b) an image cast by an object and representing the form of that object
- c) a sketch, outline, adumbration

Answer for yourself: Does the Apostle Paul teach us that the Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths represent Christ?

The Apostle Paul teaches us that the Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths provide learning opportunities and give us images of things yet to come through the ministry of Jesus.

Once again let us examine "to come" from Strong's: 3195 mello (mel'-lo);

a strengthened form of 3199 (through the idea of expectation); to attend, i.e. be about to be, do, or suffer something (of persons or things, especially events; in the sense of purpose, duty, necessity, probability, possibility, or hesitation):

Now let us examine Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

3195 mello- to be about

- a) to be on the point of doing or suffering something
- b) to intend, to have in mind, to think to

Answer for yourself: Do you see that the Feasts, Festivals, and Sabbaths are given to Gentile believers in order for them to have in their mind and thinking events soon to transpire in appearing of Messiah and that these soon coming events are "pictured" in the Spring and Fall Festivals as well as the Sabbaths of God?

CONCLUSION: IT IS A MATTER OF WORSHIP

Now, let us establish some proper motivational factors. The Biblical memorial days were instituted by God as an integral part of the divine worship system in the church (both O.T. and N.T.). They are not a matter of salvation, where our disobedience towards them will rob us of eternal life. Yet, they are a matter of obedience toward God, and let us never forget that our obedience is interpreted by God as our love for Him. Therefore our motive in celebration should be as God originally intended; remembrance and honor for what He has done. God said his feasts were "Forever Feasts" and times of memorial (Ex. 12:14, Lev. 23:21, Lev. 23:41). If God never changes (and we have His word on that) for He does not (Mal. 3:6), it is obvious that He still desires to be honored in this manner as both the Old Testament attests as well as the New Testament once you come to understand it properly. Jesus said that the time has come to worship the Father "In spirit and in truth". Surely He is worthy. Indeed prophecy indicates that the feast days will continue to be celebrated even after the coming of Christ in the Kingdom age (Zech. 14:16). The feast days retain a deep abiding meaning for the Christian, especially since their fullness (not termination) is found in the Messiah. It is safe to say that the Christian has as much reason for celebrating these feasts as does the Jew, perhaps more (1 Cor. 5:8). The feast days contain more divine information of spiritual and prophetic value than perhaps any subject of scripture. And as said before, even the Gospels were written according to the Festival pattern and liturgical scheme of the synagogue. It is through our deliberate recognition and celebration of them that the riches of truth contained in them is released for our understanding. Thus, we come to better understand Yeshua and God in the process. Not only that, they serve as a truthful "timeclock" for the events for which we wait as we inherit the fullness of our salvation.

The spirit of praise and worship simply demands the recognition of the Biblical feast days. No other conclusion can be drawn. The celebration of these memorial days is being restored to the Church as Biblical worship becomes more complete in these "last days".

The question before us is; should Christians celebrate the feasts? Clearly we should. Why? Because they are Biblical, Messiah-centered and God ordained. While feast celebrations may not be essential to salvation, they are certainly essential for a more perfect worship order in the church. Reason simply dictates this conclusion.

Feast days are not Jewish in an ethnic sense. They are divine in a Biblical sense and therefore eternal.

THEREFORE, LET US ALSO KEEP THE FEAST!

THE ORIGIN OF THE SABBATH

It is truly interesting when we get behind the current Jewish traditions concerning the sabbath. We will, in this article, view the sabbath not as a static institution which came down more or less unchanged throughout the centuries, but rather as a manifestation of a constantly evolving process, and we are going to interpret the sabbath, as well as the other Jewish holy days in the light of that whole process in future articles. In other words we are going to consider the sabbath as well as the other Jewish holy days as parts of a continuing attempt to articulate certain broad universal truths, and we shall seek to discover, behind the varying forms of expression, just what those truths are and how they not only related to us today but how we can incorporate them into our lives and be enriched by them today.

We shall do this principally two ways. First, we shall endeavor to trace the actual evolution of each sabbath and festival, going back even beyond the Bible to its more remote and primitive stages. In such a perspective, we shall gain a clearer picture of what it really seeks to convey; we shall be able the better to recognize the permanent truth behind the changing forms, and to see more clearly how both the inner ideas and the outward expressions have been progressively crystallized and refined.

Secondarily, we shall use the comparative approach, that is, we shall compare the customs and ceremonies of the festivals with those of other peoples, not for the purpose of diverting the student with entertaining parallels, but in order to recover, behind the conventional traditional explanations, traces of earlier, more universal ideas which are nonetheless precious and pertinent for having been overborne and overswept in the onrushing tide of history.

While we shall lay stress on the uniqueness of many concepts and on the distinctive character of many transformations by the Jews concerning their holy days, we shall also point out frankly and candidly what the Jews have borrowed or adapted from their neighbors. Again we need look to a "first cause" or a "first revelation" of these "appointed times with God" and how mankind accepted and adopted them and later altered them down through history. If we look hard we can recover these original Divine Truths for ourselves today.

Firstly, this provides an effective illustration of the forces and influences which have in fact molded the development of the festivals; secondly, it is in any case scarcely credible that a people which has lived for nearly two thousand years in the midst of other peoples should have picked up nothing from them in the way of calendar customs and popular observances. To be sure in the Jewish festivals and sabbaths I know for certain that heaven and earth meet together.

THE ORIGIN OF THE SABBATH

The Hebrew word sabbath has passed into every European language, and there is no civilized people in the Western hemisphere to whom the institution of the weekly day of rest is altogether unknown. Although, to be sure, the seventh-day sabbath has been replaced, in Christian countries, by Sunday or the Lord's Day; that is, by the day on which the crucified Jesus is believed to have re-risen. This Sunday mode of observance is still a direct, if attenuated, heritage from the ancient Hebrew practice.

The curious thing is, however, that nobody really knows how the sabbath began; for the Biblical statement that it commemorates the rest taken by God after the six-day labor of creation is simply a fanciful attempt to rationalize and explain an even more ancient traditional institution.

We have our theories however as to the origin of the sabbath. A favorite theory is that the sabbath originated among the Babylonians. The basis of this theory is that in certain Babylonian documents, the equivalent word shapattu is used to designate the fifteenth day of a lunar month. From this many scholars have concluded that the sabbath was originally a full-moon festival, the name being then explained from the Semitic root sh-b-t, meaning "to stop," i.e., the day when the moon comes, so to speak, to a full stop, its waxing thenceforth giving place to waning. Moreover, in further support of this theory, it is pointed out that in several passages of Scripture, "sabbath" and "new moon" are in fact juxtaposed (2 Kings 4:23; Isa. 1:13; Hos. 2:17; Amos 8:4-5) and that in Lev. 23:11,15 the former term is applied to the beginning of Passover, which happens to fall at the full moon.

Answer for yourself: Is this just a coincidence?

For all its popularity, however, this theory is extremely tenuous, for there is no proof whatsoever that the term shapattu denoted the fifteenth day of every month; all that the texts imply is that on certain specific occasions that day happened to coincide with a sabbath (in whatever sense the word be understood). Furthermore, it is difficult to see how, on this hypothesis, the full-moon festival developed into the present weekly sabbath, for the latter is entirely independent of the phases of the moon. Nor, indeed, can anything really be deduced from the fact that the words sabbath and new moon are sometimes juxtaposed in Scripture to convey the comprehensive sense of "sacred occasions." As you see this most likely is now how the sabbath started. For this may be no more than an example of the figure of speech known as merism, whereby two contrasted elements of a thing are mentioned together to indicate the whole, e.g., "officers and men" for "army." The essence of a merism is that the two parts belong to different categories; hence, the very fact that "sabbath" is juxtaposed with "new moon" might itself be an indication that the former, as distinct from the latter, did not form part of the lunar calendar.

An alternative theory sees the origin of the sabbath in the ancient system of reckoning time by pentacontads, or stretches of fifty days. According to this view, the term sabbath applied originally to the days which were added to two of these stretches in order to accommodate the system to the luni-solar year. These days were regarded as outside of the regular calendar-a kind of vacant space in time-and were therefore marked by a suspension of normal activity, the word sabbath meaning "stoppage" in this sense. In the time of Ezra, it is supposed, when the Jews returned from the Babylonian Exile, rebuilt the Temple and re-established its services, a new system was introduced: all the days in each pentacontad which happened to be divisible by seven were deemed "vacant days" and excluded from the regular count; and thus arose the weekly sabbath. As we stated before these are but "theories".

DID THE SABBATH PREDATE THE JEWISH PEOPLE?

Fascinating as this theory is, we are perhaps on more solid ground if we start from the fact that the sabbath is by no means an exclusively Semitic institution. Regular days of abstention from work are a common phenomenon among primitive peoples. Records of this can be found among the ancients that lived long before the Jews and Moses and the Ten Commandments. Among several West African tribes, for example, each god has a special day of the week reserved for his worship, and on that day his own particular devotees are required to desist from all manual labor. Similarly, among the Lobs of Southwest China, a sabbath is observed every sixth day, women being forbidden to sew or launder clothes; while in Ceylon, the lunar quarters are regarded as solemn "poya-days," and all stores remain closed. The Tshi-speaking peoples of the Gold Coast keep every first and every seventh day as a sabbath; and the same usage prevails also among the Ga, who call that day dsu, or "purification." So, too, it is customary among the Loango of West Africa and among the Ibo of southern Nigeria to divide the month into seven four-day weeks and to begin each with a sabbath (nsona); while the Ewe of Dahomey (North Africa) abstain from work every fourth day. In most of these cases, the institution appears to have arisen out of purely practical considerations, for the sabbaths are, in fact, market days, when the normal routine has perforce to be suspended in the individual villages while everyone is away plying his wares at the central depot.

Sometimes, however, days of rest are determined directly by the phases of the moon. The Bapiri of Bechuanaland, for example, make a point of staying indoors at new moon; while some of the native tribes of Uganda take a week's rest on that occasion. The Kanarese of India will not plow on either new moon or full moon; and in Nepal, both of these dates rank as special holy days, when no work is permitted and no one may cook food or indulge in litigation. Among the Bahima of Southwest Uganda, the king goes into retreat at new moon; while in Thailand, new moon and full moon are considered "major sabbaths," and the first and last quarters "minor sabbaths."

From these examples, a selection out of many, it is apparent that the sabbath, or periodic day of rest, does not belong to any one particular calendarical system, nor is it everywhere inspired by a single uniform cause. It may be occasioned, in one case, by the practical necessities of market day, and in another, by superstitions about the phases of the moon. When, however, formal calendarical systems are established, they tend to incorporate and exploit the time-honored traditional institution. This, it may be suggested, is what happened in the case of the Hebrew sabbath, many of the earlier ideas and practices being taken over and absorbed when it was later accommodated to the seven-day week. The abstention from work, for example, may well have derived from the purely utilitarian consideration of a market-day sabbath, whereas the prohibition against kindling fire (Exod. 35:3) links up immediately with a practice observed elsewhere (e.g., in parts of Egypt and in Hawaii) at crucial phases of the moon and therefore stems, in all likelihood, from a "lunar" prototype. Similarly, the injunction (Exod. 31:14) that anyone who profanes the sabbath is to be put to death obviously stems from a type of observance in which it was more a day of taboos than a purely utilitarian institution; indeed, the same law actually obtains in respect to the weekly "sabbaths" observed by the Yoruba on the Slave Coast, and these are of an entirely "superstitious" character, having nothing whatever to do with such functional occasions as market days.

However it may have begun, the sabbath was developed by Judaism along entirely original lines. It became, as the Biblical law expresses it, "a token of the fact that in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, and on the seventh day He stopped (shabat) and was refreshed" (Exod. 31:17). There is more to this phrase than appears from the English translation. In the Hebrew original, the term rendered "was refreshed" is connected with the word for "breath, spirit, vital essence." What is meant, however, is not that God "breathed freely" or heaved a sigh of relief, but that in the very act of ceasing from His labors He also, as it were, "became inspirited", and took on a new vitality; and it is this combination of physical rest and spiritual replenishment that characterizes the Jewish conception of the sabbath. The day possesses a positive as well as a negative aspect: it is not merely a memorial; it is an active imitation by man of that which was done by God; and it is observed from week to week because man's life on earth is, in fact, a continuous process of creation.

The Jewish sages brought out the twofold character of the day by carefully codifying its restrictions on the one hand and by continually stressing, on the other, the necessity of utilizing the weekly pause for purposes of mental and spiritual recreation (in the literal sense of the word).

Insofar as the restrictions are concerned, the Mishnah (the codification of the Jewish Oral Law) specifies thirty-nine actions or classifications of "work" which may not be performed on the sabbath:

sowing, plowing, reaping, sheaving; threshing, winnowing, cleansing crops; grinding, sifting, kneading, baking; shearing, blanching, carding, dyeing; spinning, weaving, making a minimum of two loops, weaving two threads, separating two threads; tying, untying; sewing a minimum of two stitches, ripping out in order to sew them; hunting a gazelle, slaughtering it, flaying it, salting it, curing, scraping, or slicing its hide; writing a minimum of two characters; erasing in order to write them; building, wrecking; extinguishing, kindling; hammering; transporting.

This list in turn underwent further refinement; and, as a matter of fact, a large part of medieval and later Jewish literature consists in the replies issued by rabbinical authorities to questions concerning the minutiae of the law.

An excellent picture of the strictness with which the sabbath was observed by Jews of more rigid cast is afforded by a document discovered, in 1896, among discarded manuscripts and damaged copies of the Law, in the old synagogue at Fostat, near Cairo. This document is the manual of discipline of an ascetic Essene brotherhood which existed in Damascus at some time between the first and third centuries of the current era. The regulations concerning the sabbath (many of which are paralleled in the Mishnah) run as follows:

On the sabbath day, no one is to speak of profane or vain matters. No one is to make loans to another. No one is to engage in litigation about property or profit. No one is to talk business. . . . No one is to go about in his field for the purpose of carrying on his normal work. On the sabbath day, no one is to go out of the city beyond a distance of a thousand cubits. No one is to eat anything that has not been prepared beforehand. . . . When on a journey, no one is to partake of any food other than that which he previously had with him in his place of encampment. . . . No one is to draw water. . . . No one is to commission a non-Jew to do his own work. No one is to wear soiled garments or garments which have been worn while working in the garden except he wash them in water and scrub them with lye. No one is to observe a voluntary fast. No one is to follow his cattle to pasture beyond a distance of a thousand cubits. . . . No one is to bring anything into or out of his house. . . .

Nurses are not to take their charges out on the sabbath day. No one is to issue orders to his manservant or his maidservant or his hireling on the sabbath day. No one is to assist an animal to give birth. If an animal fall into a pit or snare on the sabbath day, no one is to lift it out; and if a human being fall into a well whence he cannot be extricated by a ladder or a rope or any other instrument, no one is to lift him out...

At the present day, the strictly "orthodox" Jew will not transact business, touch money, write, tear paper, smoke, switch on lights, use the telephone, travel or carry anything on the sabbath. Indeed, in some cases, even handkerchiefs are pinned to the garments and thereby regarded, by a legalistic subtlety, as integral parts of the clothing rather than as things carried!

Especially strict is the ban on travel and transportation. According to the Biblical law (Exod. 16:29), no man is to leave his "place" on the sabbath day. The sages, however, attempted by various legalistic devices to modify the rigors of this restriction. A number of houses, they declared, could be temporarily combined in to a single common "place" or domain, if the householders formed a kind of ad hoc "holiday club" by each contributing something to a common stock of food placed in a room accessible to all. Similarly, they eased the regulation which confined travel on the sabbath to distances within a radius of two thousand cubits by permitting people temporarily to transfer their residence from the center to the circumference of the imaginary circle. This dispensation, however, was granted only in cases where a man might wish to travel in order to fulfill a religious duty (e.g., to attend a circumcision), and to qualify for it he had, before the advent of the sabbath, to transfer a token quantity of food to the new dwelling.

In contrast to this more liberal attitude is the practice of the Samaritan community at Nablus. The Samaritans claim to be the descendants of the ancient Kingdom of Israel. Their religion is based on the Law of Moses and they reject the authority of the Jewish sages. To the Samaritans, the law means just what it says; accordingly they do not stir from their houses on the seventh day, except to attend services in the synagogue. It is said, indeed, that the Samaritan teacher Dositheus, who lived (probably) in the first century C.E., actually commanded his followers to remain in one position throughout the sabbath!

For all their legalistic precision, however, the sages were conscious always that the sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath, and they insisted that any of the regulations might be, nay should be, broken immediately in case of life-and-death emergency, or of real danger to health. In support of such relaxation, they were fond of quoting the Scriptural verse: "Ye shall therefore keep My statutes and Mine ordinances, which if a man do, he shall live by them" (Lev. 18:5).

THE SABBATH...A TIME OF SPIRITUAL REFRESHING

The other aspect of the sabbath, that of mental and spiritual recreation, was brought out in the injunction that the leisure hours of the day should be devoted to study and to discourse about the Torah. The rabbinic classic Pesikta Rabbathi, compiled in the ninth century, has a fine passage exemplifying this doctrine:

Said Rabbi Hiyya, the son of Abba: The Sabbath was given for enjoyment. Said Rabbi Samuel, the son of Nahmani: It was given for studying the Torah. There is no discrepancy between the two statements. Rabbi Hiyya was alluding to the scholars who study the Torah all the week and enjoy themselves on the sabbath, whereas Rabbi Samuel was thinking of laborers who toil throughout the week, and on the Sabbath come to study the Torah.

Answer for yourself: Can you see the beauty in the above understanding of the sabbath? The secret is that there must be a balance of spiritual refreshing and nourishment along with a physical refreshing and renewing that occurs simultaneously in mankind. Such is the love of God for us that we be "whole"!

Enjoyment of the sabbath in this positive sense is, in Jewish tradition, an integral part of its observance. "Those who both observe the sabbath and call it an enjoyment," says the prayer book, "will rejoice in the kingdom of God and enjoy the riches of His bounty." The expression does not refer to ultimate rewards in Kingdom Come, nor is it a mere pious promise of "pie in the sky when you die." It means simply that those who on sabbath retreat from mundane things and consecrate the day to study of the Torah will be automatically refreshed and replenished by a growing awareness that behind the passing show of men lie the abiding verity and sovereignty of God.

There are several ways in which this more positive aspect of the sabbath finds, or has found, practical expression. One of them is the custom of meeting together in the synagogue during the afternoon in order to study the Bible (usually the weekly lesson from the Law) and various rabbinic writings, or to hear an exposition of them from the rabbi or from some visiting scholar. We as non-Jews can adapt this to our own needs and Bible study groups fit the bill nicely or just some quiet time with God alone in prayer and study. I don't mean to be a "monk" and study all day but balance your day; time to devote to God and then time for yourself. I always told my students and congregators that God desires you give Him your tithe; namely, give God your "first fruits". Start the Sabbath off by giving God your first times. Start early and prepare your Spirit and Soul by giving God your first parts of the day if possible in Spiritual pursuits. Maybe you want to pray, read the Bible and the Hebrew Scriptures, or read a good book on the Bible or other spiritual helps that feed your soul. These activities are to be first and then after you sense fulfillment then arise from your place of prayer or study and then do what brings your soul joy. Maybe you wish to recreate or exercise or just whatever that brings you joy and brings positive reinforcement to your life. I will leave that up to you.

3 Jn 1:2 2 Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth. (KJV)

Another thing that must be mentioned is the practice of concluding the introductory meal on Friday night with the singing of religious table songs (zemiroth), the central theme of which is the delight of the sabbath day. Many places provide cassettes and cds with selections of appropriate songs for the sabbath that you and your family can learn and memorize and sing on the sabbath. These songs, all of comparatively recent date, are a characteristically Jewish counterpart of the medieval monks' and students' songs. Some of them stem from the group of cabbalists who gathered around the illustrious Isaac Luria in Safed during the early part of the sixteenth century; while others are the product of the Hasidim, or Pietist movement which grew up in eastern Europe some hundred and fifty years later. In many of them, the sabbath becomes, as it were, the "toast of the evening," being adored in the manner of a queen. The sabbath is often allegorized as "the Sabbath queen" in literature and in song. In others, as in the following famous poem by Luria himself, the imagery is even bolder and God Himself is the guest, come to regale the company, in the manner of a presiding rabbi, with subtle and profound expositions of the Law and with the tales of miracles and wonders.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SABBATH RITUALS

Both the beginning and the end of the sabbath are marked by special ceremonies. These are determined very largely by the fact that the Jewish day commences at sunset, the moment when, in ancient times, the candles or oil lamps were lit. At the beginning and end of the sabbath, this purely utilitarian act came naturally to acquire a special significance, and it thus attained the status of a religious rite.

The lighting of the candles, at least two, on the eve of the sabbath is assigned to the mistress of the house; and popular fancy supposes that neglect of this duty will be punished by death in childbirth. Shortly before sunset the housewife spreads a clean white cloth on the table and usually places the sabbath loaves (covered with an embroidered napkin) upon it. She then lights the candles and pronounces the blessing: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe, Who hast hallowed us by Thy commandments and commanded us to kindle the lamp."

Answer for yourself: Is such sabbath ritual a commandment of God is this an example of the authority of the Rabbis to "bind an loose" given in the Hebrew Scriptures? Yes it is. Let me explain.

Such a commandment, to be sure, is nowhere mentioned in the Scriptures, but Judaism regards the institutions established by the rabbis and by the consensus of tradition as equally inspired by God, that is, as equal expressions of man's contact with, or apprehension of, the divine and transcendental, and it therefore gives them the status of commandments.

After pronouncing the blessing, it is customary for the housewife to spread her hands over the flame and then to place them for a moment over her eyes. The reason for this practice is disputed, but the most probable explanation is that it symbolizes an actual use of the light and thus validates the blessing; for in Jewish tradition, a blessing is not pronounced in general and vague terms but as an act of thanksgiving and appreciation for some actual and present benefit.

At the expiration of the sabbath, the ceremony is more elaborate. Known as Havdalah, or "Separating," it is performed by the master of the house after the evening prayers. The officiant takes a special candle made of two intertwining pieces of wax and yielding a double flame, a box of spices, and a glass filled to overflowing with wine or any other beverage. He then recites a formula which begins with a threefold invocation to the prophet Elijah bidding him come speedily "with the Messiah, the seed of David," continuing with a formula in which God is blessed for "separating the holy from the profane, Israel from the heathen, and sabbath from weekdays," and concluding with a separate benediction over each of the three ritual objects. When he blesses the candle, he makes a point of curving his hand and looking intently at his fingernails, and when he blesses the wine or beverage, he cups his hands over it and gazes into it in the light of the twin flame. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the candle is extinguished in that portion of the liquid which has spilled over into the saucer or silver tray, while the cup is passed in turn to all the males and children in the company. It is the Jewish tradition that women may not partake of it; indeed, a popular superstition asserts that if they do so, they will grow mustaches! I will leave that up to you to decide.

The ceremony looks both backward and forward; if it marks the end of the sabbath rest, it also marks the beginning of a new week of labor. But what that week holds in store is, of course, as yet unknown, and the ceremony therefore includes various devices designed both to divine the future and to protect from evil. To the former category belongs the practice of gazing at the fingernails and of peering into the cup. Gazing at the fingernails and interpreting shadows which light might shed upon them was, in ancient times, a common method of reading the future; and Jewish literature contains a number of references to the spirits who were then believed to appear and who are known as "the prince of the palm" or "the prince of the thumb." Similarly, the habit of seeking omens by gazing intently into water or into the contents of a cup is abundantly attested both in antiquity and in modern folklore. In Scandinavia, for example, people who had been robbed during the week used to repair to a diviner on a Thursday evening to see the face of the thief revealed in a bucket of water, and a similar method is adopted among the natives of Tahiti. Nor, indeed, should it be overlooked that in the Bible itself (Gen. 44:5), the silver goblet which Joseph orders to be hidden in the sack of his youngest brother, Benjamin, is described expressly as a vessel from which he both drank and divined.

On the other hand, the use of the spices is a measure of protection against the perils of the ensuing week. They are a kind of symbolic "smelling salts," and are intended to revive and fortify the spirit after the departure of that "extra soul" with which, so it is said, every Jew is endowed during the sabbath day.

Of the same order, too, is the invocation of Elijah; for not only is the threefold repetition strongly suggestive of a magical formula, but the fact is also that, in Jewish belief, Elijah, besides being the forerunner of the Messiah, who, it is supposed, will arrive at the close of the sabbath, is at the same time the protector par excellence against demons and "princes of darkness." He is credited, for instance, with the power of protecting expectant mothers from the assaults of the child-stealing demon, Lilith. It is therefore very natural that appeal should be made to him at the critical beginning of a new week, when, according to Jewish superstition, the devils and demons which have remained confined in hell (Gehenna) over the sabbath, are again released to work their mischief upon men.

The lighting of the candles, however, is not the only ceremony connected with the incoming and outgoing of the sabbath. Equally important, on Friday evening, is the rite known as Kiddush, or Sanctification. Properly speaking, this is simply a formal hallowing of the sabbath, in accordance with the Scriptural commandment to "remember [or, observe] the sabbath day to keep it holy" (Exod. 20:8; Deut. 5:72); and it originally consisted only in the pronouncement of a benediction praising God for granting this institution to Israel as a perpetual heritage. Later, however, perhaps as a counterblast to the Roman practice of beginning a meal with a libation to the gods, it became customary to accompany the benediction with the drinking of wine (itself duly blessed), and it is in this form that the ceremony is today observed.

The Sanctification is prefaced by the chanting of the Scriptural passage, Gen. 2:1-3, describing how God "finished His work on the seventh day . . . and rested." Thereby, says the Talmud, the officiant spiritually retrojects himself to the moment of creation and becomes, as it were, the partner of God in that process.

Kiddush is followed immediately by the blessing over bread which precedes every meal in a traditional Jewish home. This, however, lends itself, on the sabbath, to a special embellishment. Not one, but two loaves are used, in commemoration of the double portion of manna which the Israelites received in the wilderness on the eve of the sabbath (Exod. 16:22,29). Moreover, the loaves are covered with a napkin (often ornately embroidered), symbolizing the "fine layer of dew" which covered the manna (Exod.

Sabbath bread is called hallah (often spelled chollah), the term used in the Bible (Num. 15:17-21) for the cake of new dough which every Israelite was required to present as a "gift unto the Lord." Before it is baked, a portion of the dough has to be removed, in accordance with that commandment. The loaves are commonly fashioned in the shape of "twists" popularly known as berches. It has been suggested that this name derives from the old German Berchisbrod; that is, bread shaped like intertwined braids of hair which women and girls allegedly used to set out for Berchta, the demonic hag of Teutonic folklore who was believed to make the rounds on Twelfth Night. More probably, however, the name is connected with quite a different German word, viz., Berchit, which in turn goes back to the Low Latin bracelins, "arm," and denotes a type of loaf shaped like folded arms. Another form of this word (though the meaning is now somewhat different) is the familiar pretzel.

It is customary also on Friday night, at the conclusion of the service in the synagogue, for Jewish fathers to place their hands upon the heads of their children and pronounce a blessing over them. In the case of boys, the blessing runs: "May God make thee like Ephraim and Manasseh," and in that of girls: "May God make thee like Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel and Leah." Moreover, as a graceful compliment to his wife, he chants the concluding chapter of the Biblical Book of Proverbs:

A woman of worth who can find? Her price is far above rubies. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her: "Many daughters have done worthily, but thou excellest them all."

At the conclusion of the Sabbath, the most interesting feature of the service is, perhaps, the recital of the Ninety-first Psalm. That psalm is known traditionally as the "plague psalm," the name being derived from vs. 5-6.

Thou shalt not be afraid of the terror by night, Of the arrow that flieth by day, Of the pestilence that stalketh in darkness, Of the destruction that ravageth at noon.

At first sight, these verses look like a mere blanket formula, as in the familiar Cornish prayer: "From ghoulies and ghosties and long-legitty beasties, and things that go bump in the night, good Lord deliver us!" In point of fact, however, the reference is to specific demons of ancient Semitic folklore. The "terror by night" is the hobgoblin, and he is mentioned again in Song of Songs 3:8, where the attendants of the bridegroom (facetiously identified with Solomon) are said to be armed, as indeed they are in Oriental weddings, "each man with his sword upon his thigh," in order to ward off that demon's assaults. The "arrow that flieth by day" is the familiar "faery arrow" which, in the belief of many peoples, is the cause both of stitch in the side and of all diseases. The "pestilence that stalketh in darkness" is the demon known to the magical literature of Babylon as "he that stalks abroad at night" (mutallik mushi); while "the destruction that ravageth at noon" is a personification of the scorching midday heat which may cause sunstroke or even death. It is apparent, therefore, that this psalm originally found place in the service because it was regarded as a kind of charm against the malevolent spirits released from hell at the beginning of the week. It was, in fact, a complement to the ceremony of Havdalah; and it is significant that it also forms part of the burial service, where it serves to protect both the deceased and his survivors from the ravages of the evil spirits thought to be especially rampant at a time of death.

Answer for yourself: What are we to make today of all of this superstition?

It is easy to smile at these beliefs and to adopt a superior attitude toward them. They are, however, simply a primitive way of expressing normal and rational apprehension of the hazards and perils of an uncertain future. The belief in the extra "sabbath soul," for instance, is simply a fanciful way of saying that retreat from mundane preoccupations on the sabbath gives a man a special spiritual serenity which tends to depart the moment he immerses himself again in the humdrum routine of the workaday world. By smelling the fragrant spices he reminds himself, in symbolic fashion, that he can become immune from the contagion of that world, if, so to speak, he but absorb by osmosis the constant fragrance of holiness. Significantly enough, the word osmosis really means "smelling," and thus provides an exact counterpart in language to the symbolism of the ritual. Similarly, the demons and evil spirits which are believed to rise from hell at the moment the sabbath ends are no more than picturesque personifications of the hazards and uncertainties which attend the beginning of each new week.

In taking over these traditional notions, however, Judaism gave them a new and deeper significance.

Lev 17:5 5 To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, which they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, and offer them for peace offerings unto the LORD. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is so important in the above verse that few if any ever learn? It is here, in this verse, as the Rabbis teach, that we see that Israel was commanded by God to take the existing "rituals" modeled after their pagan neighbors and now "reinterpret" them and give new meanings to these rituals and holy days from which they had done before. This explains why the Jewish holy days has both much in common with the similar calendar times of other nations holy days as well yet also explains the unique understanding of the Jews of these "appointed times with God." What we find here is that God revealed to Israel a deeper revelation and knowledge of Himself and His message as connected to these "appointed times" and holy days given to the Jewish people.

Now it is important that you pay close attention to what is said next concerning the above passage of Lev. 17:5. The religious observance of the new moon with festal rejoicings and sacrifices belongs originally to a lunar cult as mentioned above but, as in many other cases, this festival and its rites were taken up into the religion of Yahweh-the national religion of Israel which also absorbed nature religion. At first this fact can be alarming to most people when they encounter it; especially Jews and Christians. Yet when we come to understand the progressive Revelation of the Bible we see that God will reveal to His people that they are no longer to make sacrifices to the false gods of the field like the pagans who lived around them but in keeping the "same pattern of nature worship" to which His people were exposed the sacrifices at harvest times as well as these days of "rest" were to continue as before but unlike before they are NOW to be times sanctified unto YHWH and offerings brought to Him and Him only as we see in Lev. 17:5

God understood how difficult it is to get long held primitive traditions out of people so by keeping these same harvest festivals connected with nature and the sun and the moon god would allow His chosen people to continue the "pattern" BUT the meanings of the elements and rites would be changed and then only YHWH will be the recipient of the people's worship although similar things would still be done by the people. That is why the Jewish holy days revolve around the same solstices and equinoxes as does the holy days of the ancients and other world religions today. The basic understanding of each of these pagan harvest festivals would be changed by God and redefined for the Jewish people to which we find today when we study Biblical Judaism. No longer were these pagan festivals were to be continued by YHWH'S people; instead the "form" might be familiar in that they remained in certain times of the year as before however "NEW MEANINGS" were given to replace the prior pagan understanding of these derived from primitive consciousness as associated with events in the Heaven, in Nature, and in his their own bodies as well as related concepts dealing with the matter of sex. Simply said these prior events and rituals were made "holy" and given unique and "Divine" meanings between God and His people and we turn to the Jewish people today for such understandings...and not pagan Rome which kept the same sun-worship and nature-worship that these Jews repented of and turned from. It would be Rome which would later record many such prior pagan beliefs in the New Testament and attach them to the depiction of Jesus in the New Testament.

This is what I find so fascinating when studying comparative religions; that the Jewish people refined the universal understanding of these special times with God for all the world to better come to a knowledge of the Creator and His purposes for mankind.

It was now not only the individual but also the whole House of Israel that stood in need of protection from the hovering demons of disaster. If, on the one hand, the Havdalah service includes such intimate, personal appeals as the touching Yiddish prayer of the Jewish mother that "God, Who in the seventh heav'n dwells, May pity me, my husband, and my babes," on the other, it now called upon Elijah not for personal deliverance but for national salvation; as a long acrostic poem has it, he is to lead Israel "from darkness to light."

This development comes out especially in the preceding evening service. A feature of those devotions is the recital of sundry Scriptural prophecies relating to material prosperity. Each, however, is followed immediately by another which foretells national salvation. Thus, the promise of Deuteronomy (7:13-15) that God "will bless the fruit of thy body and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, thy must and thine oil" is capped, so to speak, by Isaiah's assurance 45:17) that "Israel is saved by the Lord with everlasting salvation"; and the prediction of Joel (2:26) that "ye shall eat in plenty and be satisfied" by Isaiah's confident declaration (35:10, 51:11) that "the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come with singing to Zion"; until, in an inspired climax, the immergence of individual in collective deliverance is brought home by the skillful juxtaposition of the two verses, "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord" (Jer. 17:7) and "The Lord will give strength unto His people; the Lord will bless His people with peace" (Ps. 29:11).

BRIDAL SYMBOLISM

The sabbath is personified in Jewish tradition as a bride whose bridegroom is Israel. Rabbinic fancy plays eloquently on this conception. Observing that the Hebrew term for the marriage ceremony really means "hallowing," the sages interpret the Biblical statement that "God blessed the sabbath day and hallowed it" (Gen. 2:3) as meaning that He wedded it to His people.

In the East, weddings usually take place on a Friday evening, and this served as an added incentive for representing the advent of the sabbath as a symbolic wedding festivity. The Talmud tells us that, on the eve of the sabbath, the famous teacher, Rabbi Hanina used to put on his best clothes and say, "Come, let us and welcome Queen Sabbath," while Rabbi Yannai used to rise and declare, "Come, O bride; come, O bride."

The custom of going out to "meet the bride" was especially common among the cabbalists of Safed in the earlier part of the sixteenth century, and some of the more poetically talented of them actually composed symbolic imitations of the conventional marriage songs. The most famous of these is the Lechah Dodi, written by Solomon Alkabetz, teacher and brother-in-law of the mystic philosopher, Moses Cordovero. This poem, which is now an integral part of the Friday night service, plays on one of the most prominent features of Arab weddings, namely, the procession of the bridegroom from the local mosque to his own home, where the bride awaits him. He is usually accompanied on this occasion by torchbearers, musicians and singers. The latter, however, do not confine themselves to the chanting of wedding songs; they also intone lyric odes of a religious character in praise of Mohammed. All of these elements find place, if only by hint and implication, in the celebrated Hebrew poem. The bridegroom-i.e., Israel, is first bidden to come and meet the bride:

Bridegroom, come to meet the bride; Let us greet the sabbath-tide!

Immediately, however, in the manner of the Arab singers, the poet breaks off to offer praise to God; and the familiar expression "the Lord is one, and His name one" looks to all the world like a characteristically Jewish imitation of the familiar Arabic cry, "There is no God but One"-a cry which punctuates all public ceremonies. Then, playing on sundry Biblical verses, he predicts the future prosperity of Zion, evidently a parody of the blessings customarily invoked upon the bride. Finally he dresses the maiden herself:

Come in peace, and come in joy, Thou who art thy bridegroom's pride; Come, O bride, and shed thy grace O'er the faithful chosen race; Come, O bride! Come, O bride!...an invitation doubtless modeled on that addressed to brides at human weddings.

Lechah Dodi, which has been translated into German by both Herder and Heine, is probably the best known of all Hebrew poems, and it enjoys the reputation of having been set to more tunes than any other poem in the world. It is of interest to note, however, that a very similar though now long forgotten poem, employing the same tropes and many of the same phrases, was composed at the same time by the Italian-Jewish poet Mordecai Dato (1527-85), another follower of Moses Cordovero.

Other fancies also are associated with the sabbath in Jewish traditional lore.

Not only the Jewish people but all the God-fearing elements of creation (the Gentiles) are believed to observe the sabbath day. It is told, for example, that on a certain occasion a cow which had belonged to a pious man, when sold to a stranger, refused to work on the sabbath. It is told also that there exists in the far reaches of the world a river called Sambatyon (variously located) which ceases flowing on the sabbath. Such an intermittent stream is mentioned, indeed, by several non-Jewish writers throughout the ages, and many are the tall tales of more recent travelers who claim to have seen it. An ingenious explanation of this legend has been proposed. The river, it is suggested, possessed no such miraculous properties as were later attributed to it. It was simply a river of sand. But the Hebrew word for "sand," viz., hol, is indistinguishable from another which means "weekday," and hence arose the notion that "the river of hol" was one which flowed only on weekdays and rested on the sabbath!

Finally, it is maintained in Jewish legend that even the angels keep the sabbath, an idea which receives its finest expression, curiously enough, not in Jewish literature, but in Peter Abelard's great hymn for Saturday evening.

Oh what shall be, oh when shall be, that holy Sabbath day, Which heavenly care shall ever keep and celebrate always; When rest is found for weary limbs, when labor hath reward, When everything, for evermore, is joyful in the Lord? The true Jerusalem above, the holy town is there, Whose duties are so full of joy, whose joy so free from care; Where disappointment cometh not to check the longing heart, And where the soul in ecstasy hath gained her better part. There Sabbath day to Sabbath day sheds on a ceaseless light, Eternal pleasure of the saints who keep that Sabbath bright; Nor shall the chant ineffable decline, nor ever cease, Which we with all the angels sing in that sweet realm of peace.

Let us continue our study in the Biblical Sabbath

EGYPT OBSERVED THE SABBATH BEFORE THE JEWS

The pious authoress of "Mazzaroth" wrote: "The Babylonians, Egyptians, Chinese, and the natives of India were acquainted with the seven daysu division of time, as were the Druids." Dion Cassius derives the Egyptian days from the seven planets: Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn. Montucla thought the week began on Saturday. Bailly says: "It is to the Egyptians that is attributed the idea of dedicating each day of the week to one of the planets." Sonnerat considered Saturday the Indian Sani or Saturn. Jahn says: "The Egyptians consecrated to Saturn the seventh day of the week."

With the Egyptians, however, the seventh day was consecrated to Amen or Amoun, the Father, or Sun-god. Pauw was of opinion that "the Egyptians seem to have observed it very regularly." Bunsen, speaking of Set, adds, "He is the ass god of the Semitic tribes, who rested on the seventh day."

Hesiod, Herodotus, Philostratus, etc., mention that day. Homer, Callimachus, and other ancient writers call the seventh day the holy one. Eusebius confesses its observance by "almost all the philosophers and poets." Lucian notes that it was given to schoolboys for a holiday. Dr. Schmitz observes: "The manner in which all public feriae (holidays) were kept, bears great analogy to our Sunday. The people generally visited the temples of the gods, and offered up their prayers and supplications. All kinds of business except lawsuits were suspended."

As in other cases, we may get illustrative light from the Assyrian neighbours of the Egyptians.

The Rev. Mr. Sayce finds the day of rest an Assyrian word. Saturday in Central Asia is still Shambé, from the Persian Shabat. The Accadians, thousands of years ago, says Sayce, kept holy the 7th, 14th, 21st, and 28th of each month as Salum, rest, "on which certain works were forbidden." Mr. George Smith wrote thus in 1876: "In the year 1869 I discovered among other things a curious religious calendar of the Assyrians in which every month is divided into four weeks, and the seventh days or Sabbaths are marked out as days in which no work shall be undertaken." Mr. H. F. Talbot quotes the Divine command from the Assyrian "Creation" tablet : "On the seventh day he appointed a holy day, And to cease from all business he commanded."

The above taken from James Bonwick's Egyptian Belief and Modern Thought.

THE SABBATH IN THE FIRST CENTURY: OBSERVED BY JEWS AND NON-JEWS

"Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them. And on the seventh day God ended his work which he made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." Genesis 2:1-3

We find that in the New Testament the "Pattern of Worship" regarding both the Jew and the Non-Jew is for all to see..if they look.

The testimony of Jesus as to the observance of the Sabbath in the First Century:

Jesus "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read." Luke 4:16

"And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Matthew 19:16,17

"But pray ye that your flight be not in winter, neither on the Sabbath day." Matthew 24, 20.

Jesus asked his disciples to pray that in the flight from the doomed city of Jerusalem they would not have to flee on the Sabbath day. This flight took place in 70 A.D. (40 years after the Cross).

Now let us look at the Sabbath in relation to the followers of "the Christ" and this Jesus of the New Testament:

"And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments and rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment." Luke 23:56.

"And Paul, as his manner was went in unto them, and three Sabbath days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures" Acts 17:2

Let us now look at Paul and his ministry to the Gentiles:

"And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them the next Sabbath. And the next Sabbath came almost the whole city together to hear the Word of God." Acts 13:42, 44.

Here we find Gentiles in a Gentile city gathering on the Sabbath. It was not a synagogue meeting in verse 44, for it says almost the whole city came together, verse 42 says they asked to hear the message the "next Sabbath."

And note this point: The Bible does not say it is the "old Jewish Sabbath that was passed away," but the Spirit of God, writing the Book of Acts some 30 years after the Crucifixion, calls it "the next Sabbath."

Now let us examine the testimony of Philo:

Declares the seventh day to be a festival, not of this or of that city, but of the universe. M'Clatchie, "Notes and Queries," Vol. 4, 99.

Now let us examine the testimony of Josephus:

"There is not any city of the Grecians, nor any of the Barbarians, nor any nation whatsoever, whither our custom of resting on the seventh day hath not come!" M'Clatchie, "Notes and Queries on China and Japan" (edited by Dennys), Vol 4, Nos 7, 8, p.100.

THE SABBATH: WHAT THE NON-JEWISH BELIEVER NEEDS TO KNOW

THE SABBATH, PHARAOH AKHENATON, MOSES, AND THE "MIXED MULTITUDE"...WHAT SHOULD THIS MEAN TO ME?

Exod 12:38 38 And a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle. (KJV)

The context of the above verse from the Hebrew Scriptures teaches us that in the Exodus we find a blending of peoples who will make the trip to Mt. Sinai to receive the Ten Commandments; one of which the the Commandment to keep and observe the sabbath. Traditional interpretation of the text has always pictured for us that the Jews left Egypt and a few straggling Egyptians accompanied them. Archeology today has revealed to us the truth behinds these texts so cleverly woven by Ezra when rewriting these accounts which hide the truth of the matter; the truth being that a religious revolution in Egypt headed by Akhenaton, the Biblical Moses, was the 2nd of 4 Exoduses and that contrary to our prior understanding huge numbers of non-Jewish Egyptians as well as half-breed "Hebrews" followed Akhenaton, the Biblical Moses, to Mt. Sinai where both they as Egyptian non-Jews and these Hebrew followers of Moses would accept this Covenant with God which included the Sabbath Commandment. So this is not just a "Jewish" Commandment as once thought.

A little history is needed before we go on and get in-depth with the study of the Sabbath.

Egyptian history records for us, as does the Bible, that there was a tribe from either the west of Egypt or from just above the red sea, who during a period of famine moved to Egypt at the invitation of one of their own who was kidnapped and taken to Egypt. In the old Testament we have Joseph, and in another Arabic legend we have Ran, who through his interpretation of dreams gained power and may have imported the notion of a single god (his local god) into Egyptian consciousness. It is important to note that from the 13th Dynasty, Semitic races invaded Egypt and by 1663 BC they are the Hyksos or Desert Princes of which the most familiar would be the Abraham of the Bible. Some hundreds of years later Akhenaton, whom many scholars believe to be the Biblical Moses, on his ascension to the throne of Egypt developed his beliefs in a one god and enforced worship of the single deity as revealed in the Sun disk Aton. He did not worship the sun but the life giving force that emanated from and gave power to it. Let is be said that scientifically we now accept that the sun is what gives life to everything on our planet so Akhenaton was correct in this matter way back then. He modelled the god on his own pacifist ideals. This led to disinterest in power and stability and undermined the power of the Priests of Amon and the other gods and this brought Akhenaton into severe conflict with the Egyptian priesthood. After closing all the Temple in Egypt and mandating the worship of this "One God" only the nation was in disarray, Akhenaton was eventually replaced with his son or more probably step son or son-in-law, the manageable ten year old Tutankhamun. The young king, possibly under pressure from those older and more powerful, restored the old temples, persecuted the followers of his father and this single deity, and was himself dead or murdered by eighteen.

At the time of Ramses II, Akhenaton, if he still lived, or another powerful follower of the Aton, would have been in his Eighties or younger, similar to the reported great age of Moses. In the Acts of the Apostles, Moses was 40 when he left Egypt and after another 40 years he returned to Egypt at eighty to free 'his' people and spent a further 40 years wandering in the desert. It is also said that Akhenaton or Moses and his followers soon left Amarna or were driven from Egypt and this is the 2nd of 4 Exoduses which embarked to Mt. Sinai to receive the Commandments of this "One God". Moses was reputedly connected to the house of the Pharaohs and he and his household gathered a large group of followers (local Semites) and led his new people to a promised land or even back to where the tribe had once lived, and where they could practice their religion of the one god. The various names of god are similar to various local tribal gods of the Middle East and also this god's name often could not be spoken and had no image.

Answer for yourself: Does this not sound similar to YHWH of the Jews today?

Similarly the Aton had no image other than the disk of the Sun and such gods as Amun or Amun-Ra were the unknowable and even though some images exist of him as a man he had no real image as the one creator of all. This would also fit into a desire for secrecy to prevent word spreading the short distance to Egypt and thus again bring on the persecution of the followers of Aton. The area was an Egyptian province at the time. Also it is said that later the connection with Egypt and the Aton was severed so a new name for the same concept was adopted.

Answer for yourself: Is it coincidental or possible that the greatest upheaval in Egyptian theology occurred within the same period as did the Exodus and not be related? Was the Exodus from Egypt over conflict in religious theology among the Egyptians and not because of the cruelty of these Hebrews as we have been taught? If you want to get to the bottom of all of this mystery and deception of the true events behind the Biblical story given us by Ezra I recommend: <http://egyptcx.netfirms.com>. After all, in the Old Testament there are over 600 references to Egypt and we need to know why the Bible speaks so negatively about Egypt when Moses loved Egypt and its God. We have to look at Ezra, a Persian who represented a nation which was at war with Egypt when these former followers of Aton, were released and sent home to be a "fort" and line of defense between Persia and Egypt who were anything but friends at the time. Ezra knew quite well that these "captives" surely did not need to know that "the enemy" was their fathers so he spun a redaction of history and renamed these primary Egyptian players in this historical drama as "Jews" when in reality archeology today has shown us that this Royal Bloodline of King David and Solomon, as far back as Isaac and Jacob, were not Jews at all but Pharaohs of Egypt. That means the Blood Line that brings the hoped for Messiah is "Jewish" only because of intermarriage with Egyptian non-Jews and Semites.

Answer for yourself: What should this mean to us as non-Jews today? Simply that the Sabbath Commandment, which is the longest of all of these Ten Commandments, was originally given to both non-Jews as well as semites at Mt. Sinai. This puts a whole new spin on it when considering the identity of this "mixed multitude" that receives this Sabbath Commandment. Factoring in what archeology has shown us in these last 100 or so years; namely that the sons of Pharaoh Jacoba (the Jacob of the Bible) are Egyptian non-Jews and not Jews as we once believed. It is important for us to know that over time these Egyptians intermarried with Semites and created a half-breed race of sorts and it is these who also become the followers of Akhenaton and who follow him into the wilderness of Sinai. These "followers" of Akhenaton who leave Egypt and travel to Mt. Sinai are both Gentiles and "Hebrews" and it is they who accept the Sabbath Commandment. So this is not just a "Jewish thing" as once supposed and as taught by Judaism today. In closing remember due to the extreme persecution upon the Jews by the Gentile antisemitic Church the Sabbath as well as other Commandments were used a "fences" to keep apart and separate the Jews from non-Jews. No greater example of this could be found than this Sabbath Commandment which you now clearly see what given to both non-Jews and Jews; in fact the irony of it is that it was most likely given to more non-Jews present that day than Jews. Now let us move on.

THE SABBATH

The Sabbath (or Shabbat, as it is called in Hebrew) is one of the best known and least understood of all Jewish observances. As a Christian for most of my life I did not observe Shabbat and thought of it as it was taught to me by my Christian teachers to be a day filled with stifling restrictions, or as a day of prayer like the Christian Sabbath. But once having gone to Seminary and awaking to the need for a recovery of "the Jewish Roots to my Christian Faith" I came to see upon serious study that to those who observe Shabbat, it is a precious gift from God, a day of great joy eagerly awaited throughout the week, a time when all of God's children can set aside all of their weekday anxieties and devote themselves to the higher pursuits of the soul. In Jewish literature, poetry and music, Shabbat is described as a bride or queen, as in the popular Shabbat hymn Lecha Dodi Likrat Kallah (come, my beloved, to meet the [Sabbath] bride). It is said "more than Israel has kept Shabbat, Shabbat has kept Israel."

It has been well said that "the Shabbat is the most important ritual observance in Judaism" because it is the only ritual observance instituted in the Ten Commandments. It is also the most important special day, even more important than Yom Kippur. This is clear from the fact that more aliyoth (opportunities for congregants to be called up to the Torah) are given on Shabbat than on any other day.

Most people know that the Shabbat is primarily a day of rest and spiritual enrichment. The word "Shabbat" comes from the root Shin-Bet-Tav, meaning to cease, to end, or to rest.

One thing connected to the Shabbat is "spiritual renewal" and this involves prayer. I loved the use of the Siddur on the Sabbath and I found myself praying deeper than ever as a Christian. The Siddur opened to me prayer as never before and I highly recommend it to you for your Sabbath worship. Although the Jews pray on Shabbat, and spend a substantial amount of time in synagogue praying. Prayer, believe it or not is not what distinguishes Shabbat from the rest of the week because observant Jews pray every day of the week. In fact observant Jews pray three times a day. Therefor to think or say that the Shabbat is a day of prayer is no more accurate than to say that Shabbat is a day of feasting because we eat every day. What separates the Sabbath for other days of the week and spiritual endeavors is that on the Sabbath one reserves the best for the sabbath as not only the culmination of the week but as a picture of the world to come when shalom is the rule of Eternity. Therefore one eats their best meals of the week on the Sabbath and prays in a more leisurely fashion.

In modern America we often hear of the five-day work-week and so much so that we have grown numb concerning the uniqueness of the radical concept of a day of rest and how unique it was in ancient times. The weekly day of rest has no parallel in any other ancient civilization. In ancient times, leisure was for the wealthy and the ruling classes only and never for the serving or laboring classes. Such is the way of man but not the way of God who even commanded the Sabbath for animals as well. The Sabbath is God's time for the soul to rest and restore whether human or animal. Historically we find mention that the Greeks thought Jews were lazy because they insisted on having a "holy day" and a day of rest every seventh day.

WE ARE COMMANDED TO "REMEMBER" AND "OBSERVE" THE SHABBATH

ZACHOR: TO REMEMBER CREATION AND OUR FREEDOM AS GOD'S FAMILY

We are commanded to remember Shabbat; but remembering means much more than merely not forgetting to observe Shabbat. It also means to remember the significance of Shabbat, both as a commemoration of creation and as a commemoration of one's freedom (the Jews remember their freedom from slavery in Egypt). Having now understood the persecutions that came to the followers of Akhenaton following his departure from Egypt it is easy to understand the need for freedom by those who remained and were "religious outsiders".

In Exodus 20:11, after Fourth Commandment is first instituted, God explains, "because for six days, the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea and all that is in them, and on the seventh day, he rested; therefore, the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and sanctified it." By resting on the seventh day and sanctifying it, all of God's children are to remember and acknowledge that God is the creator of heaven and earth and all living things. We are given the opportunity to "choose" to emulate the divine example, by refraining from work on the seventh day, as God did.

Answer for yourself: If God's work can be set aside for a day of rest, how can we believe that our own work is too important to set aside temporarily?

Moses reiterates the Ten Commandments in Deut. 5:15. Here he makes note of the second thing that we must remember on Shabbat: "remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the Lord, your God brought you forth from there with a mighty hand and with an outstretched arm; therefore the Lord your God commanded you to observe the Sabbath day."

Answer for yourself: What does the Exodus have to do with resting on the seventh day? Freedom! As I mentioned above, in ancient times, leisure was confined to certain classes; slaves did not get days off. Thus, by resting on Shabbat, we are reminded that we are free. But in a more general sense, Shabbat frees us from our weekday anxieties and concerns, from the pressures of our jobs, our deadlines, responsibilities, schedules and commitments. During the week, we are slaves to our jobs, to our creditors, to our need to provide for ourselves; on Shabbat, we are freed from these concerns, much as our ancestors were freed from slavery in Egypt. We can find peace and shalom on the Sabbath.

Answer for yourself: How can this be accomplished? How can I experience this freedom on the sabbath? Well the Sabbath begins on Friday evenings at sundown. It is then that we remember these two meanings of Shabbat when we recite kiddush \(the prayer over wine sanctifying Shabbat or a holiday\). Friday night kiddush refers to Shabbat as both zikaron l'ma'aseh bereishit (a memorial of the work in the beginning) and zeicher litzit'at mitzrayim (a remembrance of the exodus from Egypt). It is when we light the sabbath candles and recite the kiddush that we make a point to recognize before God that we take personal note of this special "appointed time with God" and refocus of sorts on that truly is important about our lives. We choose to take the time out to focus upon God and His Creation that gave us our life while at the same time we choose to "slow down" from the hectic pace we run all week long and choose to taste God's peace and shalom at this time which will quickly become a longed for memory once the Monday rush traffic begins again.

SHAMOR: TO OBSERVE

Along with the theme of "Remember the Sabbath" comes the second theme of the Sabbath; namely "Observe". We must look now at types of action and "work" that is forbidden by Jewish tradition regarding how to correctly "observe" the Sabbath. As a young Christian growing up in church I often heard the word "work" or "works" and often misused but I would not understand that at the time. Let it suffice to say that seldom as anything been more grossly misunderstood by people than the concept of refraining from "work on the Sabbath".

Before I studied Judaism in detail I was like most Americans who would see the word "work" and think of it in the English sense of the word: physical labor and effort, or employment. Under this definition, turning on a light would be permitted, because it does not require effort, but a rabbi would not be permitted to lead Shabbat services, because leading services is his employment.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Jewish law prohibits the former and permits the latter? That means we are missing something here that is very important.

Many Americans therefore conclude that Jewish law doesn't make any sense and that is a tragic mistake of our ignorance as Gentiles and Christians today.

The problem lies not in Jewish law, but in the definition that Americans are using.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Torah does not prohibit "work" in the 20th century English sense of the word?

The Torah prohibits "melachah", which is usually translated as "work," but does not mean precisely the same thing as the English word. Before you can begin to understand the Shabbat restrictions, you must understand the word "melachah" as used in the Hebrew.

Melachah generally refers to the kind of work that is creative, or that exercises control or dominion over your environment. The word may be related to "melekh" (king). The classic example of melachah is the work of creating the universe, which God ceased from on the seventh day. Note that God's work did not require a great physical effort: he spoke, and it was done.

Surprisingly the word melachah is rarely used in scripture outside of the context of Shabbat and holiday restrictions. The only other repeated use of the word is in the discussion of the building of the sanctuary and its vessels in the wilderness (Exodus 31:14-15).

Exod 31:13-15 13 Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you. Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you: every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. 15 Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death.
(KJV)

Notably, the Shabbat restrictions are reiterated during this discussion, thus we can infer that the work of creating the sanctuary had to be stopped for Shabbat. From this, the rabbis concluded that the work prohibited on Shabbat is the same as the work of creating the sanctuary. They found 39 categories of forbidden acts, all of which are types of work that were needed to build the sanctuary:

- Sowing
- Plowing
- Reaping
- Binding sheaves
- Threshing
- Winnowing
- Selecting
- Grinding
- Sifting
- Kneading
- Baking
- Shearing wool
- Washing wool
- Beating wool
- Dyeing wool
- Spinning
- Weaving
- Making two loops
- Weaving two threads
- Separating two threads
- Tying
- Untying
- Sewing two stitches
- Tearing

- Trapping
- Slaughtering
- Flaying
- Salting meat
- Curing hide
- Scraping hide
- Cutting hide up
- Writing two letters
- Erasing two letters
- Building
- Tearing a building down
- Extinguishing a fire
- Kindling a fire
- Hitting with a hammer
- Taking an object from the private domain to the public, or transporting an object in the public domain.

(Mishnah Shabbat, 7:2)

All of these tasks are prohibited, as well as any task that operates by the same principle or has the same purpose. In addition, the rabbis have prohibited handling any implement that is intended to perform one of the above purposes (for example, a hammer, a pencil or a match) unless the tool is needed for a permitted purpose (using a hammer to crack nuts when nothing else is available) or needs to be moved to do something permitted (moving a pencil that is sitting on a prayer book), or in certain other limited circumstances. Objects that may not be handled on Shabbat are referred to as "muktzeh," which means, "that which is set aside," because you set it aside (and don't use it unnecessarily) on Shabbat.

The rabbis have also prohibited travel, buying and selling, and other weekday tasks that would interfere with the spirit of Shabbat. The use of electricity is prohibited because it serves the same function as fire or some of the other prohibitions, or because it is technically considered to be "fire."

The issue of the use of an automobile on Shabbat, so often argued by non-observant Jews, is not really an issue at all for observant Jews. The automobile is powered by an internal combustion engine, which operates by burning gasoline and oil, a clear violation of the Torah prohibition against kindling a fire. In addition, the movement of the car would constitute transporting an object in the public domain, another violation of a Torah prohibition, and in all likelihood the car would be used to travel a distance greater than that permitted by rabbinical prohibitions. For all these reasons, and many more, the use of an automobile on Shabbat is clearly not permitted.

As with almost all of the commandments, all of these Shabbat restrictions can be violated if necessary to save a life.

HOW SHOULD I START TO OBSERVE THE SABBATH?

Let me say up front that I believe in "progressive obedience". To me that means that as we grow in the Spirit and grace of our Lord we often are not able to be fully obedient to a Commandment as we like but that does not mean that we cannot begin to be "partially obedient" to the best of our ability. The Sabbath is a perfect example. Over time I found myself able to be more completely observant as I matured and grew in the knowledge of these Commandments. What I found difficult at time with my work schedule would through time and prayer remedy itself whereby I could become more fully observant of this Commandment. But it took time for God to help align all the things in my life where I could be more Torah obedient.

So in the Spirit of progressive obedience in light of what we just read about travel and money let me say that a small beginning at attempted obedience is better than no obedience at all. So one might want to begin to observe and remember the Sabbath by beginning early on Friday afternoons to begin Shabbat preparations. The mood is much like preparing for the arrival of a special, beloved guest. For such an arrival of a much beloved guest or Sabbath queen the house is cleaned whereupon the family bathes and dresses up for the joyous occasion that lays before them. Mom used her best dishes and the best tableware are set. A festive meal is prepared. In addition, everything that cannot be done during Shabbat must be set up in advance. Here are some examples: lights and appliances must be set (or timers placed on them, if the household does so), the light bulb in the refrigerator must be removed or unscrewed, so it does not turn on when you open it (don't lite a fire), and preparations for the remaining Shabbat meals must be made (preserving leftovers since you cannot cook or light a fire on the sabbath proper or until sundown Saturday). These might sound difficult but I assure you with a little planning this can be done quite easily. This is a matter of the "heart" and not "the head".

SABBATH EVENING...FRIDAY NIGHTS

Shabbat, like all Jewish days, begins at sunset, because in the story of creation in Genesis Ch. 1, you will notice that it says, "And there was evening, and there was morning, one day." From this, we deduce that a day begins with evening, that is, sunset. For the precise time when Shabbat begins in your area, consult the list of candle lighting times provided by the Orthodox Union or any Jewish calendar. These are equally available on the Internet.

Shabbat candles are lit and a blessing is recited no later than eighteen minutes before sunset. This ritual, performed by the woman of the house, officially marks the beginning of Shabbat. Two candles are lit, representing the two commandments: zachor (remember) and shamor (observe), as discussed above.

Some celebrate, keep, and observe the Sabbath by attending a Synagogue service that evening if possible. Others adapt and deep the Sabbath entirely at home.

Before dinner, the man of the house recites Kiddush, a prayer over wine sanctifying Shabbat. Lifting the wine to God one recites:

"Blessed are You, HaShem our God, Ruler of the Universe, Who has created the fruit of the vine."

The usual prayer for eating bread is recited over two loaves of challah, a sweet, eggy bread shaped in a braid. The family then eats dinner. Lifting the bread to God in thanks one recites:

"Blessed are You, HaShem our God, Ruler of the Universe, Who brings forth bread from the earth."

Although there are no specific requirements or customs regarding what to eat, meals are generally stewed or slow cooked items, because of the prohibition against cooking during Shabbat. It is important to remember that things that are mostly cooked before Shabbat and then reheated or kept warm on a hotplate are permissible.

After dinner, the birkat ha-mazon (grace after meals) is recited. Although this is done every day, on Shabbat, it is done in a leisurely manner with many upbeat tunes.

"And you shall eat and you shall be satisfied. And you shall bless YHWH, your God, for the good land he has given you." (Deuteronomy 8:10)

By the time all of this is completed, it may be late evening. The family has an hour or two to talk or study the Torah, and then go to sleep. Many of our students at Bet Emet used the times to do associated studies on other areas of recovering the Jewish Roots of the Christian faith.

SABBATH MORNING...SATURDAY MORNING

The next morning Shabbat services begin at nearby synagogues and many of our students at Bet Emet would attend the morning services and later congregate with Bet Emet in the late afternoon and evening. Quite often Bible studies are held in homes on the Sabbath where friends attend and hold informal Sabbath services themselves. We at Bet Emet often did this and it is from a year of informal meetings that we grew into a full-fledged congregation with an adapted "Pattern of Worship" as found in the Synagogues. The only difference is that we had limited use of Hebrew in the service so we as non-Jews could have better understanding. Recollecting that we are to "remember" and "observe" we must understand that much of this is left up to you as to just how you do this. Understand as well that we at Bet Emet modified yet followed the Synagogue Pattern of Worship in our Sabbath Home Services.

To those who went to Synagogue on Sabbath mornings upon returning home after the service the family says kiddush again and has another leisurely, festive meal. A typical afternoon meal is usually some form of a slow cooked stew or soup that was kept warm on a heating plate ever night. By the time birkat ha-mazon (grace after meals) is done, it is about mid-afternoons. Many use this time to refocus on the Torah while others find leisurely activities to do. Many study the Torah for a while, others talk or take afternoon walks. Others find it relaxing to play games or engage in other leisure activities. A short afternoon nap is not uncommon. It is traditional to have a third meal before Shabbat is over. This is usually a light meal in the late afternoon or early evening before sundown for again remember it is at sundown that the Sabbath leaves and the first day of the week returns. It is interesting to note that in Judaism these 3 meals on the Sabbath is called "The Lord's Supper".

SABBATH AFTERNOON...SATURDAY EVENING

Shabbat ends at nightfall, when three stars are visible, approximately 40 minutes after sunset. It was at this time that Congregation Bet Emet chose to hold its services in order to not only share in the joy of the Sabbath but to partake of the Havdalah service as well. It was during this time that we all partook of a "modified" Synagogue service that consisted of Scripture readings, prayer, worship songs, teaching, and fellowship and even dancing before the Lord.

At the conclusion of Shabbat, it is customary for the family to perform a concluding ritual called Havdalah (separation, division) and we at Bet Emet ended our services with the Havdalah. In the Havdalah blessings are recited over wine, spices and candles. Then a blessing is recited regarding the division between the sacred and the secular, between Shabbat and the working days, etc. We would end with a song of hope remembering Elijah the Prophet whose coming is to announce the days of Messiah.

As you can see, Shabbat is a very full day when it is properly observed, and very relaxing and a joy to share with others.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS AND THE SABBATH...COMMANDED TWICE?

The "Aseret HaDibrot," the "Ten Commandments," are documented twice in the Five Books of Moses, once in Shemot (Exodus 20, 2-17) and once in Devarim (Deuteronomy 5, 6-18), when Moshe is reviewing the Jewish experience in the Desert. In general, the two texts are nearly identical. However, with respect to the Commandment relating to Shabbat, there are crucial differences, as follows:

"Remember the day of Shabbat, to keep it holy. Pursue all your labor for six days, and do all your "Melachah" (the term "Melachah" to be defined in Item 3, below). But the seventh day is Shabbat to the Lord your God; On it you may do no "Melachah," neither you, nor your son, nor your daughter, nor your male servant, nor your female servant, nor your cattle, nor the stranger who is within your gates. For in six days God made the heavens and the earth, the sea and everything that is within it; And he rested on the seventh day; Therefore, God did bless the day of Shabbat and He made it holy." (Shemot 19: 8-11; the Shabbat Command as recorded in the Shemot version of the Ten Commandments)

"Guard the Day of Shabbat to keep it holy, as the Lord your God has commanded. Pursue all your labor for six days, and do all your "Melachah." But the seventh day is Shabbat for the Lord your God; Do no "Melachah" - not you, nor your son or daughter, nor your male or female servant, nor your ox or donkey or any of your cattle, nor the stranger who resides within your gates, in order that your male and female servants shall rest, as you rest. And you shall remember that you were a slave in the Land of Egypt, and the Lord your God took you out from there with a strong hand and an outstretched arm; Therefore, did the Lord your God command you to observe the Day of Shabbat." (Devarim 5: 12-15; the Shabbat Command as recorded in the Devarim version of the Ten Commandments.

Of course, it is extremely unusual, at first glance, that there should be any variation here. But the Midrash explains that, somehow, God uttered both versions at once, something that a creature of flesh and blood could not do, to teach both of the themes of Shabbat, namely, the Creation and the Exodus. Another aspect of the dual utterance of "Remember the Day of Shabbat" and "Guard the Day of Shabbat" is that Shabbat has a dual nature - positive and negative, affirmation and withdrawal, as discussed below:

- The special quality of the Day of Shabbat is based on the concept of the holiness of time. The Shabbat is that one day out of seven that was charged with holiness, by the holy Creator of time.
- Shabbat has a double theme, the significance of each of which is developed in the paragraphs below. One is to commemorate the Creation of the universe by God in six "days," and his "rest" from his "Melachah" (work), and that it was for that reason that He blessed the seventh day and made it holy - Exodus-Shemot version. The other is to commemorate the Exodus, that awesome event in which the Lord took the Jewish People out of Egypt; that we should remember that we ourselves were slaves in Egypt, and that God Himself redeemed us with a "strong hand and an outstretched arm."

- On Shabbat, the Jew withdraws from the performance of "Melachah" (work). All categories of "Melachah" represent purposeful, creative interactions with nature. In the case of Man, this refers to his interaction with his environment, whereby he exerts mastery and control over nature, as in fact he was commanded to do by God. Our purpose in this is to express our belief and to testify that God is the Creator of the Universe, and is the source, on an ongoing basis, of all creative forces within it.
- Shabbat testifies to the dignity of labor and the basic equality of all human beings. The Torah commands "Six days shall you labor;" - all of you! No exceptions! Yet, all members of the household, all classes of society, from the king to the servant; even the Gentile and animals, are to be provided with a "Day of Rest."
- One of the central themes of Shabbat, as seen in the Devarim version of the "Aseret HaDibros," the Ten Commandments, is to remember the Exodus. This unique event in history demonstrated the continuing involvement of God with His Creation, His fierce opposition to slavery and all abuse of power, and His concern for justice.
- Throughout the centuries and millenia of Jewish History, oppressors of the Jews realized that a major key to Jewish survival was observance of the Shabbat; therefore, it was outlawed; sometimes punishable by death. Conversely, the Shabbat raised the Jews far above their enemies; for the Jews, in acting to carry out God's command, were acting in accord with their human potential, while their enemies, in attempting to suppress this observance and in their desire to strip the Jews of their human dignity, descended to the level of the beasts.
- The Shabbat Table is compared with the Altar in the Temple. Shabbat is the Day of "Quality Time," the Day of Delight, of "Menuchah" or Tranquility, to be spent with one's family, with one's self, with one's Maker, and with the Torah.

THE NON-JEW AND HIS RETURN TO GOD'S SABBATHS WHICH CONSTANTINE OUTLAWED

Answer for yourself: Why don't we as Christians and followers of Jesus and "the Christ" keep and observe the Biblical Holy Days in the Christian Church today?

We can begin to look at Constantine to find the loss of the Biblical Holy Days and the Sabbath for the non-Jew.

Let us learn an important truth from 2 Thess. 2:3

"Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day will not come unless the falling away comes first, and the man of sin is revealed, the son of perdition who apposes and exalts himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped so that he sits as God in the temple of God."

Let us look no further than Constantine to be one of many who fulfills this passage. As far as the history of christianity is concerned, Constantine was one of the most influential men that ever lived. From the Writings of the Apostles (Gospel's), until Martin Luther nailed his theses to the church door in 1517, there was no single person that so changed the course of church history as Constantine did. Indeed, his influence was so vast that it continues to tower over Christendom in this, our own time. Both in church customs, doctrines and in church government, christianity owes sunday and a lot more to Constantine's intervention.

It may be news to you but Constantine began to change the Biblical Holy Days, forsaking the Shabbot and assigning Sunday as God's day. He outlawed the 7 Biblical Festivals and Feasts of God as well. He replaced them with pagan holidays derived from Sun Worship which find their origins with men. If we look at the Shabbot this should not be surprising to us for after all, the Gentiles (pagans) were already used to Sunday worship due to their background in "Sunday" - "Sun" worship. The logic of Constantine was very simple: "As more and more Gentiles came into the faith, why make them learn of God's Holy Sabbath and His Laws?" The root for all these changes comes from his intense antisemitism and hatred of the Jews as we find in his Easter Letter.

At the beginning of the 4th century, a monumental event occurred for the Church. In AD 306, Constantine became the first Christian Roman Emperor. At first, he had a rather pluralistic view and accorded Jews the same religious rights as Christians. However, in AD 321, he made Christianity the official religion of the Empire. This signaled the end of the persecution of Christians, but the beginning of discrimination and persecution of the Jewish people.

Already at a council in Elvira (Spain) in AD 305, declarations were made to keep Jews and Christians apart, including ordering Christians not to share meals with Jews, not to marry Jews, not to use Jews to bless their fields, and not to observe the Jewish Sabbath.

Imperial Rome, in AD 313, issued the Edict of Milan, which granted favor to Christianity, while outlawing synagogues.

Then, in AD 315, another edict allowed the burning of Jews if they were convicted of breaking the laws. As Christianity was becoming the religion of the state, further laws were passed against the Jews:

- The ancient privileges granted to the Jews were withdrawn.
- Rabbinical jurisdiction was abolished or severely curtailed.
- Proselytism was prohibited and made punishable by death.
- Jews were excluded from holding high office or a military career.

These and other restrictions were confirmed over and over again by various Church councils for the next 1,000 years.

In AD 321, Constantine decreed all business should cease on "the honored day of the sun." By substituting Sunday for Saturday as the day for Christian worship, he further advanced the split. This Jewish Shabbat / Christian Sunday controversy also came up at the first real ecumenical Council of Nicea (AD 325), which concluded Sunday to be the Christian day of rest, although it was debated for long after that.

Answer for yourself: What should this tell us? Simply that up until the early 4th century non-Jewish believers in God were taught to keep and observe the Sabbath along with the Jews!

Overnight, Christianity was given the power of the Imperial State, and the emperors began to translate the concepts and claims of the Christian theologians against the Jews and Judaism into practice. Instead of the Church taking this opportunity to spread its Gospel message in love, it truly became the Church Triumphant, ready to vanquish its foes (first it was the Jews and later it would be Gnosticism and any who would dare to disbelieve the imperial religious doctrine).

After 321, the writings of the Church fathers changed in character. No longer was it on the defensive and apologetic, but aggressive, directing its venom at everyone "outside of the flock," in particular the Jewish people who could be found in almost every community and nation.

1Thes 1:9 9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; (KJV)

The above passage refers to Non-Jews who turned from idols to serve the living God of the Jews. They had just come out of idolatry. And that was fine when gentiles first entered the faith. They didn't know the Law, that they had a Covenant with God or that God expected of them to observe and keep His "appointed times" and Holy Days" like the Sabbath. But they could learn. They attended the synagogues, on Shabbot and observed "ALL" of the Jewish Biblical Holy Days. But Constantine and others made sure they did not continue to learn the Ways of God. He made sure that everything Jewish was removed from the then "existing" church.

You might want to look up the word "gentile". It means pagan. It means anyone outside Judeo Christian faith. Webster's dictionary states: "Gentile....anyone belonging to a non Jewish nation; anyone who is not a JEW OR A CHRISTIAN." Yet Christians today claim the title of Gentile. This is part of the Lie that Constantine started and it obviously continues today. If you are a believer in the God of Israel through Yeshua then you are no longer a Gentile. You are grafted in to the Olive tree, which is Israel. And that being so then you should resemble Israel in your worship!

Rom 11:24 24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Have you ever noticed that any reference to Yeshua and the early church being a part of Judaism brings accusations of "Pharisee" "Legalist" and after that comes "one who would stone Christ" and finally "Christ Killers". This kind of talk brought us the Inquisition, the Crusades and the Holocaust.

CONSTANTINE'S COUNTERFEIT JESUS

A terrible deception has occurred and the vast majority of 2.5 billion Christians haven't a clue. Today in Gentile Christianity we have accepted a Constantine Jesus instead of the Jewish Messiah. Through Constantine's clever ruse of "replacement religion" we have centered in Christianity today not a Jewish Messiah but a Gentile Messiah. This person will look for all the world like the Messiah pictured in Christian paintings. He will look extremely "Gentile". This false messiah has and will continue to infiltrate the church. He will speak of Easter and Christmas and Sunday as if they were God's Holy Days. He will not allow Sabbath worship. He will declare Sunday as the Sabbath Day. As long as you worship the "Gentile Jesus" you won't have to worry about persecution. Nobody is going to bother you. You will be safe in your church and deceived the false comfort provided by errant theology. All this because you believed The Lie. The lie that you are separate from Israel. The lie that says the Olive tree is dead. The lie that says the Law is dead. The lie that says you are somehow better than Israel because you will be 'taken out' of the world in the day of Jacob's trouble. And the lie that says the Commandments of Almighty God are passed away. The lie says that you, as a Gentile Christian believer, have replaced Israel and that you are "the New Israel".

TIME TO STUDY FOR YOURSELF AND EXPOSE THIS LIE

Rom 11:17-18 17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree (Israel); 18 Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee. (KJV)

We must begin at the beginning; namely with the Biblical Calendar. We can call this for all practical purposes the Jewish Calendar for I have found, as you will if you do the study, that "Jewish" is a synonym for "Biblical". I wish that could be said for the Christian Church but it simply is not so; in fact the opposite is more often the rule. The Lord's Calendar is a diary of His Appointments of His "appointed times" with mankind. These are specific times on which He wants to meet with us. The word 'set time' in Hebrew is "moed". It means an 'appointment' and a 'rehearsal'. These are appointments set in eternity as rehearsals for what is to come. We find time and time again when consulting the Hebrew words for the non-Jewish believer in God in the Hebrew Scriptures example after example of the non-Jew keeping and observing the Sabbath and the these Biblical "appointed times" and Biblical Festivals and Feasts with the Jew in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Old Testament. Many never see this for they know not where or how to look or study at this level. Words like "alien", "foreigner" and "stranger" go unnoticed in the Old Testament in contexts regarding these Holy Days of the Lord yet everyone of them is a beautiful picture of the overall "Pattern of Worship" given by God to all His children; to all mankind. Again and again God emphasizes to both the Jew as well as the non-Jew that we are to keep the Feasts at their appointed time as "rehearsals" for Eternity.

Numbers 9:2 says: "Make the Israelites celebrate the Passover at the appointed time."

In verse 14 we read, "A foreigner living among you who wants to celebrate the LORD's Passover must do so in accordance with its rules and regulations. You must have the same regulations for the foreigner and the native-born."

Isa 56:1-2 1 Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. 2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil. (KJV)

But you read the above verse thinking this was a commandment for the Jew only most likely. But let us keep reading.

Isa 56:6-7 6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant; 7 Even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer: their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people (nations). (KJV)

Wow. Here we have the example of non-Jews keeping the Sabbath of God let alone participating in Temple worship and the Sacrificial System. It would appear to me and hopefully you that these non-Jews are definitely "grafted" into the Israel of God more so than Christians today regardless of what they want to believe about themselves.

Isa 56:8 8 The Lord GOD which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather others to him, beside those that are gathered unto him. (KJV)

Take a look at this chapter and you will see the church as it was/is supposed to be. We were supposed to learn about and keep the Lord's Sabbaths (the weekly sabbath as well as God's "High Sabbath" which are more commonly known as the Biblical Festivals and Feasts. We are plainly Commanded here to keep the Sabbaths of the Lord. We are now getting the chance to learn and do as many are returning to the Hebrew roots of the church. Let us do so in thanksgiving and delight.

A PERSONAL GUIDE TO THE SABBATH: GETTING STARTED WITH SHABBAT

When most people think of holidays, they think of annual celebrations, but in the Bible and in Biblical Judaism there is one holiday that occurs every week-the Sabbath. Known in Hebrew as Shabbat and in Yiddish as Shabbos, this holiday is central to Jewish life. As the great Jewish writer Ahad Ha-Am has observed: "More than the Jewish people has kept the Sabbath, the Sabbath has kept the Jewish people." The Sabbath truly has been a unifying force for Jews the world over. But as we saw in prior studies the recognition of this "7th day" can be found among the non-Jews long before Jews as well so we must investigate this closer.

Shabbat is observed on the seventh day of the week in fulfillment of the biblical commandment: "Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is a sabbath of the Lord your God." (Exodus 20:9-10) In accordance with the Jewish calendar, the Sabbath begins on Friday evening at sunset and ends on Saturday night with the appearance of three stars. All Jewish days begin at sunset. This reckoning is based on the wording of the Creation story in Genesis 1. At the end of the description of each day, we find the phrase: "And there was evening, and there was morning. . ." Since evening is mentioned first, the ancient rabbis deduced that evening is first.

THE SABBATH IS GOD'S AND MAN'S SANCTIFICATION OF TIME

While Shabbat occurs on Friday evening and Saturday, it is more than simply another day in the week. It is a special day, and we are commanded to invest it with specialness. Friday and Saturday come automatically, but Shabbat takes place only when we make it happen. We must make the decision to establish Shabbat in our own lives if we want to have it and observe it in our lives. In order to allow Shabbat to enter our lives, it is necessary to prepare ourselves and our environment. We prepare for Shabbat by the clothes we wear, by the meals we eat, by the lighting of Sabbath candles which sanctifies the time we recognize and set apart and make "holy", and by chanting the Kiddush over wine to set apart this special time. The Sabbath "begins" with the most common custom which is to light two candles for the two important Biblical references to Shabbat: "Remember the Sabbath" (Exodus 20:8) and "Observe the Sabbath" (Deuteronomy 5:12). However, many people light an additional candle for each child in the family, and others light seven candles for each day of the week or for the Temple's seven-branched menorah. This is really up to you. After lighting the candles, the woman covers her eyes with her hands and recites the following blessing: "Blessed are You, Lord our God, King of the universe, Who has made us holy through His commandments and commanded us to kindle the Sabbath light". After the blessing, some women add a silent prayer for the family. Only after the blessing is recited, the woman uncovers her eyes and looks at the light. By covering her eyes, the woman can focus more fully on the blessing and can postpone the enjoyment of the fruits of the blessing (seeing the light) until after the blessing is recited.

The "Kiddush" Prayer is recited at the beginning of a festive meal on the Shabbat or the Holidays. The prayer describes the specific symbolism of the holiday - e.g. Pesach is the "Time of our Freedom," Shavuot is the "Time of the Giving of the Torah," Shabbat is the "Day which was first to be called 'Holy,' commemorating both the Creation of the Universe and the Exodus from Egypt. The Kiddush contains, as well, information as to who is responsible for the conferring of the quality of "holiness" upon the day. In the case of Shabbat, on one hand, it was God Himself, Who made the Day holy, whereas it is the Jewish People that has been charged with the responsibility by the Torah and by its Author, to confer the holiness upon them, by means of establishing the calendar.

Shabbat is such a special time that it has been likened to the Messianic Age. A well-known midrash expresses this thought:

When God was about to give the Torah to the Jewish people, God summoned the people and said to them: "My children, I have something precious that I would like to give you for all time, if you will accept My Torah and observe My commandments." The people then asked: "Ruler of the universe, what is that precious gift You have for us?" The Holy One, blessed be God, replied: "It is the world-to-come (the Messianic Age)!" The people of Israel answered: "Show us a sample of the world-to-come." The Holy One, blessed be God, said: "The Shabbat is a sample of the world-to-come, for that world will be one long Shabbat."

THE SABBATH AND THE CONCEPT OF THE MESSIAH

The Sabbath is an appropriate time to talk about the Jewish view of the Messiah. The word "messiah" is derived from the Hebrew word mashiach, which literally means "anointed one." In the days of the Bible, anointing a person with oil was a way of declaring him king. Thus, messiah means king-a flesh-and-blood king, NOT a divine being.

Messianic expectations developed over time. In the fully developed form of this idea, the Messiah would - establish himself as the king,

- gain independence for the Jewish people in their own land,
- be an ideal king, and
- with God's help, establish peace, justice, and brotherhood-not only for the Jews, but for all the world.

Throughout Jewish history, there were a number of individuals who claimed to be the Messiah. While each of these people gained some following at first, none of them-including Jesus fulfilled the messianic expectations. Thus, in Judaism, no one has been accepted as the Messiah (not yet that is).

The early Church realized that Jesus did not do all that was expected of the Messiah. It insisted that he would return to earth someday to complete the task. This doctrine is known as the "Second Coming of Christ." Judaism, to whom the Messiah was promised and to whom the Prophets wrote promising the future redeemer, has maintained that, as long as the "true" messianic expectations as written in the Hebrew Scriptures and not those forged in the Christian Old and New Testaments remain unfulfilled, the Messianic Age is still a hope for the future.

Incidentally, knowledgeable Jews don't refer to Jesus as "Christ" since "Christ" is a title meaning "anointed one," and Jews do not believe that Jesus was the Anointed One. Though Jesus has no role whatsoever in Judaism, most Jews would say that he was a fine teacher whose teachings have had a considerable influence on the world. A good deal of what he taught was basic Judaism and a good deal portrayed about his life and teachings put into his mouth by the Gentile Church are reflective of Sun Worship and are idolatrous. It takes a comprehensive knowledge of Sun Worship and its variations as well as great deal of knowledge of Judaism to discern the difference when reading the New Testament texts. This takes time and hard study.

In rabbinic literature, there was some speculation about personal characteristics of the Messiah. However, great importance was placed on what would be the results of the coming of the Messiah-the Messianic Age. Reform and Conservative Jews generally emphasize the Messianic Age rather than a personal Messiah. The Messianic Age can be compared to a jigsaw puzzle. Each individual has a piece of the Messiah within. We have to put all our pieces together if we want to build a better world. In other words "the Christ" dwells within us all and when we surrender to the rule and reign of God within then through our influence and our efforts a better world has the hope to come.

THE SABBATH AND CREATION AND RE-CREATION

Shabbat is a day of rest. However, it's not just a day to sleep late. The paradigm for Sabbath rest can be found in Genesis 2:1-3: "The heaven and the earth were finished, and all their array. On the seventh day God finished the work which He had been doing, and He ceased [rested] on the seventh day from all the work which He had done. And God blessed the seventh day and declared it holy, because on it God ceased [rested] from all the work of creation which He had done." Thus the pattern of work and rest is woven into the very fabric of the universe. Rest means more than physical cessation of work. It implies taking oneself out of the ordinary, out of the routine, out of the rat race. This kind of rest gives us the opportunity to re-create our spirit and restore our soul. Shabbat is a time that is set aside to take notice of the wonders around us.

This thought is echoed in a Sabbath eve reading in Gates of Prayer, the prayer book of the Reform movement:

There are days when we seek things for ourselves and measure failure by what we do not gain. On the Sabbath we seek not to acquire but to share. There are days when we exploit nature as if it were a horn of plenty that can never be exhausted. On the Sabbath we stand in wonder before the mystery of creation. There are days when we act as if we cared nothing for the rights of others. On the Sabbath we are reminded that justice is our duty and a better world our goal. (Gates of Prayer, pp. 177-178)

"THE SABBATH" ...COMMANDED IN THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Not only is the Sabbath an integral part of the Creation story, it is the only holiday mentioned in the Ten Commandments. The Ten Commandments actually appear twice in the Bible. The Sabbath commandment is formulated somewhat differently in each instance.

Remember the sabbath day and keep it holy. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is a sabbath of the Lord your God: you shall not do any work- you, your son or daughter, your male or female slave, or your cattle, or the stranger who is within your settlements. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth and sea, and all that is in them, and He rested on the seventh day; therefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day and hallowed it. (Exodus 20:8-11)

Observe the sabbath day and keep it holy, as the Lord your God has commanded you. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is a sabbath of the Lord your God: you shall not do any work-you, your son or your daughter, your male or female slave, your ox or your ass, or any of your cattle, or the stranger in your settlements, so that your male and female slave may rest as you do. Remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt and the Lord your God freed you from there with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm; therefore the Lord your God has commanded you to observe the sabbath day. (Deuteronomy 5:12-15)

These passages, while essentially the same, point out two different aspects of Shabbat. Exodus tells us to remember the Sabbath while Deuteronomy stresses the observance of the day. Furthermore, each passage gives a different rationale for Shabbat. Exodus reminds us that on Shabbat we rejoice in the creation of the physical universe. Deuteronomy points out that we must remember the Exodus from Egypt. In so doing, we are cognizant of the freedom we enjoy.

THE SABBATH, THE COVENANT, AND CHOSENNESS

Shabbat is also seen as a sign of a covenant between God and the Jewish people.

Answer for yourself: You might be, as a non-Jew asking "What has that to do with me"?

Everything when you consider that the Hebrew Scriptures are full of examples of non-Jews observing and keeping the Sabbath. If you were diligent to study the other articles on this website regarding the Sabbath and its connection with non-Jews long before the Jewish nation existed then you saw that Divine Revelation was given to the non-Jew long before Moses and the Jewish Bible whereby in obedience the non-Jew observed and kept the Sabbath. This as well as Isa. 56 which invites all non-Jews to "choose those things that please God" are many of the examples whereby God's Sabbath was one of the things a Gentile can voluntarily observe and keep in his life as we see in the following verses:

Isa 56:1-6 1 Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. 2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil. 3 Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I am a dry tree. 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs (non-Jews) that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant; 5 Even unto them will I give in mine house and within my walls a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off. 6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant; (KJV)

The Hebrew words of Exodus 31:16-17, sung at Shabbat services, emphasize the convenantal relationship: "The Israelite people shall keep the sabbath, observing the sabbath throughout the ages as a covenant for all time: it shall be a sign for all time between Me and the people of Israel. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day He ceased from work and was refreshed."

Classic Jewish theology from the Bible onward has maintained that a special relationship exists between God and the Jewish people. This idea, referred to as the Chosen People concept, is one of the most misunderstood concepts within Judaism. Chosenness does not mean that Judaism teaches that Jews are better than everybody else in the world; it does not mean that Jews are elected for salvation. Judaism does not deny that God's love extends to all humanity. In fact, it affirms God's universal love in these words from the Midrash: "I call heaven and earth to witness: Gentile or Jew, man or woman, manservant or maidservant-all according to our deeds does the spirit of God rest upon us."

Answer for yourself: What, then, does chosenness imply? The traditional understanding is that God chose to establish a particular relationship with a certain individual, Abraham, and his descendants. The covenant, or agreement, between God and the Jewish people was that they, God and the Jewish people-would be loyal to one another.

The Torah says that, when God gave the commandments to the people of Israel, the people responded: "All that the Lord has spoken we will do and we will hear." (Exodus 24:7) Jews have never been satisfied to take the biblical text at face value but have always delved deeply into all of its ramifications.

The result of this process of delving is called midrash. For instance, when reading about the Israelites accepting the commandments so readily, our ancient rabbis wondered: "How might this have happened?" Two of the answers they came up with shed light on the concept of chosenness.

According to one interpretation, the Israelites were not God's first choice to receive the Torah. In fact, God had offered it to many other nations, but each of them had refused it. Only the Israelites were willing to say: "All that the Lord has spoken we will do and we will hear"; only they would accept the obligations of the covenant. In other words, the Jews were chosen, but they were not the first choice.

The second interpretation presents a much different view. In this midrash, the Israelites weren't all that willing to accept the Torah. Only when God threatened to drop Mount Sinai on them if they refused the Torah did they respond: "All that the Lord has spoken we will do and we will hear." In this version, the people at Sinai, who were a mixed multitude of Israelites and Egyptian non-Jews by the way, may have felt that they were not adequate to the task, but they were compelled to rise to the challenge. So they "chose" to be "chosen" (see Isa. 56 again).

Very frankly, even after considering these interpretations of chosenness, some Jews are still not completely comfortable with the notion. So they interpret the concept more broadly. Rather than speaking in terms of God choosing the Jews, they understand chosenness to mean that the Jews chose God and the way of Torah.

For some Jews, even this interpretation is not acceptable. The Reconstructionist movement, for instance, rejects the notion of chosenness entirely and has changed those prayers that refer to chosenness.

CREATING SHABBATH IN THE HOME

Much of our discussion up to this point has focused on concepts relating to Shabbat, but Shabbat truly becomes what it was meant to be as we bring it into our lives. We begin to create a Shabbat atmosphere by doing things in our home. The Rabbis teach that in the wake of the destruction of the Temple and the Altar then one's table in one's home becomes literally your "altar" with God.

One prepares the house for Shabbat by cleaning it and putting it in order. This may seem like a monumental task sometimes, but there are ways to get it done. For instance, this task can be shared or accomplished over several evenings. Playing Jewish music while you clean can help create the Shabbat mood, and you can learn a lot of Jewish songs in the process. There are some great cassettes and CDs which deal with the Sabbath and can be found on the Internet or through your Synagogue bookstores. Bringing in some fresh flowers makes the house seem to have a more Sabbath atmosphere which just speaks "life".

Friday night is a time for a special meal. This does not mean that the meal has to be expensive and elaborate. It should be special because of the love and care taken in its preparation and presentation. There are some foods that are traditional for Shabbat. Jews of Eastern European (Ashkenazic) background generally eat gefilte fish or chopped liver, chicken soup with matzah balls or noodles, roast chicken or brisket of beef, noodle or potato kugel, and chalah. Jews of Mediterranean (Sephardic) background eat foods that differ markedly. Some Shabbat favorites include fish with egg and lemon sauce, eggplant salad, lamb roast, stuffed grape leaves, and white rice.

While these are traditional foods, you should not feel restricted to these. You can experiment or use your own favorites.

The table should be set as befits a visit by a queen since Shabbat is metaphorically seen as a queen. Place on the table an attractive cloth or place mats and your finest dishes and flatware. Also, on the table (or on a nearby table) should be placed candlesticks and candles, a Kiddush cup and wine, one or two chalot covered with a chalah cover or napkin, and salt. If you don't make your own chalah (egg bread) you can go to various grocery stores in your city and purchase these special breaks before Sabbath observances.

Shabbat is welcomed by a ceremony at the table prior to the meal. While the ceremony formally begins with the lighting of Shabbat candles, many people follow the custom of dropping some coins into a pushke (tsedakah box) first. While tsedakah is often translated as "charity," it doesn't really mean charity. The word is based on a Hebrew root meaning "righteousness" or "justice." The mitzvah (a religious obligation, which flows from the covenantal relationship between the Jewish people and God) of tsedakah places on every Jew the obligation to right the injustices of society. One of the ways we do this is by contributing money to help individuals or groups who are in need themselves or who are engaged in helping others. While this may sound just like charity, it differs radically. There is no Hebrew word corresponding to what is expressed by the English word "charity." The crucial difference is in the attitude with which tsedakah is given. It is not seen as an act by which one who is superior gives to one who is inferior. Nor is it something done out of love, as charity is. Rather, in order for us to be fully human, it is incumbent upon us to give and to give in such a way as to preserve the dignity of the recipient. Moses Maimonides, a great medieval philosopher, likened the giving of tsedakah to the rungs of a ladder. The lowest rung is giving grudgingly. A higher rung is to give anonymously. The very highest rung is to give in such a way as to enable the recipient to become independent.

There is a system of Hebrew numerology called gematria in which every Hebrew letter has a numerical equivalent. The Hebrew word for life, chai, consists of letters equaling 18 (chet = 8 and yod = 10). Therefore, tsedakah is often given in multiples of eighteen ($18, $36, $180, $360, etc.). By giving tsedakah, our goal is to enhance the lives of others.

It is customary to light at least two candles to welcome the Sabbath. One explanation for this is that each candle reminds us of one of the ways we are enjoined to celebrate the Sabbath ("Remember" and "Observe"). Some people light additional candles to represent the children in their family; others light one additional candle for each child in the family. The majority, however, simply light two candles. It is traditional for the woman of the house to light these candles and recite the blessing over them. If there is no woman, then the man lights the candles. In some families, the candle blessing is recited by the entire family.

There are various customs associated with the actual lighting of the candles. Some women, after kindling the candles, encircle the flames with their hands as a way of spreading the Shabbat light and drawing it close to themselves. You will also see some women cover their eyes with their hands after they have encircled the flames, while they say the blessing. The reason for this is actually a legal fiction. Normally, we recite a blessing before performing the act (such as reciting the blessing for bread before eating the bread). However, the procedure must be reversed when lighting the Shabbat candles. The candles must be lit first since, once the blessing has been said, Shabbat has begun and traditionally no fire can be created on Shabbat. By covering her eyes and not looking at the candles, it is as if the woman has not yet lit them. After completing the blessing, she removes her hands and looks at the candles as if for the first time. Everyone present then wishes each other "Shabbat Shalom" or "Gut Shabbos."

If you are not comfortable lighting the candles in either of these ways, it is perfectly acceptable to light them without placing your hands in front of your eyes. Some women choose to cover their eyes simply because it is a custom even though the rationale behind it is not particularly compelling for them. In many homes, a special set of candlesticks is set aside for Sabbath use. These may be silver, brass, wood, or ceramic. However, in the absence of specially designated candlesticks, you may use any candlesticks.

Scripture teaches that wine gladdens the human heart. We use wine for every special occasion. Each Sabbath and festival is welcomed and sanctified with a blessing over wine. Traditionally, kosher grape wine is used, but in some homes non-kosher wine is used. The wine for Kiddush is usually poured into a special Kiddush cup, which can be ceramic, glass, pewter, silver, etc. In the absence of a special Kiddush cup, any glass or goblet may be used.

The blessing over wine is called Kiddush. It is traditionally recited or chanted by the man of the house or by a guest. If there is no man present, a woman should say the Kiddush. In some homes, the entire family chants the Kiddush together. In addition to blessing God as the Creator of the fruit of the vine, the Kiddush also thanks God for the holiness of Shabbat. It states that Shabbat is a reminder of both Creation and the Exodus. As we say the Kiddush we think of the Creation story and the Garden of Eden, a paradigm of the perfect time that was. We think, too, of the Exodus, the time that signaled the Jew's redemption from servitude. Even as we look back to these events, we look forward to a time that will combine redemption and paradise-the Messianic Age. Before we drink the wine, we wish each other "Lechayim" (to life).

THE KIDDUSH OVER THE WINE

The following is recited over the wine:

On the sixth day, heaven and the earth were finished, and all their host. And on the seventh day the Lord perfected the work which He had made; and on the seventh day, He ceased from the work which He had made. And the Lord blessed the seventh day and He sanctified it, because thereon He ceased from the work of creation which He had made.

Praised be Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Creator of the fruit of the vine.

Praised be Thou, Lord our God, who has hallowed us with Thy commandments, and hast favored us with the gracious gift of the Sabbath as our loving inheritance, in remembrance of the work of creation. The Sabbath is also first among the days of holy assembly, which recall our freedom from the bondage of Egypt. From among the nations Thou hast selected us for a service of holiness, and in love Thou hast given us Thy holy Sabbath as our heritage. Praised be Thou, O Lord, who hallowest the Sabbath.

During the Kiddush, the chalah is covered with a decorated chalah cover or, in its absence, with a white napkin. There is a reason often cited for this custom: At meals during the week, the blessing before eating is recited over bread. On Shabbat, before the blessing over bread, a much longer blessing-the Kiddush-is recited over wine. Unwilling to hurt the feelings of the bread by focusing all this attention on the wine, we cover the bread to avoid embarrassing it.

At first, this explanation may seem fanciful or even fatuous, but in fact it teaches a lesson in human relations. If we are called upon to concern ourselves with the feelings of a loaf of bread, how much more must we care about the feelings of our fellow human beings and be cognizant of how our words and actions affect them.

The blessing of God for the "bread" follows the blessing of God for the "wine".

Praised be Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who brings forth the bread from the earth

As an associated thought, the Chalah, a twisted egg bread, sometimes covered with sesame or poppy seeds, is the bread that is used for Shabbat. In Eastern Europe, weekday bread was very coarse while chalah-the Shabbat bread-was light and fine, made from more expensive flour. Some people set two chalot on the table as a reminder of the double portion of manna gathered by the Israelites on the day before the Sabbath. The Bible tells us that, during the wandering in the wilderness after the Exodus, God provided for all the physical needs of the Israelites. God provided a food called manna, which the people gathered daily. Since work was prohibited on Shabbat, and gathering manna would be considered work, God provided a double portion of manna on the day before the Sabbath to last them through Shabbat.

The blessing over bread, called the Motzi, thanks God "who brings forth (hamotzi) bread from the earth." Some people sprinkle the chalah with salt after making the blessing and before eating the bread. One explanation for this is that in Roman times salt was a very valuable commodity, available only to free people. By eating salt on Shabbat, we emphasize that we are free people serving God. Another explanation is that, since the destruction of the Temple in the year 70, the home has become "a small sanctuary" and the table an altar. After the destruction of the Temple the Rabbis adopted the principle of bringing the Temple home and transferring much of the Temple ritual around the altar to our table in order to maintain the bond and unity of the Jewish people. Since the sacrifices were offered with salt, having salt on the table links us to our past. The home as sanctuary and the table as altar are underscored further by the tradition of speaking words of Torah at the table. In a Jewish home, mealtime should be more than a time for simply meeting one's physical needs; it should be a time for spiritual nourishment as well. A well-known talmudic statement teaches that, if three people sit at a meal and exchange words of Torah, it is as if the Divine Presence dwelt among them.

The Jewish blessing before a meal is a very brief one. A lengthier blessing is reserved for after the meal. This follows the biblical statement:

"When you have eaten your fill, give thanks to the Lord your God. . . ." (Deuteronomy 8:10)

There are several passages inserted into the blessing after the meal (Birkat Hamazon) that are only said on Shabbat. One of these prays for the coming of the time that will be entirely like Shabbat-the Messianic Age. Once again on this day of peace our thoughts are turned to the hoped-for redemption of the future.

Shabbat has another important element. It is a time of togetherness and joining-a time to be with friends and with family, taking time to appreciate each other. It is a nice custom to invite guests for Shabbat. Many people offer a word of appreciation to members of the family and friends at the Sabbath table and again blessings are recited for the children and the husband and wife.

This might take the form of a husband reading Proverbs 31 to his wife and a parental blessing to the children. Some wives read Psalm 112 to their husbands. Shabbat is a time of union and harmony. Some Jews read verses from Song of Songs (a collection of beautiful love poems found in the Bible) on Shabbat. It is considered a mitzvah to make love on Shabbat, and it is said that God is present when husband and wife make love.

CELEBRATING SHABBAT IN THE SYNAGOGUE

Another very important aspect of Shabbat is community. The community gathers for worship each Shabbat, reaffirming our covenantal tie to God and to one another. Some synagogues have their major Sabbath service on Friday evening while others have it on Saturday morning. It is not uncommon for non-Jews, wishing to enter into the worship of God as a Jew like Jesus in the first century would have worshiped, to attend regularly the Synagogue. It is in the synagogue that you see first hand this "Pattern of Worship" as you learn that the Sabbath service consists of prayers and readings in Hebrew and English (the amount of Hebrew and English varies from synagogue to synagogue), songs, a Torah reading, and a talk. In many temples, after Shabbat evening services there is an Oneg Shabbat (joy of the Sabbath) at which refreshments are served and there is an opportunity to socialize. It is in these times that I found that my learning of the Jewish people and the worship of God would grow by leaps and bounds. Sometimes Israeli dancing or a discussion takes place during the Oneg. Following Shabbat morning services, there is a Kiddush in the synagogue. After the blessings over the wine and the bread, people exchange Shabbat greetings.

One of the things that makes this day so special is that we eat so well. Many people have a large meal following the morning service and another smaller meal (seudah shelishit) before sunset.

Answer for yourself: What is the term reserved for the 3 meals; the one on Friday evening, Shabbath morning and Shabbat afternoons? This is the original "Lord's Supper" which has been wrenched from its historical context setting and renamed to describe Christian communion practices of "eating the god" with "wafers" or "crackers" and "grape juice". We have strayed so far from the truth due to the antisemitism of Rome it is not funny.

THE CLOSING OF THE SABBATH AND THE HAVDALAH SERVICE

Just as there is a ceremony welcoming Shabbat, so there is one to mark its conclusion. It is called Havdalah, which means "separation." The ceremony takes place on Saturday night after sunset. It consists of blessings over wine, spices, and a braided candle. While it resembles the Friday night ceremony in many ways, there are some differences as well. Wine is used at both ceremonies. Two candles and a braided chalah are used on Friday night while, on Saturday night, one braided candle with many wicks is used. The new element in the ceremony is the blessing of sweet-smelling spices. There is an explanation offered for this ceremony. Because Shabbat is such a special day, each Jew receives an extra soul at the beginning of the Sabbath, which departs at the end of Shabbat. To revive one, because we've lost this extra soul, one smells spices at Havdalah, bringing some of the sweetness of the Sabbath with oneself into the week. The climax of the ritual is when the candle is doused in the wine, and one stands in the darkness of the new week. But the darkness is not one of hopelessness; it is a time when we confront the new week with a vision of what we must do to bring about a better world. We sing the song of the prophet Elijah, symbol of the messianic future.

STUDY AS A FORM OF WORSHIP

Rest and worship are two essential elements of Shabbat. There is a third one that is of equal importance-study. Shabbat affords us time in which to direct our energies toward spiritual matters. Study is an appropriate way to observe Shabbat. In fact, in Judaism study is considered a form of worship; in fact it is considered the highest form of worship! Study is done publicly at services by means of the Torah reading and its explanation, and privately by reading and discussing materials from Jewish books, magazines, and newspapers with family and friends.

Upon being exposed to the concepts and ideals of Shabbat for the first time, a student in one of our Introduction to Judaism classes wrote:

"Shabbat, like Judaism, is a cornucopia of delight and joy for those who are willing to make the effort to find them; individual paths are different but they lead eventually, for those who pursue them, to an eminently worthwhile end: a foretaste of the Messianic Age."

The principle of Shabbat is to sanctify time. The whole of Shabbat is greater than the sum of its parts. It is more than lighting candles, drinking wine, or attending a service. We sanctify Shabbat by setting it apart, making it distinctive, and differentiating it from the rest of the days in our week. As Abraham Joshua Heschel has written: "Six days a week we live under the tyranny of things of space; on the Sabbath we try to become attuned to holiness in time." (Abraham J. Heschel, The Sabbath, p. 8).

Now having been as a non-Jew introduced to the facts that non-Jews long before the Jewish nation existed recognized, observed, and sanctified this special times, the Sabbath, with God then let us move past the information into a form that can be adapted for your own homes Sabbath service.

Now let us examine the Bet Emet Home Sabbath Service. Shalom.

THE SABBATH OBSERVANCE FOR THE NON-JEW

We all have experienced moments and special times when the perfection of the world is revealed to us. You might remember a certain walk on the beautiful white sand beach, the breathtaking smell of the surf, a spectacular "fiery" sunset, or the cool mist of a summer thunderstorm that cools the heat of summer. You might remember the first time you meet the one who would be your spouse and the look of their eyes as you first met. So often these moments take us by surprise, like rainbows and we are not prepared for them and they come and go before we often have time to "take them in". Sometimes, however, we are masters of our lives and can engineer these special times like birthdays and anniversaries and vacations or reunions.

We are given the opportunity to create these special times and of them all special times with God should come first and there is no better example than I can think of then "Creating Shabbath". Shabbat is the way a child of God, especially the Jewish people, arrange their lives to stay in touch with what is perfect in the world on a regular basis.

Shabbat, the Hebrew word for Sabbath, has been described a thousand ways and it is the only day of the week with a Hebrew name at all; the others are merely numbered in relation to Shabbat: the first day, the second day, the third day. In Yiddish, it is pronounced Shabbes.

The apparently simple idea that one day out of seven should be devoted to rest and reflection has always been a radical concept. Its earliest practice challenged the ancient world, where labor was the lot of beasts and slaves, and leisure was the privilege of the rich and powerful. Today, when the hum of the machines and computers never stop, when everyone has too much to do and not enough time in which to finish, Shabbat continues to pose fundamental questions about values and the value of life. For all of mankind today who look toward the 21st century, the challenge of Shabbat is literally radical, recalling our imaginative roots-the biblical story of creation. Please try to understand the depth of what was just said as this is not just a "Jewish thing" but a human-kind issue that affects us all.

Gen. 2:1-3 1 ¶ And the heaven and the earth were finished, and all the host of them. 2 And on the seventh day God finished His work which He had made; and He rested on the seventh day from all His work which He had made. 3 And God blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it; because that in it He rested from all His work which God in creating had made.

To the Talmudic rabbis who interpreted these words, the story does not mean that on the seventh day God rolled over, pulled up the covers, and went back to sleep. In their view, only after the seventh day- Shabbat-came into being, was the world completed, and perfect.

SHABBAT...WHAT SHOULD IT MEAN TO THE NON-JEW?

"The meaning of the Sabbath," wrote Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, "is to celebrate time rather than space. Six days a week we live under the tyranny of things of space; on the Sabbath we try to become attuned to holiness in time. It is a day on which we are called upon to share in what is eternal in time, to turn from the results of creation to the mystery of creation; from the world of creation to the creation of the world" (Abraham Heschel, The Sabbath (New York: Farrar Stratus and Girous, 1951), p. 10).

Millions of words have been written about the meaning of Shabbat in language ranging from legal to ecstatic. It has been associated with virtually all the great themes of Judaism: freedom, covenant, peace, and redemption. Sections of the Shabbat liturgy recall the time when the Jews were slaves in Egypt (Deut. 5:12). And although Shabbat celebrates freedom, it is also a reminder of the contrast between slavery and freedom.

Answer for yourself: Are there more things in life to which we fall into bondage to other than Pharoahs? Yes there certainly in as described above. Anything that robs us of the "quality" of our lives, that detracts from our personal and spiritual developement, or that takes separates us from our families has to be seen as a threat to our very existence and such areas of our lives that are "out of balanced" prevents us from not only creating but enjoying God's Sabbaths in our lives. The Jewish notion of freedom entails both political and personal responsibilities; the mandate to work for the liberation of all oppressed people, and the task of remaining free from enslavement to false idols, such as wealth, greed, power, and fame.

Answer for yourself: Is Shabath a Covenant in itself? Yes.

Shabbat is called a covenant between God and His children; both Jews and non-Jews as well. We have shown on this website that before the Jewish nation accepted themselves the Sabbath we find that prior to Moses that non-Jewish nations of the world recognized and observed the Sabbath. We find multiple examples of non-Jews observing the Sabbath both in the Heberw Scriptures and Old Testament as well as long after the time of Jesus in the New Testament as well. We find historical evidence that non-Jewsish believers observed the Sabbath for many centuries as well. Of course this is long before Emperor Constantine who will outlaw and change the Sabbath to "Sunday"; the day of the Sun and Sun Worship.

The Sabbath is all about relationship; our relationship with our Creator God. Relationships among people cannot be verified by the senses or by reason; therefore we give each other tokens of these relationships like wedding rings or commemorative cards or gifts at special times or at "appointed times" that mark our relationship between each other. We do the same with God and His "appointed times". Shabbat is the token between God and the people of Israel (both Jews and non-Jews make up the Israel of God).

Ezekiel 20:12 12 Moreover also I gave them My sabbaths, to be a sign between Me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them. 13 But the house of Israel rebelled against Me in the wilderness; they walked not in My statutes, and they rejected Mine ordinances, which if a man do, he shall live by them, and My sabbaths they greatly profaned; then I said I would pour out My fury upon them in the wilderness, to consume them.

The above verse should give us much to think about and reflect in our lives of just how much "less" of God we have in our lives today than we could because we like they observe not, keep not, and "profane God's Sababths".

CREATING SABBATH AND ESTABLISHING OUR COVENEANT WITH GOD

Many Jews will tell you that the Sabbath is just for the Jews. Well I won't go into that here but let me say in passing that many "fences" were created down through history and various interpretations of texts were "imposed" upon non-Jews to keep them apart from Jews because in so doing Israel sanctified herself from the sins and negative influence of the non-Jew upon the righteous Jew.

1 Cor 5:6 6 .. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? (KJV)

In such a spirit of sanctification many interpretations of religious texts were imposed upon the non-Jew in order to keep them at arms length from the Jews to lessen their negative and corrupting influence upon the nation. For let us not forget what the New Testament tell us about the non-Jew:

Eph 2:11-12 11 Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: (KJV)

That being the case I can understand why the Jews did not want to associate with such people but in spite of all of this the Jewish nation is yet God's Holy Nation and Royal Priesthood and their calling is to do just that; be an intermediate between God and mankind. I said all of that to say this: the Covenant of the Sabbath, as shown in the above references articles, is offered to the non-Jew again in Isa. 56:

Isa. 56:1-6 1 ¶ Thus saith the LORD: Keep ye justice, and do righteousness; for My salvation is near to come, and My favour to be revealed. 2 Happy is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that holdeth fast by it: that keepeth the sabbath from profaning it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil. 3 ¶ Neither let the alien, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying: 'The LORD will surely separate me from His people'; neither let the eunuch say (a non-Jew): 'Behold, I am a dry tree.' 4 For thus saith the LORD concerning the eunuchs that keep My sabbaths, and choose the things that please Me, and hold fast by My covenant: 5 Even unto them will I give in My house and within My walls a monument and a memorial better than sons and daughters; I will give them an everlasting memorial, that shall not be cut off. 6 Also the aliens (non-Jews), that join themselves to the LORD, to minister unto Him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be His servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from profaning it, and holdeth fast by My covenant:

So we see that God invites the non-jew to "choose" to take upon himself God's Sabbaths and enter into this Coveaneant with Him.

The essence and responsibility of this covenant of Sabbath is to create wholeness-in Hebrew, shalom. Shabbat is about making peace with everyone: business associates, strangers, and especially within families. The highest priority is given to reconciliation and loving kindness. Intimacy and sexuality are among the blessings of Shabbat.

Finally, Shabbat embodies the Jewish vision of redemption. As God created and rested on the seventh day when His creation is "perfect" then we likewish should observe the 7th day (the Sabbath) as prophetic of the perfection that awaits us in the World to Come. Therefore the Sabbath is a picture of this Eternal Day of perfection that awaits us and we should behave on this day accordingly. Observing Shabbat fully means behaving as if the world were redeemed, complete, safe, and perfect right now. Shabbat is the opportunity to focus on what is right with the world, and thus to be refreshed to do the work of redemption: repairing the world (tikkun olam). It is a day where we recognize more than ever that we are the extension of God's perfection as souls trapped in "matter" and within our influence and through our "choices" we have the opportunity to bring that which is around us that exists in "chaos" into "harmony" and produce "shalom" where we go! We can bring Sabbath with us and produce it by our choices where we go!

Indeed, the Talmud says that if everyone on earth were to observe two consecutive Sabbaths, the whole world would be redeemed (Talmud: Shabbat 118b).

A SHORT HISTORY

The word Shabbat appears almost two hundred times in the Bible (the Hebrew Bible, which consists of the Torah (or Pentateuch), the Prophets, and the Writings). The earliest mention of Sabbath rest is found in Exodus, when the Israelites who have escaped from Egyptian slavery are told to gather a double portion of manna on the sixth day so they do not have to work on the seventh (Exodus 16). By the time of the first Temple, (the 10th century B.C.E.), Shabbat was associated with joy as well as rest. The prophet Isaiah said, "And you should call the Sabbath a delight" (Isa. 58:13).

Isa. 58:13 13 ¶ If thou turn away thy foot because of the sabbath, from pursuing thy business on My holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, and the holy of the LORD honourable; and shalt honour it, not doing thy wonted ways, nor pursuing thy business, nor speaking thereof;

During the second Temple period (the first century CE.), the nature of Shabbat was the subject of an intense and passionate debate whose outcome has shaped subsequent Jewish practice. Among the sect known as the Sadducees, Shabbat was given an extremely ascetic interpretation: virtually all movement and all indoor illumination were forbidden. However, the Pharisees (forerunners of the rabbis) permitted far more latitude, declaring Shabbat laws moot in cases of helping the sick or saving a life. The Pharisees also made the lighting of candles on Friday night a precept that developed into the most evocative of all Jewish rituals (Hayyim Schauss, The Jewish Festivals (New York: Schocken Books, 1962), pp. 11-12). After the destruction of the second Temple by the Romans in 70 C.E., Shabbat observance came under the purview of rabbis, who have been interpreting and debating its meaning and practice ever since.

Although Shabbat has been a constant feature of Jewish life throughout history, Sabbath observance changed over time, and varies among Jews living in different lands. Regardless of the particulars, however, Shabbat has always been experienced as different from all the other days.

Ex. 20:8 Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

Key to the above verse is the idea of "remembering". Now at times I hear negative comments by Christians regarding the Rabbinic injunction to "light Sabbath candles" as being a man-made law. Forgetting that the Scriptures give the spiritual overseers of Israel (the Rabbis today) the right and authority to "bind and loose" we often speak out of turn regarding such things. Candle lighting is but a vehicle whereby one "marks this time" apart from other times and sanctifies this time before and with God thereby demonstrating before God that you "remembers" this special holy "appointed time" with God. The lighting of candles is something not done on other nights and doing so on Friday evenings sanctifies this "special appointed time with God" apart from all other nights of the week and in so doing you have chosen to make this special time "holy" before God and you demonstrate that you "remember" it as commanded by Moses in the Ten Commandments.

Shabbat is the day for wearing new clothes, for inviting guests to share the best meal of the week, for singing at the table, and for giving and receiving blessings. Jewish life and Jewish time are oriented around Shabbat, which takes precedence over almost everything else and there are many lessons we non-Jews need to learn from our Jewish brothers and sisters. Jewish weddings are not permitted on the Sabbath and neither are funerals; Shabbat is meant to be savored on its own, undiluted by other celebrations and unclouded, as much as possible, even by death since its theme is "wholeness" and "the perfect life to come" in Eternity.

Jews have often suffered for their loyalty to Shabbat. Antiochus Epiphanes, the villain of the Hannukah story, outlawed Shabbat and many Jews died defying his order. Marranos (Jews who publicly converted to Christianity during the Spanish Inquisition but practiced Judaism in secret) lit Shabbat candles in their cellars (Samuel Dresner, The Sabbath (New York: The Burning Bush Press, 1970), p. 66). And there are heart-wrenching stories of Sabbaths remembered and observed in the darkness of Hitler's death camps.

WE MUST CHOOSE SHABBAT

The first appearance of Shabbat in the Torah is as a verb, shavat. "And God ceased/rested/stopped."

Shabbat is recreated weekly; Jews make Shabbat and we as non-Jews have the same opportunity.

The first verb for most Jews today, however, is not "make" but "choose."

Isa 56:4 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant; (KJV)

And choosing Shabbat is not one decision, but many. Choosing Shabbat means making a commitment to a weekly period of rest and peace. It means making distinctions between activities that are Shabbat-like from those that are work-week-like. It means avoiding things that might violate a sense of ease and peace, and planning ways to enhance that feeling.

These choices vary from one household to the next. Some unplug the telephone or turn on their answering machines during Shabbat, but some people find telephone conversations with family members and friends are relaxing and appropriate. Though traditionally money is not handled on Shabbat, some people make a distinction between shopping at the mall and taking the kids out for ice cream. Because Shabbat is often defined in terms of prohibitions against certain kinds of activities, many American Jews have come to think of Sabbath observance as a series of restrictions, a weekly sentence of self-denial. But Shabbat is not a retreat from the world or an exercise in asceticism. Please hear me well: "Making Shabbat is not a matter of refraining, but of doing". The Talmud says "the affairs of heaven" are permitted on the Sabbath; specifically teaching children and arranging weddings. Resting, eating, and praying are not only permitted, but mandated. There are other verbs for Shabbat, too; sleeping, reading, thinking, studying, talking, listening, meditating, visiting the sick, laughing, singing, experiencing joy, welcoming guests, making love, etc. Sadly the Sabbath has been given a "bad rap" by those who know not its beauty and how God desires we be "renewed body, soul, and spirit" on this day!!!

But it is not entirely easy to choose even so pleasant and life-giving a discipline as Shabbat. All choices have consequences. If Friday night is going to be time at home, that means turning down invitations for dinner and a movie with friends or family. And for chronically over-scheduled people, sitting still for an hour, much less an afternoon, can be a real challenge. However, these are precisely the reasons that many people view Shabbat prohibitions less as sacrifices than as opportunities to reorient an overly hectic life around the need for rest, relaxation, and time with family and close friends. Everyone needs and should want this and in God's foreknowledge He made provision for it if we only "choose" it!

This is not a simple change. The decision to start making Shabbat requires thought, discussion, planning-and it may entail discomfort and disagreement. Although it is common for one member of a family to be both instigator and guiding force behind a commitment to making Shabbat, it is important to include as many family members as possible in the idea. This is rarely a problem with young children, who tend to enjoy the specialness of Shabbat for its own sake, and quickly come to look forward to Friday night's magic. For older children, however, beginning Shabbat observance may seem restrictive or just plain weird. Parents need to be quite secure in their desire and enthusiasm for Shabbat, and they can ease the transition to it by emphasizing the playful and joyful aspects of the day and encouraging children's input as well as their participation.

It is essential for family members to talk not only about how to make Shabbat, but also why. Reasons can range from the practical to the mystical: Shabbat is something constructive and pleasant the family can do together, it is an opportunity to learn, it is something that Jews and many non-Jews have done for thousands of years and connects us to our true Biblical heritage, it creates an opportunity to visit with friends and family we otherwise don't see, it is something beautiful and positive we want our children to remember, and it is a way of finding and building community with other Jews.

Regardless of the whys or the ways, however, a commitment to consistency and regularity is essential for Shabbat to work. And it is crucial to remember that Shabbat is not something you do for or to your family. It is something you make together.

MAKING SHABBATH HAPPEN FOR YOU

While it would be difficult to overemphasize Shabbat's intellectual and theological significance, the Jewish Sabbath is not an abstraction or disembodied idea that can be attained through revelation or prayer. Shabbat* must be understood in its uniquely Jewish form-as a mitzvah and commandment!

A mitzvah is a command from God, chosen and enacted by people. The mitzvah of Shabbat is being human in the most humane context that people can imagine and create.

Just as it would be self-defeating for a novice in the kitchen to attempt an elaborate, multicourse dinner, it is not a good idea to take on every aspect of Shabbat observance all at once. I recommend that you "grow" into Shabbat as this is how I did it and it worked great for us.

You have to begin somewhere so I recommend that you start out slow and then progress as you get more comfortable with "choosing and making Shabbat". I recommend and most people begin with Friday night table rituals: lighting candles, eating challah, singing songs. It may take weeks before even simple acts feel natural, but after a few months of repetition, comfort and a sense of expertise will come.

And just as cooks learn through apprenticeship, the best way to learn how to make Shabbat is with and from others. Sharing Friday night meals, attending Shabbat dinners with friends only adds to your experience and learning by witnessing and partaking Shabbat with others. Let us not forget that in the simple lighting of candles you are sanctifying this appointed time with God and this fulfills the Commandment of Exodus 20:8 so you cannot do it wrong! In time you might wish to go so far as to attend services at different synagogues to further your experience of "choosing Shabbat". Other settle for just getting together with friends on Saturday morning or afternoon for Bible studies or just to visit and this provides them with ideas, models, and support for developing a personal Shabbat observance. If you are fortunate and open to it you will find that at times some synagogues run Shabbat retreats which are usually a weekend at a camp, inn, or estate, where people study, pray, relax, and practice the fine art of making Shabbat. The opportunities are endless.

In the next article we will pick up with the second in this series entitled: "Preparing for Shabbat".

THE NON-JEWS PREPARATION FOR THE SABBATH

Shabbat is for many a beautiful vacation from the demands of the week. Like any vacation, it creates a shift in orientation to the whole week. For some people, preparing for Shabbat starts with avoiding late-afternoon appointments on Friday and trying to be home early.

Shabbat creates a deadline for finishing up things, for example, getting the house clean, making sure that essential errands have been run, and that challah, wine, and flowers have been purchased. A traditional analogy compares making Shabbat with inviting a Queen to your home for dinner. In other words, if Queen Elizabeth of England were coming over for the day, you would probably run the vacuum, take out the good china, and fuss over the dinner menu. Well in many ways one greater than Queen Elizabeth is coming to dinner; namely, the Sabbath Queen herself. Shabbat is compared esoterically to a bride given to us by God, whom we long for her arrival - (source: Talmud Shabbat 119a).

SHABBAT FOOD

The rituals of Shabbat reinforce family and communal bonds. Shabbat meals are family affairs, prescribing times for families to be together without the distraction of competing schedules or technologies.

Although Jewish law calls for three "feasts" (these 3 meals were originally called "the Lord's Supper) on Shabbat to ensure a sense of celebration, it also forbids for the Jewish people the lighting of fires, which traditionally means no cooking. Thus the biggest job of preparing for Shabbat tends to be food preparation. Although many Jews do cook on Shabbat, preparing even part of Saturday's meals in advance can create more time for relaxing, resting, and playing.

Historically, Friday night dinner has always been the gustatory highlight of the week for Jews, no matter what their financial circumstances. Making this Friday night meal special does not necessarily mean making it elaborate or conforming to the chicken soup and brisket menus of Eastern Europe. Remember it can be simple things done only on this night and not on other nights that fulfills the Commandment to "remember" and "observe" the Sabbath that we find in the Hebrew Scriptures. Some people find that "lighting the candles" or "making the same special meal every Friday night" allows them to sanctify this time like no other night and besides it has advantages; not only is it easier for the cook, it also reinforces the soothing, repetitive ritual nature of the meal and establishes a family tradition. Understand that "this appointed time with God can be made special" by simple things like using a certain tablecloth and flowers on the dining room table which are not used on other nights. Special silverware that is not used on other nights. The recital of the Sabbath blessings again "sanctifies this time" to the exclusion of all other times and makes it "holy" thus fulfilling the Commandment to "remember" and "observe" this special day with God. Ritual objects such as an embroidered cover for the challah, special candlesticks used only for Sabbath, and special wine goblets will immediately make a meal an event and also "sanctifies" this time apart from all others. In such ways you have obeyed God and sanctified the Sabbath as commanded. You can make up your own traditions and in so doing fulfill this mitzvoh.

SLOWING DOWN ON THE SHABBAT

Shabbat releases us from the usual patterns of doing and being and celebrates the sensual, creative parts of us that may be sacrificed during the work week. Celebrating the sensual can be accomplished many ways. There are many ways to do this that are limitless; many simply just lower the lights, some take time to smell as well as taste food, other take time to simply stop and hug and kiss the people they love. In the rush to prepare home and table for Shabbat, it is easy to forget the importance of readying yourself. Nothing accomplishes the major shifting of gears from work to rest better than a hot shower or bath. If there is time, meditating, listening to music, and reading something that helps you get "in the mood" are also good ways to unwind. Even a few minutes to wash hands and face, shave, comb your hair, put on perfume, or change clothes can help. Some people get into the spirit of Shabbat by listening to special cds and tapes of Shabbat music or other Jewish tapes and records. In fact it does not have to be Jewish music for as you are seeing the Sabbath is given to all mankind. My rule of thumb is do whatever brings you peace and promotes shalom with and within you!

Traditionally, one's best and/or new clothes are worn on Shabbat. However, if wearing a good dress or suit and tie are the trappings of work, a change into comfortable casual clothes might better facilitate a shift into Shabbat-mode. Some people put on the traditional skullcap (kippah in Hebrew, yarmulke in Yiddish) before beginning Friday night rituals. The choices are endless and there is not "right" or "wrong" thing to do here. Again....follow the shalom/peace.

WHAT ABOUT THE CHILDREN?

Shabbat can easily become a focal point of anticipation and fun for children. Again the choices are endless. The celebration can begin with a baking session or a trip to the bakery for challah and other goodies. Setting the Shabbat table with children can be both a game and a reward, assigning special jobs to each child: candlesticks and candles for you, the kiddush cups for you because you're so grown up and responsible, and so on. Kids can also create Shabbat centerpieces of Legos, paper flowers or dandelions from the yard. Shabbat can inspire all sorts of arts and crafts projects. Because most small children love wearing hats, kippot (the plural of kippah) can be part of the fun. Some children collect them, and a "custom" kippah can be created with some felt, a little glue, and a plain rayon yarmulke. To make a Sabbath plate or set of dishes, apply Jewish symbols and lots of imagination to one of the melamine kits available in many toy stores.

Finally, when everything and everyone is ready, remove your watches. Empty your pockets. Unplug the phone for a while. You are going to a party. And remember, Shabbat is not a solemn occasion. Along with the candles, wine, and challah, smiles and laughter belong at the table.

EXPERIENCING SHABBAT ON FRIDAY NIGHTS

In prior articles we have looked at the "Shabbat Observance For The Non-Jew" as well as the "Non-Jew's Preparation For The Sabbath".

We now move on in our study to delve into the various elements contained in the Sabbath observance itself.

The four core ritual elements of a home Shabbat evening (erev Shabbat) celebration are:

- Saying the blessing over two Shabbat candles,
- Saying the blessing over the wine
- Saying the blessing over the bread,
- Eating of the Shabat meal.

There is nothing too hard or too difficult that prevents anyone from remembering and observing the Shabbat if they truly desire to. It is our hope at Bet Emet Ministries that the following makes this easy for everyone. As we study our way through the Shabbat the above 4 steps to observing Shabbat will become perfectly clear and you will be a "pro" before too long.

Friday night rituals vary enormously from one Jewish household to the next. The same can be said for the non-Jew who observes Shabbat in his home as well. In some there are many songs; in others, there is no singing. Some families recite all the blessings in English; others do them in Hebrew. Some people discuss the weekly Torah portion at dinner; other people use the time to reflect on the week past. Some eat earlier than usual in order to attend services; others eat later than usual and linger at the table as the candles burn down and spend the Shabbat at home. Many spend the Shabbat reading, studying and discussing Torah and commentary, Mishnah and Talmud, halakha and responsa and Midrash. This is broadened by the non-Jew as he explores his Jewish Roots of the Christian faith by examining the New Testament through "Jewish Eyes". Many renew themselves by playing board games such as checkers, chess, backgammon, or read their favorite poetry or literature. But above all the Shabbat is a day of prayer and seeking the face of God but not to the exclusion of the renewal of the whole of the person: body, soul, and spirit. This is where the Siddur comes in very handy for the Shabbat. An exciting part of Shabbat is that according to Kabbalah (esoteric Jewish mysticism), lovemaking between husband and wife is encouraged and is a perfect picture of the harmony of Shabbat and the World to come when love and peace is the rule. There is no "right" or "wrong way" to remember and observe the Shabbat as long as you sanctify the time and understand the message of the Shabbat and let it be applied to your life. As you read through this article this will become abundantly clear.

The various elements of Friday night, listed above, are but a selection or a menu from which a personal Shabbat home ritual can be created. As with any menu, all sorts of combinations are possible. Once you find a comfortable way to proceed, it can be very helpful to make a one-page guide to the order and blessings in English, transliterated, and or in Hebrew. This "Shabbat seder" can then be decorated, laminated, and given to guests. We have one available to readers at Bet Emet if you so wish; all you need do is but ask.

Even with fairly detailed explanations, however, Shabbat is not entirely comprehensible solely from the page. The best way to learn it is to live it by watching and participating with others who are experienced at making Shabbat.

ESTABLISHING A FRIDAY NIGHT RITUAL

The following is but a summary suggestion for the Friday night ritual. You can either adopt and modify for your own needs to make it yours by adopting it as it stands. The following parts of this "Suggested Friday Night Shabbat Ritual" will be explained as we work our way through them.

- Giving tzedakah
- Singing
- Saying the blessing and lighting candles
- Blessings for children
- Blessings for husband and wife
- Blessings for wine (kiddush)
- Blessing over hand washing
- Blessing for challah
- Eating the meal
- Focused conversation
- Blessings after the meal (birkat hamazon)
- More singing
- Going to synagogue
- Making love

GIVING TZEDAKAH

"Tzedakah" is the Hebrew word for the acts that we call "charity" in English: giving aid, assistance and money to the poor and needy or to other worthy causes. However, the nature of tzedakah is very different from the idea of charity. The word "charity" suggests benevolence and generosity, a magnanimous act by the wealthy and powerful for the benefit of the poor and needy. The word "tzedakah" is derived from the Hebrew root meaning righteousness, justice or fairness. In Judaism, giving to the poor is not viewed as a generous, magnanimous act; it is simply an act of justice and righteousness, the performance of a duty, giving the poor their due.

Giving to the poor is an obligation in Judaism, a duty that cannot be forsaken even by those who are themselves in need. Some sages have said that tzedakah is the highest of all commandments, equal to all of them combined, and that a person who does not perform tzedakah is equivalent to an idol worshipper. Tzedakah is one of the three acts that gain us forgiveness from our sins. The High Holiday liturgy states that G-d has inscribed a judgment against all who have sinned, but teshuvah (repentance), tefilah (prayer) and tzedakah can reverse the decree.

According to Jewish law, Jewish people are required to give one-tenth of their income to the poor. This is generally interpreted as one-tenth of their net income after payment of taxes. Those who are dependent on public assistance or living on the edge of subsistence may give less; no person should give so much that he would become a public burden.

The obligation to perform tzedakah can be fulfilled by giving money to the poor, to health care institutions, to synagogues or to educational institutions. It can also be fulfilled by supporting your children beyond the age when you are legally required to, or supporting your parents in their old age. The obligation includes giving to both Jews and gentiles; contrary to popular belief, Jews do not just "take care of their own." It is permissible to investigate the legitimacy of a charity before donating to it. We have an obligation to avoid becoming in need of tzedakah. A person should take any work that is available, even if he thinks it is beneath his dignity, to avoid becoming a public charge.

However, if a person is truly in need and has no way to obtain money on his own he should not feel embarrassed to accept tzedakah. No person should feel too proud to take money from others. In fact, it is considered a transgression to refuse tzedakah. One source says that to make yourself suffer by refusing to accept tzedakah is equivalent to shedding your own blood.

Giving money to the poor is associated with nearly all Jewish celebrations and festive occasions including the Shabbat. In moments of great joy, tzedakah is a way of both sharing happiness and of recalling that the world requires our attention. Therefore it is traditional to put aside money for tzedakah on Shabbat before candles are lit. Many families place a special tzedakah box next to the Shabbat candle holders to remind them to perform this mitzvah. Many people cherish childhood associations of Shabbat with little tin cans called pushkes which represented different charitable organizations. Making a collection box by decorating a can or jar, or making a container out of clay or paper is a great project and a wonderful way of introducing children to the concept of tzedakah. In many ways, charitable donation has taken the place of animal sacrifice in Jewish life: giving to charity is an almost instinctive Jewish response to express thanks to G-d, to ask forgiveness from G-d, or to request a favor from G-d. According to Jewish tradition, the spiritual benefit of giving to the poor is so great that a beggar actually does the giver a favor by giving a person the opportunity to perform tzedakah. So in observing Shabbat we remember the world to come where there is no suffering and no needs and we bring an extension of that on Shabbat by giving that others might experience "Heaven on Earth".

SINGING ON SHABBAT

Beginning a meal with a song breaks the week's routine and inaugurates Shabbat as a special kind of time. Although almost any song will accomplish this, many Hebrew songs (z'mirot) are associated with the Shabbat table. One of the simplest and best-known is "Shabbat Shalom," whose lyrics consist only of those two words.

But words are not really necessary. According to one tradition, a wordless melody or niggun is itself a prayer, and one of the purest forms of prayer at that. Niggunim (the plural) are usually fairly simple, repetitive, and easily taught.

Let me suggest this website for your Shabbat songs as well as many other beautiful selections:

SAYING THE BLESSING AND LIGHTING CANDLES

In all cultures throughout the world, fire is considered one of the basic elements; it is a universal symbol of power, mastery, and divinity. Friday night candle lighting dates back to the first century C.E., and the blessing is as old as the eighth or ninth century.² For Jews, the lighting of candles is the act that formally ends the week and begins Shabbat.

Candle lighting is the most evocative of all Jewish rituals. The celebration of the Sabbath begins when one lights the candles, or when one recites the evening service, or at sundown --- whichever occurs first. It is the obligation of the wife to fulfill this religious duty. According to tradition, the mitzvah of lighting candles is assigned to women, though it is incumbent on men in their absence. Whereas some women prefer to reserve this custom to themselves, there is a wide range of practice on this count. In many homes, all women and girls light a pair of candles, though in some families, the honor rotates and includes everyone regardless of gender. Unless a woman had been living alone, she starts to observe it on the first Sabbath after her marriage. Where two or more married women are in the same household, either on a temporary or permanent basis, it is customary for each to light Sabbath candles separately. When the woman of a house is absent or is incapable of performing the ritual, or where a man lives alone, he lights the Sabbath candles himself. Although the woman is given priority in fulfilling this religious duty, lighting Sabbath candles is a requirement related to the general observance of the Sabbath and is a religious duty incumbent upon both men and women. According to Jewish law, candles are lit not at dark but at sunset; technically, no later than 18 -20 minutes before sunset. Among liberal Jews, the common practice is to light candles when the whole household is gathered at the table for dinner. In the absence of a Jewish calendar listing candlelighting time for a particular geographic area, the time of sundown can be found in the daily local newspaper and the candlelighting time determined accordingly. Once the time of sundown passes, the candles may no longer be lit. It is permissible for the candles to be lit somewhat earlier. This is often done in the summer months when the day is particularly long and the Sabbath might be ushered in an hour or so earlier. It is permissible for the candles to be lit somewhat earlier. This is often done in the summer months when the day is particularly long and the Sabbath might be ushered in an hour or so earlier.

The minimum number of candles lighted is two. Therefore at least two candles are lit, symbolizing the great dualities of life: female and male, light and darkness, etc. The rabbis declared that the two candles stand for the two forms of the commandment to "remember" and "observe" Shabbat. Although two is the minimum, there is no maximum.

The two candles symbolically represent the two forms of the fourth commandment:

- Zachor--Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy (Exodus 20:8), and
- Shamor--Observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy (Deut. 5:12).

There are some family or local traditions where three or more candles are lighted or that call for an additional Sabbath candle for every child born. One is free to light more than the minimum if one chooses to do so. White candles intended specifically for the Sabbath eve are generally available. If they are not available, any festive dinner candles of whatever shape, design, or color may be used instead. The only condition is that they be large enough to burn during the Sabbath meal and well into nightfall. Although any candelabra are permissible, it is preferable to have a pair of candlesticks or candelabra reserved specifically for the Sabbath. Although proper ritual procedure requires that the recitation of a blessing always precedes the performance of the mitzvah, in this instance the candles are lighted first and the benediction is recited afterward. The reason is obvious. Recital of the blessing formally ushers in the Sabbath after which it is forbidden to light a flame. As stated the candles are lit before the blessing is recited, either silently or aloud. The procedure is to close one's eyes or cover them with the hands while the benediction is recited. When eyes are opened after the blessing, the sight of the Sabbath lights brings forth the delight that is actually regarded as the culmination of the mitzvah. The blessing recited for the Sabbath candles is:

Blessed are Thou, Lord our God, King of the universe who has sanctified us with His commandments and commanded us to kindle the Sabbath lights.

The Sabbath candles should be lighted on the table where the Sabbath meal is eaten. If this is impractical, it should at least be done in the same room.

There is a custom of circling the candles with hands and arms after lighting them, and then covering the eyes while the blessing is repeated. This practice can feel awkward or artificial to people who have never tried it or seen it done. If these gestures make you feel too self-conscious to get into a Shabbat-like mood, they defeat the purpose. Some people simply take a moment to take and release a very deep breath before lighting candles and reciting the blessing.

Among some Sephardic Jews, candles are lit for family members who have died. If guests are present at candlelighting, they can be invited to light candles for their families as well. A great blaze of candles is very festive.

Candlelighting is a wonderful moment for children. In many families, blowing out the Shabbat match is a special treat. A gift of small candlesticks on a birthday or Hannukah confers a new, more grown-up Jewish status on a child; the first time he or she uses them can be a family event. (Long fireplace matches are a good idea, and fun too.)

The only regulation regarding candlesticks or other ritual objects for Shabbat is the rabbinic principal of hiddur mitzvah, which states that when a physical object is needed to fulfill a commandment, it should be beautiful. Candlesticks handed down from one generation to the next are especially precious, but any object reserved only for Shabbat use quickly becomes a family treasure. Judaica shops tend to offer a large selection of candlesticks, but for something that already has the patina of age and experience, a second-hand store or antique shop may yield an heirloom.

After the candles are lit, it is proper to greet the others in the household with the words "Shabbat Shalom" ("Sabbath peace") or "Gut Shabbes" (Yiddish for "a good Sabbath"). In some families, everyone exchanges kisses.

BLESSINGS FOR CHILDREN

The Bible records several parental blessings, which are echoed in the custom of blessing children on Friday. There are three traditional blessings: First, the blessing for sons refers to Joseph's sons, Ephraim and Menashe, whose mother, Osenath, was an Egyptian-born noblewoman. The Midrash says that these two were singled out for praise because they held fast to their Jewish identity. Second, the blessing for daughters names the matriarchs: Sarah, whose response to adversity was laughter; Rebecca, the model of hospitality, and Rachel and Leah, who personify sisterhood in the most difficult circumstances.

Some parents add or substitute a more personal message for each child-praise for something that happened during the week, or just a whispered, "I love you."

For boys:

May God make you as Ephraim and Menasheh.

For girls:

Make God make you as Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel and Leah.

Lastly, there is what is known as the priestly blessing.

May the Lord bless you and keep you; May the Lord cause His spirit to shine upon you and be gracious unto you. May the Lord turn His spirit unto you and grant you peace. Numbers 6:24-26

BLESSINGS FOR HUSBAND AND WIFE

Eshet chayil, "a woman of valor," is the phrase that begins a set of the verses from the book of Proverbs, traditionally recited by husbands to wives on Friday night. Eshet chayil is a long list of praises for a good woman's virtues, including generosity, industry, business acumen, beauty, wisdom, cheerfulness, and loving kindness.

- A woman of valor who can find?
- She is more precious than rubies.
- The heart of her husband trusts in her,

- And he has no lack of gain.
- She does him good and not evil,
- All the days of her life,
- She extends her hand to the poor,
- She reaches out her hands to the needy.
- She is robed in strength and dignity;
- She confidently faces the future.
- She opens her mouth with wisdom,
- Lovingkindness is on her tongue.
- Her children rise up and call her blessed,
- Her husband sings her praises:
- "Many daughters have done worthily,
- But you excel them all."
- Charm is deceitful, and beauty is vain,
- But a woman who reveres the Lord,
- She shall be praised.
- Give her of the fruit of her hands,
- And let her works praise her in the gates (selections from Proverbs 31)

In some households, the tradition of reciting or singing these verses is abbreviated; a husband will simply look into his wife's eyes and say, "eshet chayil," a kind of short-hand acknowledgement of appreciation and love. Often, this traditional gesture is made reciprocal, as each spouse simply takes a moment to kiss and say "I love you." Often the wife will say over her husband:

- Praise the Lord, Blessed is the man who fears the Lord,
- Who is vigilant in his commandments.
- His descendants shall be mighty upon the earth;
- He shall be blessed in the generation of the upright.
- Wealth and riches shall be in his house;
- And his righteousness endures forever.
- To the upright there shines a light in the darkness;
- He is gracious and full of compassion upon the righteous.
- Blessed is the man who shows mercy and lends;
- He shall proclaim his words with judgment.
- Surely he shall not be moved forever;
- The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.
- He shall not be afraid of evil tidings;
- His heart is fixed, trusting in the Lord.
- His heart is strengthened; he shall not be afraid,
- Until he sees his desire upon his enemies.
- He has given generously, he has given to the poor;
- His righteousness endures forever and ever;
- His horn shall be exalted with honor.

Any such act makes it very difficult to allow left-over quarrels to compromise the peace and harmony of Shabbat.

BLESSINGS FOR WINE (KIDDUSH)

The word kiddush comes from the Hebrew kadosh, which means "holy." The term refers to all blessings made over wine, and there is a special kiddush on Friday night. The one-line core of the blessing is always the same, however:

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Creator of the fruit of the vine.

On Friday night, this blessing is sandwiched between two longer passages. The first, from the Torah, recounts the creation of the world.

Gen. 1:31-2:3

31 ¶ And God saw every thing that He had made, and, behold, it was very good. And there was evening and there was morning, the sixth day. 1 ¶ And the heaven and the earth were finished, and all the host of them. 2 And on the seventh day God finished His work which He had made; and He rested on the seventh day from all His work which He had made. 3 And God blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it; because that in it He rested from all His work which God in creating had made.

The second is a blessing that recalls three of the great Shabbat themes: the creation, the exodus from Egypt, and the sanctity of the Sabbath.

- Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe,
- Who has taught us the way of holiness through the commandments.
- Lovingly You have favored us with the gift of Your holy Shabbat as our inheritance, a reminder of creation, first among the sacred days which recall the Exodus from Egypt.
- You have chosen us of all peoples for Your service, and You have given us a sacred purpose in life. In loving favor, You have given us Your holy Shabbat as a heritage.
- Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, Who hallows the Shabbat.

There are many customs for saying kiddush. Some families simply do the "boray p'ree hagafen" part of the prayer in unison. Others sing the entire kiddush aloud in Hebrew. In some households, one person reads the longer passages in English and only the core blessing is recited in Hebrew.

In some families, everyone stands for kiddush; elsewhere, everyone sits. Some make the blessing over a single cup, which is then passed or poured into other cups. Elsewhere, everyone drinks from his or her own glass.

It is also traditional to hold the cup in a way that demonstrates that this wine is not simply for drinking or even toasting. According to the Zohar, a medieval book of mystical Bible interpretation, the glass is held in the palm of the right hand with the fingers facing upward and curled around the base to represent a five-petaled rose, an ancient symbol of perfection and of longing for God. *Any glass can be used for kiddush, but it is considered preferable to use a special glass or goblet to fulfill the precept of hiddur mitzvah, or beautifying the commandment.*

Most people who grew up with a Friday night Shabbat home ritual, associate kiddush with the thick, sweet red wines of Mogen David and Manischewitz. People who choose kosher wine today, however, have a wide selection of drier vintages. Although Jewish law calls for kosher wine, many Jews consider all wines acceptable. Some parents substitute watered wine or grape juice, reserved for Shabbat, for children. A special cup for Shabbat also makes a wonderful present for a much younger child.

BLESSING OVER HAND WASHING

Some Jews perform a symbolic hand-washing just prior to saying the blessing over challah, which begins the meal. Hand-washing recalls the purification ceremonies of the ancient Temple, and so the table symbolizes the altar.

Whereas any glass or cup can be used, two-handled cups or layers are made especially for this purpose, some of which bear the accompanying blessing:

The earth is the Lord's and everything in it, the world, and all who live in it; for He founded it upon the seas and established it upon the waters. Who may ascend the hill of the Lord? Who may stand in His holy place? He who has clean hands and a pure heart, who does not lift up his soul to an idol or swear by what is false. (Psalm 24:1-4)

BLESSING FOR CHALLAH

In many languages, the word "bread" is synonymous with "food." A blessing for bread is thus a blessing over food, sustenance, life. Jews make a blessing called motzi ("brings") over challah, a word that comes from a biblical reference to a sacrificial Temple offering of dough. According to tradition, challah is any bread prepared for the purpose of making a motzi, a process that requires breaking off and burning a small piece of dough and reciting a blessing. Today, challah generally refers to a braided egg-rich loaf with a soft, almost cake-like texture. It is available in Jewish bakeries, and happens to be one of the easiest yeast breads to bake at home. Good recipes abound and children love braiding the dough.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Who brings forth bread from the earth.

It is traditional to have two loaves on the table, recalling the double portion of manna the Israelites gathered on the sixth day, so they would not have to collect food on Shabbat. The double portion of bread also symbolizes bounty. Some families use a small challah roll to symbolize a second loaf. The bread is often covered with an embroidered or woven cloth that, like special challah plates and knives, add to the beauty of the Shabbat table.

There are many customs for saying the blessing. Some hold two loaves together. Some sprinkle the bread with salt, a traditional reminder of tears and of the destruction of the Temple. Because metal is considered a reminder of war, some people keep sharp knives off the table. This is why in some households no knife is put to the challah at all; it is ripped apart by hand instead.

EATING THE MEAL

The act of eating the Friday night meal, and all three meals commanded for Shabbat, is considered a mitzvah and a blessing. Just for your information these three meals are called "the Lord's Supper" and it the authentic "Lord's Supper" which is misrepresented in the New Testament. Today Christianity has completely serparated "the Lord's Supper" from its Sabbatical setting and has relegated in the churches to some Sunday "communion" ritual. Lost completely is its Sabbath connection and instead we are taught other "dogmas" that are simply inocrrect.

The idea of anyone going hungry on Shabbat seems terribly contradictory to the spirit of the day, which is why there are so many stories about feeding beggars and bringing strangers home on the Sabbath. Judaism has always been respectful of the fact that basic needs must be satisfied first, and that holiness and hunger are, in some fundamental sense, mutually exclusive. As the Talmud says, "Without food there is no Torah."

FOCUSED CONVERSATION DURING DINNER

Conversation at the Shabbat table is for relaxing, checking in, and catching up. In some families, this idea is formalized. People take turns talking about the important events of the previous week; news, accomplishments, and especially things studied or learned. Conversation about Jewish topics of all sorts is very appropriate: from the weekly Torah portion to the news from Israel. It is said, "If three have eaten at the table and speak words of Torah, it is as if they have eaten from the table of God." Of course other things other than the Torah portion will be discussed but let us remember that our "focus" is God and His Sabbath to which He invites mankind to "sup" with Him.

BLESSINGS AFTER THE MEAL (BIRKAT HAMAZON)

The birkat hamazon (blessings for food) is a series of blessings and prayers set to a series of wonderful melodies, filled with thanks to and praise for God and full of messianic references. Praying the birkat hamawn is also called benching, the Yiddish word for blessing, and is found in most daily prayerbooks or siddurim. On Shabbat, birkat hamazon begins with Psalm 126:

1 ¶ A Song of Ascents. When the LORD brought back those that returned to Zion, we were like unto them that dream. 2 Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing; then said they among the nations: 'The LORD hath done great things with these.' 3 The LORD hath done great things with us; we are rejoiced. 4 ¶ Turn our captivity, O LORD, as the streams in the dry land. 6 Though he goeth on his way weeping that beareth the measure of seed, he shall come home with joy, bearing his sheaves.

When the world was created, God made everything a little bit incomplete. Rather than making bread grow right out of the earth, God made wheat grow so that we might bake it into bread. In this way, we could become partners in completing the work of creation.

The following is the first paragraph of birkat hamazon, which is sometimes used as an abbreviated version of the longer blessing.

Holy One of Blessing, Your Presence fills creation, You nourish the world with goodness and sustain it with grace, loving kindness and mercy. You provide food for every living thing because You are merciful. Because of Your great goodness the earth yields its fruit. For Your sake we pray that we shall always have enough to eat, for You sustain and strengthen all that lives and provide food for the life that You created. Holy One of Blessing, You nourish all that lives.

GOING TO SYNAGOGUE ON FRIDAY NIGHTS

The cycle of Shabbat services begins on Friday evening with Kabbalat Shabbat which is the "welcoming or receiving of the Sabbath". Kabbalat Shabbat was developed by a group of Jewish mystics who lived in Safed, Palestine. Although there are variations on the Friday evening service, virtually all of them contain some version of L'cha Dodi, a poem set to music from that 16th century community. Today, in many congregations when the final stanza is sung, everyone rises to face the door to symbolically welcome to Sabbath bride.

In some congregations, the Friday night service is the biggest and best-attended of the week. In others, the crowds come for Shabbat morning services. Some synagogues include a congregational candle lighting and kiddush on Friday night and some share challah as well. The rabbi, or whoever leads the service, may give a sermon.

Friday night services are often followed by an oneg Shabbat ("joy of the Sabbath"), a communal celebration that encourages touching base with old friends, meeting people, sharing food, and enjoying the spirit of the Sabbath.

For those who do not attend Friday night services a synagogue, the evening is spent relaxing at home. After the meal, clean-up tends to be kept to a minimum, although with company and conversation, Shabbat can even transform dishwashing from a chore into a pleasure.

Sitting by the candles to read, or study from a Jewish text (the week's Torah portion is traditional) is considered a mitzvah, especially because the candles are lit not merely for decoration, but for use. Some people take this time to read poetry, listen to music, sit outside and watch the night sky, read special stories to their children, or make "Shabbat Shalom" phone calls. This is your time to "renew" the whole individual; spirit, soul, and body so we are not to be "monks" but children of God who know our Creator desires that we enjoy this time of rest as we see fit. Again the only thing we must remember is to include God in this "special time" which is taken out of the rut of our busy and hectic lives.

MAKING LOVE ON SHABBAT NIGHT

The imagery of marriage abounds in Jewish texts; God and the people Israel are like groom and bride and the Torah their ketubah, or marriage contract. Shabbat is often described as a royal bride. The Kabbalists imagined God's unity to have been shattered by the expulsion of humanity from Eden. The feminine side of God, which is called shechinah, would wander the earth in exile until the redemption of the world was complete. On Shabbat, however, God's two halves are reconciled and united in an act of love.

In Yiddish literature of the late 19th and early 20th century, there is a keen sense that on Friday night, husbands and wives look at each other with different eyes. On a purely practical level, the men and women of the shtetl and ghetto looked their best. And the quarrels and conflicts of the week were put aside to abide by the Sabbath's mandate of peace. But another reason for all the smiling was the rather public secret that Friday night was the time for sex. Indeed, Jewish folklore held that erev Shabbat was the most auspicious time for conceiving a child.

Y'did Nefrsh, a traditional song for Friday night, makes the connection between spiritual and physical union quite explicit:

Draw me to You with the breath of love, Swiftly shall I come to stand within your radiance That I may attain that sweetest of all intimacies. My soul aches to receive your love Only by the tenderness of Your light can she be healed Engage my soul that she may taste your ecstasy.

SHABBAT MORNING...WHAT TO DO?

With the morning, the focus shifts from family to community, from home to synagogue or possibly a home Bible study. I would normally say "church" but few if any Christian Churches remember or keep or observe Shabbat. If they do sadly they are Messianic Churches that adhere to idolatrous dogmas concerning "the Christ" and "Jesus" and worship the Godman. For some, Saturday morning services at a synagogue are a weekly event, whereas others attend only rarely or, on special occasions, such as a bar or bat mitzvah, which means, literally, "son or daughter of the commandment," and is a rite of passage for 13-year-old boys and girls.

For those unfamiliar with Hebrew and synagogue customs, Shabbat morning services can seem daunting. They were for me at least in the beginning. The best way to explore and enjoy them is to try and relax. No one is there to judge you. No one will know that this is either your first time ever inside a temple or your first time in decades. Some of the most important elements of Shabbat are available for newcomers as well as regulars; the sight of a community of people gathered together, the music and voices, the absence of anything to do, and the opportunity to sit still and simply be. Following in the Hebrew/English Siddur will be difficult at first but not impossible over time in fact I bought one in order to familiarize myself with the Siddur (prayer book) used in the synagogue and read it at home until I became more comfortable with its use. Now I have come to love the Siddur (the prayerbook) and cannot part with it as it has become my very good "friend".

On days when we would not go to synagogue then we at Bet Emet would gather for a Bible Study and over time this grew into a full-fledged congregation whereby we evolved into a synagogue for Gentile Godfearers which met on Shabbat. We adopted and adapted the "Pattern of Worship" we saw in the synagogue for the outline of our Shabbat services and these services would last into the early afternoon.

After your visit to the synagogue or your home Bible study (service) then it is time to return home and share your experiences with your family if they did not accompany you. For people who do not wish to or cannot attend Shabbat services, ways to continue Sabbath observance through the morning include reading the Torah portion at home, singing favorite songs from the service, praying on their own, going for a walk, reading spiritual books, meditating, or any other essentially restful, Sabbath-like activity.

SHABBAT AFTERNOON

The first order of business after services is lunch, the second meal for Shabbat. Traditionally, breakfast does not count as one of the three Sabbath meals. The kiddush over wine at this meal is called "the great kiddush" (kiddush rabbah). According to legend, the fancy name was supposed to compensate for the more impressive Friday night kiddush. The second loaf of challah from the Friday night meal is often eaten at lunch. The "great kiddush" and the blessing for bread (motzi) are often said in the synagogue after services, with everyone gathered around a table of wine (or spirits) and challah. In general, however, most people have lunch at home, which is where they spend the remainder of Shabbat. It is always a mitzvah to invite guests home on Shabbat, especially those who might not otherwise have a warm, friendly place to eat. Encouraging children to invite friends over to eat and play helps make Shabbat special, and gives them the chance to extend their own hospitality. This mid-day meal provided an opportunity for the family to come together to fellowship and share their love and their time with each other.

Although lunch is seldom as elaborate as Friday night's meal, the noon meal is often festive or in some way different from weekday lunches. The whole notion of Shabbat rest discourages fancy cooking in favor of leftovers, casseroles prepared in advance, or a selection of salads and sandwich fixings. But in some families, Saturday means lunch rabbah (the great lunch) because it always features chocolate pudding. Shabbat can be a day of rest from saying "no" to children's insatiable passion for junk food. In some households, Shabbat is reserved for otherwise forbidden treats.

After lunch, the afternoon stretches lazily on. The goal for Shabbat afternoon is to achieve the same level of relaxation one feels on the last afternoon of a two-week vacation: sad to leave but also refreshed. However, because many people find it difficult to face hours of uninterrupted leisure-especially at a time when the rest of the world is busy doing errands and cleaning out the garage-it can be helpful to make specific plans.

Important to remember is that after lunch the time is spent in whatever "renews" you body, soul, and spirit. Traditional Shabbat afternoon activities include napping, visiting the sick, and walking without a particular destination in mind. Some people reserve these hours for activities and pastimes such as bicycle riding, swimming, writing letters, baking cookies, puttering in the garden, reading poetry, sitting still and really listening to music, and going on nature walks. Shabbat is a wonderful time for spouses to talk, and for parents and children to play. And the more an activity is saved only for Shabbat, the more Shabbat-like it becomes. Many might recreate, some might go fishing, some just relax and listen to music or read a good book. Other might just "piddle" around the home with the family and just enjoy the sound of "peace" generated by this time whereby you "slow down" and smell the beauty of "life" which only the Shabbat can create. Some might wash their favorite car or visit with family or neighbors. It is really up to you for you know what brings you "peace" and enlivens you as God's child.

Perhaps the most-time honored Shabbat afternoon activity is Torah study. Some people meet weekly with family members or a group of friends to discuss the week's Torah section, a project that requires no knowledge of Hebrew or academic background in Judaism. The first five books of the Bible have been studied for more than 2,000 years, in part for the sheer pleasure of trying to comprehend its meanings. There are no correct or ultimate answers; there are simply new levels of understanding.

One way to proceed is by reading the week's portion out loud. This not only lifts the activity out of the weekday practice of reading for information, it also means that no one will have failed to do the "homework."

Nor does a Shabbat study circle have to be limited to the Bible. Indeed, the phrase "studying Torah" is traditionally applied to all Jewish learning, which, includes the Hebrew language, a Jewish novel, a book of history or commentary, or even last Sunday's editorial about Israeli politics. The traditional caveat is that sad topics are avoided to preserve the joy of Shabbat.

Especially insightful for we non-Jews is the study into the Jewish Roots of our Christian Faith. Over time you will come to see and value this "Jewishness" and the wisdom contained within the sages of the Israel of God and then these various types of "Jewish Learning" will have a much higher value to you than they might at the present.

THE SHABBAT ENDS

According to the Talmud, Shabbat ends when three stars are visible in the sky. On overcast evenings, Shabbat is over when a blue thread is indistinguishable from a white thread held at arm's length. In other words, it should be dark.

Yet, there is almost no limit to how late havdalah can begin. The ritual that ends the Sabbath, havdalah, (which means "separation" or "division") dates back to Talmudic times. It is a brief, enchanting ceremony that recalls the intimate power of the Friday night home ritual, though far more melancholy because it marks Shabbat's passing. Some congregations hold havdalah services, but this is, by and large, a home celebration. It consists of four blessings: over wine, over fragrant spices, over fire, and over distinctions. I direct you attention to the "Bet Emet Home Havdalah Service" elsewhere on this website.

THE BET EMET GUIDE TO SHABBATH: OBSERVING THE SABBATH AT HOME

Before we begin this "Sabbath Service" let us remember what we have learned up to now. We have seen that there are multiple examples of the non-Jew observing the Sabbath with the Jew; not only that but some of the passages are worded as if a "command" from God. As if that is not enough we find both the example of James and Paul in the New Testament referencing the non-Jews keeping and observing the Sabbath as well. Today, unlike the earliest centuries, the non-Jew does not observe or keep the Sabbath in the Christian Church since Constantine changed the Sabbath to Sunday. Below is a "worship service" which you might adapt to your home and family in restoring "the Pattern of Worship" once given to the Saints (Jude 1:3).

WHY SHOULD I OBSERVE THE SABBATH?

Wholeness in Hebrew is called "shalom". Shabbat is about making peace with everyone; especially within families. The highest priority is given to reconciliation and loving kindness. It is a time that we become "one" with God and our loved ones. Shabbat fully means behaving as if the world was redeemed (complete, safe, perfect) right now! Shabbat is the opportunity to focus on what is right with the world, & thus to be refreshed to do the work of redemption: repairing the world. The world is not complete; it our job to repair the world, to perfect it, & doing so will bring the Messiah.

It is mandatory that Shabbat be understood in its uniquely Jewish form as a commandment of God, Exodus 20:8-11: "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter,... nor thy stranger (Gentile) that is within thy gates: For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it." This is a command from God, chosen and required to be obeyed by God's people. Observing the Sabbath is not a suggestion, its God's commandment to you and me!

Isaiah 56

- 3. Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD (believing Gentiles), speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I [am] a dry tree.
- 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs (strangers-Gentiles) that keep my Sabbaths, and choose [the things] that please me, and take hold of my covenant;

Notice that the Lord informs us that "strangers" (Gentiles) who keep and observe God's Shabbat, not only choose for themselves God's will, but please God in the process. The reward is that we literally take hold of God during the Sabbath and receive the "double-portion" from God that only can come to those who honor and observe the Sabbath.

Shabbat is a picture of redemption. The Apostolic Church informs us of the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be accepted as "Israel". One of these was the observance of Shabbat. It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism (such as the Festivals) were not prohibited to Gentiles. This was understood by the early Gentile believers (God-fearers), who were attracted to the Jewish way of life & accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, etc). This was also the attitude of early Christians who are our models today.

In Acts 20:7-8 we find Paul holding a Gentile "church service" in Troas, a Greek city, on the Sabbath. The time frame tells an amazing story; thirty years after Yeshua's death, as recorded in the New Testament, the Gentile believers were still keeping the Sabbath, as had the Jews since even before Sinai! Paul, not only observed the Sabbath, but he taught the Gentiles to do likewise because he knew God had given the Sabbath to all mankind; Jew or Gentile. The early Gentile believers met in the synagogues on the mornings of Sabbath with Jews, and later met in their homes, as testified by the Book of Acts, on Sabbath evenings for the "Havdalah" service where they celebrated the Messianic distinctiveness of their faith.

"And He said to them, 'The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. Therefore, the Son of Man is also Lord of the Sabbath.'" (Mark. 2:27-28). "There remains therefore a rest for the people of God. For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His. Let us therefore be diligent to enter that rest..." (Hebrews 4:9-11).

Answer for yourself: Now let me ask you: have you entered into that rest? One thing is for certain, if you sanctify & observe Sunday as the Sabbath instead of Saturday, you break the Fourth Commandment, as commanded by God, and you have never experienced the "double portion" given by God to those who sanctify the Sabbath. Let us keep the Sabbath!

KINDLING THE CANDLES & THE SABBATH BLESSING:

Baruh ata Adonai, Eloheynu melech ha-olam, asher kid-shanu b'mitz-votav, v'tzivanu l'hadlik neyr shel shabbat.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe who has taught us the way of holiness through the Mitzvot, and enjoined upon us the kindling of the Sabbath light.

ON FESTIVALS:

(When the festival falls on Sabbath, add the words in brackets.)

Baruh ata Adonai, Eloheynu melech ha-olam, asher kid-shanu b'mitz-votav, v'tzivanu l'hadlik neyr shel [shabbat ve] yom tov.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe who has taught us the way of holiness through the Mitzvot, and enjoined upon us the kindling of the [Sabbath and] Festival lights.

RECITATION OF THE V'SHAMRU:

Exodus 31:16-17 informs us of the reason we are having this special observance. V'Shamru can be spoken or sung; the words are as follows:

The Israelites are to observe the Shabbat, celebrating it for the generations to come as an everlasting covenant. It will be a sign between me and the Israelites forever, for in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, and on the seventh day he abstained from work and rested.

MEDITATIONS TO READ FOR THE SABBATH CANDLE LIGHTING:

- Gracious God, thank You for the opportunity and privilege of ushering in another Shabbat of rest, tranquility, and peace. With a full heart, I thank You for the blessings of the week which has passed, and for the grace which I was granted to overcome its trials and difficulties. I ask Your blessings for the week that lies ahead. Grant health, wisdom and contentment to my loved ones and friends. Help us to strengthen each other with love, gentle words and acts of kindness. Bestow Your blessings upon all Your children. May this home be a sacred temple in which You will delight to dwell.
- May the brightness of these candles banish all gloom, anxiety, and care from my heart and from the hearts of my loved ones. May this Shabbat bring us peace and serenity, joy and rest. Keep aglow within us, O God, the spirit of gratitude for Your many blessings, so that we may know the sweet taste of contentment and the rich harvest of sharing. Kindle in our home a deeper love for one another, for our people, and for all Your children.
- As we light our Shabbat candles to set apart this special gift for our family, may all of us be reminded that it is the light of the Messiah that shines in us and in our home. As we light the candles, let us be mindful that the Messiah opens our eyes of understanding and brings enlightenment to our spirits of his truth and his Torah. May the light of these candles spread throughout our home to express our desire that the light of Messiah and the joy of his Sabbath rest be spread throughout our home.
- We thank You, O God, for our family and for what we mean and bring to one another. We are grateful for the bonds of loyalty and affection which sustain us, and which keep us close to one another no matter how far apart we may be. We thank You for implanting within us a deep need for each other, and for giving us the capacity to love and to care. Help us to be considerate and modest in our demands of one another, but generous in our giving to each other. May we never measure how much love or encouragement we offer; may we never count the times we forgive. Rather, may we always be grateful that we have one another and that we are able to express our love in acts of kindness. Keep us gentle in our speech. When we offer words of criticism, may they be chosen with care and spoken softly. May we waste no opportunity to speak words of sympathy, of appreciation, of praise. Bless our family with health, happiness, and contentment. Above all, grant us the wisdom to build a joyous & peaceful home in which Your spirit will always abide.

SHARING SHABBAT WITH FAMILY:

- We thank You, O God, for Your gift of Shabbat,
- For the home in which we observe it,
- And for the dear ones with whom we share it.
- May the joy of Shabbat gladden our hearts and our spirits,
- And may its peace quiet our spirits and guide us in truth.
- Bring us closer to one another in love and affection;
- With laughter, gentleness, and soft words,
- With shared concerns, responsibilities, and mutual respect.
- Help us to make our home a sanctuary for Your Spirit,
- Warmed by reverence, adorned by Your tradition,
- And not the traditions of men.
- Continue to forge family bonds that are strong and enduring,
- Based on truth, trust, and faithfulness.
- Keep us far from strife and anger;
- May we be spared shame and reproach.

- Help us so to live in the week ahead
- That You may look upon all we have done
- And find it good and worthy of Your blessing

SHARING SHABBAT WITH FRIENDS:

- We are grateful, O God, for the heritage of Shabbat, and for the companionship of those whom we have gathered.
- May our coming together help to banish worry and anxiety, and enable us to share moments of true Shabbat joy.
- May the hands of those who break bread together be hands of friends who strengthen and support one another.
- May the voices which sing and pray on this Shabbat be voices of kindness and truth at all times.
- Grant us the capacity to value our friends and to enrich the lives of those whom we love.
- May we deepen our concern for all Your children, and renew our devotion to our People and our Faith.
- On this Shabbat which we share together, help us to feel Your presence, O Source of life and love.
- Scripture enjoins us to "call the Shabbat a delight." As we share its joy and warmth with our friends, we add to our "Shabbat delight" by celebrating these special hours with people for whom we have special feelings. And so, we pray...
- Bless us, O God, with Shabbat peace and serenity.
- Strengthen the bonds of friendship which link us;
- Deepen the mutual concern and caring which enrich us.
- May we find the spiritual rewards of observing Shabbat,
- As we sing together and speak together,
- Sharing special moments and a precious heritage.
- May the wine of Kiddush, our symbol of joy,
- Remind us of the many blessings which You bestow,
- In this world which is ours, to protect and to perfect.
- May we nurture our bodies and our souls on this Shabbat,
- And lovingly serve You with all that we have and are.
- On this Sabbath Eve, we lift our voices,
- In words of blessing, friendship, and peace.
- Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe,
- Who has taught us the way of holiness through the commandments.
- Lovingly You have favored us with the gift of Your holy Shabbat as our inheritance, a reminder of creation, first among the sacred days which recall the Exodus from Egypt.
- You have chosen us of all peoples for Your service, and You have given us a sacred purpose in life. In loving favor, You have given us Your holy Shabbat as a heritage.
- Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, Who hallows the Shabbat.

THE HAND-WASHING:

The earth is the Lord's and everything in it, the world, and all who live in it; for He founded it upon the seas and established it upon the waters. Who may ascend the hill of the Lord? Who may stand in His holy place? He who has clean hands and a pure heart, who does not lift up his soul to an idol or swear by what is false. (Psalm 24:1-4)

ALL IN TURN; AS YOU WASH RECITE:

I dedicate my hands to Messiah, the hope of glory, to serve him only. I present my body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is my reasonable service. I vow to not conform to this world, but be continually transformed by the renewing of my mind by God's Torah, that I may prove and demonstrate what is good, acceptable, perfect, and the will of God.

- His righteousness endures forever and ever;
- His horn shall be exalted with honor.

MEDITATION BEFORE KIDDUSH:

- On this Sabbath, which is a reminder of creation,
- We thank you, O God, for the world which You created.
- You have filled Your world with beauty for our eyes,
- With music and laughter for our ears,
- With soft things for us to touch,
- With fragrances for us to smell,
- With fine foods to sustain us and to bring us delight.
- As we enjoy the many blessings
- Which You have so bountifully granted,
- May we, too, bring goodness into the lives of others.
- As we recall Your blessings,
- Too many to be counted, too constant to be merited,
- May we be moved to thank You always, as we do now,
- For the fruit of the vine which You have created
- And for the Shabbat which You have sanctified.
- Amen.

ON THE KIDDUSH:

The Kiddush expresses beautifully the essence of the Shabbat. Its very name, meaning "sanctification," underscores the holiness of the Shabbat, while its recitation over a cup of wine which "gladdens the heart of man" points to the joyous mood of the day. The two themes (sanctify & joy) permeate the entire Shabbat and create a unique blending of the spiritual and the pleasurable; a characteristic of traditional Jewish teaching.

When the Ten Commandments appear in the Torah for the first time (Exodus 20), the Shabbat is linked with God's creation of the world and His rest on the seventh day. When the Ten Commandments appear for the second time (Deut. 5), Shabbat is linked with the liberation of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. In the Kiddush, both associations are invoked: "a reminder of Creation," and "a reminder of the Exodus from Egypt."

As we recite the Kiddush, we recall the purpose of Creation and we recall the central event in the ancient history of Israel..the going out of Egypt in which God's concern for the oppressed is dramatically revealed. The Sabbath is a sign by means of which we are called upon to remember the purpose of creation and the holiness of the existence of God's people.

The Kiddush was originally a prayer to be recited in the home at the Shabbat table and later incorporated in the synagogue liturgy.

When the Jews lived in Babylon some were so poor that they could not afford to purchase wine. A congregation Kiddush was therefore arranged so that all could participate in this important ceremony.

In many lands the synagogue served as an inn for wayfarers, some of whom ate their meals there. For their benefit, the Kiddush was recited at the end of the synagogue service. When the synagogue ceased to house travelers, some literalists suggested that the Kiddush be eliminated from the public service. The practice, however, had become deeply rooted and appreciated; and the Kiddush has continued as a popular part of the community worship on Shabbat.

KIDDUSH FOR SHABBAT EVENING:

The sixth day....

The heavens and the earth, and all within them, were finished. By the seventh day. God had completed the work which He had been doing; and so God rested from all His work. Then God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it because on it He rested from all His work of creation.
Genesis 1:31-2:1-3.

MEDITATION OVER THE WINE:

In Jewish thought the wine represents joy. When we lift the cup of wine and recite the suggested blessing, called the Kiddush, we are really thanking God for all the joy that He gives us. Since we are believers we indeed have much for which we should bless God. In the context of this Erev Shabbat time, we are especially thanking the Lord for giving the Shabbat and for giving us the eternal rest we have in Messiah. So by raising this cup of joy, we are expressing to each other and to the Lord, the joy that we have by faith in HaShem's Messiah.

THE BLESSING OVER THE WINE:

Baruch ata Adonai, Eloheynu meleh ha-olam, boreh p'ri ha-gafen.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Creator of the fruit of the vine.

MEDITATION OVER THE CHALLAH:

As a blanket of dew covered the double portion of manna in the wilderness every sixth day, so the challah is covered. Why do we celebrate Shabbat with two challot? Because as Israel wandered in the desert, the Lord our God provided all of their needs. He is the Lord who provides. He never asks us to do something we are unable to do. During Israel's wanderings in the desert, He provided a double portion of manna on the sixth day so that His children would not need to go out to gather on the seventh day.

HAMOTZI: BLESSING OVER THE CHALLAH:

Baruch ata Adonai, Eloheynu meleh ha-olam, ha-motzi lehem min ha-aretz.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Who brings forth bread from the earth.

THE MEAL: LETS US ENJOY GOD'S BOUNTY:

Time to eat and enjoy God's provision.

GRACE AFTER THE MEAL:--BIRKAT HA-MAZON:

When the Lord brought back those that returned to Zion, it was like a dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing. Then the nations said: "The Lord has done great things for them"; truly the Lord has done great things for us, we rejoice! Bring back the rest of our homeless, O Lord. They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. Though sadly they carry seed to the field, gladly they bring home the sheaves. (Psalm 126)

SHALOM ALEYHEM...PEACE BE UNTO YOU

- Messengers of the Most High, the King of kings, respond: Amen.

Now

May it be Your will, HASHEM our God and the God of our forefathers, that the Holy Temple be rebuilt, speedily in our days. Grant us our share in Your Torah, and may we serve You there with reverence, as in days of old and in former years.

AFTER THE MEAL:

The time following the meal could be spent singing some family songs together. In addition, if you have Erev Shabbat services, you're all dressed and ready to go! If not, enjoy the special blessings of an early bed time.

The Erev Shabbat service is an excellent time to invite guests into your home. Perhaps you could invite another person or family from your congregation. You might also use this time to invite someone who does not know the Messiah. Conducting a Friday evening meal in such a fashion as we have described is conducive to making a Jewish family feel at home and is a good discussion stimulator!

SELAH!

As strangers (Gentiles), or men and women wishing to return to the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, we must remember the Hebrew roots of our Christian faith. Romans 11:18 indicates that those engrafted branches, inserted into the "olive tree" of God'S Israel, do not support the root! The root (Jews) supports the "new, wild" branches (Gentile believers). It should be obvious to you that there is absolutely no way we as believing Gentiles can possibly understand the writings of these ancient people of God without understanding the customs, manners, beliefs, idioms, word meanings and traditions, as they were being used when they were written. In doing this we can return to the "faith once given to the saints." We at Bet Emet Ministries are aiding others in returning to the original faith of Yeshua as depicted in the New Testament; as we might expect a first century orthodox Jew believed and lived it. Let us never forget that it was "this faith" that was taken in the Great Commission to the Gentiles of the world, not what the majority practice today.

By turning (teshuvah) to the Apostolic Doctrine of the early church we will discover that remembrance and observance of Shabbat was only one small part of the Apostle's Doctrine! Observance of Shabbat sustains God'S creation and gives all of us a part in repairing God'S world ravaged by sin. Not only do we aid God in repairing what man "broke" by sin, but we seize our part in creating God'S Kingdom here on earth (co-creators and co-laborers). When we, as God'S servants, imitate Him by doing good through correct teaching, sharing, exhorting, giving, and being obedient to Him, it is as through we are revealing what is in heaven above to those who don't know God'S will for their lives.

MORE THOUGHTS ON SHABBAT:

Shabbat*, the Hebrew word for Sabbath, has been described a thousand ways. It has been called a shelter, palace, fortress, bride and queen. Shabbat is the only day of the week with a Hebrew name at all. All of the other names for days of the week are pagan names! Now let me ask you, which day of the week has God overseen to protect from man's attempts to corrupt since time immemorial? The Sabbath (Saturday) will always be God's day! The idea that one day out of seven should be devoted to rest and spiritual reflection has always been a radical concept. Its earliest practice challenged the ancient world, where labor was the lot of beasts and slaves, and leisure was the privilege of the rich and powerful. Today, when the machinery of life never stops, when everyone has too much to do and not enough time in which to finish, Shabbat continues to force us to look at the questions that challenge our value systems. The challenge presented by the Sabbath takes all of us to our very roots: "The heaven and earth were finished, and all their array. One the seventh day God finished the work and stopped. And God blessed the seventh day and made it holy; because on it God rested from all the work of creation" (Gen. 2:1-3). Only after the seventh day of Shabbat was the world completed and perfect.

SHOULD YOU NOT CHOOSE TO BE FREE?

Six days a week we live under the tyranny & influence of things that occupy space and put demands upon our time. On the Shabbat we try to become attuned to holiness in time. It is a day on which we are called to share in what is eternal in time, to turn from the results of creation to the mystery of creation; from the world of creation to the created goal for the world. God has created all for His Shabbat! Do you not yearn for that eternal rest with God that will never end?

Sections of the Shabbat liturgy recall the time when the Jews were slaves in Egypt. And although the Shabbat celebrates freedom, it is also a reminder of the contrast between slavery and freedom. The Jewish notion of freedom entails both political and personal responsibilities; the mandate to work for the liberation of all oppressed people, and the task of remaining free from enslavement to false idols, such as false religion, wealth, power, and fame.

In addition to "remembering" and "keeping" the Sabbath, there is a very important idea in the Book of Isaiah (58:13): "If thou turn away thy foot because of the Sabbath, from pursuing thy business on My holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, and the holy of the Lord honorable, and shall honor it, not doing thy wonted ways, not pursuing thy business, nor speaking thereof." The two basic ideas derived from the verse are: oneg shabbat ("Sabbath delight") and kavod shabbat ("Sabbath honor," paying special honor to the day). The Sabbath is to be treated as a day of delight (in this context, quiet enjoyment) and a day to be welcomed and treated as an honored guest (like a bride or a queen). We welcome the bride of the Sabbath; the Sabbath queen.

WE MUST CHOOSE SHABBAT:

The first appearance of Shabbat in the Torah is in the form of a verb, shavat: "And God ceased (rested/stopped)". Shabbat is recreated weekly; Israel is to make Shabbat. The first verb for most Jews & Gentiles (who are grafted into Israel) today, however, is not "make" but "choose." And choosing Shabbat is not one decision, but many.

CHOOSING SHABBAT MEANS:

- (1). Making a commitment to a weekly period of rest and peace.
- (2). Making distinctions between activities that are "Shabbat-like" from those that are "work-week-like".
- (3). Avoiding things that might violate a sense of shalom, ease and peace, and planning ways to enhance that feeling.
- (4). Patterning your Sabbath activities after the Heavenly example.

Because Shabbat is often defined in terms of prohibitions against certain kinds of activities, many have erroneously come to think of Sabbath observance as a series of restrictions or a weekly sentence of self-denial. But Shabbat is not a retreat from the world or an exercise in asceticism. Making Shabbat is not a matter of refraining, but of doing. The Talmud says, "the affairs of Heaven are mandated for Shabbat", specifically teaching children the Torah and arranging weddings. Resting, eating, and praying are not only permitted, but mandated. There are other verbs for Shabbat, too; sleeping, reading, thinking, studying, talking, listening, meditating, visiting the sick, laughing, singing, welcoming guests, making love. Other examples of ways in which others honor the day are for worshippers to wear special Sabbath clothes ("the Sabbath best"); eat special meals (one on Friday night and two during the day...these taken collectively are called The LORD's Supper!); take time for prayer and for study of the Torah; spend time with one's family; and banish care and worry so far as possible. Enjoy Shabbat!

not man for the sabbath: (KJV)

BET EMET MINISTRIES: ORDER OF SHABBAT SERVICE

The following is a summary of the Shabbat Services held by Bet Emet Ministries which were part of our congregation. Much of the following can be adopted and adapted for your own use in conducting your Shabbat Bible Studies in your own home. Often we held the following "service" in our home or various homes where we would meet. We chose to use the Bokser Siddur due to its simplicity in light of the fact that most of our congregation of non-Jews had little or no background in Hebrew. The Bokser Siddur was just perfect and we came to love and cherish this book as we had our Stone Edition of the Hebrew Scriptures (the Jewish Tanakh). The page numbers listed for your ease and convenience correspond to the Bokser Siddur. The Bokser Siddur can be found at:

DID PAUL TEACH NON-JEWS TO KEEP THE SABBATH AND THE HAVDALAH SERVICE?

Let me stimulate you to consider what is behind Acts 20:7...in doing so let us remember that what we find in this text long after the crucifixion and death of Yeshua is the picture of non-Jewish believers in Yeshua being taught to keep the Sabbath and the Havdalah service.

What should jump to the forefront of our minds is the question that asks: If this was what was being taught to the non-Jewish believers in Yeshua in fulfillment of the Great Commission then why have I not been taught this before now by my Christian Church? The answers to these types of questions are not always comforting when you begin to realize that you have bought into a replacement religion and have not been taught the truth due to anti-Semitism that has reigned unchecked in Gentile Christianity for going on 1900 years at present. This provokes an even larger question: in your actions and religious beliefs are you really a follower of Yeshua/Jesus or have you just been told you are and not having the necessary knowledge before now you never knew any different?

Answer for yourself: Did you know that Paul, a Jew, is conducting a Hebraic worship service in these Scriptures?

Acts 20:7 7 And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; (KJV)

What we find here is that the word "day" is in italics....meaning it is added to the text for smoothness of reading....but there is only one problem...if you translate "On the first of the week" from English back to Greek back to Hebrew (remember he is a Jew and that would have been his thought series) we find "as the day was beginning to dawn"...we encounter a deception....overlooked in Greek and English....mainly; that for a Jew the day begins at 6:00 p.m. and not at 12:00 p.m...so the time frame of the passage is not daylight..but dusk!

Here is the Key that you miss by reading the English of most Christian Bibles and poor translations: In other words, verse seven, Acts 20: upon the first of the week (or as the first of the week was beginning to dawn)...in other words...as Sunday was approaching (6:01 p.m. on Saturday really Sunday began)...in other words...on the evening of the Sabbath (Saturday-for Paul kept the Sabbath and not Sunday)...he was conducting and leading these Greeks (like you and me)...in a Havdalah service. What we find is that these Greek believers in Yeshua were observing NOT a Sunday morning service that is totally disjointed from a Sabbath service, but the concluding part of the synagogue Sabbath Service; and this mind you was over 30 years following Jesus'/Yeshua's death so his death changed nothing in this regard as you can see!

We find again that these Gentiles, to whom the Great Commission was taken, where Jesus instructed that these Gentiles be taught "to observe those things that I commanded you"...and one of the many "things they were taught to observe" was a Havdalah service which was part of the "pattern" of worship given to David and handed down through Solomon, even handed down past the crucifixion of Jesus, even the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. This pattern of worship (ie. Havdalah for instance) continued well into the third and fourth century for Gentiles before it was banished at the Council of Nicea by Constantine.

Answer for yourself: If Paul were alive to day and he came to your city would he not teach us the same as he did in Troas? Remember, Paul was teaching Gentiles like you and me to keep Havdalah over 30 years after the cross.

Also, notice, that there were "many lights in the upper chamber".

Answer for yourself: Why?

The reason is so simple once you understand the dynamics of the Havdalah service. Each believer had his own candle and just before the main candle was extinguished (as part of the service) each believer would light their own individual candles, thus each has his own illuminated candle (they were themselves the light of the world) and we now better understand the event as Paul preached from 6:00 PM to midnight..

Please don't discount what I say. Study the Hebrew roots of the early Gentile church, find when it was changed, by who, and why!

Answer for yourself: Lastly, if Paul taught them this, why have you not been taught this before? Don't you want to do what Jesus said and follow his example?

You are not any more saved if you do or if you don't...you are only more obedient to those things Jesus taught we are to observe.

This should stimulate your thinking in the things I write. Blessings to all.

HAS YOUR PASTOR LED YOU IN A HAVDALAH SERVICE YET?

Let me stimulate you to consider what is behind Acts 20:6-7

Acts 20:6-7 6 And we sailed away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days. 7 And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you ever notice that the word "day" in Acts 20:7 is in italics; meaning that it is not in the Greek manuscripts but added later supposedly for clarity? More on this later.

Answer for yourself: Did you know that Paul, a Jew, is conducting a Hebraic worship service in these Scriptures?

Answer for yourself: Just where is Paul located when performing this worship service and who were in his audience? Troas in Asia Minor or let us say in Greece as we are know it today. This was a Gentile nation.

What we find upon close examination of the text in my King James Bible is that in Acts 20:7 the word "day" is in italics....meaning it is added to the text for smoothness of reading.

Answer for yourself: So what is the problem with that?

If you translate "On the first of the week" from English back to the "Greek" and then put in back into Hebrew context (remember Paul is a supposedly a Jew and that would have been his thought process since priding himself on being a "pharisee of pharisees") we find that the above phrase is literally rendered:

"as the day was beginning to dawn"

Here we have a terrible deception that goes overlooked by 2.5 billion Christians when reading this passage in English. We fail to realize that for Jews the day begins not at 12:00 midnight as we learned since influenced by Rome but according to Genesis "evening and morning was the first day." We have here a deception that is overlooked because we approach the Bible as Christians almost totally ignorant of the Jewish language and culture of the documents which we are reading. For a Jew the day begins at 6:00 p.m. and not at 12:00 p.m. (midnight).

In other words, verse seven, Acts 20: upon the first of the week (or as the first of the week was beginning to dawn) is a reference to sundown on Saturday which was the Sabbath. Let us say it another way; "as Sunday was approaching" (6:01 p.m. on Saturday is really when Sunday began in Jewish reckoning of time). What we find here is that on the evening of the Sabbath and before Sunday began (Saturday-for Paul kept the Sabbath and not Sunday) we find Paul was leading these Greeks (like you and me)...in what is called in Jewish terminology a Havdalah service. What we find is that these Greeks were observing not a Sunday morning service that is totally disjointed from a Sabbath service, but they were worshipping and were being led by Paul in a concluding part of the synagogue Sabbath Service.

Answer for yourself: Should we find that strange? No not really if we paid attention to what James said in Acts 15 when addressing what to do with the Gentile problem since so many were turning to God due to the ministry of Paul outside of Palestine:

Acts 15:21 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

We find again that these Gentiles, to whom the Great Commission was taken, when Jesus instructed that these Gentiles be taught "to observe those things that I commanded you" were being taught just that....obedience to the Commandments of God. In particular we are addressing in this article the observance and keeping of the Sabbath. We see in this veiled mention of Paul in Troas that he was teaching these Gentiles the observance of the Sabbath and this was one of the many "things they (the Gentiles) were taught to observe." The Havdalah service, as seen in James' reference and Paul's example, was part of the "pattern" of worship given to David and handed down through Solomon; even handed down past the crucifixion of Jesus, even the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. as the message that was to be taken to the Gentile nations. This pattern of worship (ie. Havdalah for instance) continued well into the third and fourth century for Gentiles before it was banished at the Council of Nicea by Constantine. Just read Constantine's "Easter Letter" and see how he changed the religion of Jesus as practiced in Gentile nations in so many ways in the early 4th century.

Answer for yourself: If Paul were alive to day and he came to Dallas, or you city (wherever) or any Greek or American city today, would he not teach us the same as he did in Troas? Remember, Paul was teaching Gentiles like you and me to keep Havdalah over 30 years after the cross.

Answer for yourself: We often hear by unknowledgeable pastors and teachers: "We don't have to do this any longer because Jesus 'fulfilled' it." Does this example in Acts 20:6-7 look to you as if the early church, James, or Paul for that matter who was out teaching Gentiles believed that Jesus life or death "fulfilled" and "nullified" the Sabbath? It sure does not? Should Christian pastors study more? I will let you answer that!

Acts 20:8 8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together. (KJV)

Also, notice, that there were many lights in the upper chamber

Answer for yourself: Why was this:

The reason for this is because that was part of the Havdalah service; the concluding part as the Sabbath left and as Sunday began at 6:01 PM in reckoning of time (as the day was dawning).

One needs only to read of how the Havdalah service was conducted to see that as the Sabbath was departing that everyone present lit his own candle as the center candle was extinguished (part of the service). The believers would light their own individual candles, thus the reference to there being "many lights in the upper chamber." Let us know forget that Paul was now preaching past sundown where he preached from 6:00 PM to midnight on the morning of Sunday (after sundown Saturday is when again Sunday began in Judaism).

Please don't discount what I say. Study the Hebrew roots of the early Gentile church, find when it was changed, by who, and why! Then ask yourself just "whom" you are following in keeping Sunday and not the Sabbath as both God commanded and as Jesus and the early Church instructed the Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: Lastly, if Paul taught them this, why have you not been taught this before?

You are not any more saved if you do or if you don't keep the Sabbath; you are only more obedient to those things Jesus taught we are to observe. The key is Isa. 56 where the Gentile Godfearers were instructed to choose those things that please God and take hold of His Covenant.

Isa 56:1-6 1 Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. 2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man (Gentiles are included) that layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil. 3 Neither let the son of the stranger (explicit reference to Gentiles), that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch (explicit reference again to Gentiles) say. Behold, I am a dry tree. 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs (explicit reference to Gentiles) that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant: 5 Even unto them will I give in mine house and within my walls a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off. 6 Also the sons of the stranger (explicit reference to Gentiles), that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant; (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the repeated connection between Gentiles choosing to keep God's Sabbaths (holy days and weekly sabbath)?

This is what the early Church, James, and Paul were doing. They were instructing the Gentile nations to choose those things pleasing to God and in this reference in Acts 20 that included the Sabbath; something the vast majority of 2.5 billion Christians today in the world do not do because of being taught incorrectly.

Answer for yourself: Let us end this article by asking ourselves: "Who are we really following as Christians today....Constantine or Jesus?"

This should stimulate your thinking in the things I write. Blessings to all.

CONCLUDING THE SABBATH WITH THE HAVDALAH SERVICE

Three stars have appeared in the sky. Havdalah, or the "Separation" of the holy day from the days of work begins. We give thanks for the Sabbath day that is now ending. We are grateful for its many blessings: for peace and for joy, rest for the body, and refreshment for the soul. We hope that something of its meaning and message remains with us as we enter the new week, lifting all that we do to a higher place of holiness.

The solemn Havdalah is recited both in synagogue and at home.

Havdalah means distinction: This marks the distinction between sacred and ordinary.

ITEMS NEEDED TO OBSERVE THE HAVDALAH SERVICE

- Wine or grape juice
- Wine glass
- A havdalah candle-two candles twisted together or just put two candles together.
- A spice box containing sweet smelling spices like cinnamon, nutmeg, and allspice
- A tray or large plate for the cup and candles.

HAVDALAH SERVICE

The service will starts when three stars are visible. This is traditionally observed by the woman. This marks the end of the Shabbat. She will then say, "O God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, guard thy people. The beloved Shabbat is departing." She will then light a single candle and exclaim, "A good week, a full week, a fortunate week, on us and on all of Israel. Amen." "A good week " is the greeting as the men come home.

THE ACTUAL SERVICE BEGINS HERE:

Reader: Behold, God is my deliverance; I will trust, and will not be afraid; truly the Lord is my strength and my song; He has delivered me indeed. Joyfully shall you draw upon the fountains of deliverance. It is for the Lord to bring help; my God, thy blessing be upon thy people. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our Stronghold. Lord of hosts, happy is the man who trusts in thee. O Lord, save us; may the King answer us when we call. The Jews had light and joy, gladness and honor. So be it with us. I will take the cup of deliverance, and will call upon the name of the Lord. (Is. 12.2-3; Ps. 3.9; 46.12; 84.13; 20.10; Est. 8.16; Ps. 116.13)

(Fill the cup till it overflows. Do not drink any. Recite the following blessing while holding cup up, and fingers pointing up.)

1st BLESSING

Baruch ata Adonai, Eloheynu melech ha-olam, borey p'ri ha gafen.

Blessed art thou, Lord our God, King of the universe, for creating the fruit of the vine.

2nd BLESSING

(Lift the spice box to God while reciting the following blessing)

Baruch ata Adonai, Eloheynu Melech Ha-Olam, Borey Miney V'Samim.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who creates various kinds of spices.

(Pass the spice box around. The spice box is not used if the next day after the Shabbat is a festival.)

3rd BLESSING:

(Lift the candle to God while reciting the following blessing)

Baruch ata Adonai, Eloheynu Melech Ha-Olam, Borey Norey Ha aish.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who creates the lights of fire.

Reader: God came from Teman, the Holy One from Mount Paran. His glory covered the heavens and His radiance filled the earth. His splendor was like the sunrise; rays flashed from His hand, where His power was hidden. (It is from Hab. 3.5)

(After the candle is lit the reader hold his hands before the candle till see the light seep through his hand and fingers without burning himself)

CALLING OF ELIJAHU HA-NAVI TO COME AND INAUGURATE THE MESSIANIC ERA.....THE SONG IS SUNG BY ALL

- Eliyahu Hanavi (Elijah the Prophet)
- Eliyahu Ha-navi, Eliyahu Ha-tishbi (Elijah the prophet, Elijah the Tishbite)
- Eliyahu, Eliyahu, Eliyahu Ha-giladi (Elijah, Elijah, Elijah the Giladite)
- Bimheira v'yameinu yavo eileinu Im Mashiach Ben David (May he come soon in our time and bring Messiah son of David)

(This song is song because of the traditional belief, that Messiah will not return on a Shabbat, due to its sacredness. So, once the Shabbat is over, Elijah is called to arrive because he must appear before the Messiah, in order to announce him.)

DISTINCTION BETWEEN SACRED TIMES WITH GOD & ORDINARY TIME

BLESSING:

Baruch ata Adonai Eloheynu melech haOlam. Hamavdil bain kodesh l'chol bain l'choshech bain Yisrael la-amim, bain yom hash-vii l'shaishet y'mai hama-asheh. Baruch ata Adonai hamav-dil bain-kodesh lichol.

Reader and group: Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who has made a distinction between the sacred and the ordinary, between light and darkness, between Israel and the other nations, between the seventh day and the six working days. Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who has made a distinction between the sacred and the profane.

(Drink the wine and pass it around for all to sip or have individual wine cups filled for all)

PRAYER FOR COMING WEEK

King of the Universe, O Father, who is merciful and forgiving, in Your goodness favor us with peace as we start the six working days; free us from all sin and transgression and cleanse us from all iniquity and wickedness. Please cause us, O Merciful God and King, to cling to the study Of Your Word, and to occupy ourselves with the doing of good deeds. May it be your will, that we hear, in the days to follow, news of gladness and joy. Keep us free from the envy of any man, and may we envy none. O Father of Mercy, bless and prosper the work of our hands, and the work of all who have thoughts of good in their hearts towards us, and your people Israel; but for all those who plan evil against us, and your people Israel, frustrate them and prevent them from carrying out their wicked schemes. As it is said, "Take counsel together, and it shall be brought to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand; for God is with us." O Father, in your mercy and forgiveness, open the gates of light and blessing, of redemption and salvation. Guide our feet to walk in Your ways and fill us with rejoicing, peace, and holiness. Direct us into the study of your Torah and inspire us to pray without ceasing; and in us fulfill the scripture:

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that brings good tidings, that announces peace, the harbinger of good tidings, that announces salvation; that says unto Zion, Thy God reigns! Amen. (Selah). Yeshayahu 52.7 (Isaiah)

(The candle is put out with the wine that overflowed from the cup...as this ends the service)

Some like to make the candle fight to stay lit, this shows the reluctance to let the Sabbath to end.

(A finger is dipped in the wine and passing it over the eyes alludes to Psalm 19.9 where God's commands are described as "enlightening the eyes.")

SYMBOLISM USED IN THE HAVDALAH

The twisted candles... They represent a couple of things: It first represents a link between creation and redemption. The candle used in the Havdalah services has two wicks because it is to be a torch. A torch is something with at least two wicks. The Hebrew for torch is l'pidot. It is a synonym for the Messiah. Refer to the vision Avraham had of the torch between the two halves of the bull in Gen. 15. Also it is a picture of both Jews and Gentiles being the "one people of God" as we see from the Scriptures (one faith and the two sticks in Joseph's hand becoming one).

The overflowing cup..The glass represents as a visual sign of the fullness and completion of the week. As the wine spills, the Shabbat departs and reminds us that God's blessing both in this life and the life to come are more than we could ever ask for or deserve.

Putting out the candle...It shows the Shabbat ending which is sad because each week the people look forward to the Shabbat

Spice box...It is to cheer the soul since the Shabbat is departing and the realization that God's ultimate manifestation of redemption and Eternal Life must wait....as we experience it only symbolically in this life and the full manifestation of it awaits God's eternal sabbath. The intention is that this last fragrance will carry you through the pressures of the week until once again you can celebrate the Shabbat.

In conclusion let us not forget that Paul taught the non-Jews in Asia, Minor, during his missionary journeys to keep and observe the sabbath and the havdalah service.

Sadly that is not the experience today for many as followers of Jesus and "the Christ". But it can be!!!

Blessings..Craig Lyons M.Div.

THE HOME HAVDALAH SERVICE

I. LIGHT THE HAVDALAH CANDLE (BY THE READER OF THE SERVICE)

The lighting of a candle announces the end of the Sabbath, during which making fire is prohibited. The candle used for havdalah has at least two wicks because the blessing refers to the "lights of the fire." Havdalah candles, which are available in Judaica shops, are often multicolored and contain several braided wicks.

II. ISA 12:2-6...READING OF THE PROPHET

Congregation:

Isa 12:2-6 2 Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid: for the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation. 3 Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation. 4 And in that day shall ye say, Praise the LORD, call upon his name, declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted. 5 Sing unto the LORD; for he hath done excellent things: this is known in all the earth. 6 Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion: for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee. (KJV)

III. RAISE A FULL CUP OF WINE AND SAY--

Reader:

"Let us bless God together for the wine"

(DON'T DRINK YET!...LIFT THE WINE AND CONGREGATION RECITE)

"Baruch Atah Adonai Elohenu Melech ha'olam bore peri ha-gafen"

"Blessed are You, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Creator of the fruit of the vine. Amen!"

The wine is put down without drinking at this time.

IV. SHAKE SPICES...SMELL THEM...THEN PASS TO OTHERS TO ENJOY FRAGRANCE-----

Next comes the blessing over spices. The sense of smell has been put to religious use since ancient times, and incense was used in the Temple in Jerusalem. There are a number of explanations for the presence of spices at havdalah. According to one legend, during Shabbat people are given an additional soul and when the Sabbath ends and this soul departs, the spices revive us, lest we faint. The sweetness of the spices symbolizes both the sweetness of paradise and also the wish for a sweet week to come.

After this blessing is recited, something fragrant is passed around for everyone to sniff and enjoy. Flowers or freshly cut fruit can be used. Most Jews who celebrate havdalah, however, own a spicebox filled with cloves and other spices. The oldest spiceboxes date from 16th century Germany, when they were often made in the shape of towers or turrets. Today, spice boxes come in all shapes and sizes, made out of everything from tin to wood to porcelain. They can be purchased in Judaica shops, and often come as part of havdalah sets that include a candle-holder, kiddush cup, and tray.

Reader:

"Let us bless God together for the spices"

Congregation:

Baruch Atah Adonai Eloheinu Melech ha' olam bore mi-ne bes-amim.

Blessed are You, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Creator of many kinds of spices. Amen!

V. LIFT THE HAVDALAH CANDLE---

Next comes the blessing over the fire of the candle, which has been burning. The rabbis reasoned that because God started the first week with light, it is fitting to begin every week with a prayer of thanks for light. Because all Jewish blessings require some form of action, it is traditional to hold the hands up in order to feel the warmth of the flame, and to use the light to distinguish between the nails and fingers. This custom probably derives from folk beliefs that fingernails revealed omens of the future. However, because there was great rabbinic opposition to such forms of divination, the rabbis devised alternative interpretations. According to one of these, Adam and Eve were covered by a protective shell before their expulsion from Eden, so looking at fingernails recalls paradise.

Reader:

"Let us bless God together for the flame"

Congregation:

Baruch Atah Adonai Eloheinu Melech ha' olam bo-re me'ore ha'esh.

Blessed are You, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Creator of the lights of fire. Amen!

(Reader Cups his hands & extend them to flame-examine)

VI. THANKING GOD FOR THE SEPARATION OF THE HOLY FROM THE SECULAR

Finally, there is the havdalah blessing itself, which thanks God for creation and for the distinctions that differentiate the universe into the place we inhabit and sanctify.

Reader:

Let us bless God together for the separation of sabbath from the rest of the week

Congregation:

Baruch Atah Adonai Elohenu Melech ha'olam ha-mavdil be-yn kodesh lechol be-yn or lech-o-sheck be-yn Yisrael leamim be-yn yom hashevi'i lesh-eshet yeme hama'aseh.

Blessed are you, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who makes a distinction between the holy & secular, between light and darkness, between Israel & the other nations, between the seventh day and the six working days. Blessed are You, O Lord our God, who makes a distinction between the holy & the secular.

VII. MEDITATION

Reader:

Havdalah is not for the close of Shabbat alone; it is for all the days. Havdalah means "separate yourself from the unholy; strive for holiness."

Havdalah means

- ----separate yourself from fraud & exploitation; be fair and honest with all people.
- ----separate yourself from indifference to poor and the deprived, the sick and the aged; work to ease their despair and their loneliness.
- ----separate yourself from hatred & violence; promote peace among people of all nations

May God give us understanding to reject the unholy & to choose the way of holiness. May the one who separates the holy from the profane inspire us to perform these acts of Havdalah.

VIII. NOW WE SIP WINE....&...POOR THE RESIDUE OF THE WINE INTO A PLATE

After this blessing the wine is drunk. Before anyone drinks, however, some is spilled into a plate or tray. This gesture symbolizes sadness and loss; as Shabbat ends, so ends its glimpse of redemption, of a world made whole. Havdalah expresses a longing for a never-ending Shabbat, which for Jews is expressed in the image of the messiah. The prophet Elijah (Eliyahu) is the legendary harbinger of the messiah and, because according to Talmudic legend Elijah will come after havdalah, it is traditional to sing "Eliyahu Hanavi."

IX. EXTINGUISH CANDLE IN REMAINING WINE WHICH WAS POURED INTO A PLATE

Some people begin havdalah with "Eliyahu Hanavi", and others conclude with it by lowering the burning candle into the wine while singing "Eliyahu Hanavi", timing it so that the light sizzles out with the very last word. Now we sing the song.

X. PRAYER:

Reader:

May God who separates the sacred from the profane, forgive our sins and make us secure and as numerous as the sea and as the stars of the night

XI. BLESSING: "SHA-OU-A-TOV"...

At the conclusion of havdalah, everyone says "Shavua toy." "A good week." In some families, everyone kisses or takes a moment to make a wish for the coming week. "Shavua toy" is also the name of a very simple, well-known song.

A good week. A week of peace. May gladness reign & joy increase.

XII. IF YOU INCORPORATE A KADDISH ..

(At this times, as we prepare for worship, we invite you to participate in the grape juice, bread, & spices, ...and also in the blessing of giving)

In doing Tzedakah, you cannot neglect the house that brings you teachers and gives you a place to know about HaShem and His truth.

Please rise....sing with us.....

XII. WE ALL SING TOGETHER "EILYAHU HANAVI" ONCE AGAIN (Elijah The Prophet)

- Ei-li-ya-hu ha-na-vi
- Ei-li-ya-hu ha-tish-bi;
- Ei-li-ya-hu, Ei-li-ya-hu,
- Ei-li-ya-hu ha-gil-a-di.
- Be-me-hei-ra ve-ya-mei-nu,
- ya-vo ei-lei-nu;
- im ma-shi-sah ben Da-vaid,
- im ma-shi-ach ben Da-vid.
- Ei-li-ya-hu...

Elijah the prophet, Elijah the Tishbite. Elijah of Gilead. Soon in our days, Elijah will come with the Messiah, the son of David.

A DEEPER LOOK INTO THE ANCIENT PASSOVER

Lev. 23:4-5 4 These are the appointed seasons of the LORD, even holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their appointed season. 5 In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at dusk, is the LORD'S passover.

The festival of Passover is known in Jewish tradition as the "Season of Our Freedom." Its central theme is Release. There are two ways to view and interpret the message of the Passover:

- The Seasonal Message
 - On the seasonal plane, it marks the release of the earth from the grip of winter. On the seasonal plane, Passover inaugurates the reaping of the new grain; man sows the seed, but God -or the cosmic power - provides the rainfall and sunshine which quickens it.
- The Historical Message
 - On the historical plane, it commemorates the exodus of the Children of Israel from Egypt. On the broad human plane, it celebrates the emergence from bondage and idolatry. Again, on the historical plane, it commemorates the birth of the Jewish nation: Israel was prepared to face the hazards of the wilderness, so God, in His providence, brought it to Sinai, gave it the Law, and concluded the Covenant.
- The Message To The Soul....Gnosis
 - On the broad human plane, it celebrates the attainment of freedom and of the vision of God: man casts aside his idols and repudiates his ignorance and obscurantism, and in that very act God reveals His presence and imparts knowledge.

The three aspects of the Passover festival run parallel to one another: the dark and dreary winter corresponds at once to the dark era of bondage and to the black night of ignorance, while the burst of new life in spring corresponds, in turn, to the flowering of Israel and the burgeoning of freedom. In each case, the release is accompanied by a positive achievement; it is not simply an escape. It is also a cooperative act between God and man.

Yet the freedom which is celebrated in the Passover festival is freedom of a special kind. Our own modern concept of freedom has developed through diverse channels and is today a fusion - or, perhaps, a confusion - of several originally distinct categories of thought. It is mixed up, for instance, with ideas of sovereign independence, personal liberty and democratic government; yet none of these ideas - however fervently Jews may today adhere to them - enters significantly into the Passover ideal. In Jewish tradition, freedom, in the modern sense, is scarcely a virtue; at best, it is an opportunity. What matters is one's willful dedication, and it is this and this alone that forms the theme of the Passover story. If Israel had gone forth out of Egypt, but not accepted the Covenant at Sinai, it would have achieved liberation; that is, mere release from bondage but it would not have achieved freedom, in the Jewish sense of the term. For the only freedom, says Judaism, is the yoke of the Torah (one's bond and link to God's instruction); the only true freedom and independence is the apprehension of God.

The complex of ideas which today make up the Passover festival is the result of a long process of development and, more especially, of Judaism's inspired transformation of a primitive seasonal ceremony.

Answer for yourself: Did Judaism reinterpret the ancient's seasonal celebrations and observances and infuse them with their understanding of God's message entrusted to them? Yes. Let us see the proof. Leviticus chapter 17 holds the key we need to understand Judaism's transformations of the prior ancient's celebrations of equinox and solstices observances. God is now reinterpreting them and bringing to them deeper meanings (Gnosis) expressed above (historically and soul related meanings).

Leviticus 17:1- 1 And the LORD spoke unto Moses, saying: 2 Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them: This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying: 3 What man soever there be of the house of Israel, that killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it without the camp (understand that one's sacrifice was to be his meat and food for his family as well), 4 and hath not brought it unto the door of the tent of meeting, to present it as an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD, blood shall be imputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man shall be cut off from among his people.

Time for us to catch up with what is being said. The Rabbis teach us that God, at this time in Israel's past, takes their current festivals and holy days and "reinterprets them" for Israel. No longer are the children of Israel to practice these observances in the ways in which they had inherited; new meanings were to be attached to them for the children of Israel and they are to keep these same seasonal observances (equinox and solstice observances) forever.

5 To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, which they sacrifice in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tent of meeting, unto the priest, and sacrifice them for sacrifices of peace-offerings unto the LORD. 6 And the priest shall dash the blood against the altar of the LORD at the door of the tent of meeting, and make the fat smoke for a sweet savour unto the LORD. 7 And they shall no more sacrifice their sacrifices unto the satyrs, after whom they go astray. This shall be a statute forever unto them throughout their generations. 8 And thou shalt say unto them: Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among them, that offereth a burnt-offering or sacrifice, 9 and bringeth it not unto the door of the tent of meeting, to sacrifice it unto the LORD, even that man shall be cut off from his people.

Before I comment on the above passage it benefits us to look at how the KJV translates the above 7th verse of Lev. 17:

Lev 17:7 7 And they shall no more offer their sacrifices unto devils, after whom they have gone a whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations. (KJV)

What we find here is that God, YHWH, instructs the Moses and the children of Israel that no longer are they to sacrifice in open fields animals unto false gods and goddesses; from now on and forever the children of Israel are to bring their sacrifices to the door of the Tabernacle and the Levitical Priesthood and all offerings and sacrifices are now to be continually devoted to YHWH alone! There is definitely a re-definition of the sacrificial system as it existed previously to the Levitical Priesthood and practiced by the ancients. But let us understand as well that is the very "same" festivals and seasonal observances connected with the sun and the changing of the seasons which were to be continually kept; only with new meanings and emphases attached per the instructions given to Moses by YHWH.

The nature of the Passover ceremony is described in detail in the twelfth chapter of the Biblical Book of Exodus. At full moon in the first month of spring, we read, it was customary for every family to slaughter a lamb or goat at twilight and then, in the middle of the night, to eat it in common, along with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

Answer for yourself: Why a lamb or goat and not a bull or ox? If you have been a reader of Bet Emet Ministries for long then you know that due to the precession of the equinoxes the constellation of Taurus which had rose with the Vernal Equinox for over 2,100 years had moved and the constellation of Aries (lamb/ram) had taken its place. The changing of a "bull-Taurus" centered religion of Egypt to a "bull-Aries" centered religion proposed by Moses and others before him like Pharaoh Jacoba (Jacob) was the reason for the Exodus (that is right...there were more than one). The eating of this lamb had to be done "in haste," and whatever portion of the meat remained unconsumed had to be burned before the break of dawn. Moreover, as soon as the slaughtering had been effected, a bunch of hyssop was dipped into the victim's blood, and a few drops were sprinkled with it on the doorposts and lintels of each house. The application of the blood of the lamb to the door is in reality a literary confusion with the earlier Exodus by Pharaoh Jacoba when he invaded Upper Egypt and his secret followers (Aries-lamb proponents as was Pharaoh Jacoba) marked their houses so to escape the fury of Jacoba and identify themselves as secret followers of Pharaoh Jacoba. This way they marked their homes and the fury and possible death at the hands of Jacoba's army would "pass over" them. Pharaoh Jacoba would lead his followers out of Upper Egypt as the first Exodus. This all important ceremony grew and came to be known as "pesah", and was followed immediately by a six-day festival, called the Feast of Unleavened Bread, during which no fermented food was allowed to be eaten, and the first and last days of which were regarded as especially sacred and marked by a total abstention from work (a high sabbath).

Pruned of its later interpretations, this ceremony falls into a common pattern of seasonal festivals in many parts of the world. The essence of such festivals is to restrengthen the bonds of kindred and community at the beginning of a new agricultural cycle. This is done by partaking of a meal in common - "breaking bread together"- for thereby a common substance is absorbed. The practice is well attested in antiquity. When, for example, persons or tribes entered into compacts with one another, as in the case of Abraham and Abimelech, or of Moses and Jethro, in the Bible, the agreement was usually sealed by eating together - a custom which underlies our own word "companion" (properly, "one who eats bread with another") and which survives also in the familiar usage of "having a drink on it."

On such occasions, however, it is not only how one eats but also what one eats that is important, for the food consumed is believed itself to impart new life and vigor. Accordingly, special precautions have to be taken to ensure that it is pure and free of putrescence, and in a Near Eastern country this means that it has to be eaten at once and "in haste," and not lie around in the sun. It means also that no fermented food may be absorbed with it, since fermentation is the result of putrefaction, and that bitter herbs must be eaten at the same time as an effective cathartic against any impurity that may inadvertently have been consumed.

Let us remember that over time this seasonal festival evolved. Once the meal is finished, it becomes necessary to mark by some outward sign those who have participated in it and thereby entered into renewed ties with one another. The usual method of doing this is to sprinkle some of the animal's blood on the foreheads of all present or on the flaps of their tents or doorposts of their houses.

Answer for yourself: Is this a carry over from Pharaoh Jacoba's invasion of Upper Egypt where his secret followers marked their homes to signify by a lamb's blood that they were secret followers and supporters of Pharaoh Jacoba and the changing of a Taurus-Centered Egyptian faith into a new Aries-Centered Egyptian Faith? Yes, it is.

This, for example, is the practice among the Amur Arabs of Palestine and at New Year ceremonies in Madagascar. Additionally, this sprinkling of blood serves a further purpose. In primitive societies, the family consists not only of its human members but also of its god. He, too, therefore is regarded as being present at the communal meal and as being bound by the bond which it cements. Accordingly, the mark of blood on the forehead or the doorpost affords a means whereby he may readily recognize those individuals or households with whom he has entered into a pact of friendship and protection. It thus becomes, in effect, a device for averting supernatural hurt. Again we find this common theme from Pharaoh Jacoba's incursion into Upper Egypt in his attempt to unify all of Egypt under the sign of Aries.

The old meanings associated with this festival were to change according to Lev. 17 as we saw above. The Israelites took over this primitive rite and gave it a meaning all their own, thereby relating it to their own historic experience and justifying its continued observance.

PASSOVER GETS A NEW MEANING....AS IT IS LIFTED OUT OF ITS HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The Exodus from Egypt, they said, had coincided with the traditional pesah ceremony, and because their ancestors had so meticulously carried out the prescribed regulations and dashed the blood upon the doorposts of their houses, Jehovah had been able instantly to recognize His own protégés when He came to smite the firstborn in the land. To fully understand the above statement it is necessary to gather a few pieces of information. First archeology and historical records outside of the Old Testament which was rewritten by Ezra indicated that the Jewish race began from intermarriages between Egyptians and Semites. That being the case then it is very important to understand the Jewish race as the children of Egypt. This explains why Judaism today carries, for the most part, identical religious tenants held sacred by their Egyptian parents who were themselves monotheists. Sadly few understand the Egyptian religion correctly or the history that surrounds it and these facts escape their attention. Jacoba's Exodus following his failed attempt to unify all of Egypt did end in an Exodus of him, his army, and his followers from Upper Egypt. Since a Pharaoh was believed to be a God of sorts or God's representative then it is easy to see how the story is somewhat altered over time to reflect Jehovah "recognizing" His own people when he came to smite the firstborn in the land instead of Jehovah's/God's representative in the form of a Pharaoh who was able to recognize His own people when he invaded by them putting a lamb and lambs blood on their doors and homes to signal that they were secret followers of Pharaoh Jacoba and the religious changes he proposed for all of Egyptian religion.

All of the elements of the traditional ceremony were then fancifully explained as memorials of that momentous event. Let us remember what we saw above; namely, that the food consumed was believed itself to impart new life and vigor; therefore special precautions had to be taken in order to ensure that it was pure and free of putrescence, and as we saw above this means that it has to be eaten at once and "in haste," and not lie around in the sun. It also meant that no fermented food may be absorbed with it, since fermentation is the result of putrefaction, and that bitter herbs must be eaten at the same time as an effective cathartic against any impurity that may inadvertently have been consumed.

Knowing this then it is not hard to understand how the "story" changes as we find the evolution of historical events becoming blurred over time. Thus we find taught that the unleavened bread was necessitated that since Israel was forced to make a hurried departure from bondage then there had been no time to wait for the dough to rise and the bread had therefore to have been baked without yeast. The eating "in haste" comes to commemorate the haste with which the departure had been made. Indeed, the very name of the festival (the original significance of which is obscure) was now connected ingeniously with the Hebrew word pasah, "skip," and taken to imply that, on seeing the sign of blood, God had "skipped" or passed over the houses of the Israelites and spared them from the plague. In reality Pharaoh Jacoba had skipped over the houses of his secret followers and supporter in the South of Egypt and spared them an equally sure death.

Much of this explanation is, to be sure, historically frail and is only coming to light with current archeological studies when coupled with the historical accounts of Manetho. Modern scholarship has made it virtually certain that the Biblical narrative of the Exodus represents a foreshortened and anachronistic account of what really took place. In the light of historical and archaeological research, it has become increasingly improbable that all of the tribes of Israel, as they later existed, ever went down to Egypt or came out of it. It is now generally conceded that the confederation was of later origin and grew up gradually in the Holy Land after the Conquest, so that the story of a common ancestor who went down to Egypt with all his sons is erroneous as to time and place as inherited by us in the Old Testament. Only a certain portion of what subsequently became the Children of Israel, according to some scholars, only the Joseph tribes, ever went down to Goshen, and the conquest of Canaan was the result not of a single coordinated invasion but of the successive expeditions and gradual infiltration of various Hebrew tribes, which had begun before the Exodus and continued for some time after the arrival of the "redeemed" Holy Land.

Then, too, it must be borne in mind that the Biblical narrative is a saga, not a factual report, and therefore embellishes the record of events with all kinds of fantastic and legendary details drawn from the storehouse of popular lore. Moses' staff, for example, has parallels in the magical wands and weapons borne by heroes and deliverers in the folk tales of many nations; the miraculous parting of the Red Sea finds counterparts in the ancient Indian myth of Krishna's flight from the tyrannical King Kamsa and in the statement of various Greek writers that the Pamphylian Sea drew back and gave passage to the troops of Alexander the Great when they were marching against the Persian hosts of Darius III.

Nevertheless, even though the story of the Exodus as depicted in the Old Testament cannot yet be confirmed from any extra-Biblical source, and although we may readily detect in it several obviously legendary traits, in broad substance it is indeed consistent with everything that we now know about political conditions in the Near East at the period in question. The historical records of Pharaoh Manetho details these "Exoduses" from Egypt over theological diversities on several occasions (basically star wars/constellations). Historical records have confirmed that there indeed existed at that period, in virtually all parts of the Near East, a special class of persons (not, however, an ethnic unit) known as Hebrews, who did not enjoy full civic rights and who lived largely as mercenaries and freebooters, and who on several occasions made marauding raids upon Palestinian and Syrian cities. History also confirms that the land of Goshen (modern Wadi Tumilat), on the eastern confines of Egypt proper, had long been recognized as a free grazing ground or reservation for neighboring nomads, and it establishes that in the fourteenth century B.C.E. there was indeed a change of regime in Egypt which was unfavorable to aliens, for at that date the Hyksos, or Foreign Princes (Abraham for example), who had been in control of the country for some two hundred years, were finally expelled and replaced by a native Egyptian monarch. Furthermore, we know that the new Pharaoh's successor, Ramses II (1298-32 B.C.E.) did indeed renovate for himself the abandoned Hyksos capital in the Delta and call it after his own name, and that he also built a store city named Pithom, just as is described in the Bible. Lastly, an inscription of Pharaoh Merneptah (1232-24 B.C.E.), discovered in his mortuary chapel at Thebes, mentions the presence of the Israelites in the Holy Land in 1227 B.C.E.

Against this general background, it would seem not at all improbable that a particular group of Hebrews (what the Bible describes as the "family of Jacob"....who were themselves supporting Aries over Taurus) should have migrated from the Holy Land to Goshen, to settle under the more favorable regime of the Hyksos (themselves Aries oriented over Taurus since recognizing the precession of the equinoxes had moved Taurus from behind the Sun); that it should at first have thrived and prospered but subsequently, after the fall of that regime, have been viewed with suspicion and enslaved; and that it should eventually have sought freedom by linking up with other Hebrews in a concerted attack on the Holy Land. We just jumped over the Exodus of Akhenaton, the Biblical Moses, whom himself was a supporter of Aries over Taurus as well. And that, when the legendary trimmings are stripped away, is substantially the story related in the Bible. These were literally "star wars" fought over the message of God in the Heavens and the recalcitrant attitude of part of Egypt to change its Taurus centered religion that had existed for well over 2,100 yrs. This theological debate and wars precipitated several Exoduses according to Manetho. This revolution in Egyptian religion was short lived and the residue of these Aries centered faith will venture to Palestine and replant that faith in another Equinox Temple of which we read about in the Old Testament. Simply said the Patriarchs and Jewish heroes like David and Solomon were in reality Egyptian Pharaohs and this knowledge is only coming to light in the last one hundred years. These were the leaders of an Aries oriented faith which finds its ultimate and successful expression in the children of these Egyptians; the Jewish Nation. Nor, indeed, is it in any way remarkable that these events do not find large mention in Egyptian records, for it must be remembered that to the Egyptians of the period, the Children of Israel were in no sense a formidable or important power, but merely a motley crowd of gypsies on a relatively distant reservation who would desire freedom and follow those who offered it to them. Following someone who challenged the existing Egyptian authority (religious, military) like Moses was their ticket to freedom; especially following prior failed attempts to change Egyptian religion from a Taurus based faith to an Aries based faith. These Egyptians/Semites were considered outcasts after such failed attempts and put to hard labor since being considered traitors to Egypt by the Taurus controlled Priesthoods. They welcomed Moses attempt to again change Egyptian religion and welcomed the Exodus to their freedom; both political, physical, and religious where they could worship God as they saw fit with the Gnosis they had received from Him.

In Judaism, however, the story of the Exodus has long since been lifted out of a purely historical context. The Jewish attitude toward it stems from the premise that events transcend the moments of their occurrence; that anything which happens in history happens not only at a particular point in time but also as part of a continuous process and therefore involves as its participants not only a single generation but also all who went before and all who follow after. The Exodus of the Children of Israel from Egypt (a mixed multitude of Egyptians and Semites) involved also both the patriarchs of the past and their children's children of the future, for it validated the mission of the former and determined the destiny of the latter (followers of Aries over Taurus). It is this ideal Exodus, this Exodus detached from a mooring in time, that is really celebrated in the traditional Seder service on the first two evenings of the Passover festival. commemorates one's freedom and liberty to search for God and His truths without restraint; both past, present, and future as had been done by their ancestors during that 2,100 year period of the change from Taurus to Aries at the Spring Equinox in Egypt. The Passover Seder not only commemorates at this special time of the season God's goodness and provision to his people (new grain, rainfall, sunshine, photosynthesis), but historically the exodus of the Children of Israel from Egypt. It celebrates the emergence from mankind's bondage and idolatry. The Seder commemorates the birth of the Jewish nation: Israel was prepared to face the hazards of the wilderness, so God, in His providence, brought it to Sinai, gave it the Law, and concluded the Covenant. But behind all of this enumeration of God's goodness we see man's search for and God's gift of freedom: physically, emotion, and spiritual whereby man can attain an accurate vision of God. In so doing man has to cast aside his idols and repudiates his ignorance, and in that very act God reveals His presence and imparts His knowledge. Let me close this part of the article and mention again the courage of those who undertook the colossal task of challenging the religious status quo of Egypt who clearly was not in step with God and His new message to them in the Heavens.

Ps 8:3 3 When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; (KJV)

Ps 19:1 1 The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork. (KJV)

THE SEDER

The Seder (the word means simply "order of service" or "formal procedure") is at once a substitute for the ancient paschal sacrifice and a fulfillment of the Biblical injunction (Exod. 13:8) to retell the story of the Exodus to one's children.

Exod 13:8 8 And thou shalt shew thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt. (KJV)

The principal feature of the ritual is the eating of various foods traditionally associated with the departure from Egypt. These are:

- matzah, or unleavened bread;
- bitter herbs (e.g. horse-radish), taken to commemorate the bitterness of servitude; and
- haroseth, a mixture of chopped apples, nuts, raisins and cinnamon, which symbolizes the mortar in which the Israelites labored while they built the store-cities of Pithom and Raamses (Exod. 1:11).

Moreover, the meal is introduced by the consumption of parsley dipped in salted water. During the course of it, a minimum of four cups of wine must be drunk, recalling the four expressions used in Exodus 6: 6-7 to describe God's deliverance of Israel, viz.,

- I will bring you out from under the burden of the Egyptians, and
- I will rid you of their bondage, and
- I will redeem you . . .
- and I will take you to Me for a people.

In addition, besides the food actually consumed, the shank-bone of a lamb and a roasted egg have to be placed on the table. The shank-bone symbolizes the paschal offering, while the roasted egg is, in all probability, a later importation from pagan custom and, like the corresponding Christian Easter egg, exemplifies the beginning of life in spring (reminiscent of the cosmic egg of Egypt in their creation accounts).

There is a strict religious protocol about the manner in which the ritual foods are to be eaten. The matzah, for example, consists of three cakes placed one above the other and popularly known as "the priest, the Levite, and the Israelite." At the beginning of the service, the celebrant breaks the middle cake in half and sets one of the halves aside, wrapping it in a napkin. This, known as afikomin, is subsequently distributed among the company and constitutes the last thing eaten at the ceremony. The bitter herbs, in addition to being eaten separately, are also served in a "sandwich," between pieces of matzah, thereby carrying out to the letter the Biblical commandment (Exod. 12:8) which enjoins that unleavened bread and bitter herbs be eaten together as an accompaniment of the paschal meal. At the conclusion of the supper, an extra cup of wine is filled for the prophet Elijah who, it is believed, will come on Passover night to herald the final redemption of Israel. The main door of the house or apartment is flung open for a few moments to permit his entrance.

Those present at the Seder ceremony are expected to adopt a casual, reclining posture, symbolizing that of freemen at ancient banquets. In some parts of the world, however, everyone appears in hat and coat, with satchel on back and staff in hand, thus re-enacting the Departure from Egypt.

The narrative portion of the ceremony is known as the Haggadah, or Recital, and consists in a repetition of the Scriptural story of the Exodus, embellished by rabbinic comments and elaborations and rounded out by the chanting of psalms, hymns and secular songs.

The narrative is introduced by a series of questions (Mah Nishtanah), asked by the youngest member of the company: "Why is this night different from all other nights?" All that follows is regarded as the answer.

High points of the Haggadah are: the "Section of the Four Sons," the "Litany of Wonders," and the chanting of "Hallel."

The first of these is based on the fact that the Bible speaks four times of "thy son's" inquiring about the meaning of Passover, and each time poses his question in different terms:

- Once (Deut. 6:20), he is represented as asking, "What mean these testimonies and statutes and judgments which the Lord our God hath commanded us ?"
- Another time (Exod. 12:26), he demands brusquely, "What means this service of yours?"
- A third time (Exod. 13:14), he asks simply, "What is this?"
- And a fourth time (Exod. 13:8), the question is not even framed, but merely implied.

This variation, said the sages, is purposeful; in each case the form of the question typifies the character and attitude of the inquirer, who is respectively wise, wicked, simple and too young to ask. Each must be answered differently, in appropriate fashion.

The "Litany of Wonders" is a cumulative poem reciting the benefits conferred by God on Israel at the time of the Exodus. Not only did He lead them out of Egypt, but He also punished the Egyptians; not only did He part the Red Sea, but He caused them to pass through it dryshod; not only did He lead them to Mount Sinai, but He gave them the Law; not only did He give them the Law, but He brought them to the Promised Land; not only did He bring them to the Promised Land, but He built the temple in Zion. As each of these benefits is recited, the company responds loudly with the word Day yenu, "Alone 'twould have sufficed us !" In all, fifteen benefits are enumerated, alluding, so the rabbis said, to the numerical value of the Hebrew word Yah, one of the names of God (cf. Exod. 15:2; Ps. 68:4).

The Hallel ("Praise") is the group of psalms, 113- 118, which is recited at all new moons and at all festivals and which is introduced by the word Hallelujah, "Praise ye the Lord." In the present instance, they are deemed especially appropriate, because one of the psalms (Ps.114) in fact describes events connected with the Exodus. These psalms, it may be added, were very probably the hymns intoned by Jesus and his disciples at its observance of Passover; called incorrectly the Last Supper.

Properly understood, the Seder ceremony is no mere act of pious recollection, but a unique and inspired device for blending the past, the present and the future into a single comprehensive and transcendental experience. The actors in the story are not merely the particular Israelites who happen to have been led out of bondage by Moses but all the generations of Israel throughout all of time. In an ideal sense, all Israel went forth out of Egypt, and all Israel stood before Sinai; and all Israel moved through darkness to the Presence of God, in the wake of a pillar of fire. Whenever the trumpets sound in history, they sound for all ages; and when the bell tolls, the echo lives on forever.

This is not a rarefied piece of modern rationalization. The conception of the Seder as an experience rather than a recitation runs like a silver thread through the whole of Jewish tradition and finds expression on every page of the Haggadah. "Every man in every generation," says a familiar passage (quoting the Mishnah), "must look upon himself as if he personally had come forth out of Egypt. It was not our fathers alone that the Holy One redeemed, but ourselves also did He redeem with them." Similarly, in the Litany of Wonders, it is not "they" but we who are said to have wandered for forty years and to have been fed upon manna in the wilderness, and finally to have reached the Promised Land. Everywhere the emphasis is placed squarely on the durative and ideal significance of the Exodus rather than on its punctual and historic reality. The Haggadah is the script of a living drama, not the record of a dead event, and when the Jew recites it he is performing an act not of remembrance but of personal identification in the here and now.

The Seder ceremony, said the sages, is valid only when the "bread of affliction" and the bitter herbs are actually before you. In a sense larger than they intended, these words epitomize its essential significance.

It may be said, in fact, that the central theme of the Seder is not-as commonly supposed-the Exodus from Egypt. That is merely its highlight. The central theme is the entire process of which that particular event happens to have been the catalyst. In Jewish tradition, the deliverance from Egypt is important only because it paved the way to Sinai; that is, to Israel's voluntary acceptance of its special and distinctive mission as the carrier of God's Laws to the nations; and what the Seder narrative relates is the whole story of how Israel moved progressively from darkness to light, from the ignorance and shame of idolatry to the consciousness and glory of its high adventure.

All through the ages, the very structure of the narrative has evoked its acceptance. In ancient times it began, on a note of shamefaced humility, with the words, "At first our fathers were worshipers of idols," (or, in an alternative version: "A wandering Aramean was my father") and ended with the triumphant chanting of the Psalms of Praise. Today, even though later accretions have somewhat obscured this dramatic sequence, it still opens (in most parts of the world) with a reference to the "bread of affliction" and closes in a breathless and inspired climax with the defeat of the Angel of Death. Moreover, the very sentence which begins with the words, "At first our fathers were worshipers of idols," ends significantly with the proud affirmation: "But now the Presence of God has drawn us to His service."

The several features of the ritual and the several elements of the narrative in turn reinforce this sense of continuousness. For neither ritual nor narrative is the product of a single age or environment-a mere heirloom or museum piece passed down intact and piously conserved. On the contrary, some parts of each go back to the days of the Second Temple, while others are no earlier than the fifteenth century. Ritual and narrative alike are therefore dynamic, not static creations - virtual kaleidoscopes of Jewish history - reflecting in their growth and development the various phases of Israel's career.

The form of the meal, for example, with the reclining on cushions, the preliminary dipping of parsley in salted water, and the customary consumption of eggs as an hors d'oeuvre, reproduces the typical pattern of a Roman banquet, and one may even suppose that the recital of the narrative and the conclusion of the repast with the chanting of psalms may have been modeled after the Roman practice of having literary works read aloud at meals and regaling oneself afterward with choral entertainment. Indeed, it is not at all impossible that the initial invitation to the hungry and needy, and the prescription that at least four (originally, three) cups of wine must be drunk, are likewise of Roman origin. For the fact is that it was common Roman practice for "clients" to wait upon their patrons during the day in order to pay their respects to them; and for this attention they were often rewarded by a formal invitation to join the company at supper. Similarly, pace the traditional explanations of the three or four glasses of wine, it is not without interest that a normal Roman dinner actually entailed a minimum of three cups - one for the preliminary libation to the gods, a second for the mutual toasting of the guests, and a third in honor of the hosts or, under the Caesars, of the emperor. To be sure, this minimum was usually exceeded; but so, too, are the minimum three or four cups of the Seder!

On the other hand, the afikomin is distinctly Greek, although the term now bears a meaning quite different from that which attached to it in Hellenic speech. The Talmud says that "men must not leave the paschal meal epikomin." This last word was really the Greek epi komon, a popular expression for "gadding around on revels"- the common nightly pastime of the "gay blades" of Hellas. The term, however, was subsequently misunderstood, and the sentence wrongly rendered: "Men must not leave out the afikomin after the paschal meal." The curious, unintelligible expression was then taken to refer to some special condiment or "dessert" which had to be served at the conclusion of the repast, and thence arose the custom of distributing small pieces of unleavened bread and calling them afikomin!

Similarly, when the door is opened "for Elijah," we are plunged at once into the Middle Ages, for the real purpose of this act seems to have been to provide an effective rebuttal of the terrible Blood Libel which asserted that Jews employ the blood of Christian children in the preparation of matzah. The door was flung open so that all might have a chance of beholding the complete innocence of the proceedings.

Lastly, the secular songs and ditties with which the service now concludes and which constitute its most recent - though most familiar - feature take us straight into Renaissance Europe. One of these songs, the famous "Ehad mi yodea" ("Who knows one?"), for example, has been traced by students of comparative literature to a popular and widespread "counting- out rhyme," the earliest specimen of which appears in Germany in the fifteenth century. In that earlier version, incidentally, the successive numbers refer to God, Moses, and Aaron, the three Patriarchs, the four Evangelists, and the five wounds of Jesus! Similarly, the Had Gadya ("Only One Kid") finds its earliest prototype in a fifteenth-century German folk song, Der Herr der schickt das Jockli hinaus, though here again, the wide popularity of the song is shown by the fact that early versions of it have turned up in most European countries.

It should be observed also that, in Oriental lands, quite a different set of popular chants is appended to the Haggadah. The Sephardim, for instance, have many such chants written in the Ladino, or Judeo-Spanish, dialect current especially in the Levant, while elsewhere, Judeo-Arabic and Judeo-Persian songs are in use. The inclusion in it of those "native" compositions likewise bespeaks the true character of the Seder as an expression of the total, continuous experience of the Jewish people.

Even the illustrations which adorn the older editions of the Haggadah conspire to create a picture of the entire stretch of Jewish history. The "wicked son" (who balances on one leg from one Seder to the next) is simply a Roman centurion; the one who is "too young to ask," and who holds up his hands like a questioning child, is taken directly from an earlier print of a slave in supplication before Hannibal; while the store-cities of Pithom and Raamses, which the Israelites were compelled to build for Pharaoh, are the walled towns of fifteenth-century Europe! All the centuries seem, as it were to blend and blur.

Nor is it only in the accidental development of its form, or in the externals of the traditional "book of words," that the "continuous" character of the ceremony is evoked. Several of the poems which have been added to the narrative portion of the Haggadah revolve around the theme that Passover was the occasion not only of the deliverance from Egypt but also of all the main deliverances - and, indeed, of all the main events - in Jewish history. This, of course, is pious fiction, but the fact that it was invented shows that in the minds of successive generations of Jews the Seder has always exemplified a continuous and durative experience. Moreover, that experience is projected into the future as well as retrojected into the past. Every detail of the Exodus, it is maintained, foreshadows an element of Israel's ultimate redemption.

On the final night of deliverance-the "night of vigil," as the Bible calls it (Exod. 12:42) - God will come to Israel as a lover serenading his beloved and eventually winning her as his own.

In another sense, too, the Passover story is a continuous experience. For if it is true that the punctual event which it celebrates possesses also a durative character, involving the children of all generations, it is equally true that the particular historical occasion of the Exodus represents a situation which is in itself seemingly perpetual and which is by no means confined to a single moment of time. In a larger sense, the villain of the piece is not a particular Egyptian Pharaoh - Seti I or Ramses II - but all the tyrants who have ever opposed Israel at any time; the Sea of Reeds is not the particular Lake Timsah (or any other similar expanse of water) which the Israelites had to cross on their way to Sinai, but all the obstacles which Israel has ever encountered throughout its career and which have yielded when the emblem of God was lifted above them; the manna is not the peculiar gum of Tamarix gallica mannifera, as learned botanists assure us, but that divine sustenance on which Israel has been fed continually while it has been roaming the world's desert to the place of Revelation - that "bread of angels" which has to be gathered afresh every morning and which (as the sages acutely observed) tastes different to every man. And the journey through the wilderness, in the wake of a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, is the eternal progress of Israel toward the Kingdom of God.

As we saw in the beginning of this study above the Passover is not to be understood only on the historical plane but as well On the seasonal plane. Passover marks the time when, in Palestine, the heavy rains of winter give place to the light showers, or "dews," of spring; and for this reason special prayers for "dew" are included in the morning service of the first day. But this dew is not merely a blessing of nature; it is also a symbol of God's beneficence toward Israel both in the past and in the future. It is the dew which was mentioned in Isaac's blessing upon Jacob (Gen. 27, 28); to which Moses compared his final discourse (Deut. 32:2); which fell upon Gideon's fleece as a sign that Israel would be saved from the Midianites (Judg. 6:37-38). It is also the dew of rejuvenation and resurrection - the "dew of youth" with which God anoints His Messiah (Ps. 110:3), and the "dew of lights" which, as the prophet says, will eventually fall on the "land of the shades" (Isa. 26:19).

WHAT ABOUT OUR PASSOVER TODAY?

The Passover festival then has two basic messages for modern man.

- The first is that deliverance from the scourge of bondage and the night of ignorance lies just as much in our own hands as in God's. If it is true that God delivered Israel from Egypt "not by the hand of an angel, nor by the hand of a seraph, nor by the hand of any one man sent, but by His own glory and His own self," it is equally true that in the world of men it is by the hands of men that His glory and His being can alone be revealed. The knowledge of God is precious and we must make every attempt to acquire it and once obtained we must then utilize it in concrete actions and behaviors that further the Kingdom of God in and through us and in the world.

- As we saw above the second message of Passover is that deliverance is continual. "The festival is celebrated," says the Haggadah, in its answer to the "wise son," "because of that which the Lord did for me, when I came forth out of Egypt." And the wise son understands. And I hope you do as well.

Much of this material was adapted from various books in my library; in particular excerpts taken from Theodor H. Gaster's Festivals of the Jewish Year.

THE PASSOVER AND THE HISTORICAL EVIDENCE

By Jewish tradition, the Exodus took place on Thursday, the fifteenth of Nissan in the year 2448 after Creation (variously identified as 1313, 1308, 1306, and 1280 B.C.E.). Working with stated time spans in the Bible books I Kings and Judges and excavations in Israel, archaeologists and historians generally place it at the latter date.

Although there are no Egyptian records corroborating the Torah's story which is not unusual in a culture that erased any evidence of weakness we are able to find various aspects of Egypt's history that provide neat correspondences to the Torah's account. Historians look back to Amenophis IV, also known as Akhenaton (1383-1365 B.C.E.), as a starting point. Many scholars today believe him to be the Biblical Moses of the Hebrew Scriptures. You might read that he abolished multiple idol worship in favor of monotheism of the sun but sad to say without much study on your part such an oversimplification does him and his movement within Egypt a terrible injustice for he was not a "sun worshipper" and although Egypt is known to have representations of various gods and goddesses these were all "attributes" personified that revealed the One true Creator; in other words these were but various pictures and representations of the "All in the One". In truth I have found upon my years of Egyptian study that at the core Egypt was an Ethical Monotheism. While he, by other's standards today, erroneously objectified his deity, he may have gotten the right idea through however in the fact that we find today this same influence of Akhenaton within the Israelites who were one of the foreign groups allowed to sojourn in the rich graze-land of Goshen on the edge of the kingdom. It is because of his influence in Egypt which no doubt affected these Israelites we find the same Ethical Monotheism in Judaism today. When his short-lived religious revolution was reversed and the Thebian priests were reinstated by his son, the Israelites that remained in Egypt who did not follow Moses in this Second of 4 Exoduses became victims of persecution at the hands of these reinstated Priests of Egypt. This is the story behind the story and if you want a fuller understanding of the events that lie beneath the pages of your Old Testaments in this regard then I highly recommend our Egyptian-Christian Website where the facts are there for your inspection.

Ramses 11 (1300-1234 or 1347-1280 B.C.E.), known for his ego, massive building program, and use of foreign slaves, gets the most votes as the Pharaoh who initially pressed the Israelites into forced labor following Akhenaton's departure (Moses). Many believe that it is he who was the adversary of Moses and date the Exodus under his son, Merneptah, who ruled a declining Egypt at the close of the thirteenth century B.C.E. It is interesting to note that the Torah specifies that two pharaohs were involved in the oppression [Exodus 1:8-10; 2:23].

This timing coincides with the four hundred thirty years Israel spent in Egyptian exile (Exodus 13:40), counted from the time the patriarch Abraham began his wandering in Egypt-dominated Canaan around the age of seventy. The Jewish midrash resolves the discrepancy between these 430 years and the 400 years told to Abraham: the four centuries began with the birth of Isaac. The covenant God made with Abraham, at the beginning of the Egyptian period, occurred three decades earlier. According to Jewish tradition, Israel sojourned in Egypt only two hundred ten years, beginning when Jacob settled there. That period is said to have been equivalent to four hundred years of suffering.

The search for artifacts and documents that can verify the Bible's account continues today, and archaeologists and historians still debate its veracity. Scholars (Winston Churchill among them) do not doubt that Israel was in Egypt. Many conclude, using evidence drawn from the political and social situation of the time, and the logic of human psychology, that the Exodus story is based on fact. For one thing, they point out, no other people in the history of the world has ever conceived a national myth that gives itself such a disgraceful past. It could only be a reflection of an actual occurrence. Besides that we have Manetho's writings, or what is left of them, that detail this as well. Manetho was an author and an Egyptian priest who was offered the patronage of the Ptolemaic court, the result of which was an orderly account, written in Greek, of the history of the Egyptian Pharaohs, which is still the basis of our conventional numbering of the dynasties.

While not denying that an unusual departure from Egypt took place, some secular scholars, contrary to classic Jewish tradition, claim that the Exodus account is the result of history mixed with fragments of folklore and legend influenced by other nations. They cite, for instance, a common myth of a child hidden at birth, often rescued from a watery death, who grows up to be a great leader and threat to the existing power structure. They also note that the particular rites by which Israel commemorated the event were borrowed from two distinct preexisting seasonal festivals observed by the Israelites themselves, long before the Exodus occurred and combined with new meaning into Khag Hapesakh/Khag Hamatzot (Passover and Unleavened Bread).

SEARCHING FOR THE "PATTERN OF WORSHIP".....ALL THE WAY BACK WITH EGYPT LONG BEFORE THERE WAS A "JEWISH NATION"...THERE WAS A "PASSEOVER"

Answer for yourself: Why is this important in our search for the recovery of the "Pattern of Worship" to know that we find the rudiments of what we call today "the Jewish Passover" in Egypt long before Moses?

Simply because it takes us further back into time to where we find the earliest records of mankind's sanctification of "times and seasons" which were given to man in the beginning by the Creator Himself. It is from such evidence we can trace down through history these "appointed times" with God whereby man worshiped the Creator in ways that are connected uniquely with these special times (Spring Equinoxes, Summer Solstice, Autumn Equinox, Winter Solstice, etc.). The good news for us to day is that the Jewish nation, as children of these earlier Egyptians, carry the heritage of their "spiritual" and "physical" fathers and the framework of the worship of these same "fathers" which comes down to us as the earliest records of mankind's worship of God on this planet. The parallels in the worship of God, as connected to these "special times and seasons" as found in the earliest Egyptian records which can be also found in Judaism today are simply astounding and we have them available at our fingertips today if we only know to "look". We see from such comparisons that there is truly nothing "new" under the sun but that is not enough; we must regather the original meanings of these "parallels" in worship if we hope to ever understand the true message connected with the worship of God at these special "appointed times" since down through history they have become heavy laden with false interpretations which has been affixed to them by Rome and others.

One of these "appointed times" was celebrated by shepherd families at the time of the spring full moon, when the flocks produced new lambs. It involved rituals similar to the paschal sacrifice designed to elicit good luck and protect the sheep and goats before the tribe left their winter quarters for spring grazing. This festival was supposedly brought with the Israelite shepherds following the Exodus when they settled in the rural areas of Canaan (predominantly the south).

The peasants in the land (the northern farmers) recognized the arrival of spring (the Spring Equinox) with a festival related to new grain. Prior to harvesting the barley, the Jews would get rid of all their sour (fermented) dough (used instead of yeast as a leavening agent) and old bread, perhaps to protect against an unproductive year. The first sheaf of the newly cut grain was offered as a sacrifice (First Fruits Offering).

Answer for yourself: Do you see the parallels from above with the later Jewish Passover and Unleavened Bread and even First Fruits? What do these ceremonies and times of "sanctification" mean to these ancients and have we heard this message today? Is within these "times and seasons" a message from the Divine about His true salvation offered to mankind? Does this message of the Divine found in these early ceremonies overlap with the message we find in Judaism today and does this message contradict the message of Rome and the Council of Nicea when they overturned Biblical Judaism and started a new official religion called Christianity? Our continued study will show us for certain the answer to these above questions.

Over time, say many scholars, Israel gave the rites deeper meaning based on their experiences, which included religious persecution, slavery and liberation from it. Even so behind it all remains the simple "gospel" given to all mankind which they don't hear today as Christians; unless of course they have studied Biblical Judaism and know it inside out for after all it was the faith of the Jesus depicted in the New Testament. For a deeper understanding of these events that led up to Akhenaton's religious revolution in Egypt and how this involved not only him but his ancestors as well such as Abraham, Pharaoh Jacoba (Jacob), and other Patriarchs (historically Pharaohs as archeology teaches us today) and even Joseph (chief vizier to Pharaoh) then you need to study in detail our Egyptian-Christian website to find out that God's image in the Heavens above was at the core of these 4 Exoduses from Egypt of which Moses' was the Second. It all has to do with the precession of the Equinoxes and the movement of the Constellations above; in particular Taurus and Aries (the bull and the lamb).

Answer for yourself: Does this not sound somewhat familiar in light of the various "sacrifices" of "bulls" and "lambs" we read about in the Old Testament? It sure does but you have to read the website to find out what this is all about. Let us move on in our study.

THE POST-EXODUS PASSOVER

The children of Israel were still wandering in the desert when they celebrated the first anniversary of the Exodus (Numbers 9:1-5). Since they had been commanded that anyone considered ritually impure could not offer a sacrifice (Leviticus 22:3-6), a second Passover, Pesakh Sheni, was instituted for those who on Nissan 14 had had contact with a corpse. To be held one month later (Iyar 14), in the same way as on Nissan 14, it was to be observed in the future by anyone who had been prevented from making the sacrifice in Nissan because she or he had been either ritually impure or on a journey.

Answer for yourself: Why is this celebration and observance of the Passover so important? This was the last Pesakh observed by the journeying Israelites until they crossed the Jordan River into Canaan at the Passover season thirty-nine years later. Then, the first religious act ordained was circumcision for every male. With the exception of Caleb ben Yefunah and Joshua ben Nun (of the twelve spies sent to scout Canaan, the only ones who retained their faith in God [Numbers 14:24-30]), the circumcised men who had left Egypt had all died in the wilderness, and those born after the Exodus had not been entered into the covenant because of the rigors of desert existence.

The act of allegiance reaffirmed their part of the covenant made between Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and God, the deal God offered the Israelites in Egypt and which they accepted at Sinai: He would be their God and lead them to the Land of milk and honey, and they would be His people, following His laws and acting as His agents for good on Earth. In other words Israel would be God's Holy Nation and Royal Priesthood for all mankind.

Exod 19:5-6 5 Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: 6 And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel. (KJV)

Once each man had become part of the people of Israel, sharing its responsibilities and destiny through this act of identification, the community was able to offer the paschal lamb (Joshua 5:2-10). Every year afterward, the sacrifice would be a reminder of the nation's responsibilities under the covenantal contract.

As long as the elders who guided the people after Joshua's death were still alive, the Israelites remained true to their Redeemer. But in the face of ignorance, lack of leadership, inaccessibility to Torah, and strong pagan influences around them, the next generation, which had not personally experienced the rigors of slavery and the miracles of salvation, wandered away from their parents' traditions, the sanctification of this "appointed time with God, along with the true message of God within these traditions and prior commandments".

Answer for yourself: Can we make parallels to this having happened to the non-Jews in Christianity today? We certainly can without a doubt!

"Pesakh", commemoration of one of the greatest things to have ever happened to the Jews, and which was observed first by non-Jewish Egyptians, was probably no more than a private family affair for a minority of pious people.

For hundreds of years the Israelites pursued an off-again, on-again relationship with their religion. They revived it under Samuel (the eleventh-century B.C.E. prophet), abandoned it after Solomon's kingdom split into rival idolatrous Israel and Jerusalem-centered Judah (932 B.C.E.), briefly approached it at Judean King Hezekiah's instigation (726 B.C.E.), then largely ignored it until they were within a generation of losing the Temple (619 B.C.E.).

At that time, in a clean-up campaign at the sanctuary, King Josiah's people found some Torah scrolls. Shocked at how much tradition had been lost, the monarch initiated a reformation. A call for repentance went out to all! All altars outside the capital were eliminated, and Jerusalem was established as the only meeting place for all pilgrimages. A public reading of Deuteronomy, containing the laws, led to immediate repentance by the people, capped by a public celebration of Passover attended by three hundred thousand people.

"Since the time of the prophet Samuel, no Passover like that one had ever been kept in Israel. . ." (II Chronicles 35:18).

Let us continue our study.

THE PASSOVER AS OBSERVES IN BABYLON

The Jews, exiled to Babylon after destruction of the Temple in 586 B.C.E., celebrated the Egyptian redemption as a model for their own hoped-for deliverance. Although in the absence of the sanctuary they could not make the paschal (or any other) sacrifice, they developed new ritual in prayer service.

Those who remained in the Diaspora (Greek for "dispersion," indicating any place Jews live outside Israel and their situation away from the homeland) continued to observe the holiday long after others returned to the Land when the Temple was rebuilt (516 B.C.E.). Jewish life in the Holy Land was revived, largely through the efforts of the scribe and leader Ezra, and though there continued to be periods of neglect and ignorance, such as the one leading up to the Maccabean Revolt, second century B.C.E., Passover from then on continued to be widely celebrated.

While maintaining the Bible's framework for observance, the ritual was expanded and enriched. The penalty for purposely not participating in the Pesakh sacrifice was karet (being cut off from the community). So the Jews made tremendous effort to get to Jerusalem. Anyone within a thirty-day journey (about nine hundred miles in those days), including a woman, was obligated to make the pilgrimage. Gradually during the Second Temple period, Pesakh emerged as the greatest Jewish national holiday.

The residents of Jerusalem welcomed the population-doubling pilgrims into their homes, providing free accommodation (the city was considered the common property of all the people); the travelers customarily left the skins of the paschal lambs for their hosts in appreciation. Overflow crowds stayed in surrounding villages or camped in the fields. A carnival atmosphere pervaded, the days and nights filled with festive meals, music, Torah study, and Temple pageantry, which began on the morning of Erev Pesakh (Nissan 14).

Through a series of signals from the Temple, and the Mount of Olives opposite, the people were informed when to stop eating leavened foods and when to destroy any leavened food left in their possession. Starting at noon on Nissan 14, in three groups successively crowding the Temple courtyard, the Israelites brought their paschal offerings, and unlike other sacrifices, slaughtered the animals themselves with the assistance of the priests and to the accompaniment of the Levite orchestra.

As prescribed by Torah, each family unit roasted its own lamb on a portable clay stove set up in the home courtyards. Dressed in white, groups embracing different status and economic strata joined together. With biblical references, they told the story of the night of the Exodus, based on Torah's commandment to pass it on to one's children (Exodus 12:26-27, 13:8, 13:14; Deuteronomy 6:20).

THE PASSOVER BEFORE THE FALL OF JERUSALEM

Two historic developments led to the evolution of Pesakh observance into the form we know today:

- the dominion of Rome over Palestine and
- the emergence of rabbinic Judaism.

In the centuries following Ezra's religious revival, controversy over the approach to Torah (and probably not a little over political maneuvering) split Jewish leadership. The Sadducees believed in literally following Torah and only what was explicitly stated in it. The Pharisees, heirs of Ezra and fathers of rabbinic Judaism, believed in extrapolating from Torah according to the Oral Tradition, also called Oral Law (Torah Sheh B'al Peh), believed by them to have been given at Mount Sinai along with the Written Law (Torah, or Torah Sheh Bikhtav) and passed from generation to generation by word of mouth. It allowed them to interpret the Torah's precepts for changing conditions in the world and the Jewish community.

A major disagreement related to Passover concerned their respective understandings of the Torah's designated timing for the counting of the omer (a measure of grain, commonly identified as a sheaf), the agricultural element of Passover and the system for marking off the fifty days between Pesakh and its companion holiday, Shavuot. At the start of the counting, a handful of meal ground from the grain was burned at the altar, the rest baked and eaten by the priest. A measure was sacrificed every day of the period. Not a single Jew could eat bread made from grain of the new harvest until the omer sacrifice had been made. The Israelites believed it symbolized protection for the harvest from harmful conditions, particularly winds.

Although one reference makes the first day relative ("start to count when the sickle is first put to standing grain" [Deuteronomy 16:9]), the original instruction tells the Israelites to offer the first sheaf, which initiates the count of seven weeks, on "the day after the Sabbath" (Leviticus 23:15). The Sadducees insisted that Torah meant the Sabbath that fell during Pesakh and therefore started their count on that Saturday night. The Pharisees took "Sabbath" to mean the day of rest that was the first sacred day of Passover and therefore began their count at the start of the second day of the festival-even if it meant cutting the barley on Saturday, an act normally forbidden that day. An elaborate barley-cutting ceremony that took place on Shabbat, just to emphasize their point, is described in Talmud.

It is interesting that the Ethiopian Jews, who did not reject Oral Law as did the Sadducees but were cut off from mainstream Judaism before it was written and explained, understood that "Sabbath" to mean the day after Passover ended, since the entire festival is a period of rest. So they began their count and celebrated Shavuot six days later than that of the Jewish world.

The triumph of the Pharisees in the last century prior to the destruction of the Second Temple led to new observances and themes for the holiday. An expanded religious service, which we know as the Passover seder (order, for the order of service), began to develop. Looking for symbols of freedom and luxury, the sages found them in the culture to which Israel had been exposed for about two hundred years: Roman banquets and Greek (Hellenistic symposia: drinking wine throughout the meal (with a blessing of thanks to God), reclining on sofas, eating leisurely, and discussing the topic of the evening.

During the Roman occupation, Passover's theme of redemption fanned the hopes of a messianic deliverance. Having long believed that God would again provide miracles such as those experienced at the Exodus, the Jews anticipated a new Moses who would lead them to freedom on the eve of Passover. With this expectation the Jews continued to celebrate Pesakh as a commemoration of the first redemption and the imminent occurrence of the second. The last supper of Jesus, which took place during the Roman rule, was the meal of the paschal sacrifice on the Erev Pesakah 33 C.E.

Outside Jerusalem, where the sacrifice could not be made (some people symbolically ate roast lamb), Passover was observed with services at the local synagogue and at home with the same family service performed in the capital. It consisted of:

- a kiddush (sanctification over wine);
- eating herbs or some spring vegetable-dipped in vinegar or red wine
- three questions asked by a child about the out-of-the-ordinary rituals being performed at the table
- household head's answers to the questions personalized according to the child's level of comprehension;
- explanations of the significance of the night of Nissan 14;
- a meal of the paschal lamb, matzah, bitter herbs (maror), and a pasty mixture of fruit, nuts, and wine called kharoset;
- a cup of wine following the post-meal grace;
- and for those who had eaten the paschal lamb (in Jerusalem only), chanting of Hallel (Psalms of Praise, 113-118).

THE PASSOVER AFTER THE FALL OF JERUSALEM

Like all other aspects of Jewish worship, the paschal sacrifice and everything connected with it had to be reevaluated once the Temple was destroyed (70C.E.). All that remained possible of the biblical commandments for observance was the prohibition of leavening. Though now truly Khag Hamatzot, it retained the name Pesakh (for the passing over), although the pesakh (paschal offering) could no longer be made, and became a home ceremony featuring the story of ancient slavery and salvation. That story served as a model for the fight to liberate Jerusalem from Roman occupation in the next century, and for following generations, for the struggle to maintain Jewish life.

As if to bolster their own hopes, the sages elaborated on the number of miracles God performed for the Israelites in Egypt and emphasized the moral significance of the holiday. To commemorate their importance, the paschal sacrifice and its accompaniments appeared on the Passover table in symbolic form, and the typical two cups of wine for festive meals was doubled so one would fall at each of the key points in the ceremony. Detailed, formalized responses to the seder's questions began to be set down, and expressions of thanksgiving were added, along with the proclamation that every Jew, in every generation, was to feel that she or he had personally experienced the Exodus.

Rabbi Gamliel, the first-century sage, expanded the story beyond the events of Nissan 14 to include all the wonders and miracles of the entire Exodus. He issued the famous dictum included in the written version of the seder, that "He who does not stress these three rituals on Passover does not fulfill his obligations: pesakh, matzah, and mar or." The three questions became four and were periodically changed in order to reflect altered aspects of the ritual and remain a challenge to children. Specific political developments were reflected in additions, such as interjection of a prayer for a brighter future by Rabbi Akiva. The sage who died a martyr in the second-century Hadrianic persecutions felt that the existing prayer thanking God for the great light of freedom and redemption was incongruous with reality for the Jews living in the shadow of Rome.

Commentary, analysis, and legend were added to embellish the meaning of the Passover story throughout editing of the Mishnah (the written version of the Oral Law, second century) and development of the Talmud (commentaries on the Mishnah, fifth century) with its tractate devoted to the laws and stories of Pesakh (Pesakhim, paschal lambs).

Since Pesakh Sheni (called Minor Passover in Mishnah) was instituted strictly to allow for sacrifice to be made, absence of the Temple ruled out its need. For symbolic commemoration, a prayer of supplication was omitted from daily service. The sages determined that the period of the Omer, however, seen as a link between Pesakh and Shavuot, should still be counted, even though the offerings that marked its start and end had been eliminated. It became a period of semi-mourning, when weddings, haircuts, and playing of musical instruments were prohibited (except for on the new moons of Iyar and Sivan, which fall within it, and its thirty-third day).

During the early Talmud period (second century), one new observance was added: the fast of the firstborn. The only fast limited to a segment of the community, it is attributed to Rabbi Judah Hanasi (redactor of the Mishnah), who fasted on this day. Ironically, some say that although he was a firstborn son, his action was not in commemoration or appreciation for Israel's firstborn having been spared when the Egyptians were killed in the tenth plague. He simply had a weak constitution and wanted to save his appetite for the anticipated seder meal! Thus can customs be born.

THE PASSOVER DOWN THROUGH THE MIDDLE AGES TILL TODAY

Discussions among the sages continued for centuries until the content and format of the seder became relatively established and universally accepted. By the eleventh century, the text which is a combination of biblical passages, material from midrash, and liturgical poems was established and is virtually the one we use today, and in the next century appeared in a separate publication called the Haggadah.

Jews in the medieval European ghettos loved Passover, finding inspiration in the events of the past and eternal hope for the future.

THE BLOOD LIBELS

Unfortunately, the joyous anticipation generated by the approach of the holiday gave way to abject terror, beginning in the latter part of the Middle Ages with the spread of malicious blood libels at Passover time, which occurs around the date of Easter. In 1144, the first accusation, in Norwich, England, maintained that the Jews had killed a Christian child, repeating the crucifixion of Jesus.

The ridiculous and slanderous lie, enhanced with the claim that the murdered child's blood was needed for the baking of matzah, spread all over Europe, inciting massacres against innocent Jews. Christians in Arab lands in the nineteenth century and Nazis in the twentieth century kept the lie alive. The trumped-up cases and murderous rampages even spread as far as America in the 1920s. Recently, the libel has resurfaced in post-Soviet Russia.

The sad reality inspired fictional accounts, the best known being Heinrich Heine's The Rabbi of Bacherach and Bernard Malamud's The Fixer, based on the 1911 Jacob Beilis case in Russia, which also served as background for Sholom Aleichem's The Bloody Hoax. The legendary Golem, the clay automaton said to have been created by Rabbi Yehudah Lavi of Prague (the Maharal) in the late sixteenth century, existed primarily to guard the community against attacks spurred by the false charges.

Despite the threats, the Jews never ceased observing Pesakh, believing with the indomitable faith for which they are famous (and despised) that the story needed to be told, and deriving renewed strength from it. The only major change was the addition, between the fourteenth and sixteenth centuries, of a number of songs following the service, although these were not universally adopted.

The messages of Passover continued to inspire oppressed Jews throughout the world. Based on the description of Passover in the prophetic books of the Bible to which they had access in the Christian version, the marranos (hidden Spanish and Portuguese Jews forced to renunciate Judaism during the fifteenth-century Inquisition and their descendants) continued to observe Passover. Jews in the Warsaw ghetto observed a modified seder on Erev Pesakh 1943, the night of the start of the ill-fated heroic uprising. Even concentration camp inmates somehow scrounged up the barest essentials and prayed for the deliverance of their people and vanquishing of their oppressors.

In the post-World War II era, the theme of freedom became linked with the fate of displaced, Soviet, Ethiopian, and other endangered communities of Jews whom many prayed would be liberated. It is no coincidence that the most famous of the ships bringing refugees to Palestine after the war was named Exodus ' 47, and that the powerful metaphor was used for the name of the dramatic clandestine airlift that brought close to ten thousand Ethiopian Jews to Israel in 1984-1985 (Operation Moses) and the campaign to fund immigration and settlement of Jews from the former Soviet Union (Operation Exodus).

With its universal messages of freedom from oppression for all people, and its particularistic promises of protection for the people of Israel, Passover remains the most observed holiday among Diaspora Jews.

THE JEWISH ENCYCLOPEDIA ON THE PASSOVER...WHAT CAN THE GENTILE LEARN?

If you have access to the Jewish Encyclopedia you learn some very important things if you read about the Passover. Let us not forget that we are looking into the possible existence of a "Pattern of Worship" that exists that is a true picture of the worship of God as intended originally to which the Christian Church as severely departed in this day. In researching the Passover from a Jewish Perspective we find many astonishing things.

Other names by which the Passover is called are :

- Hag ha-mazzot (fest.);
- Hag ha-Pesah (fest.);
- Pesah (fest.); Seder, Passover

Traditionally the passover is a spring festival spring festival, beginning on the 15th day of Nisan, lasting seven days in Israel and eight in the Diaspora. It commemorates the Exodus from Egypt. The first and seventh days (the first two and last two in the Diaspora) are yom tov (a "festival" on which work is prohibited) and the other days hol ha-mo'ed ("intermediate days" on which work is permitted).

NAMES AND HISTORY

The biblical names for the festival are: hag ha-Pesah ("the feast of the Passover," Ex. 34:25), so called because God "passed over" (or "protected") the houses of the children of Israel (Ex. 12:23), and hag ha-Mazzot ("the feast of Unleavened Bread"; Ex. 23:15; Lev. 23:6; Deut. 16:16). Pesah is the paschal lamb, offered as a sacrifice on the eve of the feast (14th Nisan) in Temple times; it was eaten in family groups after having been roasted whole (Ex. 12:1–28, 43–49; Deut. 16:1–8). A person who was unable (because of ritual impurity or great distance from the Sanctuary) to keep the "first Passover" could keep it a month later—Pesah Sheni ("the Second Passover," also called "Minor Passover," Num. 9:1–14).

According to tradition, the Passover rites were divinely ordained as a permanent reminder of God's deliverance of His people from Egyptian bondage. The critical view points to two distinct festivals in the Bible; the feast of unleavened bread, a pastoral feast, and the Passover, an agricultural feast.

In the Book of Joshua (5:10–11), it is said that the Israelites led by Joshua kept the feast at Gilgal. The Book of Kings relates that Passover was kept with special solemnity in King Josiah's reign in the seventh century B.C.E.: "The king commanded all the people, saying: 'Keep the passover unto the Lord your God, as it is written in this book of the covenant. For there was not kept such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah; but in the eighteenth year of King Josiah was this passover kept to the Lord in Jerusalem'" (II Kings 23:21–23).

As far as can be ascertained, the Passover festival was kept throughout the period of the Second Temple. Josephus records contemporary Passover celebrations in which he estimates that the participants who gathered in Jerusalem to perform the sacrifice in the year 65 C.E., were "not less than three millions" (Jos., Wars, 2:280). The Talmud (Pes. 64b) similarly records: "King Agrippa once wished to take a census of the hosts of Israel. He said to the high priest, 'Cast your eyes on the Passover offerings.' He took a kidney from each, and 600,000 pairs of kidneys were found there, twice as many as those who departed from Egypt, excluding those who were unclean and those who were on a distant journey; and there was not a single paschal lamb for which more than ten people had not registered; and they called it: 'The Passover of the dense throngs.'" Allowing for hyperbole, the account of immense crowds assembled to offer the paschal lamb cannot be too far from historical reality.

The Samaritans considered all the biblical rules regarding the sacrifice of the lamb in Egypt (Ex. 12) to be applicable for all time. The practice, as recorded in the Mishnah (Pes. 9:5), is that only Pesah Mizrayim ("Passover of Egypt") required the setting aside of the lamb four days before the festival, the sprinkling of the blood on lintel and doorposts, and that the lamb be eaten in "haste." The Mishnah (Pes. 10:5) explains the commands of the lamb sacrifice and the eating of mazzah ("unleavened bread") and maror ("bitter herbs") as follows:

- the lamb is offered because God "passed over" (pasah);
- the unleavened bread is eaten because God redeemed the Israelites from Egypt (Ex. 12:39);
- and the bitter herbs, because the Egyptians embittered their lives (Ex. 1:14).

With the destruction of the Temple, the offering of the paschal lamb came to an end, although it is possible that for a time the sacrifice was continued in modified form in some circles (Guttman, in: HUCA, 38 (1967), 137–48). The other rites and ceremonies of the Passover festival continued as before. The Samaritans, however, still sacrifice the paschal lamb in a special ceremony on Mt. Gerizim near Shechem. The Last Supper, mentioned in the New Testament (Mark 14, Matt. 26, Luke 22), may be the seder meal.

Early Christians observed Easter on Passover and Roman Christians on the Sunday after Passover. Later the blood libel against Jews was frequently connected with the Passover festival.

THE SEDER

The special home ceremony on the first night of Passover, the seder ("order"), is based on the injunction to parents to inform their children of the deliverance from Egypt: "And thou shalt tell thy son in that day, saying: It is because of that which the Lord did for me when I came forth out of Egypt" (Ex. 13:8). The Mishnah (Pes. 10:4) gives a formula of four questions which are asked by the child and to which the father replies "according to the son's intelligence". During the Middle Ages a special order of service for the seder was adapted with a formal reply to the questions (culled from various rabbinic sources) and with supplementary material such as table hymns and jingles calculated to appeal to children. These are recorded in the Passover Haggadah. The Mishnah (Pes. 10:1) rules that even the poorest man in Israel must not eat on the first night of Passover unless he reclines. In mishnaic times, free men would normally recline at meals and on this night all must demonstrate that they are free. In the Middle Ages, in many communities, the custom of reclining at meals during the year was abandoned, but it became a duty to recline at the seder. During the seder, one must partake of four cups of wine (Pes. 10:1). These were interpreted symbolically as corresponding to the four expressions of redemption in the Book of Exodus (6:6–7) or the four cups mentioned in the Book of Genesis (40:11–13) in connection with the dream of the chief butler (TJ, Pes. 10:1, 37c).

On the seder table are the following items: three (in some rites two) cakes of mazzot placed one on top of the other; a roasted egg and shankbone or other bone (as reminders of the paschal lamb and the festival offering in Temple times); a dish of salt water (for "dipping" and as a symbol of the Israelites' tears); maror such as lettuce (or horseradish) for "dipping"; and haroset ("clay"), a paste made from almonds, apples, and wine (Pes.

10:3) for the purpose of sweetening the bitter herbs and as a symbol of the mortar the Israelites used when building under the lash of their taskmasters. The seder follows this standard order:

- (1) kaddesh ("sanctification"): the festival is introduced by the Kiddush benediction in which God is praised for giving the festivals to Israel;
- (2) rehaz ("wash"): the hands are washed in accordance with the ancient practice of ritual purification before partaking of anything dipped in liquid;
- (3) karpas ("greens"): the parsley is dipped in salt water;
- (4) yahaz ("division"): the middle mazzah is broken in two and one half is hidden. This latter portion is known as the afikoman ("the after-meal") and is eaten at the end of the meal, as a reminder of the paschal lamb which was eaten at the end so that its taste would remain in the mouth. It is customary for children to look for the afikoman, a prize being given to the successful finder;
- (5) maggid ("recitation"): the Haggadah is recited;
- (6) rahzah ("washing"): the ritual washing of the hands before breaking bread;
- (7) mozi ("bringing forth"): Grace before Meals is recited: "Blessed art Thou... who bringest forth [ha-mozi] bread...";
- (8) mazzah: pieces of the top mazzah and the broken middle one are eaten;
- (9) maror: the bitter herbs are dipped in the haroset and eaten;
- (10) korekh ("binding"): a sandwich is made of pieces of the bottom mazzah and bitter herbs and eaten. This is a reminder of Hillel's practice in Temple times, based on the verse: "They shall eat it [the paschal lamb] with unleavened bread and bitter herbs" (Num. 9:11);
- (11) shulhan arukh ("prepared table"): the festive meal is eaten;
- (12) zafun ("hidden"): the afikoman is found and eaten;
- (13) barekh ("blessing"): Grace after Meals is recited;
- (14) Hallel ("psalms of praise"): Psalms 115–8 are recited. It was customary in Temple times to recite these psalms at the time of the offering of the paschal lamb (Pes. 5:7);
- (15) nirzah ("acceptance").

It is customary to have on the seder table a full cup of wine known as "Elijah's cup." Reflections on past deliverance awaken hope for the final redemption, and Elijah, being the herald of the Messiah (Mal. 3:23), is welcomed; toward the end of the seder, the front door of the house is opened to demonstrate that this is a "night of watching" (Ex. 12:42) on which Israel knows no fear. In the Diaspora the seder is repeated on the second night. On the second night of Passover the counting of the omer is begun. The laws of Passover in the Talmud occur in the talmudic tractate Pesahim. In the United States several additional prayers have been suggested by different groups. These include a prayer on behalf of the Holocaust victims, one for Russian Jewry, and a prayer of thanksgiving for the State of Israel, usually combined with a fifth cup of wine. The

LAWS AND CUSTOMS OF THE PASSOVER

No hamez ("leaven") is to be found in the house or owned during Passover (Ex. 12:15, 19). On the night before the festival, the house is thoroughly searched for hamez (Pes. 1:1). All leaven found in the house is gathered together in one place and burned on the following day before noon (Bedikat Hamez).

According to rabbinic authorities, the obligation to eat mazzah applies only to the first night (Pes. 120a); it is customary, therefore, to prepare special mazzot, the wheat of which has been under observation from the time of reaping or grinding (mazzah shemurah), for it. During the remainder of the festival, though leaven may not be eaten, there is no obligation to eat mazzah. Some rabbinic authorities were opposed to the use of mazzot baked by machine.

Utensils in which leaven has been cooked, baked, or boiled must be specially treated before they can be used on Passover. The method is to immerse them in a caldron of boiling water, or, if they are utensils used on a fire, to heat them in a fire until they glow. However, not all vessels can be treated so. Unlike other forbidden food which becomes neutralized and may be eaten if mixed in 60 times its bulk, on Passover, the smallest admixture of hamez is enough to render a dish forbidden (see Dietary Laws).

On the first day of Passover in the synagogue, a special prayer for dew (tal) is recited and the phrase morid ha-geshem is not said. On the Sabbath of Passover, the Song of Songs is read in the synagogue (Ashkenazi rite). Full Hallel is recited on the first day (two days in the Diaspora) and half-Hallel the rest of the festival. On the last day Hazkarat Neshamot is recited. When the liturgy refers to the festival, it does so as "the period of our freedom." Herut ("freedom"), is, in fact, the dominant note of Passover.

A CRITICAL VIEW OF THE PASSOVER

Now here is where it gets very interesting to the discriminating reader.

The feast of Passover consists of two parts: The Passover ceremony and the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Originally both parts existed separately; but at the beginning of the Exile they were combined. Passover was originally not a pilgrimage feast, but a domestic ceremony consisting of the slaughtering and eating of the paschal animal. This animal—according to Exodus 12:21 (J) a sheep or goat, according to Deuteronomy 16:2, either a sheep or a bovine animal, according to Exodus 12:5 (P; cf. II Chron. 35:7), a year-old lamb or kid—was killed, in accordance with later texts (Ex. 12:6; Lev. 23:5; Num. 9:3–5; 28:16 (33:3); Josh. 5:10; Ezek. 45:21; Ezra 6:19; II Chron. 35:1), on the 14th of the first month (i.e., the 14th of Nisan, March/April), "between the evenings" (Ex. 12:6b; Lev. 23:5; Num. 9:3, 5, 11; 28:4, 8), i.e., at the setting of the sun. The early texts, Exodus 23:15 and 34:18, however, place the Festival of Unleavened Bread in "the season of the hodesh of Abib, since it was at the hodesh of Abib that you went free from Egypt," and Deuteronomy 16:1ff. places the slaughtering of the Passover sacrifice in "the hodesh of Abib, seeing that it was in this hodesh of Abib that you went free from Egypt at night..., so that you may remember the day you went free from Egypt"; and it has been argued that the last cited passage in particular makes poor sense unless hodesh designates not a 30-day period ("month") but a single day, i.e., the New Moon. (Both senses of hodesh are well attested; which is intended in this case can be confirmed only from the context.) The rite of touching the lintel and the doorposts of the house (formerly the tent) with blood from the paschal animal was connected with the slaughter (Ex. 12:7, 13 [P], 22 [J]). The flesh of the animal was boiled, according to Deuteronomy 16:7; but later—by II Chronicles 35:13a—this was interpreted in light of the P (Ex. 12:8–9) to mean broiling (cf. LXX, Deut. 16:7), and this is the rabbinic halakhah (Pes. 5:10). The flesh was then eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs (Ex. 12:8b; cf. Deut. 16:3a), during the night (Ex. 12:8a), in a community meal, in which the whole family or a combination of families (Ex. 12:4), but no uncircumcised persons (Ex. 12:48b; cf. 12:44–45, 48a [P]), took part. No flesh was allowed to remain until the next day (Deut. 16:4b).

Nothing is found in the Bible about the original meaning of the Passover rite. There is no clue in the name "Passover" (Heb. pesah) because its etymology is uncertain. The assumption that the Passover was originally a sacrifice of the firstborn (G. Beer and others) is incorrect

- (1) because according to Exodus 22:28–29 and Leviticus 22:27, the firstborn of the sheep, ox, and goat was to be offered on the eighth day,
- (2) because according to PC (Ex. 12:5), the Passover animal had to be a year old, and
- (3) because the regulations about the firstborn in Exodus 34:19, 20a and 13:11–13 are connected with the eating of mazzot (Ex. [34:18]; 13:3–10), but not with the Passover (Ex. [34:25]; 12:24–27a; Kutsch, Segal).

Originally the Passover was celebrated by transient breeders of sheep and goats, later by the Israelites, to secure protection for their flocks prior to leaving the desert winter pasture for cultivated regions (Rost).

Answer for yourself: Did we just read that the Passover existed in Egypt long before the Israelites? We sure did. Now when you go to our Egypt site you find out all about this and how the these Gentile Egyptians kept the Passover long before there was a Moses or an Exodus. This is fascinating stuff if you ask me.

The rite of the blood (see above) as well as the regulation, which was later still in force (Ex. 12:46b; cf. Num. 9:12), whereby no bone of the Passover animal was to be broken had an apotropaic significance. The oldest literary record in Exodus 12:21 (J) already presupposes the Passover. Hence the old nomadic custom is "historicized" by being connected with the main event in the Israelite salvation history, the Exodus. The reason for this connection was, from a traditional-historical standpoint, the situation of departure which belonged also to the Passover. Moreover, the rite of the blood made it possible to connect the Passover with the story of the killing of the Egyptian firstborn (Ex. 12:23), which was also inserted into the tradition of the Exodus as the reason why the Pharaoh let the Israelites go (Ex. 11:4ab–8; Kutsch). This "historicization" has determined the character of the Passover: it became the feast commemorating the Exodus (cf. Ex. 12:11–14a[P]; Deut. 16:1, 3).

Answer for yourself: Now knowing this does this not make you want to know just what lies behind these "Appointed Times" with God that these Egyptians knew and from which the Jews "borrowed"? It sure does for me anyway and the information is available on our Egypt site where we show you how Judaism is but an extension and an adaptation of Egyptian religion (the earliest Divine Revelation of God to man and the world's first Ethical Monotheism) when properly understood today: <http://egyptcx.netfirms.com>.

Originally, the Passover was celebrated among the families (Ex. 12:21 [J]) in tents, after the territorial occupation, in houses. After the cultic centralization of King Josiah, the celebration of the Passover was transferred to the central Sanctuary in Jerusalem (Deut. 16:2, 7; II Kings 23:21–23). The requirement that the slaughtering, preparing, and eating of the paschal animals was to take place in the forecourts of the Temple was maintained after the Exile (II Chron. 30:1–5; 35:13–14; Jub. 49:16, 20). Later, because of the large numbers of participants, the paschal animal was killed at the Temple place, but boiled and eaten in the houses of Jerusalem (e.g., Pes. 5:10; 7:12). The transfer of the Passover feast to the Temple entailed the end of the rite of blood; the blood of the paschal animals was, like other sacrificial blood, now poured on the base of the altar (II Chron. 30:16; 35:11).

The reason for the institution of a second Passover on the 14th day of the second month (Num. 9:10–12 [P']), which is wrongly ascribed in II Chronicles 30 to King Hezekiah of Judah, is not a difference in calendar between Judah and Northern Israel (cf. S. Talmon, in: VT, 8 (1958), 48–74) but the possibility that a Jew might be prevented from taking part in the feast on the 14th day of the first month because of uncleanness or a distant journey.

THE FEAST OF THE UNLEAVENED BREAD

Unlike the Passover which was borrowed and adapted by the Israelites from Egyptian Religion, the seven-day Feast of Unleavened Bread, which was celebrated in the month of Abib (Ex. 13:4; 23:15; 34:18), is probably taken over from the Canaanites. Now before you jump and run thinking that all Canaanite Religion is evil try to understand that this is the faith of Abraham. What you don't know as of yet is why Ezra, when rewriting the Jewish Bible when the captive Israelites were released from Persia, so pictured Egypt and Canaanite so negatively in the passages which later became the Jewish Bible. That I am sad to say is a study for another day but you find hints of this on the Egypt site mentioned above. The main custom of the feast of Unleavened Bread is the eating of unleavened bread or mazzot (e.g., Ex. 23: 15; 34:18). The required pilgrimage (Ex. 23:14–15, 17; 34:23; Deut. 16:16), originally to a local sanctuary, later—after the cult centralization of Josiah—to Jerusalem, is secondary to the eating of mazzot.

Originally the feast extended over a week beginning not on the day following the Paschal night but on a "morrow after the Sabbath." The counting of the seven weeks until the "Feast of Weeks" (Pentecost; Lev. 23:11, 15–16). In Deuteronomy 16:9 it is described as the day on which the Israelites "first put the sickle to the standing grain" and the grain harvest is begun. Because of its proximity to the traditional date of the Exodus, the mazzot feast was also connected with the Exodus and thus "historicized" (e.g., Ex. 12:29–34, 37–39 [J]; cf. 12:15–20; 23:15; 34:18 [P]; Deut. 16:3b). A yearly celebration of the march through the Jordan (according to Josh. 3–4) on the Feast of Unleavened Bread (Kraus, Soggin) cannot be derived from the late text Joshua 5:10– 12; and the thesis that therefore the mazzot feast was celebrated in older times as an "election feast" in Gilgal (Wildberger) is contradictory to the fact that the Exodus was also remembered in the celebration of the Passover. Until shortly before the Exile (Deut. 16:7b), the participants in the celebration of the Passover returned home after the celebration at the Temple (the instructions about the mazzot feast in Deut. 16:3ab, 3b, 4a, 8 and 16 are a secondary enlargement [Horst]; even then the Passover and mazzot feasts (as pilgrimages) were still celebrated separately. To fix a common date for the Jews in Babylonia the mazzot feast after 587 B.C.E. was given a fixed date, the 15th to 21st of the first month, and thus connected with the Passover (first mentioned Ezek. 45:21; Lev. 23:5,6; Num. 28:16, 17; Josh. 5:10, 11; Ezra 6:19, 22; II Chron. [30:15, 13 21–22] 35: 17a, 17b; cf. also the Passover papyrus from Elephantine).

PASSOVER IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

The combined Passover—mazzot Feast is also presupposed in the New Testament. The name here refers

- a) to the celebration of the Passover (Matt. 26:18; Mark 14:1; Heb. 11:28);
- b) to the whole feast (Matt. 26:2; Luke 2:41; 22:1; Acts 12:4; especially in John 2:13, 23, et al.; for this name "[feast of] unleavened bread" [Mark 14:1, 12; Luke 22:1, 7; Acts. 12:3; 20:6] is also used), and
- c) as in the Old Testament (e.g., Ex. 12: 21), to the Passover lamb (Mark 14:12, 14, 16; Luke 22:8, 15; John 18–28; II Cor. 5:7).

The connection of the death of Jesus with the Passover is important. According to the synoptic gospels, Jesus was crucified on the 15th day of Nisan, the first day of the feast; the Christians understand the last supper of Jesus as a Passover meal, during which the salvational meaning of Jesus' death is disclosed (Mark 14:22, 24).

Answer for yourself: Why is this a big, big problem?

The gospel of John, on the other hand, dates the death of Jesus to the 14th of Nisan (John 19:14; cf. 18: 28), to the hour of the Passover slaughtering (cf. John 19:14, 31; Mark 15:33–34, 37; cf. Pes. 5:1; Jos. Wars, 6:423), and the meal to the night of the 13th of Nisan. This does not have calendaric (Jaubert), but theological reasons.

Answer for yourself: Is someone trying to "create theology" here when there is none?

Unlike the synoptic gospels, John interprets Jesus as the Passover lamb but the Synoptic Gospels do not! (John 1:29; 19:36; cf. e.g., otherwise I Cor. 5:7; I Pet. 1:19; Rev. 5:6). [Ernst Kutsch]

Answer for yourself: So what did we see that we should not forget?

Namely, as expertly detailed in our Egypt - Christian website, these "Divine Appointed Times" with God were known from the earliest Divine Revelations of God to mankind (Egyptians were Gentiles) that predated Israel and which were kept and observed by these Egyptians which we also soon learn upon dedicated study are the true parents of the Jewish Race. No wonder these "Jewish Children" of Egypt learned of these previously existing "special appointed times with God" and adapted them to their unique situations down through history.

LOOKING AT THE PASSOVER IN THE NEW TESTAMENT TEXTS

Everybody knows that Passover is very important festival for the Jewish people. In fact the Festival of Passover begins the Festival cycle for the Jewish people and the Hebrew Scriptures. However not many people realize that observance of the Passover was also an important festival for the Gentile Church during the first century, and should still be observed by Christians today.

Answer for yourself: Can you find any Biblical injunction against keeping and observing the Passover for either a Jew or a non-Jew? Is there any passage in either the Old or New Testaments which command the cessation of observance of the Passover? You won't find any. There is no Biblical reason for dispensing with it.

Answer for yourself: Where do we find the regulations and rules for observance of the Passover? We find them in Exodus 12:1-28, Leviticus 23:4-8, Numbers 9:1-14, Deuteronomy 16:1-8. The festival involves making a sacrifice, although this has been laid aside since the Temple was destroyed in 70AD. Without a Temple sacrifices cannot be preformed but they will resume once the Temple is rebuilt. Here is where the problem comes in. Many who have studied the Passover have come to erroneous conclusions concerning the Passover based on these verses alone. Many Christians argue that observance of the Passover is but "Old Testament dead works of the law".

Answer for yourself: Is this true?

Little do the majority of Christians and Pastors realize how much the New Testament emphasizes the Passover, not just in the Gospels, but also in the book of Acts and the letters of Paul.

LOOKING AT THE PASSOVER IN THE GOSPELS

Yeshua (Jesus) was brought up in an observant family that went to Jerusalem every year at Passover.

Luke 2:41 41 Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover. (KJV)

It is recorded in the New Testament texts that he was crucified in Jerusalem while the Jews were gathered together for Passover. Let me share something new with most. The New Testament record tells us that Jesus and the Apostles ate the Passover meal with his disciples EARLY....(in advance of the actual date because he knew he would no longer be with them).

Answer for yourself: Are you aware of this fact? The story is given in Matt. 26, Mark 14, Luke 22, telling us how he took the bread and wine to signify his body and blood, and how he was to be betrayed. John 13 also gives us the story, including the betrayal, but focuses on the washing of the disciples feet.

Luke's Gospel tells Yeshua's actual feelings concerning observing the Passover. He did not observe it legalistically, as if he was under compulsion. He said to his disciples

"With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: for I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God". (Luke 22:15-16).

Yeshua desired to eat the Passover, and we should desire it also, and we are commissioned to teach the Nations all that he commanded (Matt. 28:18-20).

THE PASSOVER IN THE EARLY CHURCH

Answer for yourself: When Yeshua celebrated Passover with his disciples, an event that is commonly called the "Last Supper", was this the last Passover for his followers and did Passover cease thus allowing the emergence of Easter? No way!

Notice what we find in Acts chapter 12 which is around thirty years following the death of Jesus.

In Acts 12:1-4 we are told that there was persecution of the church during "the days of unleavened bread", and the soldiers intended to bring Peter up to the people "after the Passover" (Green's Literal Translation - the KJV erroneously says Easter instead of Passover). Of course this was done on purpose by the translators in order to try and make it look as if the early church was observing Easter when in fact they were not; they were observing the Passover and Unleavened Bread and later Pentecost (Shavuot). This is the ONLY instance in the whole of the New Testament where the Greek word "Pascha" is NOT TRANSLATED AS "PASSOVER" and instead translated as "Easter".

Answer for yourself: Do you think this was done on purpose to cover up to the reader that the early church was following the Jewish "Pattern of Worship" instead of the Roman pattern we have today? Why not translate "Pascha" as Passover as it had been done all 28 times before? Why this one time did they not continue in their normal way of translating "Pascha" as "Passover"? Could it be that they wanted to show that the early church was not following in their Jewish Roots but rather in a Roman custom instead? Was this backwritten to change "the faith once given the saints" (Jude 1:3)?

Answer for yourself: Why should it mention Passover and the days of Unleavened Bread, unless the Believers continued to celebrate it? These were the Jewish Believers in Jerusalem, and it is certain that they celebrated these festivals.

Let us notice as well Paul's example in Acts 18:21 where he observes the Passover and takes special efforts to do so.

Acts 18:21 21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus. (KJV)

Notice his insistence: "I must by all means" keep the Biblical Festivals and in this instance it is most likely the Passover. This was at the end of his second journey. It does not say which feast it was, but it probably means the biggest feast of the year, which is Passover.

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that Paul also observed not only Festivals and Sabbaths but "Fasts" as well?

Acts 27:9 9 Now when much time was spent, and when sailing was now dangerous, because the fast was now already past, Paul admonished them, (KJV)

This refers to the biggest fast of the year which is Yom Kippur. He was a prisoner at the time, on his way to Rome, and he was able to observe Yom Kippur because it simply meant not eating or drinking.

During Paul's third journey he spent three years at Ephesus (Acts 19:10, 20:31). He wrote his first letter to the Corinthians while he was at Ephesus and told them of his desire to see them, but he would stay at Ephesus until Pentecost. (1 Cor. 16:5-8).

1 Cor 16:5-8 5 Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia: for I do pass through Macedonia. 6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go. 7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit. 8 But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost. (KJV)

So he celebrated Pentecost with the Ephesian Church. So here we find the example that this Gentile Synagogue-Church were keeping the Festival of Shavuot or Pentecost which commemorated the giving of the Torah to the Jewish nation and Moses. Then Paul left for Macedonia and Greece, which means Corinth. He stayed there for three months, and then went back through Macedonia, stopping at Berea and Thessalonica (Acts 20:1-4). He went to Phillipi where he celebrated Passover and the days of Unleavened Bread, then he sailed to Troas (Acts 20:6).

Acts 20:6 6 And we sailed away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days. (KJV)

Then he was in a hurry to get to Jerusalem in time for Pentecost, so he sailed along the coast of Asia Minor, stopping at a few places along the way but missing out Ephesus where he would be sure to get delayed. (Acts 20:13-16).

Acts 20:13-16 take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot. 14 And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene. 15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus. 16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost. (KJV)

Now we have just seen Paul say that "I must be all means" and now it is said about him that "he hasted" in attempts to keep and observe the Biblical Festivals and Feasts and Fasts. Paul knew the importance of these for him in his worship and his Gentile congregations as well.

So Paul seems to have organized his life around the festivals. Pentecost at Ephesus, Passover at Phillipi the following year, then Pentecost again at Jerusalem.

PAUL'S FIRST LETTER TO CORINTH

Paul wrote his first letter to the Corinthians while he was in Ephesus. In 1 Corinthians Paul talks about his plan to stay in Ephesus until Pentecost. There are seven weeks from Passover to Pentecost, and he says so much about Passover, it seems most likely he might have written the letter during the Festival. Many scholars concur with this assessment.

In 1 Cor. 5:6-8 he says:

Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us: therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

Paul is giving them a direct command to observe Passover, and he is also telling them what it means using a strong allegory. Paul taught that the Israelites ate unleavened bread before they came out of Egypt because they left in a hurry and there wasn't enough time for the dough to rise. The traditional Jewish teaching about Passover is that leaven means being sin or puffed up with pride. When they came out of Egypt they could not boast of any acts of nobility, since they had no army and they were entirely dependent on the miraculous intervention of God. Getting rid of the leaven means getting rid of our pride or sin in one's life. Paul wrote his letter about 58 AD, before the destruction of the Temple, so the Jews in Jerusalem would still be making sacrifices at this time. Paul goes on to tell them that Christ is their Passover sacrifice, so there is no need for any other sacrifice, but they should still celebrate the Passover.

In 1 Cor. 8:1 he says:

Now as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.

This is obviously another reference to Passover, and the need to get rid of the leaven.

In 1 Cor. 10:16 he says:

The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many are one bread, and one body, for we are all partakers of that one bread.

Answer for yourself: What could "the cup of blessing" and the "bread broken" refer to in the above passage?

This is another obvious reference to the Passover meal that Yeshua had with his disciples before his execution. During the Passover meal there are four cups, the cup of sanctification, the cup of deliverance, the cup of redemption, and the cup of praise. The reference to "the cup of blessing" would have been the third cup, the cup of redemption. Paul refers to it as the "cup of blessing" in this passage. Paul also appears to refer to two of the Passover cups in 1 Cor. 1:30 where he says "sanctification and redemption".

In 1 Cor. 11:23-26 he says:

For I received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread: and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.

Again another reminder of the Passover meal, and he goes on to say that people should not eat the bread and take the cup of the Lord unworthily, but should understand what it means. It isn't just an occasion to get together, have a meal, and have a good time.

SO WHAT HAVE WE SEEN CONCERNING GENTILES AND THE PASSOVER?

At this point it should be obvious that the Gentiles in the Early Church were observing Passover. We have seen conclusively that not only did Paul keep and observe the Biblical Festivals and Feasts and Fasts but modeled and taught in the synagogues both Jews and Gentiles to "keep the feasts". Paul's letters were to churches that were made up of both Jews and Gentiles, and it is unimaginable that he would want a Passover just for the Jews, where Gentiles were excluded.

Before closing we need to mention one thing concerning Acts 15 and James' ruling concerning the non-Jew and his being included in the Israel of God. Some call this "grafting" into the vine. Just to emphasize the point, we should turn to Acts 15 where the Gentiles were complaining about circumcision. The Council of Jerusalem met and resolved this question of circumcision by agreeing that the Gentiles would not have to be circumcised, or keep the whole law of Moses, but has to observe certain essential things. But what few see is that the Jerusalem Church also dealt with how Jews and non-Jews were to fellowship together when they met together for observance of Festivals and Feasts. Let us look at Acts 15:20:

- Abstain from pollutions of idols.
- Abstain from fornication
- Abstain from things strangled.
- Abstain from blood.

Most look at these 4 admonitions of a summary statement concerning 4 of the 7 Laws or categories of Laws and Commandments within the Covenant of Noah for the non-Jew. And let me say that this is correct in a way but the real intent of these 4 admonitions, on a deeper level, concern issues involving dietary laws that were of paramount importance if Jews and non-Jews were to have social relationships around the table and Festivals and Feasts. On a deeper level these 4 admonitions refer to dietary laws only. The emphasis on the dietary laws was to ensure that the Jews and Gentiles would be able to meet together for Passover and all the other festivals that involve food, including the regular weekly Shabbat. The Gentiles had to observe the essential elements of a Kosher diet, so that they could do their fair share of the work, preparing the food for the communal meals.

So we have seen an abundance of New Testament references about Passover, making complete hogwash of the notion that observance of the Passover (or other Biblical Festivals or Fasts) are but Old Testament dead works of the law which are to be abandoned by Christians. The early church observed them, and the Apostle Paul not only commanded but modeled for his Gentile congregations that they should be observed. There is nothing in the New Testament that suggests that this festival, or any other festival, should be abandoned.

Answer for yourself: If we are going to repent and return to the Biblical festivals, in accordance with the practices of the Early Jewish and Gentile Synagogue-Churches whose examples we have just seen both in Israel and Asia, Minor, then what do we do about the Christian festivals such as Christmas and Easter? The answer is simple - we cease and desist observing them and we sanctify ourselves from them since they have no Biblical basis and are derived from paganism.

CAN WE FIND ATONEMENT IN THE PASSOVER?

Earlier in my life an evangelical Christian I was taught to draw a comparison between the Passover Lamb and Jesus. My teachers insisted that the former foreshadows the latter. This same idea is advanced in the New Testament, particularly in the book of John where Jesus is portrayed as the fulfillment of the Passover lamb.

Through my years of study as I combed through volumes of materials to help better understand Passover and the Day of Atonement I was brought to have questions about where exactly in the Passover do we find the forgiveness of sins that was taught by the church as pictured by the death of Jesus. My research verified for me that instead of looking at the Passover for atonement of sin one must look to the Day of Atonement, and only then we find atonement for unintentional sins and sins of the first Tablet of the Law. Remembering that Jesus is taught to be the Passover Lamb for the life of me I cannot make any connection with this representation and the forgiveness of sin. Such is a major problem for the thinking Christian.

- Answer for yourself: How valid is the premise that the Passover sacrifice foreshadows the life and ministry of Jesus?
- Answer for yourself: What is the Passover holiday really about?

LOOKING AT THE PASSOVER

The Bible relates that when the Jewish people were preparing themselves for their momentous exodus from Egypt, God commanded them to slaughter a year-old sheep or goat on the 14th day of the first month (Nissan) and publicly place its blood on the outside doorposts of their homes. Because missionaries insist that this blood was the antitype of the blood of Jesus at Calvary, it behooves us to question the soundness of this claim.

The Torah never states or even implies that the Passover sheep or goat atones for sin. This notion that the Paschal lamb is a representation of a crucified savior or atonement for sin is as foreign to the teachings of the Jewish Scriptures and the Torah as is the notion of the man in the moon. Such identifications of crucified saviors and atonement can be found but not in Judaism; one has to look at Gentile Sun Worship and their crucified Sun Gods and Sun-Godmen to find such teachings. The hidden truth that most never see when studying the Exodus was the judgment of Egypt's false gods by the true and living God. Every one of the plagues upon Egypt was a Divine Judgment against their false gods and the Lamb was no exception. The death and desecration of the Lamb in Egypt was a dramatic statement against the false gods of Egypt by Moses who himself was heading up a tremendous rebellion against idolatry in Egypt. One only needs to read good books on this topic to understand the reason for such plagues in the first place. There was no atonement in such an action by Moses and the rest of the "mixed multitude."

A careful and dedicated study aimed at verifying the truth rather than vindicating one's present actions reveals that the Torah had alluded to the Paschal Lamb long before the exodus from Egypt had occurred. Centuries earlier, the Almighty tested Abraham's faith when God commanded him to sacrifice his beloved son Isaac. As the two ascended Mount Moriah together, Isaac turned to his father and asked, "Here is fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for the offering? Abraham then replied, "God will see to a lamb for an offering, my son." The question that immediately comes to mind is: What happened to that lamb that Abraham promised? A few verses later we find that it was a ram, not a lamb that was sacrificed!

Answer for yourself: Where was the lamb to which Abraham was prophetically referring?

The answer of course is that our father Abraham was referring to the Paschal Lamb. Just as God tested Abraham's faith to show his worthiness to be the father of the Chosen People, the young Jewish nation also had to have their faith tested to show their worthiness to participate in the exodus from Egypt, receive the Torah at Mount Sinai, and become the progenitors of the covenant people who would forever be known as "a light to the nations."

In the pagan Egyptian society; where the Jewish People were enslaved, the lamb was considered a sacred god, similar to how the cow is deified and worshipped in India today. In ancient Egypt, molesting a lamb in any way was considered a crime punishable by death. That is why when Egypt was overcome with the third plague of lice, Moses refused Pharaoh's initial offer that the Jews bring their sacrifice to God while remaining in Egypt. He explained that if the Israelites were to kill these animals before the Egyptians, they could be stoned. Therefore, the Almighty used this to test the faithfulness of the Jewish people by commanding them to not only kill Egypt's secret god, but to publicly place the lamb's blood on their doorposts for all to see. Thus, only those Israelites who, like Abraham, demonstrated that their fear of God exceeded their fear of the Egyptians, will be deemed worthy to have their homes passed over during the tenth and final plague.

Answer for yourself: Did you read anywhere for yourself that forgiveness of sins is connected to the Passover ceremony? No.

Answer for yourself: Acknowledging that forgiveness of sin and atonement is connected with the Day of Atonement/Yom Kippur, then how do we account for the fact that the death of Jesus is supposed to atone for sin according to Christianity when his death was at the wrong time of the year at the wrong Biblical Festival no less? There is no atonement connected with Passover and if Jesus' death is to even be remotely considered as a form of atonement by Christianity then if they are true to "types and shadow" fulfillments then Jesus should have died at Yom Kippur. He did not!

For Christians who consistently say that Jesus "fulfilled" the Biblical Festivals it would do them good to study the Biblical Festivals from a Jewish view and try to understand them the way the Jewish scholars and people understood them. In so doing they would see that atonement is connected with the Fall Biblical Festivals and not the Spring Festivals. Atonement is connected with the High Holy Day of Yom Kippur and was NEVER connected with the Passover. If one is true to "types and shadows" and tries to apply such an analogy to Jesus then understand in the most critical of all analogies [atonement] you are out of step with the Festivals themselves and forcing your pre-formed theology into time frames where God's message to us is completely different.

It would do us well right now to understand in summary from Gods' mo'eds [appointed times] and Biblical Festivals. Here in summary fashion is the message in the Biblical Festivals that Moses and the Jewish people have always understood.

UNDERSTANDING THE BIBLICAL FESTIVALS CORRECTLY

God makes His salvation available through faith and this foundational concept is pictured in the physical salvation of Israel from Egypt. Faith is not just a "mental assent" but an alive response to a religious beliefs. Saving faith is not dead but alive and responds. The key is responding in "obedience." This response can be called appropriately "works" for such actions as one's fruit of one's faith accompany such beliefs for if the Israelites had not responded accurately & obediently to their faith in God and failed to apply the blood to their door then they would likewise had died. So we learn that faith that responds in obedience "saves."

What we need to notice is that this "saving faith" was seen at the Passover. Salvation of God delivers the believer from death and this salvation is "imputed" to us yet the reality of its fullness yet awaits us. You might say we have an "earnest" of our salvation today but not the whole ball of wax; at least not yet. Passover serves as the starting place for one's faith in God and His saving Word. It is one's obedient faith to the Words of God that produces this "saving faith" and the Passover was the perfect example for demonstration of one's faith in the God of Israel and in so doing then God's judgment of sin "passes over the believer" due to his obedient faith. Of course for us such obedience [Israel responded in saving faith by applying the blood of a lamb to their doorposts] is seen in obeying the various Commandments of God involved in our unique Covenants with God; both for the Jewish people and the non-Jews as well.

Once we are saved by our faith in God with obedience unto Him at our personal Passover one comes to the next Festival of YHWH where we learn of the purpose of the Festival of Unleavened Bread. The Festival of Unleavened Bread follows "faith in God and his Word" where obedience really comes to the forefront. It is time to get the "leaven" (picture of sin in the Bible) or sin out of our lives. Since sin is the transgression of the Law then getting this "breaking of God's Commandments" out of lives means that we must grow in our understanding of God's Torah and Laws which frame our respective Covenants; both Jewish and non-Jewish [for the Christian the Covenant and Laws of Noah]. This is a sanctification whereby we make ourselves through repentance and obedience to the Word of God acceptable vessels for God's Spirit to inhabit.

Once we grow as worthy vessels for God's spirit to inhabit through repentance and a heightened obedience then God's Spirit comes to such a one in the fulfillment of Pentecost. We have just personally experienced our own Passover where God's judgment passes over us because of our faith in Him and obedience to His word. As our obedience grows then God comes to dwell within us to the degree that we are worthy vessels. As we find in Israel we find in our own lives. These first three Festivals are called the Spring Festivals and they are observed during the first rainy season in Israel.

It helps to understand that Israel had two rainy seasons a year separated by a long dry period. We find the same example in our lives. We all get excited when we come to God, turn from sin, and are filled with His Spirit. But over time the day to day drudgery of life wears us down. We like Israel experience our own dry period as symbolized by a life-time of temptation and drudgery. We are confronted daily of living lives that overcome or lives that fail. Once we are saved, cleansed, and filled with God's Spirit, we are equipped to live out our lives where we must deal with the good and the bad as we encounter them in life. Sometimes life is hard as seen in the dry season following Pentecost; yet we have the Spirit of HaShem to comfort and sustain us throughout the middle and autumn years of our lives.

After the dry season of Israel and our lives we come to the next Festival which is Rosh HaShannah which symbolizes our death at the end of our life. Rosh HaShannah is the resurrection and judgment. It is appointed for man to once die and then the judgment which is also a second part of Rosh HaShannah. After the resurrection at Rosh HaShannah and the judgment and reward for believers as well as non-believers, then one awaits final atonement at Yom Kippur. The only thing lacking is the eternal dwelling of the Spirit of God with mankind at the Festival of Tabernacles. This is the eternal Sabbath where God and man are one. This is only a summary to say the least of what the Biblical Festivals reveal...the Plan of Salvation of God.

And if you noticed, this plan is very understandable to the Jew and non-Jew without trying to "force" Yeshua to fulfill passages that yet remain unfulfilled.

It is these Biblical Festivals, correctly understood as given above, which will further enable the Jew and the non-Jew to become one in expectation of the coming of the Messiah.

As you see the cycle of observance of the Biblical Festivals, called a "mo'ed," in Hebrew, literally means a "rehearsal." What God intends is that all His Children, both Jew and non-Jew, keep and observe these rehearsals in order that they learn God's true plan of salvation and in so doing make their calling and election certain in order that they be the "bride" and not find themselves excluded. God repeated His salvation message to His people year after year in order that no one get it wrong. With Rome's help...we did!

Matt 22:9-14 9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. 10 So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests. 11 And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment: 12 And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless. 13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. 14 For many are called, but few are chosen. (KJV)

2 Pet 1:10 10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that the sacrificial system and blood atonement as understood by the Rabbis and the Jewish people ONLY provided atonement for the sins of ignorance of the First Tablet of the Law [sins between man and God] and intentional sins were not atoned for in the least?

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that the sacrificial system and blood atonement as understood by the Rabbis and the Jewish people DID NOT provide atonement for the sins of the Second Tablet of the Law [sins between man and man] and that these sins were NEVER atoned for in the least through Temple blood offerings?

Answer for yourself: What are Christians to do once they come to the realization that even if atonement was connected to Jesus' death, the "lamb" and the sacrifice of a lamb at Passover, or even at Yom Kippur, then what are we to do once we come to the understanding that such blood and lamb atonement never atoned for intentional sins or the sins of the Second Tablet of the Law?

Answer for yourself: It is possible, just possible that Jesus was right in teaching repentance and return to obedience to the Commandments of God as a form of atonement? Have we missed the true message of Eternal Life and atonement as taught by Jesus, the Rabbis, and the Jewish people and accepted a false atonement instead? It is just possible that Rome, because of their hatred of Jews, gave us their own brand of Sun Worship in their own book called the New Testament and their version of Sun God atonement and we not know?

It is time to study our Hebrew Roots of Christianity to uncover the truth and the answers to these questions.

IS THERE A RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN JESUS AND THE AFIKOMAN IN THE PASSOVER?

I have heard Christians claim that although Jews don't realize it, at the seder we single out the middle matza because it represents the Messiah (the three matzot together representing the Trinity), we break the middle matza because it signifies his death by crucifixion, and we then hide the part of the middle matza (called the afikoman) to signify his burial. Finally we "resurrect" the middle matza, just as Jesus is said to have rose from the grave.

Answer for yourself: What is the truth of this claim?

Such a premise rests on an analogy between the use of the three matzot and the Trinity doctrine, and if anyone has done their personal study on the origin of the Trinity they found that such pagan ideas were based on historical and theological ignorance. There are intrinsic flaws in this analogy, which dispel the illusion which is sought. Let me enumerate just a few.

Jesus is alleged to be the ultimate paschal lamb. Christians maintain that the afikoman (one part of the broken middle matza) was instituted by early Jewish Christians to commemorate that claim through a unique set of symbolisms which include the three matzot of the rabbinic seder. However, a careful scrutiny of such claims shows that there is no analogy between the afikoman and Jesus. It is the whole middle matzah that the Christians claim symbolizes Jesus. They then allege that the afikoman, half of the matzah, is hidden to signify his burial and that in essence we "resurrect" the afikoman, just as, according to their claim, Jesus rose from the grave.

Such a claim is unequivocally false. The afikoman refers, not to the whole middle matzah, but to one portion of it, after it has been divided in two. Without the two pieces of the middle matzah being visibly reunited and then once more becoming part of the "unity," there can be no analogy with Christian trinitarian and messianic claims concerning Jesus. Yet, once removed from the stack of three matzot, the piece set aside for the afikoman never returns neither to the "unity" nor to the other part of the middle matzah. Thus, the middle part of the "unity" that the missionaries emphasize as symbolically significant is never restored to its full complement. Only part of it is retrieved at the conclusion of the seder. This retrieved piece cannot represent the allegedly wholly risen Jesus. The claim that the afikoman, a portion of the middle matzah, symbolizes Jesus as the paschal lamb contradicts the Gospel of John. John declares that the body of Jesus, corresponding to the missionaries' middle matzah, remained unbroken. John places great emphasis on the allegation that Jesus' bones were not broken so that he could fulfill the commandment that not one bone of the paschal lamb should be broken (John 19:36, cf. Exodus 12:46).¹⁹ In addition, the New Testament claims that Jesus rose bodily from the tomb (Luke 24:39, John 20:27). Thus, this broken middle matzah could not symbolize Jesus as the paschal lamb. For such an analogy to occur, the complete matzah would have to remain unbroken.

According to such Christianization of the Jewish Passover, the matzah that is broken in half, wrapped, and put aside until the end of the seder represents the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus. Hence, it is alleged, the broken matzah reintroduced into the seder service is called aphikomen, "the coming one." This notion, in actuality, symbolically negates the claim that Jesus underwent a complete bodily resurrection. The afikoman is only a portion of the broken matzah; it is the whole middle matzah that would have to symbolize the risen Jesus. Furthermore, the connection of the word afikoman with the reintroduced piece of matzah is first used in the medieval period. In addition, the use of three matzot instead of two also dates to a late period many hundreds of years after the death of Jesus. There is no way the Christian's explanation can have any truth to it.

Answer for yourself: But does the truth matter or does one's theology prevail?

Shalom.

DID THE EARLY GENTILE CHURCH KEEP THE PASSOVER FOR OVER TWO CENTURIES?

Answer for yourself: Is there any New Testament passages or historical evidence that will prove that the New Testament Church observed the Passover long after the time of the death of Jesus as recorded in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Can we prove that the New Testament church kept the Passover ten years after the death of Jesus as recorded in the New Testament? Well let us look carefully at the Book of Acts to see if we can find any clues.

Act 12:4 And when he had apprehended him, he put [him] in prison, and delivered [him] to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that the New Testament translators, out of all the times they used they translated the Greek word "pascha" as "Passover", decided to use instead of its tradition meaning "Passover" the word "Easter" ONLY in this passage in Acts 12:4?

Answer for yourself: Why were they not consistent in translating the word "Pascha" as "Passover" as they have in ALL OTHER INSTANCES OF THE WORD when found in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Are they trying to cover up the fact that the early church observed Passover instead of Easter which was a pagan fertility festival?

The word "Easter" is a purposeful mistranslation and deception and it not accurate to the text and the intended meaning let alone history. The original Greek word used in the Greek texts of the New Testament is "pascha" which is indeed "Passover" as shown below:

Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

- the paschal sacrifice (which was accustomed to be offered for the people's deliverance of old from Egypt)
- the paschal lamb, that is, the lamb the Israelites were accustomed to kill and eat on the 14th day of the month of Nisan (the first month of their year) in memory of the day on which their fathers, preparing to depart from Egypt, were bidden by God to slay and eat a lamb, and to sprinkle their door posts with its blood, that the destroying angel, seeing the blood, might pass over their dwellings;
- the paschal supper
- the paschal feast, the feast of the Passover, extending from the 14th to the 20th day of the month Nisan

GENTILES OBSERVING PASSOVER

Now we shall see what Paul taught the Gentiles regarding the Passover feast with it's new symbols of the unleavened bread and the wine.

1 Cor 11:23 For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus the [same] night in which he was betrayed took bread: 24 And when he had given thanks, he brake [it], and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. 25 After the same manner also [he took] the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink [it], in remembrance of me. 26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.

Without question the reference his to the night before the crucifixion refers to the "last supper" which in Judaism was the "last supper" where one could eat leavened bread. Thus the reference to the "sop" dipped we find in the other Gospels. This is the dinner before the Passover Lamb would be offered in the Temple the following day. Paul taught the Gentile Christians in Corinth to keep Passover. Paul spent much of his time in and around the Gentile city of Ephesus in Asia Minor (modern Turkey). Evidently the churches in Asia Minor continued to keep Passover while most of the other "Christian" churches adopted the pagan festival of Easter.

Polycarp was appointed by the Apostles to oversee the Christian church in Smyrna near Ephesus. The early Catholic historian Eusebius wrote about Polycarp...

"While Anicetus was at the head of the church of Rome [AD 154], Irenaeus relates that Polycarp ... had a conference with Anicetus on a question concerning the day of the pascal feast [Passover] But Polycarp also was not only instructed by apostles, and acquainted with many that had seen Christ, but was also appointed by apostles in Asia & was the bishop of the church of Smyrna [Revelations 2:8] He also was in Rome in the time of Anicetus and caused many to turn away from the ... heretics to the Church of God, proclaiming that he had received from the apostles this one and only system of truth" Ecclesiastical History, book IV, chapter 14, in the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, vol.1

What is of major importance for us is that during his time in Rome, Polycarp discussed the celebration of a pagan festival which was the forerunner of present day Easter celebrations - in the place of the Passover feast.

Here's what Eusebius wrote about this meeting....

"Neither could Anicetus persuade Polycarp not to observe what he had always observed [the Passover] with John the disciple of our Lord, and the other apostles with whom he had associated" book V, chapter 24

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Polycarp, a non-Jew and Bishop of the Church of Smyrna around 150 A.D. (today known as Izmir), a city on the west coast of Turkey, would not stop observing the Passover and would not observe the pagan festival we call Easter today?

Within 35 years the Passover controversy reared it's ugly head again. Victor, the bishop of Rome, attempted to excommunicate every church that still kept the Passover feast. Eusebius continues on, now regarding this event....

"But the bishops of Asia, led by Polycrates [a later bishop who succeeded Polycarp], decided to hold to the old custom handed down to them. He himself, in a letter which he addressed to Victor and the church of Rome, set forth in the following words the tradition which had come down to him: 'We observe the exact day; neither adding, not taking away. For in Asia also great lights have fallen asleep, which shall rise again on the day of the Lord's coming, when he shall come with glory from heaven, and shall seek out all the saints. Among these are Philip, one of the twelve apostles ... moreover, John, who was both a witness and a teacher, who reclined upon the bosom of the Lord ... and Polycarp in Smyrna, who was a bishop and martyr.... All these observed the fourteenth day ... the passover according to the Gospel, deviating in no respect, but following the rule of faith. And I also, Polycrates ... do according to the tradition of my relatives.... My relatives always observed the day when the people put away the leaven [in preparation for the Feast of Unleavened Bread]'" book V, chapter 24

Answer for yourself: When did Polycrates, the Bishop of Ephesus, Asia, Minor, write this letter? It is estimated around 196 A.D. which should take our breath away when we realize that now we have two testimonies of the efforts being made by Gentile Church leaders to maintain to "the faith once given the saints" in refusing to change the traditions handed down by the Apostles to the world that required non-Jews as well as Jewish believers to keep and observe the Passover and not switch to the pagan fertility customs called "Astarte" or "Easter"!

Thus we have historical evidence that for 200 years Gentiles in the true church of God kept the Passover feast even after the pagan feasts has been introduced to Christendom.

PERSECUTION OF THE SMYRNA CHURCH

It was prophesied that the Smyrna church would be persecuted....

Rev 2:8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive; 9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and [I know] the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but [are] the synagogue of Satan. 10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast [some] of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

This "synagogue of Satan" composed of people who claimed to be Christians (spiritual Jews) but in fact belonged to the apostate church which began even before Constantine!

PASSOVER IN THE MILLENNIAL KINGDOM

Let's study some Bible proof that the Passover will be observed during the millennial Kingdom.

Mat 26:29 But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

Luke 22:15 And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

Luke 22:16 For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

Meanwhile the New Testament church is commanded to keep the Passover now in this age....

did the first century church keep the passover over 2 centuries?

*1 Cor 5:8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. (KJV)

1 Cor 11:25 After the same manner also [he took] the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink [it], in remembrance of me.

1 Cor 11:26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.

Here we see examples for us that should teach us that not only did the disciples but the Gentile followers "Jesus" and "the Christ" in Corinth in Asia, Minor, over twenty years after the death of Jesus, were observing the Passover at the admonition of Paul to "keep the feast" with unleavened bread which identifies for us that he was referring to "the Pesach" or "the Passover". Thus the Christian church was expected to keep the Passover feast as part of their worship of God as both history and the texts of the New Testament reveal. The apostles kept the Passover, and certain Christians today are keeping this feast as well and NOT the pagan festival of Easter. Such is pure worship which is not tainted with idolatry and paganism. Shalom.

THE RISE OF CONSTANTINE

The Roman Emperor Constantine was born around 280 AD as Flavius Valerius Constantinus to an important Roman family in the province of Moesia, which is now Serbia, formerly a part of Yugoslavia. His mother, Helena, was the daughter of an innkeeper and His father, Constantius, was appointed Caesar of Gaul (France) and Britain in 293 AD by Emperor Diocletian.

At that time the Roman Empire, being so vast, was divided among sub-rulers chosen for political reasons by the supreme Emperor. Governors, called Plutarchs, controlled provinces Caesars controlled larger regions and Augustuses controlled eastern or western empires, whereas the supreme Emperor controlled all of the empire. Within this structure there were Consuls, who derived imperial power from the Senate's consent and sometimes became usurpers or Caesars in waiting for the Emperor's throne.

In addition, Caesars and Augustuses could have relative power based on seniority, but inevitably the power and loyalty of their respective armies would decide their actual dominion.

While a young man Constantine was kept a virtual hostage at the court of Galerius, the Augustus of the eastern empire. Constantine escaped in 305 AD and joined his father, Constantius in Gaul. The next year his father died and immediately his father's army hailed Constantine as Caesar of Gaul and Britain. For five years he was content with ruling this region, but then Diocletian abdicated his throne, which allowed subtle rivalries to erupt into open warfare. Caesar Maxentius acclaimed himself supreme emperor. Then Constantine invaded Italy and headed straight for Rome. Maxentius with his army went out of the city to meet Constantine for battle at the now famous Milvian Bridge. It was here in 310 AD that Constantine won his greatest victory, pushing the enemy into the Tiber River. In the battle, Maxentius drowned and Constantine entered Rome as the unchallenged Augustus of the western empire.

Constantine accredited a vision he had in a dream for his victory at the Milvian Bridge. He claimed he saw a symbol in the sky and a banner which read, "Under This Sign Conquer". Contrary to popular belief, that sign was not the "Christian" cross as we think of today. Constantine gave it the cryptic title of Labarum. According to some accounts of the symbol which he commissioned to be made and put on a spear-like standard, and which was put on all his army's helmets, it looked something like a P with an X overlaid (X). Later, Christian apologists contended this sign was a Greek letter Chi over a Greek letter Rho and was a reference to the first two letters of the Greek Christos. This was to argue that Constantine had a form of religious conversion to Christianity at the point of this vision. However, the Labarum was never known to have a Christian meaning before Constantine and no account from Constantine declares it to be a standard for Messiah. R. Koch says the Labarum symbol "probably developed from an ancient oriental representation of the rising sun, in which the ball of the sun [the "P" sign] is shown over a cross [the "X" sign] representing its rays." This explanation is consistent with the fact that Constantine was a sun-worshipper.

In very ancient paganism the Labarum symbol was called the "sun-wheel". It consisted of an "O" with an "X" inside it, touching all sides of the "O", and an "I" within the "X", also touching the "O". Later the "O", which stood for the sun, came to rest on the top or side of the "I", forming the "P" symbol. This is traceable to the Egyptian ankh which was a symbol of fertility and life, and the Gothic runes which in fortune-telling stood for gift (X) and giant (P). In rune spell-casting the "X" was supposed to protect "one against the poison cup" and the "P" was supposed to "induce madness". The Labarum was also used in astrology, born out of Babylonian paganism, to signify the "sextile" or 60 degree position of the planets in relation to the Zodiac. When the "X" was put next to the "P", forming the pharmaceutical "Rx" symbol, it meant a constellation was in a "state of retrogradation." By Constantine's time this superstition and symbolism was very well known among the masses of the empire. Constantine could have very well perceived these meanings and attempted to associate both the sun-god and rune symbolism as one mighty talisman of good fortune for his army.

The Greek alphabetical letters "X" and "P" were not used by Roman generals in battle, because Greek was considered the technical language of the day, not the language of warfare or common symbolism. Besides, there is no cause to expect that the Chi "X" and Rho "P" looking Labarum referred to the first two letters of Christos. There is no evidence that such a use of these Greek letters would cause anyone to suppose such a meaning at that time. Further, the pagan symbolism of the Labarum was already ingrained in the common psyche. Since Constantine was a master politician he could have tried to convince clergymen privately that the Labarum had some Christological meaning, but the masses of the day knew the pagan origins of the sign. To associate Messiah with such a known pagan symbol would have been abominable. If that really was the case, then the institutional church of that time was culpable for accepting Constantine's sign of pagan homage as its own symbol.

We do know Constantine's Labarum had a picture of him hanging from it, and we can properly acknowledge that whatever Constantine saw had and has no scriptural authority or precedent as a sign of the true L-RD's favor or power. Yet, to Constantine it was a talisman which gave him confidence and authority. Since, in his confessed view, it was given to him in a vision by God, and by raising it he won the strategic battle and thus became emperor of Rome.

From that time on, Constantine became kindly affectioned toward Christianity, but it was an affection which came with many strings attached, much to the seemingly willing blindness of the institutional church. Constantine issued the Edict of Milan in 313 AD. This edict granted Christians the right to openly practice their religion, to a degree. For this edict was followed by further edicts which would constrain and restrict certain practices and doctrines in opposition to Jewish practices, whether or not they were performed by Christians or Jews. Christian antisemitism was born!

Constantine became the ruler of the church. By his own authority he called church councils, installed and deposed bishops (imprisoning or banishing the disobedient), supplied payments to bishoprics which were taken by extortion from pagan temples, and imposed religious edicts under penalty of Roman law. No longer would the church as a whole fear punishment for being Christian, but under Constantine the seeds were sown for the individual to fear very much to be the kind of Christian which the emperor (or Pope) dictated. And what of the Jews? There was little they could hope for in Constantine. His edicts, still available for study today, display a vindictive and hateful estimation of the Jewish people. Later we will look at one of them.

Constantine never stopped using the caesarean title Pontifex Maximus, Great Father. This title was used to designate the Emperor as a god; the earthly vicar of spiritual power; the head of all pagan religion. It is this title, Pontiff, which was kept by the Pope of the Roman Church as he gained ascendancy to imperial authority. So it is that Constantine was the bridge from the Roman Empire to the Roman Church. One might even say Constantine was the first Pope of Rome, in that he carried the same claimed authority in the church as the Pope is considered to have today.

Constantine eventually built the city of Byzantium, now called Istanbul, into a glorious monument of his power.

He made it the capital of the empire and named it New Rome, but it came to be called Constantinople: the city of Constantine. This was the beginning of the greatness of the Eastern, or Byzantine, Empire within which the Eastern Orthodox Church grew. Constantine was the effective progenitor of both the Roman (Western) and Orthodox (Eastern) Churches.

The majority of the institutional church followed the dictates of Constantine without question.

Answer for yourself: But was this loyalty and reverence deserved?

Answer for yourself: Was Constantine a true follower of Yeshua (Jesus)?

Answer for yourself: What was the result of his administration?

Answer for yourself: The answers coming to these questions will help us to know whether or not the things which Constantine imposed as being "Christian" were truly pleasing to God, and, if they were not, what shall be our response?

THE RISE OF CONSTANTINE #2

Constantine followed the ways of past pagan Roman emperors. After the vision and victory at Milvian Bridge and entering Rome he proceeded to set up an image of himself holding the Labarum. The inscription on the statue read: "By virtue of this salutary sign, which is the true symbol of valor, I have preserved and liberated your city from the yoke of tyranny." There is nothing in this inscription that even suggests giving glory to God for his accomplishments. More troubling is the very idea of setting up an image of oneself, no matter the empirical custom. Setting up a self-image is following in the footsteps of such reprobates as Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and Antiochus Epiphanes of Assyria, while forecasting such hideous monsters as Hitler, etc.

Once in Rome Constantine proceeded to cleanse the empire of possible competitors. He had his father-in-law and fellow caesar Maximian executed and after him others of the same family. The cause, according to Constantine, was that their treasonable intentions had been "miraculously revealed by God through visions to his servant (Constantine)."

After Constantine had held the Western Empire for a while he moved against Licinius, his brother-in-law, the Augustus of the Eastern Empire. By intrigue he took him prisoner and executed Licinius because he "employed himself in machinations against his superior (Constantine)." It seems Licinius had committed the crime of forbidding "women to receive instruction from bishops, or even visit the churches with men" and he had directed "the appointment of females to be teachers of their own sex, and devised other means for effecting ruin of the churches." Evidently it became very dangerous not to be the kind of Christian Constantine wanted. Once Licinius was dead Constantine adopted the title of "Victor" and from that point became the sole and supreme ruler of the entire Roman Empire.

Constantine minted coins featuring his likeness, with eyes upraised, laid over a blazing sun. He also minted other coins which featured the image of Apollo, the sun-god, on one side and the letters IHS on the other. Though he came against certain pagan temples, he never stopped giving public and personal homage to Apollo or Mithra, the sun-god, Invictus Sol, the Invincible Sun. Having been told by some bishops that Jesus is the "Sun of Righteousness" according to Malachi 4, he considered Jesus as another name for Apollo or Mithra. So Constantine accepted the notion that belief in Jesus was just a higher consciousness within his present pagan belief structure. To him God simply showed in Messiah a fuller manifestation of the sun-god. This is not far-fetched when considering the fact some scholars contend "Jesus" is a pagan originated name derived from the name of the god "Zeus". Jesus' original Hebrew and most accurate name is Yeshua (Joshua) which is Yasu in the Greek, but only in Hebrew does it mean Salvation. Constantine even accepted the homage that came from one Christian orator who asserted in the emperor's presence that Constantine would share the "Empire of Heaven" equally with Messiah in the world to come. This is more evidence of the pagan esteem with which Constantine viewed Yeshua.

Constantine was thoroughly a cruel Roman Emperor instead of a righteous servant of God as evidenced by the fact he had his own son Crispus killed in a fit of jealous rage. By all accounts Crispus was full of courage and kindness. He was born to Constantine's first wife, Minervina. Crispus, from the age of seventeen, had been a leader in all his father's wars which garnered him the prestige and adoration of Constantine's army, his court and all the people. The popularity of Crispus unnecessarily worried Constantine until the young man was confined as a prisoner to his father's court. Soon Constantine began to bring hints against Crispus of suspicions that he was involved in conspiracy. Paid informers were brought forward to falsely accuse Crispus. Thus he was brought to execution along with all and any who took his side, including Constantine's sister, Constantia, and her eleven year old son, despite her prayers and tears.

It is said that Constantine grew sorrowful over this cruelty to his son and blamed the whole incident on his second wife, Fausta, to whom he had been married for twenty years. Helena, Constantine's mother, also accused Fausta of adultery with a slave. Constantine then had Fausta killed privately, having her suffocated in a hot boiling bath. The historian Philostorgius declares Fausta was innocent and says Constantine murdered two wives, and that the three sons who succeeded him were by an adulteress.

After Constantine died his will was brought forth and read among all the members of his household. It declared that his brothers and nephews had attempted to poison him, and it directed that his death should be avenged on them immediately. Upon hearing this the soldiers in residence attacked the offending parties, murdering them in cold blood. From beyond the grave, Constantine was able to wreak havoc.

Historians concede that Constantine was ruthless, cruel, willful, voluptuous, self-conceited, voracious, and gluttonous. It has been said, "his credulity and superstition, which arose probably from ignorance of even the first principles of science, were the only checks upon his evil propensities." Constantine asserted that "sovereigns were instruments . . . to slay their subjects at pleasure, as the laws of nature do, and wield the sword and fire, and every kind of vengeance, against their foes . . . and whatever God allowed to be successful bore the stamp of His approval, inasmuch as it would not have been permitted unless it were right." In other words, Constantine believed "might makes right".

There is no need to labor at finding the moral inferences drawn from Constantines actions. He was plainly ambitious, murderous, and pagan in mind. Whatever experience he had at Milvian Bridge did not transcend his evil behavior. There is no doubt that he believed the "Great God", as he called Him, had given him the victory and the throne of Rome. However, this faith was not a "conversion" of the heart, as is obvious by Constantine's life.

The correspondences of Constantine spoke of God in general terms, as sovereign. The edicts and letters recognized and appealed to God's authority in a stately and official sort of way, but they bestowed little personal warmth and affection for God or Yeshua. He rarely ever mentions Jesus. Even a pagan could agree with Constantine's deference to divinity by simply thinking of his own god instead of the biblical God, YHWH. The title "God" is useless unless associated with the name of the deity. One cannot take for granted that when Constantine spoke of "God" he was speaking of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. How do we even know he wasn't, in his own mind, addressing the sun-god? He, being very politically shrewd, could have figured out how he could please the entire populace concerning his piety. All that he would need to do is give official homage to a nameless "Great God", with which everyone, Jewish person, Christian, or pagan could identify. They would only need to fill in the blanks in their mind. This is the same deceptive scheme used in modern presidential politics today!

While some may attempt to argue, on the basis of his generous acts toward the church, that Constantine was a Christian (according to a very liberal amoral standard), there is little public proof that Constantine was a true follower of Yeshua in the same way as were the early Jewish believers, whose hearts and actions were totally transformed into righteousness by their faith. But Constantine won the favor of the institutional church, and this is what made him a saint in the eyes of the bishops.

Constantine was judged to be a Christian on different grounds than that of scripture.

THE RISE OF CONSTANTINE #3

Diocletian, the emperor who preceded Constantine, wore out the church with confiscations of property, executions of priests and bishops, and the burning of writings. We know little of Diocletian's court manner, but concerning the church, he was a tyrant of the first magnitude. When Constantine took power the persecution of the church ceased almost instantaneously. While that respite was most welcome, the church could hardly have expected what came next. Constantine, of his own initiative, began to reimburse the church for its losses. He sent large payments to bishops, making many wealthy overnight. He restored stolen fortunes and lands. He rebuilt fallen church buildings and had great new edifices built, including the famous Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem.

These generosities of Constantine were based largely upon a sense of gratitude toward the "Supreme Divinity" of the church, whom he acknowledged as the agency of his conquering victory, and whom he associated with the pagan Unconquered Sun (Invincible Sun, Invictus Sol). The bishops who met with him regularly did not quickly enlighten Constantine on his religious confusion. Perhaps they were "starstruck" with Constantine's favor toward them, not willing to risk the possibility of renewed persecutions. As A.H.M. Jones writes, "It was safe not to provoke the Emperor and meanwhile receive the subsidies and immunities which he showered upon the church. It would be a bold man who offered unsolicited advice to a Roman emperor, and none of the bishops seems to have felt called upon to instruct Constantine, much less rebuke him for his errors." It seems obvious the institutional church was ready, willing, and able to cut an unspoken deal with the new emperor. So when the money began to flow, the church became overwhelmed with its good fortune and offered up its integrity on the altar of Roman favor.

As the church's new guardian and benefactor, Constantine received the absolute unquestioning favor and loyalty of the church. He accomplished, by the power of the purse, what no other emperor could do by force. He gained imperial supremacy over the church. In a move of political genius, he bought the church and thereby vanquished what was potentially the emperor's most thorny opposition.

The very first imperial church council was called in Rome. The empire under Constantine was barely six months old when he was petitioned by African bishops concerning a division which had developed. During the past persecutions many church leaders had been martyred for not turning over scriptures to the authorities, others were more shrewd and denied having scriptures or turned in heretical essays as substitutions; thus they were saved. Once the persecutions ceased there arose a controversy over accusations against those who had not been willing to be martyred. This was called the Donatist Controversy, named after one of the instigators. When the area bishops could not quell the dispute, they appealed to Constantine, who at first turned the matter over to Hosius, a Spanish bishop attached to his court. But not content with Hosius' opinion in the case, Constantine called together the Bishop of Rome and eighteen other Italian bishops on October 2, 313 A.D. This was at the suggestion of the Bishop of Rome. So from that time Constantine accepted the premise that ecclesiastical issues should henceforth be decided by councils of bishops. Constantine also preferred the Bishop of Rome as the supreme bishop, or Pope, but in actual practise it was Constantine, himself, who acted as supreme bishop, beginning with this, his first Council of Rome.

At Arles on August 1, 314, thirty-three bishops met and confirmed the Council of Rome verdict which stated in part, "...And since there are many who seem to fight against the law of the church and think they ought to be admitted...let them not be admitted at all, unless, as we stated above, they prove their case by the public records." This edict made church business and discipline a recorded part of general society and civil law. Therefore, soon after the "Christian emperor" was enthroned the church allowed itself to be compromised with statehood. Notice also that this edict declares there is a "law of the church". This was promulgated by those who had denied any validity to the Law of Moses, which is authoritative scriptural Law.

Answer for yourself: Where does this "law of the church" come from? If this is holy law how can this law of the church be settled in public court? What is this, if not the inventing of an earthly kingdom in the form of a theocracy! Where in the New Testament is this action authorized? It was Paul who said that all matters of church discipline were to be performed separate from the civil authorities (1 Cor 6:1). By calling imperial councils of clergy and enforcing their decisions as legal decrees upon the church, Constantine was forming a new kingdom, a replacement of hated Israel, a celestial Rome, an earthly government with divine power which only the Messiah was to have the right to do. Where did Constantine get the power to change "times and laws" (Dan 7:25)?

Dan 7:25 25 And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time. (KJV)

I can only conclude that the collusion of Constantine with the church was one which the Lord God did not authorize, but which came in through a spirit and power akin to ant-Messiah. This was a devilish plot, which worked!

At the close of the council Constantine ordered the Bishop of Rome (Pope) to proclaim the results of the council, "since you held the governorship of the greater diocese." Because he concluded this churchman, considered of the highest position, would give it the greatest weight. The resulting publication of the Bishop of Rome might be viewed as the first "encyclical", though it seems there was no theory yet of his inherent right to sanction all the dogma and law of the church. But, without doubt and obvious to all was the prestige and influence of his position above any other bishop in the Western Empire.

Constantine, by establishing the authority of the Bishop of Rome, used his example to create other great church regions, laying the foundation for a bishopric system throughout the empire. He stated that the Bishop of Alexandria should have authority over all the bishops of Egypt, Libya and Pentapolis and the bishops of other capitals of the empire should exercise similar authority in their regions. In effect, Constantine authored and authorized the system of archbishops over bishops.

When Constantine eventually moved the empire's capital to Constantinople in the east, he began to exert his considerable force in guiding the eastern portion of the church. From that time the prestige of the empire was in the east. The western half became less important and her emperors to come were inferior to the eastern Augustuses. This promoted the prominence and power of the Bishop of Rome, especially in comparison to the west's weak and unpopular emperors. The Eastern Orthodox Church remained relatively subjugated to eastern statehood. The western Roman Church became the driving force of the western power.

It was Constantine who set the pace, living his pompous, militaristic and public life in Rome, then later living his patrician, paranoid, and private life in Constantinople. It was Constantine who defined the place and power of the Bishop of Rome, creating the institution of Pope. It was Constantine who made church business state business. It was Constantine who imposed rigid organization of the church, fully subjugating and institutionalizing it. It was Constantine who, by the authority which he usurped from God and from scripture, changed the Law of God. It began at the Council at Rome, but it was finalized at the Council of Nicea.

THE RISE OF CONSTANTINE & THE COUNCIL OF NICAEEA...THE LOSS OF THE FAITH OF JESUS

The Council of Nicaea 325 AD, summoned by the Emperor Constantine, the Great, was the first ecumenical council to be assembled, primarily to deal with the Arian controversy which threatened the unity of the Church. A study of this event is important because it shows how, with the accession of Constantine to power, in addition to gaining resources and freedom to propagate their religion, the early Gentile Christians compromised some of the most basic tenets of their faith, many of which served to alienate Christianity from its Jewish origins. In other words it was the foundation for the creation of a "New Religion"; one never intended by God not taught by Yeshua. In what follows, we examine the emergence of Constantine through to the Council of Nicaea and its ramifications, so that in our review of events we may take in our stride the drastic effects the faith enunciated at Nicaea had on the future development of the Church.

CONSTANTINE BECOMES EMPEROR

By 312 AD, Constantine had been at war with Maxentius for six years, and was eager for something to lend his cause extra support. Lactantius, a Christian observer who produced accounts of the event a few years later in his book On the death of the Persecutors claimed that Constantine saw a Chi-Rho monogram in a vision on the eve of the battle of the Milvian bridge, accompanied by the words: 'Hoc signo victor eris! [By this sign, you shall be the victor].

Whether this vision was actual or dictated by anxiety remains questionable. In any case, he had crosses painted on his army's shields and won the battle, becoming the Emperor of Rome. This inspired his conversion to Christianity (though not baptized then). In Milan 313 AD, he issued an Edict of Toleration to all religions. But believing his battleground success to be won with divine providence, he sympathized more with the Christians, who hitherto had suffered sporadic persecution. The Emperor lavished huge sums of money to build Basilicas and other Churches for them, coupled with preferential treatments of Christian candidates for administrative posts. In this way, Constantine closed one era and opened another.

CONSTANTINE...CONVERTED YET STILL PAGAN????

Constantine's motives are beyond reconstruction but it is clear he still needed to bind the Empire - East and West - together and exercise influence over the whole of the Mediterranean. What Christians fail to realize that his conversion had not divorced him from his pagan past. The Emperor was happy with the collection of heavenly patrons. He believed reverence for deity to be indispensable for the tranquillity of the commonwealth and regarded the Christian God as just another heavenly patron, not incompatible with others although perhaps more powerful. He maintained ties with the Sol Invictus cult (Sun Worship) even after his conversion. It was not until he was on his death bed that he was finally baptized, just in case. The Sol Invictus cult worshipped the sun God, but was also acceptable to the followers of Orpheus, the priest of the Sun, Mithras, or the Sun God Apollo. The response was for Imperial Christianity through Constantine to begin representing Jesus/Yeshua in the guise of Apollo to maintain favor the Gentile who already had such pagan beliefs.

The response from the Jews was total rejection of such concepts to a Jewish Rabbi which intended to fashion the divine through cultus images, thereby sowing the seeds of division between Christians and Jews

Now here was an opportunity for Christians, some of whom still bore the marks of persecution, who could still vividly recall the days of suffering, to be conducted into the imperial chambers and be showered with gifts, and to dine with the Emperor in the same palace from whence was issued decrees of persecution. Little wonder then that all but two (Theonas of Marmarica and Secundus of Ptolemais) of the staunchest supporters of Arianism signed the new Creed. The two 'dissidents' were exiled to Illyricum. Little did they know that their actions were to put the Church in chains, albeit in chains of gold. When one studies for himself the Arian Controversy he cannot help but be struck by the irony of the matter in that Arius espoused beliefs totally in line with concepts held by the earlier Jews concerning their Messiah [Ebionites]...and he lost the theological struggle with Rome! Arius and the Jews lost and the concept of the Messiah is irrevocably changed forever by Constantine!

Some scholars have argued that the crucial terms of the Creed were not commonly understood by all signatories. 'Of one substance' (homousious) was ambiguous in that to some it meant a personal identity, while to others a much wider generic identity. Whether or not this was a fortuity enabling Constantine to secure the signature of almost every bishop, it is clear that many of the delegates were uneasy about the decision they had made. They had signed the Creed under pressure from Constantine and from fear of being banished. Eusebius of Caesarea, was previously one of the most die-hard Arians, but strangely, following the Council session, he was willing to accept the Creed. In a letter home, however, he indicated the extent of the compromise that had taken place against the fundamental principles of his knowledge of Jesus that had been passed down to his day. Relating this A.H.M. Jones writes:

"How profoundly distressing these changes were to Eusebius of Caesarea can be seen from a letter which he hastened to write to his Church. It is a pathetic document, equivocal up to the point of dishonesty."

Some of the other delegates such as Maris of Chalcedron, Theogonis of Nicaea and Eusebius of Nicomedia were deeply unhappy about the outcome. They wrote to the Emperor saying:

"We committed an impious act, O Prince, by subscribing to a blasphemy from fear of you."

Eusebius of Caesarea became a friend of Constantine and was keen to make good use of his patronage. He later wrote the Life of Constantine in which he greatly flattered the Emperor. In his own book, The History Of The Church, he built up the line from the Apostolic fathers to the 4th century, and devoted an entire chapter (one of ten in the book) to the deliverance of Christianity from persecution by the Christian Emperor. In his book on Constantine he gave expression to a theology of the place of the Emperor in the Christian Empire which according to some modern historians, seemed rather a betrayal of the essential nature of the Gospel. Commenting on the role of Constantine, A.N. Whitehead wrote:

"When the Western world accepted Christianity, Caesar conquered; and the received text of western theology was edited by his lawyers [WHAT AS TO BECOME THE NEW TESTAMENT].... In the official formulation of the religion [WHAT WAS TO BECOME THE NEW TESTAMENT], it has assumed the trivial form of the mere attribution to the Jews and that they cherished a misconception about their own Messiah but the deeper idolatry, of fashioning God in the of patterns held by the Egyptian, Persian and Roman imperial rulers was retained. The Church gave unto God, the attributes which belonged exclusively to Caesar. "

This was to have profound implications on the future philosophy of the Church. Ian Wilson summarizes the situation by suggesting that:

'Not a few people felt that something of the original Jesus and the spirit of his teaching had been fatally compromised.'

THE ARIAN CONTROVERSY

In the Christian world at the time there was doctrinal pluralism vis a vis the nature and role of Jesus. In particular, there were strong views on either side of the Arian controversy, which was splitting the Church and threatened the unity of the Empire. Arianism was originated by Arius who had been a student of the celebrated Christian philosopher, Lucian of Antioch. Arius put forward a theory which negated the eternity and full divinity of Jesus, just as the Jewish-Christian groups such as the Ebionites had stated, who by the way, were the first followers of Yeshua and believers in his Messiahship. He was prepared to say that 'the Son had a beginning' that 'prior to his generation he did not exist and that there was when he was not, so that consequently he is called God in name only.' In other words Arius saw Jesus as Divine but definitely not Deity. The most that can be said, and correctly so I might add, is that Jesus was God only in an allegorical sense in that he was "Godly." This again is whom the Messiah was always understood to be by the Jews; human and not a God. Arius was correct and remains correct regardless if Rome accepted or overruled his understanding of the Jewish Messiah.

On the other side of the controversy were scholars such as, Athanasius, of Alexandria who felt that Jesus, would have been too divine to need to eat, drink or require any other bodily function. Athanasius would win this debate when backed by Constantine and the Power of Rome. Jesus became God and has this idolatry and blasphemy has been perpetuated for over 1700 years at present. Since for Constantine who was already an idolatry one more "God" was not a problem; for after all, he considered himself and his father Gods also. Arius was excommunicated from the Church for his views but there was growing support for Arianism which culminated in the Council of Nicaea 325 AD. Instead of the majority belief concerning the Messiah at that time as espoused by Arius and others winning out it would lose to the Imperial Power of Constantine and Rome. The truth about the Messiah was lost and as you saw above the existing documents altered to reflect that change and it remains so today as we have it handed down to us in the New Testament. One only need refer to the depiction of Jesus in the Gospel of John where Jesus is God and ask himself how a Jew (supposedly John) could ever had believed that God was a man!

THE COUNCIL OF NICAEA

The Council was to have taken place at Ancyra, but on the orders of Constantine who had his residence at Nicaea the venue was changed so that he could personally control the proceedings. The Synod took place between June 19th and August 25th. The Emperor summoned all Church leaders with the aim of reaching a consensus over the status of Jesus.

The number of bishops who attended is not known. The traditional figure is 318, which goes back to the late writings of Athanasius of Alexandria; possibly a symbolic figure based on the number of Abraham's servants [Genesis 14.14]. The correct figure is still probably around 300. In the version of events presented in the New Catholic Encyclopedia, almost all were from the Eastern half of the Empire; more than 100 from Asia Minor, about 30 from Syria- Phoenecia and less than 20 from Palestine and Egypt.

Constantine regarded the religious question exclusively from the angle of political expedience. His interest was to secure peace rather than any theological verdict. He had already adopted the Sol Invictus as the state deity, so if Jesus could somehow be deified he would be more easily compatible with Sol Invictus. As the parties were in conflict, the task of deciding the fate of Jesus was deferred unto Constantine who was theologically incompetent and was inclined to making decisions on inadequate grounds. To him the deification of a man would not have seemed important. He had his father Constantius deified on his death and expected to be granted the same honor on his demise.

He ruled in favor of Jesus' deification, and demanded that the delegates should sign acceptance to what became known as the Nicene Creed. This Creed is the first dogmatic definition of the Church and has served as a backbone of Christian orthodoxy through the ages. It defined the relations of Jesus to the Father within the Godhead as homoousion tot patri (of one substance with the Father) designed specifically to exclude Arianism. Eusebius of Caesarea writings makes it explicit that the Emperor himself proposed this term. The delegates that gave assent to the Creedal statement were to be invited to stay on at Nicaea as Constantine's guests for his 20th Anniversary celebrations, while those who rejected the Creed would be banished. Sounds fair to me...does it not you?

AFTER SHOCKS....THEY RUMBLE YET TODAY

The repercussions of the Nicene creed are immeasurable as Ian Wilson writes:

'Merely to enumerate the ways in which the original concepts of Jesus and his teachings were adulterated as result of Constantine's actions and the consequences of the Council of Nicaea would take a book in itself.'

Rome became the official center of Christian orthodoxy, Trinity the accepted doctrine and deviation from this view was now considered not as a different opinion, but as punishable heresy.

Next came the deification of Mary. Even though, in Mark 6:3, mention is made of Jesus' brothers and sisters, Hilary of Poitiers and Didymus the Blind of Alexandria bestowed the title of 'Ever Virgin' upon Mary. The logical consequence of this was the Council of Ephesus in Asia Minor in summer of 431 AD which became known as the third ecumenical council, where, in spite of resistance from Nestorius, then Bishop of Constantinople, a formula of faith was agreed upon which acknowledged Mary as the Theotokos (Mother of God). In 1854, Pope Pius IX made it a Catholic article of faith to proclaim Mary as incapable of sin.

After Nicaea, the fate of the Jews took a distinct turn for the worse. Following the deification of Jesus, they were considered as having murdered God! Constantine's tolerance no longer extended to the Jews who were stripped of many of their rights as Roman citizens. With astonishing rapidity Christians forgot the days of penury and persecution. The Church greeted Constantine's orders as not only permissible but praiseworthy. Meanwhile Christians with slightly different views, considered "unorthodox", were also denied the freedom that was granted to pagans. They had their literature burnt, property confiscated and turned over to “orthodox-pro Constantinian” Christians, and were terrorized by the Church. Within a generation, hardly a trace of their existence remained. Some agnostics managed to conceal documents and hence earlier this century, the Nag Hammadi haul of scrolls along with the Dead Sea Scrolls was discovered intact. This, however, provides only a partial picture of the theological thought of the time. The memory of the Jewish prophet whose name the new religion had taken, was to be lost forever, and with it the very context in which the message was intended.

OTHER COMPROMISES EXIST

There had been earlier instances of compromise. After Constantine's edict of tolerance, Christians, with their new found freedom and scope and association with Constantine, were willing to compromise themselves to maintain that position. In 321 AD, Constantine in honor of the Sun God, enacted that on the venerable day of the Sun, the law courts and all workshops were to be closed, so Christianity, which had previously observed the Sabbath on Saturday, took on Sunday as its day of rest. Today Christianity breaks the 4th Commandment weekly and does not even knowing it sadly thinking Jesus changed the Sabbath to Sunday....in honor of the worship of the Sun. Rome did this! Similarly, Jesus' birthday used to observed on January 6th (as it still is in parts of Eastern Europe.) However, for both Sol Invictus and Mithraism, the religious day or Natalis Invictus was celebrated on the midwinter solstice, December 25th, so the Western Church adopted this day also. The aureole of light crowning the sun god's head became the Christian halo.

One only has to look at our Ministry's websites to see the horrible events that transpired to the truth concerning the Jewish Messiah in the wake of Constantine's Nicean Council and later implementations by himself and others that followed in his stead.

WHAT ARE WE TO THINK KNOWING THIS?

With so much of the original faith given away, Baigent, Leigh and Lincoln write:

"Christian doctrine as promulgated by Rome at the time, had much in common with the cult of Sol Invictus anyway; and thus it was able to flourish unmolested under the sun cult's umbrella of tolerance. Christianity as we know it, is in many respects actually closer to those pagan systems of belief than its to its own Judean origin."

The distorted formula of faith promulgated at Nicaea laid the ground work for the classical development of Christian Trinitarian theology, disseminating far and wide the seeds of ignorance and error.

In closing if you want to do further research into these areas whereby you can see for yourself how the faith of Yeshua was altered and changed into “a faith about Yeshua” then besides this ministry's websites this short book list should be beneficial:

CONSTANTINE: HOW THE WEST WAS WON... OR...HOW THE EAST WAS LOST

As demonstrated in previous teachings, there is a undercurrent of tension in the New Testament between two mission; Paul's and Jesus' church in Jerusalem. For those of you who are new to this newsletter, you should obtain the first newsletters in this series in order for what I am about to share to make good sense. Contact us at Bet Emet Ministries, 902 Cardigan, Garland, Texas, 75040, or E-Mail us at bennoah1@airmail.net.

BEGINNINGS OF THE TWO MISSIONS

In and around 48 A.D., the Pauline mission consisted of some six or seven churches: the established church at Antioch in North Syria, and (on Luke's authority, Acts 13f.) a little string of newly founded churches in Cyprus, Pisidia and Galatia (South and Central Turkey). The Galatian churches, to whom Paul was writing, were at towns called Iconium, Derbe and Lystra. At this time the Pauline mission probably numbered about three hundred members.

It is not so easy to picture the growth of the Jerusalem mission. There was plainly a large Jewish Christian church in Jerusalem, and we hear of churches in Lydda and Joppa, towns in Judaea, in Galilee, and further afield in Caesarea, Damascus and Alexandria. Luke gives us some optimistic figures - 3,000 on the day of Pentecost alone, later 5,000, 'many tens of thousands' (Acts 21:20). Perhaps: but not, I think, many tens of thousands. It suffices to say that the church got off to a strong start in its home area.

Luke's account in Acts is the only report we have of the church's early history, and it takes us only as far as Paul's arrival in Rome, about 60 A.D. After that we have a long gap: Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea in the fourth century, and a bootlicker of the Emperor Constantine, wrote a history of the Church which includes many letters and excerpts of earlier writings, and we have to do our best to piece things together, especially in the early period, where his information is naturally thinnest. Eusebius relates a revealing story of a controversy which took place about 190 A.D. in Christendom. The churches were divided over the details of the fasting and celebration of what we would call Holy Week (Passover Week), and an attempt was made to settle the matter by the leading bishops.

Eusebius had read the letters which survived to his day from these various leaders (Ecclesiastical History 5.23). Now a part of the fascination of this account is that it shows us the scope of the church at this date.

On the one side (fast till Saturday, feast on Passover Day) were the main body of churches: the bishops of Caesarea and Jerusalem in Palestine, Victor, Bishop of Rome (who tried to throw his weight about), the bishops of Pontus (North Turkey), Gaul (including Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons, who saw a compromise through), Osroene (South-east Turkey), Corinth and 'great numbers of others'. On the other side (fast till 13th Nisan, feast on 14th, when the Passover lamb was sacrificed, on whichever day of the week it fell), were the bishops of 'the whole of Asia' (probably the rest of Turkey), led by Polycrates, Bishop of Ephesus. The interest lies partly in the areas which are not mentioned. The 'Catholics' are represented by the churches of France, Italy (Rome), Greece (Corinth), outlying parts of Turkey (Pontus and Osroene), and the two Palestinian dioceses; the Asians probably cover the rest of Turkey. In other words the Paulinists are represented, but not the Petrines! The churches influenced by Paul are listed but those influenced by the original Apostles, James, Peter, and the Jerusalem Church are lacking!

Answer for yourself: But where are the great dioceses of Syria and Egypt...of Antioch, Damascus, Alexandria, and points east?

They are missing; and if they had written among 'the great numbers of others', we may be sure that Eusebius would have cited them. The likely conclusion is that they were not part of Western/Pauline Christendom, as Victor and Polycrates understood it: the Eastern Churches were considered by the powers in Rome to be heretical, Nasoreans/Ebionites, as Irenaeus would have described them. In other words, the Western churches considered the Eastern churches heretics, while the Eastern churches considered the Western churches heretics. Ironically the Eastern Church were closer to the original Jesus Movement than any of the others!

Answer for yourself: Who are we to follow today?

PAUL OR PETER....WHO WILL BE YOUR INFLUENCE?

To us, today attempting a more neutral stance, the churches mentioned by these Western church authorities and involved were the churches of the old Pauline mission, now the majority church recognizing only Pauline orthodoxy. The churches of Palestine, Syria and Egypt were the descendants of the Jerusalem mission, with a now outmoded Petrine theology (the legacy of Jesus' church in Jerusalem). The only dioceses Eusebius mentions in this vast area are in the Greek (non-Jewish) cities of Caesarea and Jerusalem (let us not forget that Jerusalem was forbidden to Jews after the War in 70 so in this time they were devoid of an strong Jewish influence). In the third century the Paulines would win over most of the Christians of these provinces, reducing those who held to the legacy of James and Peter the status of religious deviants!!!!

Answer for yourself: But is this the proper way to look at the situation?

SO WHAT THE WEST WON...WHAT DOES THAN MEAN TO ME?

So the Paulines triumphed in the end; and that is why Christians generally do not keep the kosher rules, or sabbath today; the Biblical Feasts and Festivals, or share their money properly in the tithe, or cease working on Sabbaths and High Sabbaths, or follow sexual laws in the Torah; or think that Jesus was possessed by a Spirit from his baptism till his crucifixion as the ORIGINAL CHRISTIANS BELIEVED!

Instead, as Western Christians today, we think it nothing to eat unclean food which God calls an abomination, to have a church calendar filled with pagan holidays to pagan deities to which Jesus' name has been affixed, we have substituted the day of sun worship for the Sabbath, we are continually robbing God in the tithe because mistakenly believing we are no longer under the Law or God's commandments we feel we have the right to do with God's money whatever we desire, and have patterned a Christology surrounding the Messiah not after a Jewish Christology, but one better fashioned for pagan gods who co-habited with women and had superbabies like Hercules. Western Christianity's' creed is the Pauline creed and their New Testament is the Pauline Epistles (2/3 of the whole New Testament is Pauline) and the three Pauline influenced Gospels, Mark, Luke and John, and the Pauline influenced Acts; supplemented by 'bridge' writings such as a Jewish influenced Matthew, James and the Apocalypse. It would be interesting to know the detail of how the Paulines won and those of Jesus' church lost.

THE WINNING OF THE WEST BY THE PAULINES

The visit of Peter to Antioch along with the men from James that came to inspect the Pauline church (Gal. 2:11-14, [see my previous newsletters on the Antioch Incident] was a disaster for Paul. Even Barnabas was carried away by their hypocrisy' [at least in Paul's opinion], and now that the chips were down, all the Jewish members along with the men sent from the Jerusalem Church sided with Peter against Paul and literally moved the church next door and excommunicated Paul and those Gentiles who would not repent and choose to remain with him. If Paul had defied Peter as his "spin doctoring" in his letters later reveal, the Jerusalem church would have disowned him totally; they would have split his Cypriot and Galatian churches as they had his Antiochene mother-church (Gal. 2:1-11), taking the Jewish members with them, and leaving the Gentiles to fend for themselves. Paul, as a credit to himself, swallowed the bitter alternative, but with a bad grace and with less than a Christ-like manner as he would later write sarcastically in Galatians "I withstood Cephas to the face". But that is not really the case when you read between the lines and align the events of the New Testament chronologically. The Acts 15 council was called because of Paul and the Antioch incident where he was teaching the Gentiles to forsake Moses and abolish the food laws like eating meats sacrificed to idols which render them idolators according to the Laws of Noah and Moses both. No wonder the Acts 15 council had to be called by James following the report of the proceedings under Paul's leadership in Antioch where the Torah was being seriously compromised for both the Jew (Peter for example) and the Gentile by Paul. It was reaffirmed by James in Acts 15 at the council following the Antioch Incident, as it should always have been, that Paul's Gentile converts must have kosher meat (not unclean meats or meats sacrificed to idols) for their Saturday supper, and keep quiet about working on sabbath and sanctify that day according to the 4th Commandment. They were lucky not to be forced into circumcision but as you know the Laws of Noah given to the non-Jew never required that of the Gentile. A chastened Barnabas went back to Cyprus carrying letters from the Jerusalem Church (Acts 16) to impose this re-newed discipline for the Gentiles (which is nothing more than the adherence for Gentiles to the Noahide Laws with the opportunity to choose to obey other commandments within the Laws of Moses as instructed in Isaiah 56 to "choose things that please God") as instructed by James as the Acts Council of Acts 15 following the Antioch Problem, and Paul, setting out on a second mission, had to submit to the indignity of being supervised by a Jerusalem Christian, Silas, in order to make sure he would not deviate again from the prescribed Torah. When they came to Paul's mission church at Derbe, Paul was forced to have his half Gentile convert Timothy circumcised (Acts 16. 1-3). Such could not be pleasing for Paul considering what he had taught before.

Luke says that the Holy Ghost forbade Paul to speak the word in Asia, or Bithynia (North-west Turkey), but called him in a vision over to Macedonia (North Greece-West).

Answer for yourself: This is recorded for us, but does it not seem strange, that God has already corrected Paul in the Acts 15 Council, and sent him out with letters to strengthen the obedience of the churches to these mandates of the Laws of Noah, yet; the Holy Spirit seems to have the idea that the further any new Pauline churches were from Jerusalem, the better chance they would stand of not being interfered with by zealous Petrine which were a constant correction for Paul?

As it was, the uneasy partnership of Paul and Silas soon broke up. Paul went down to Corinth while Silas remained in Macedonia, and when Silas joined him, it was not for long; he disappears from the account in Acts, and in Paul's letters. It is clear, however, that he had wrought a good deal of mischief in the Macedonian churches. The Thessalonian mission, for example, had lasted only a few weeks, but had included Silas' encouragement to the converts to give up work, and to believe that the day of the Lord had already come; Paul had had to speak about these matters at the time: 'as we charged you' (I Thess. 4.11), 'when I was still with you' (II Thess. 2.5; 3. 10), and to write two letters - with Silas' reluctant agreement - to put things straight. It is likely that Silas went back to Jerusalem in 51 and had further Petrine evangelists sent to Corinth; who caused all the trouble underlying our two Corinthian letters.

Paul settled in Ephesus, in Asia, from 52 to 55, and it was in these years that his mission was under the strongest pressure from the Petrines from Jerusalem, and that the future of the Christian religion was settled.

The Ephesian mission was a success. Paul wrote, 'A wide door for effective work has opened to me, and there are many adversaries [referring to the Petrines and the Jerusalem church]' (I Cor. 16.9); and he stayed in the place three years (Acts 20.31), longer than any other of his missions. But the adversaries - the Petrines - got the upper hand in the end, and Paul left the city in a virtual breakdown (II Cor. 1:8, 'we were so utterly, unbearably crushed that we despaired of life itself'). An anonymous pastor wrote later, in Paul's name, drawing on well-known memories, 'all who are in Asia turned away from me' (II Tim. 1.15).

Luke, keen to keep any division in the church quiet to his Gentile readers, describes Paul's journey to Jerusalem in 57 'when he met us at Assos [north of Ephesus], we took him on board . . . we came to Miletus [south of Ephesus]. For Paul had decided to sail past Ephesus (see above to where his work was in the end almost totally destroyed by those who taught a corrective Gospel from Jerusalem..the Petrines), so that he might not have to spend time in Asia' (Acts 20:13-16). Any wonder why?

Paul began the journey as a passenger, but he appears to have bought the boat during the journey (remember he took up a rather large sum of money over about 10 years for the famine in Jerusalem)! And he is in a great hurry, so he sails past Ephesus; but in the next verses he has time to send from Miletus to Ephesus to summon his Ephesian elders to come to him for a farewell sermon, which must have taken an extra week! It is to be remembered that Paul always appointed elders in the churches he establishes. It is a fair assumption that the leaders, appointed by Paul, were in his "hip pocket" so to speak. It is obvious that Paul was persona non grata at his flagship church at Ephesus, and dared not show his face there.

While Paul was at Ephesus, the Petrines stepped up the attack on his other churches. They arrived in Galatia with the slogan, 'Circumcision alone is the passport to heaven', and appealed to the Bible as God's word instead of Paul's gospel. Up till now the Jerusalem approach had been to insist on practical matters, the food and other purity laws, Sabbath and the Jewish festivals: but now they are going, metaphorically, for the jugular.

But something unsuspecting happened. Here for the first time the Pauline line held. Loyalty to Paul combined with distaste for the knife and circumcision; the elders of the little group of churches conferred, and wrote to their apostle; and when they received his angry, but firm reply (our Galatians), they said "No" to the Petrines. The balance of power and doctrine was changing!

In the meantime other Jerusalem delegates arrived in Corinth, and created major dissension in the church there. They contrasted Paul's frail claims to apostleship with those of Peter, their authority. They insisted on Jewish ways (Paul called this that they 'taught words of human wisdom'), on sexual asceticism at certain times of the month according to the Torah, and on the kingdom of God, and a spiritual resurrection, having already arrived in man's spirit when he repents and obeys the commandments. Paul wrote a kindly, fatherly letter (I Corinthians), criticizing these ideas, and also drawing attention to various excesses which disgraced the church. In 54 A.D. he followed this up with a disastrous visit to the church: one of the leading Petrines defied and insulted Paul, and the Corinthian church did not support the apostle. He wrote a depressed letter (II Cor..9;7-8), which in fact turned the tide; and when he had been driven out of Ephesus, he was comforted to learn from his lieutenant Titus that the Corinthians were now standing by him. These two unnamed groups of elders, in rebellion to Torah, both at Corinth and in Galatia in Central Turkey, changed the course of history. Their support of Paul enabled his mission to survive its moment of acute weakness, and to become a world religion; Its fate was sealed. The faith of Jesus, destined to go into all the world, whereby all Gentiles would be taught to observe and obey those things Jesus taught, was now to be slowly replaced by Pauline theology. After this, Petrine Christianity could never have been more than a short-lived sect of Judaism. You might say that the Petrines lost over enforcing circumcision upon the Gentiles when the Laws of Noah never prescribed it for them in the first place.

Paul spent the winter of 56/57 in Corinth, and wrote Romans, a long, contradictory, but enormously impressive statement of his 'gospel'; he did not want the same trouble in the capital of the Roman world, where a church had been founded and was flourishing. Paul intended to stop over there before evangelizing Spain. But this was not to be. In 57 he went to Jerusalem with a large collection which he had been taking up from the Gentile churches for the impoverished Metropolitan church. But hard feelings toward Paul and his abrogation of Torah, from both Jews and Gentiles, had developed a lot since he had been there previously at the Jerusalem Council in 50. The resistance in Galatia and Corinth, with Paul's connivance, showed that he was a reprobate and a heretic. His money was refused, and it was with Jewish Christian collusion that he was attacked in the Temple, nearly lynched, imprisoned and finally sent to Rome to his martyrdom. What people fail to realize is that many of the religious doctrines that Paul taught found him guilty of transgression of the Laws of God and the penalty for being a false prophet according to the Torah was death.

Acts 21:21 21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs. (KJV)

It is funny how we as Christians today have forgotten the Torah and the commandments regarding punishment on those who violate the Torah, but rather, we read and are taught to see in a rather bad light those who desired to punish Paul in obedience to Torah.

Before Paul died he received some happy news. One of his converts, Epaphras, had carried the Pauline message up country in Asia, and had started new churches in the valley of the Lycus river, in Colosse, Laodicea and Hierapolis. Paul was in chains, but he could write still, and his last letters, to the churches at Colosse and Laodicea (our Ephesians), and to Philemon, a leading Christian at Colosse, show both that the Pauline mission is spreading, and that the Petrines are there as well. The battle was hard fought, all along the line.

As Tertullian was to say 150 years later, the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church (sanguis martyrurum semen Ecclesiae); and once Paul was put to death, there was a strong revulsion of feeling in his favor. He had also laid a good foundation of ordaining elders in each church, so that even when the Petrines had the following of a majority of church members, the ruling committee was normally Pauline due to the appointment of elders by Paul. Also let us not forget that in house churches, those who were elders were usually the home owner as well. So the Macedonian, Corinthian and Galatian churches formed a block of communities loyal to Paul; and the Roman churches roughly followed, though they ended by having it both ways when they later divided East vs. West. The Pauline and Petrine battle was to continue in Rome and finally split it! It was in Asia, and especially around Ephesus, that the battle was hardest fought. Of our New Testament documents, Galatians, Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, the Pastorals, I Peter, the Gospel of John, the three letters of John and the Apocalypse are all written by Paulines or semi-Paulines against the Petrines in Asia Minor. So are the letters of Ignatius (115). It is no wonder why Petrine writing were not included in the canon, when it was the legacy of the Paulinists which would determine which writings were "inspired" or "not inspired." Thus, the New Testament we carry today has little within it as coming from Jesus' church, but rather an over abundance of Pauline materials. Even the arrangement of the New Testament attest to that, for we begin with a Jewish Gospel and end up with a Gentile oriented Gospel in Luke, Acts starts out as a Jewish Jesus Movement and ends with Gentile Christiantzation of the world, and finally, the first doctrinal book of the Bible from Paul is called Romans, thereby assuring Gentile authority. This is some explanation of the line-up of bishops in 190: Polycrates of Ephesus is the spokesman for Pauline churches in Asia, but ironically, they have inherited Jerusalem liturgical practices which are suspect to the rest of Pauline Christendom.

The Jerusalem mission reached the height of its power in the 50s. Its own leader „James, was martyred, like Paul, in 62, and it received a heavy blow in the second half of the decade. From 66 to 70 the Jewish people rebelled against Rome, and in 70 Jerusalem was taken with great loss of life. This included many Christians, whose 'dead bodies lay in the streets of the great city where their Lord was crucified' (Rev. 1:18). The leadership which survived had to move, for Jerusalem became a city forbidden to Jews; and the financial troubles are likely to have been exacerbated. But the fight went on, and the Pastorals and the writings of John both display a bitterness of feeling which we never had to that extent in Paul, and which shows the two wings of the church losing charity to one another, and moving towards excommunication and heresy-hunting. It was reminiscent of the North vs. the South in our Civil War.

We can trace the progress of the battle from the comments on the various Asian churches, first in Paul in the 50s, then in the Apocalypse in the 80s, and then in Ignatius, with hints from elsewhere. Paul was driven out of Ephesus, but there are still Pauline elders there whom he calls to Miletus in Acts 20. Revelation gives the church high marks: 'I know your works, your toil and your patient endurance, and how you cannot bear evil men but have tested those [Petrines] who call themselves apostles but are not . . .' (Rev. 2:2).

Take time to read Gal. 2:1-10 at this time, and see the sarcasm emanating from Paul toward the Jerusalem Apostles because of his mission being questioned by them and because his Apostleship was never recognized by them as on the same level of authority as theirs. After reading Gal. 2:1-10 you will see to what I am referring so clearly, possibly for the first time in your life. But some of the sparkle has gone out of church life: 'I have this against you, that you have abandoned the love you had at first' (7.4). The writings of John, which Irenaeus says came from Ephesus, show a divided church between Paulinists and Petrines: indeed some members have left the church - 'they went out from us, but they were not of us' (1 John 2:19). Nevertheless, the Pauline mission was gaining the upper hand, and it could produce one of the church's great theologians in St John, author of Gospel and Epistles (but not the Apostle John, nor the Beloved Disciple). Ignatius treats it as the capital of the church in Asia, writing untruthfully that the sainted Paul mentions it in every letter; and that is how we find things when Polycrates wrote his letter to Victor in 190.

We may contrast the situation in up-country Laodicea. Epaphras founded the church about 60, and Paul wrote to it soon afterwards. The letter is preserved as our Ephesians, but the name is missing in the oldest manuscripts, and about 150 a deviant Christian called Marcion referred to it as written to Laodicea. It shows clearly that, Paul does not know the church members, which would not be the case at Ephesus, where he ran the church for three years. So it is likely that the church went over to the Petrines (see above why Paul did not want to go back there in route to Jerusalem), and did not value Paul's letter; and a Pauline Christian took it to Ephesus. The Laodicean church is described to be the worst of the seven churches in Asia addressed in the Apocalypse: 'I know your works: you are neither cold nor hot. . . because you are lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew you out of my mouth' (Rev. 3:15f).

What is important for us to know, is that when Ignatius (a Paulinist) passed through Asia on his way to the lions at Rome, the faithful Pauline churches sent delegates to greet and encourage him. The churches included Philadelphia, not far away; but Laodicea (a Petrine church) was not one of them, and he may actually have passed through the town.

The churches which come best out of the letters in Rev. 2-3 are Ephesus, Smyrna and Philadelphia; and these, with the smaller churches of Magnesia and Tralles, are the Pauline churches which supported Ignatius - especially Smyrna, with its famous, long-lived bishop, Polycarp, who was martyred forty years later. The Petrines took over some of the valley churches; but the Paulines held the line along the coast and ultimately drove the Jerusalem loyalists out as heretics - Ebionites or Gnostics.

We should never lose sympathy with the Jerusalem Christians; they lost the great battle, but not for want of devotion or energy. They took the label of "Cephas", the Petrines, because Peter had been Jesus' leading disciple; but the real leader of the Jerusalem church in the vital period from 40 to 60 was James, Jesus' brother. He must have been a man of great spiritual force. He was not even a disciple in Jesus' lifetime, but he established himself as the church's leader in Jerusalem. He stood out for principle, where Peter was weak-kneed; the Law was God's Law, and must be obeyed, however inconvenient. He was famous for his ascetic life, and he made good relations with the Pharisees in Judaism. He saw the church efficiently organized with envoys ('apostles') to go round and see that standards were maintained among Gentile believers. He received the crown of martyrdom. As a 'loser' to the Paulinists, he has been rather forgotten in church life; but someone who has not been forgotten is his mother Mary. We may think that the praises heaped on her have been somewhat exaggerated, and perhaps she never became Queen of Heaven or Co-Redeemer of mankind. But she is not undeserving of the highest earthly honors: with two such sons, she must have been a formidable woman.

The last we hear of Peter in the Bible is at his Antioch visit in 48: after that he disappears into legend. He probably never went near Rome, for there is no suggestion of his having been there either in Acts or in Paul's letter to the Romans. The Petrines were the losing side, but the Paulines could not do without Peter's name; for they needed to show that they were successors to Jesus' original disciples in spite of their rejection of much of what Jesus and his church taught. So Peter is a sort of stumbling hero, even in the Pauline Gospels of Mark and Luke and John. In the last he is always outshone by the Pauline hero, the Beloved Disciple, though even there he has his place. But Matthew was (Christology apart) a Petrine, and it is in Matthew's Gospel that Peter is given the keys of the kingdom. The Roman church wisely adopted Matthew's Gospel as its title deed, and elected Peter posthumously as its first Pope; for the church of Rome has, from the beginning, been enthusiastic not only for the kingdom, but also for the power and the glory. It is such a pursuit that influenced the choosing of documents which were later gathered into a collection of writings and given Catholic Gentile authority called the New Testament. Even today, the Paulinists New Testament has won out over the Petrine Torah and Tanakh.

HISTORICAL EVIDENCE THAT GENTILES KEPT THE PASSOVER IN THE EARLY CHURCH...IN SPITE OF CONSTANTINE #6

In the previous article we have seen a summary sketch of Constantine and his antisemitic policies regarding the early Gentile Church. One only has to read his "Easter Letter" to see how Constantine viewed the Jews and the faith of the Jewish Jesus. Now let us close our study on Constantine by looking at history and trying to picture for ourselves just what was going on regarding the Holy Days and Festivals and the worship of the non-Jew in spite of Constantine's efforts to stop all Jewish worship as applied to the non-Jew.

In the year 321 A.D., Emperor Constantine used imperial power to impose Sunday as a day of worship for all men. Here is an excerpt from the Codex Justinianus, III.,

"Constantine to Elpidius. All judges, city-people and craftsmen shall rest on the venerable day of the sun. But countrymen may without hindrance attend to agriculture, since it often happens that this is the most suitable day for sowing grain and planting vines, so that the opportunity afforded by divine providence may not be lost, for the right season is in short duration." (March 7, 321).

To make sure the message was heard loud and clear another edict followed, which stated that no man was allowed to Judaize under penalty of death. What does it mean to Judaize if not that faithful men of God resisted Constantine's edicts and persisted in the doctrines which were once and for all delivered to the saints. Rome literally waged war on God's commandments. The above decree clearly shows that Sunday or the day of the sun had already occupied a venerable place in Rome, the center of sun worship. It had a great religious meaning for the people of Rome. This edict had been one of the Roman Church's means of removing "all obstacles lying in the way of the Gentiles." That decision, as you well know, would have a universal influence on all the churches that came via Gentile Europe. "They had not executed My judgments, but had despised My statutes, profaned My Sabbaths, and their eyes were fixed on their fathers' idols, says YHWH." Among traditional "believers", it is no more a question of what the Bible says, but what is decreed and instituted by so-called "Church Fathers".

Two church historians, J. Danielou & Henri Marrou, who are themselves Catholics, have this to say, "Ignatius' polemic against the observance of the Sabbath shows that at Antioch, at the beginning of the second century, believers were continuing to observe it." Those believers have known those who knew Yahshua; they knew the blessed Apostles; and God's Apostles taught them.

Answer for yourself: How come the Apostles and non-Jews in the second century can be shown to be observers of the Sabbath and you are told not to keep the Sabbath but Constantine's "Sun" day? Who is lying?

Answer for yourself: Does salvation mean so much to you that you are willing to do everything in your power to use your time to find the TRUTH, and live in the TRUTH, even if you have to give up everything that you own on this earth? All roads lead to Rome, but there is only one narrow, bumpy, and difficult, yet straight road that leads to the Kingdom of Yahweh and sadly Gentile Christianity is not on it.

HISTORY...WILL WE EVER LEARN FROM IT? BUT YOU HAVE TO KNOW IT FIRST

One of the first signs of that church's struggle for power over the rest of the true assemblies is found in the book of Eusebius, The History of the Church. Keep in mind, Eusebius was a Catholic priest born in 260 A.D. He reported on a "controversy of great significance".

Answer for yourself: What is this controversy of which Eusebius speaks which occurred in the third century, 230 years after Jesus' death? It is about the Passover festival. The believers of Asia had been keeping Passover according to APOSTOLIC TRADITION and not EASTER! They kept the festival on the 14th day of the first month (Nisan), at evening. But in Rome and some other places under the Roman Church's supervision, it wasn't customary to keeping the date of the feast according to the Bible's fixed-time.

The Church of Rome, where a monarchical episcopate in the authority of a one man despot was the established form of government, sought to convince the already feeble churches of Asia to change their way of doing business and accept the Roman Church's newly instituted tradition. Pretending to be endowed with direct authority from God, Victor, the bishop of Rome made a violent move against those few believers of Asia Minor. They strongly refused to comply with the Roman Church's demand.

Eusebius recorded the following letter, which he said he copied from the original letter written by the Asian bishops themselves. And that confession is very important. I urge you to read and seriously think about its content.

"We for our part keep the DAY scrupulously, without addition or subtraction. For in Asia great luminaries sleep who will rise again on the day of Messiah's advent, when He is coming with glory from heaven and shall search out all His saints -- such as Philip, one of the twelve apostles, who sleeps in Hierapolis with his two daughters, who remained unmarried to the end of their days, while his other daughter lived in the blessed Spirit and rests in Ephesus. Again there is John, who leant back on the Master's breast, and who became a sacrificing priest ... a martyr, and a teacher; he too sleeps in Ephesus. Then in Smyrna there is Polycarp, bishop and martyr; and Thraseas, the bishop and martyr from Eumenia, who sleeps in Smyrna. Need I mention Sagaris, bishop and martyr, who sleeps in Laodicea, or blessed Papirius, or Melito the eunuch, who lived entirely in the Holy Spirit, and who lies in Sardis waiting for the visitation from heaven when he shall rise from the dead? All of these KEPT THE FOURTEENTH DAY OF THE MONTH AS THE BEGINNING OF THE PASCHAL FESTIVAL, in accordance with the Gospel, not deviating in the least but following the rule of Faith. Last of all I too, Polycrates, the least of you all, act according to the tradition of my family, some members of which I have actually followed; for seven of them were bishops and I am the eighth, and my family have always kept the day when the people put away the leaven. So I, my friends, after spending sixty five years in the Master's service and conversing with Christians from all parts of the world, and going carefully through all the Scripture, I am not scared of threats. Better people than I have said: 'We must obey God rather than men' ".

Answer for yourself: Now this is before Constantine and what did we read? The non-Jews were observing and keeping the Passover and not Easter as we are led to believe. Remember that I showed you that Rome would later change the translation of "pascha" in Acts 12 to "Easter" instead of "Passover" in trying to impose and replace the Passover with the Easter Sun Worship festival to which they attached Jesus name much later.

Answer for yourself: Can you see clearly that the early Gentiles who had links with the Apostles no less were observing the Passover and not Easter?

One can clearly see, here, a new institution trying to change the way of an old institution. But the faithful disciples refused to.

Answer for yourself: Have we bowed to the Roman Church instead of God and His Word?

Answer for yourself: Will you obey Yahweh, "after carefully going through all Scripture" or do you prefer to stick to the roman tradition? This was not the only controversy in which the Roman Church showed her teeth. That church was not only against some of the apostolic teachings, but even some of the heresies they earlier rejected they later on accepted and dogmatized.

EVIDENCE THAT EVEN IN THE 7TH CENTURY THE NON-JEWS WERE STILL OBSERVING THE PASSOVER AND REFUSED TO OBSERVE EASTER

Let us come to learn about a great man and scholar who few know today; his name is Bede or Baeda. The scholarliness of this highly regarded church historian needs no introduction. In his book Ecclesiastical History of the English People and the Church, this monk testifies that up to the 7th century there were still believers who refused to give up their way of keeping Passover in exchange for the Roman Church's Easter. Read their startling testimony, as recorded by this faithful catholic priest, on pages 180-189. It came from the lips of their opponents, represented by Abbot Wilfrid, "who had gone to Rome to study the doctrine of the Church": "Far be it from us, argued Wilfrid, to charge John with stupidity, because he literally observed the Law of Moses at a time when the Church [the true Church of the Apostles and not the Roman Church] followed many Jewish practices, and the Apostles were not able immediately to ABROGATE the observances of the Law once given by God ...John following the custom of the Law, used to begin the Feast of Easter [this is the Passover] on the evening of the fourteenth of the first month, not caring whether it fell on the Sabbath or on any other day."

This is among the best historical proofs we can have regarding Irishmen and Scots keeping the Passover Feast Day, yearly, on a different date than that of the Roman or Italian Catholic tradition because, they asserted, this was how they received it from those who themselves had received the tradition from, probably, the Apostles themselves. The Catholic Priest agreed and confirmed the undeniable truth of the Apostle's foundation (teaching and practice), but --amazingly-- the Catholic theologian, Wifrid, believes that John continued to do what Yeshua used to do because the early and only true Assembly "couldn't immediately abrogate the Law once given by God".

Answer for yourself: Who would want to in the first place? What kind of men would and have we followed them in their hatred of the Jews so far that we have lost the true worship of God? Can this historical study show us just how far we have strayed from the truth and how far we have deviated from the "Pattern of Worship" once given the Saints?

He who reads with intelligence surely knows that nowhere in the Bible has it ever been given to the Apostles, or any man for that matter, the right to add or retract from God's words or commands. Secondly, the position of the Gentile Church was, then, that these commandments pertained to Jews only, which attitude they passed unto those who followed their theology, by force or by choice. This is the lie that you and I have inherited and bought into hook line and sinker. Replacement Religion is not what God gave the non-Jew and in fact God makes sure in Isa. 56 to state just the opposite but the hatred of the Jews by Rome would deny the Word of God and end up changing it by forging our Bibles and who knows today without a lot of study? Hardly anyone. Take note that in Isa. 56 God makes a strong case by first stating:

Isa 56:3 Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I am a dry tree. (KJV)

God takes special pains to say: "Don't say that you are separated from my people the Jews" and goes on to make it clear that this includes His Holy Sabbaths and Biblical Feasts and Festivals like the Passover, etc.

But Rome and Constantine will do just the opposite

This dear one is the grafting of the non-Jew into the Israel of God whereby the examples given earlier in this website are later followed by non-Jews in the New Testament as well.

History is full of irrefutable evidences of TRUE believers' strong continuity in the biblical and apostolic observance of the Feast of Passover as well as all the other Biblical Festivals; that is until Constantine when these observances had to go "underground" in order to exist and the worshippers not be murdered by Church leaders who were supposedly followers of Jesus. What a joke!

"In the first place, it is certain that Christian communities, in the strict sense of the terms, continued to observe Jewish feasts, but we know that in Judaism, at that time, there was a great diversity of calendars, so the Christian communities reflected these divergences. It seems, moreover, that the majority of Christian feasts were transformations of certain Jewish feasts. One thing is certain, the celebration of the 14 of Nisan, the day of the Jewish Pasch, by the believers of Asia. The observance extended to groups in Palestine, Syria and Rome. Those who kept it were called the Quarto- decimans."

In the rest of the document, the writers continue to show that another group focusing on Sunday [the Sunday of resurrection], later on, rivaled with the first. And "It is this group which finally prevailed over that of the Quartodecimans."
